12. He dreamed. From the time that God appeared to Abimelech, of Gerar, Gen. xx. 2, until John's vision of the Lord's day, Rev. i. 12, God often impressed men in dreams and visions.

A ladder or steps by which we can easily get to things and places otherwise far beyond our reach. Jacob saw steps reaching to heaven, and angels going up and down. Angels—messengers—agents. Since the time that God said, Let there be light, Gen. i. 3, until Jesus said, I have sent mine angel, Rev. xxii. 16, Angels acted an important part in God's dealings with men. The law was given to Moses by angels. Acts vii. 53. Jesus told Nathaneal he would hereafter see heaven open and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of Man. Jno. i. 51.

13. The Lord stood at the top of the steps, and proclaimed himself as the God of Abraham and Isaac, and then included Jacob in the everlasting—age lasting—covenant. The promise of the land of Canaan, and numberless seed, when as yet—like Abraham—he had no child. Acts vii. 5.

14. The crowning promise—In thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed—a covenant that promises the Messiah—the Christ—the King of the Jews—the restoration of Israel, in short the restitution of all things, which God has spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began Acts iii. 21. The covenant was more fully noticed in the lesson of Feb. 24.

15. A promise of protection for life.

16. The Lord is here. I know it not—where the expressions are plain and definite, and can be clearly understood by reference—comparing Scripture with Scripture—there should be no inference—no guessing at the meaning, inference on plain truth is dangerous, even fatal to a hope of eternal life in the kingdom of God. Inference on Jacob's expressions, Verses 16, 17 will have no such effect. He had lain down at or near Bethel, and knew it not. Now—since the vision—he knows he is where Abram built an altar to the Lord, Gen. xii. 8, the place of the altar, Gen. xiii. 4. Where God gave Abram the promise of the land forever—for the ages, Gen. xiii. 15.

It will help us much in our studies to remember that the words "forever" in the promise, does not refer to this life, age or world, but to the world—properly age to come. Heb. vi. 5. What we may safely call the kingdom age.

17. The words afraid and dreadful are not nearly as good as reverential awe, the effect of his dream, and so intensely vivid was it to his waking thoughts, he said, this is the house—household—family of God. Eph. iii. 15, the entrance to heaven.

18 He set up a pillar—witness. Behold this stone shall be a witness. Josh. xxiv. 26, 27.

19, Bethel—The house of God.

20, God had promised him, and now he promises God, he asks nothing more than daily necessaries.

21. The Lord would be his God, as well as [illegible] and Isaac.

[illegible] truth unto thee. This was a free will offering, those who now freely give a tenth to the Lord are blessed, and realize that it is but a very, very small gift, or return for glory, honor, immortality, eternal life. Rom. ii. 7.

QUESTION BOX.

[Interested readers of the RESTITUTION who desire to have Scriptural questions answered in this department, should address Robert G. Huggins Box G, Oregon, Ill. Such communications will be noticed.]

TITHING.

We know that God has approved the tithing plan under two dispensations, and why not under this one? If you will read 1 Cor. ix. 13, 14 you will see that the tithing system is transferred to the gospel dispensation. Don't you think so?—Eld. H. C. Gregg.

REPLY.

Without doubt reference is made to the Levitical priesthood in 1 Cor. ix. 13: "They which minister about holy things live (feed, mar.) of the things of the temple." "Under two dispensations" and under the present economy, called by Bro. Gregg, "the gospel dispensation," God has "ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel." (v. 14). We are left without doubts on this point by the following plain Scripture: "It is written in the law of Moses, Thou shalt not muzzle the mouth of the ox that treadeth out the corn." "For our sake, no doubt, this is written; that he that ploweth should plow in hope, and he that thresheth in hope should be partaker of his hope." "If we have sown unto you spiritual things, is it a great thing if we shall reap your carnal things?" (vs. 9, 10, 11). "For our sakes" these Scriptures were "written in the law of Moses." Those who claim it is wrong to pay a proficient servant of God who preaches the gospel, denies to him the pecuniary compensation which is rightfully his. They would not "plow" without "hope" of raising a crop. They would not plow an ox muzzled—they would not, for any consideration, plow a beast without feeding it. Yet they would work a minister called in other words, they would treat an ox better than a minister of God!!

Admitting that those who sow spiritual things have the right to do so "in hope" of reaping "carnal things," the question arises, How much ought we to give to support the gospel? Bro. Gregg thinks the tenth. Our dear brother is a deep Bible student, and his opinion has great weight with me. The writer has not yet, however, been convinced that the "tithing system" is a part of gospel duties. But as our brother, who is a deep thinker, and who, as a result of deliberate study of the question, takes this position, I exhort the reader to investigate the evidence, and adopt the "system" if he feels it is God's requirement. To me, I must confess, the evidence for the tithing plan is not sufficiently strong to convince the understanding. Love is the ruling principle of this dispensation. The philanthropical basis of the Christian economy contravenes the iron-clad rule of a tenth. Benevolence dislikes a circumscription of its bounty. Liberality by "law established" is the "tithing system;" liberality unbounded, as God has prospered us, is the gospel requirement. 1 Cor. xvi. 2. And in keeping with this principle of giving, no definite amount is stated in 1 Cor. ix. 13. This text contretemps tithing. Paul does not say, "Those who preach the gospel should have a tenth;" but "should live of the gospel." This is what God has "ordained"—they shall "live of the gospel." If Paul was seeking to show that the "tithing system" approved "under two dispensations" was "transfered to the gospel dispensation," he should have said, "They should have a tenth." God bless the reader in his study of this subject.

ABRAHAM "ON THE OTHER SIDE OF THE FLOOD."

In Jas. xxiv. chapter we are told four times (vs. 2, 3, 14, 15) that Abraham, together with his relatives, were "on the other side of the flood." The book of Genesis puts Abraham on this side of the flood. How is this?—A. B.

REPLY.

The apparent contradiction of Jas. xxiv. 2, with Genesis has been the cachinnation of skeptics for decades and centuries. Their blunder buss, however, is harmless. The objection, like most all their objections, is impromptu. The translucency of Jas. xxiv. 2 is clandestined by the cacology of the translators: The Hebrew word naahar (Gen. vi. 17) [illegible] a flood, a deluge. The word .nahar means a river (Young) and is translated river 98 times in the Old Testament, "On the otherside of the flood" (nahar) has no reference to the "flood" in the days of Noah: it has to do with nahar, a river. The Euphrates is meant. See Dean Stanley, Ezra viii. 31; Nehe. iii. 7.

"NOT ABLE TO KILL THE SOUL."

Give an explanation of Matt. x. 28.—Anna Drew.

REPLY.

The text reads, "Fear not them that kill the body but are not able to kill the soul: but rather fear him which is able to destroy both body and soul in hell." The immortal soulist in reading this verse of Scripture put emphasis and stress on the words, "not able to kill the soul." To his mind this phrase proves that the soul has a different nature to the body. The body can be killed, the soul cannot be killed, therefore, he concludes, it must be immortal. In order to "rightly divide the word of truth," and to see how strong the expression is, let me ask, Who are "not able to kill the soul?" God sent his apostles into the world as "sheep in the midst of wolves," (v. 16). Kings, governors and wicked men (vs. 18, 23) persecuted and killed the saints, killed their bodies; "and after that," says Luke, "have no more that they can do," xii. 4. Of men it is said, they are "not able to kill the soul." Many things men are "not able to do" can be done. Under certain circumstances a mortal body cannot be killed. An illustration: Suppose a mob undertakes to lynch a prisoner who is incarcerated within the walls of a jail. The Sheriff enlists a sufficient number of the police and other help to defy and defeat the enraged mob. He might address them and say, you cannot, you are "not able," to kill him. Would you conclude from this form of speech that the culprit was immortal? Certainly not. The prisoner is a mortal man, but circumstances of a defensive nature justifies the statement made.

The words, "not able to kill the soul" does not militate against the mortality of man's nature. When we finish the text one interpretation is demonstrated correct: "Fear him which is able to destroy both body and soul in hell." Man, it is admitted, is "not able to kill the soul;" but the text speaks of One who is to be "feared" and who is "able to destroy" it. Under certain circumstances man is "not able" to kill the soul; under other conditions he can. Rev. vi. 11. Lexicons define the word apokteino, here translated "kill" "to kill utterly." In view of the fact that man under stated conditions can kill the soul, together with the truth that God is "able" at all times to "destroy" it,—how weak the statement, "not able to kill the soul;" and how inadequate a foundation upon which to build the Cyclopean doctrine of the immortality of the soul, and all its ramifications!

The text asserts that God is "able," not only to kill the soul, but to "destroy" it as well. This statement is meaningless unless God means to do what he is "able" to do. Here it is declared God has power to destroy the soul; other texts asseverate that he will. Acts iii. 23. "Every soul which will not hear that prophet, shall be destroyed from among this people." It cannot be claimed that God will destroy the soul in some "spiritual sense," for the word is exolothreno, and means "Destroy both body and soul." He destroys the soul in the same sense he destroys the body. He destroys "both". As the soul is destroyed in the same sense the body is, we conclude the soul is just as mortal as the body.

EMMA L. SMITH, Sec.

"If you send one person, only one, happily through each day," quotes Sydney Smith, "in forty years, you have made 14,600 beings happy, at least for a time." It was this same Smith who, though quite sick at one time, wrote the following to a friend: "I have gout, asthma, and seven other maladies, but am otherwise very well."

Communicated.

Pine Woods Bible Class.

Teacher. A correspondent in Canada has written to me making suggestions, asking questions, and desiring an investigation of the subject of:

EVIL SPIRITS AND DEVILS,

as recorded in Holy Scripture.

I find by the questions and arguments of my correspondent, that he favors the idea of supernatural, demoniacal possessions.

Albert. Does he understand that the Scriptures so teach?

A. Yes. He says: "The Bible teaches me that there was, and is, an Holy Spirit, and another Spirit, called an evil spirit—the devil and Satan."

Q. Does he believe in the personality of the Holy Spirit, and also of the devil?

A. No. He said: "I do not understand either one of those spirits were personal, or solid bodily forms, like ourselves, because they could enter men, and leave them, and were only known by their effects."

Q. Did he also believe in a plurality of devils?

A. Yes, sir; he said, quoting Luke iv. 33-41: "And devils came out of many, saying, thou art Christ, the Son of God, and he rebuked them, for they knew that he was Christ. Was there not something more than human or natural in this?"

Q. If they were neither "human," nor "natural," then they would be supernatural devils, would they not?

A. Even so.

Lad. It seems to me, that these devils must be something akin to the fabled immortal souls?

Q. How so?

A. Because our correspondent says: These devils are "spirits," and these spirits, are not "personal," then they must, of necessity, be impersonal. He further affirms that they have not "solid bodily forms."

Teacher. What conception could you have of "evil spirits," that are not "personal," and are not "solid bodily forms?"

Lucy. If they are not "solid, bodily forms, like ourselves," then of necessity they must be immaterial evil spirits, and if they have no "forms," they have no shape, and no organism.

Q. What reason did he give for not having material, or "bodily forms"?

A. "Because they could not enter men and leave them? if they were.

Q. There is some sense in that, is there not?

A. Yes, sir; if they were "bodily forms," of any size, and if a person was possessed of "seven devils," they would have more in them, than would be comfortable to get along with. But if they were so small that "ten thousand of them could dance on the point of a cambric needle," then, it might be possible to get along easily with only "seven devils."

Q. Now, if these devils, or evil spirits had no personality, and were not "bodily" or material beings, and had no "form," or shape, they must indeed be like the fabled immortal souls, which are not material, and have no form or shape, and consequently they have neither body, parts, nor passions, nor could they occupy space, because they are immaterial. Now are not these "evil spirits," or "devils," which our correspondent ascribes as being devoid of personality, or "solid bodily forms," just like these immaterial souls?

A. It seems to me, they must be just like them. If they have not body nor form, they must be devoid of body, parts or passions.

Q. If they had no "bodily form," they could not have real material brains. Now, if they had no brains, how could they know anything?

A. They could not know anything any more than souls which have neither "body, parts nor passions," could do so.

Q. Are those "devils which came out of many," said to know anything?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did they know?

A. "They knew that he was Christ."

Q. If they had no material "body," or "form," they could not possess either tongue nor vocal organs. How could they speak and utter vocal sounds?

A. It seems to me to be incredulous to believe that "evil spirits" which our correspondent claims are immaterial, and hence devoid of vocal organs, how could they utter vocal sounds.

Q. Did he claim that they could?

A. Yes, he quotes: "And devils came out of many, saying thou art Christ the Son of God."

Teacher. In what way is our correspondent led astray?

Bessie. It is doubtless by supposing that these "evil spirits," or "devils," were supernatural beings.

Q. Have we evidence that they were not?

A. Yes, sir; our correspondent is doubtless not acquainted with the idiom of the Jews.

Q. What was that?

A. I will quote from Dr. George Campbell: "It was a common idiom of the Jews to put spirit before any quality ascribed to a person, whether it be good or bad, mental or corporeal." For an example take the case of the damsel mentioned in Acts xvi. 16-18: "And it came to pass as we went to prayer, a certain damsel possessed with a spirit (of Python, an idol in the temple at Delphi. See margin to the word spirit in verse 16) of divination met us, which brought her masters much gain by soothsaying. The same followed Paul and us, and cried saying, these men are the servants of the Most High God, which shew unto us the way of salvation. And this she did many days. But Paul, being grieved, turned and said to the spirit (of Python) I command thee in the name of Jesus Christ to come out of her. and he came out the same hour."

Now, this idol certainly could not have had a conscious, disembodied spirit which inhabited this damsel.

Q. What is the original word for spirit in that text?

A. It is ob; it occurs sixteen times, and is said to be the only word rendered "familiar spirit." Gesenius Lexicon, says it is rightly translated ventriloquist," since among the ancients, this power of ventriloquism was often misused for the purposes of magic."

Liddell and Scott's Lexicon says: "In Plutarch's time (A. D. 110) ventriloquists were called Puthones." From Python, an idol, in a temple at Delphi. It could hardly be the case, that this idol possessed a supernatural conscious spirit, which left the idol and entered the damsel, and followed Paul and Silas, crying: "These men are the servants of the Most High God."

Teacher. If we consider the idom of the Jews, was it not the case, if a person was afflicted with some disease, they were considered to be possessed with a devil, or evil spirit?

A. Certainly.

Q. In what way were the devils cast out?

A. When the disease was cured. Take the case of the raving maniac at the tombs, when Jesus cast out this crazy devil, he was "clothed and in his right mind." When a person was deaf and dumb, they accounted for their being deaf and dumb, because they were possessed by a conscious supernatural evil spirit or devil, while it was only a physical defect in the person so afflicted.

Q. What other case did our correspondent refer to?

A. He refers to the case mentioned in Acts xix. 13-16, which reads as follows: "Then certain of the vagabond Jews, exorcists: took upon them to call upon them which had evil spirits, the name of the Lord Jesus, saying, we adjure you by Jesus, whom Paul preacheth. And the evil spirit answered, and said, Jesus I know, and Paul I know; but who are ye? And the man in whom the evil spirit was leaped on them, and overcame them, and so they fled out of that house naked and wounded."

Q. What explanation do you make of this?

A. The Jews held a superstition that people who had adverse afflictions, both of mind and body, were possessed by a supernatural devil or evil spirit, which was the cause of the evil acts of the person so possessed.

Q. Well, do you think they had the true cause?

A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Well, then, to what cause do you attribute the acts of this person?

A. He had naturally an evil spirit in him, that is a very bad quarrelsome disposition,—an ungovernable temper,—had a very vicious spirit, or disposition, or quality of mind, which when excited would fly into a furious insane rage; he was a man that it was unsafe to tackle, because his temper really amounted to insanity. We see just such people today, but no one would attribute his acts to being possessed by a supernatural devil; unless such person was inclined to be superstitious.

Teacher. Our correspondent quotes the temptation of Christ by Satan, also Job, and the enemy which sowed tares in the field; and wishes to know what Satan, devil, or evil spirit it was which so tempted them?

Aries. I think the tares were in themselves, and was not the work of supernatural conscious, evil spirits.

Q. Can you give us a sample?

A. Yes, sir; see Acts v. 3. In this case, we have the sin, or devil of covetousness personified as Satan.

Q. Please read that Scripture?

A. It reads as follows: "Ananias why hath Satan filled thine heart with a lie to the Holy Spirit, and to keep back part of the price of the land?"

Q. Who filled his heart?

A. Satan.

Q. Who ought to have been punished, then, Satan or Ananias?

A. Why Satan, of course, he was the one who did the mischief, and Ananias was his victim.

Q. Who was punished, Ananias or his devil?

Q. Ananias.

Q. Was there an evil spirit in Ananias?

A. Yes; he had a disposition of mind which was inclined to be covetous.

Q. Did that spirit of covetousness originate in himself, independent of some impersonal, supernatural evil spirit?

A. Certainly. We read in verse 4: "Why hast thou conceived in thine heart," etc.? He was his own devil. It was an evil thought which originated in his mind, which culminated in a lie, and resulted in his being struck dead. That was not fair, if he was simply a victim of an immaterial devil, which tempted him.

Q. Did not Mrs. Ananias confirm her husband's lie?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did they say to her?

A. "How is it that ye have agreed together to tempt the Spirit of the Lord?" We see clearly that this was a conspiracy to commit fraud, which originated in themselves. This is a sample of Satan's tempting people to sin. The modus operandi is given in James i. 14, 15. I quote from 20th Cent. Trans.: "People are in every case tempted by their own passions (not by an immaterial spirit) allured and enticed by them. Then the passion conceives and gives birth to sin, and sin on reaching maturity, brings forth death."

The people in general have believed human traditions, handed down from their fathers. It is certainly high time that educated Bible people should put away from them pagan superstition.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

Your work is a personal work. Assemblies and societies cannot do it for you. The servants will not give up their accounts at last in squads or companies; each man stand alone; every man must give an account of himself to God. So much life; so much energy; so much intellect; so much physical vigor; so much influence; so much education; so much money; so much opportunity; so much light; so much truth; so much blessing from the Lord—now what have you done with it all?

The Gift of Eternal Life.

The gift that rises supreme over all other gifts, is the gift of eternal life. The season when it is the custom to exchange gifts, is near at hand. In making a gift, the greatest good to the recipient of the gift should be considered in the selection of a gift. Would it not be wise to make a gift that may lead the one receiving the gift to receive also the gift of eternal life? Then, give your friend a copy of The Pine Woods Bible Class. It points out the way in a clear and simple manner, how the gift of eternal life may be secured. It would make the giver happy also, should it lead to that happy result.

Editor Restitution:

Some of the brethren in this part of the country are anxious for me to take the field as an evangelist, but are so few and so poor, they are not able to support one. After much study I have decided to enter the field, provided I can have some assurance of support for my family. It has been the desire of my life to devote my time to the cause. The thought came to me, that if the brethren east, north and west knew it, they would gladly give one dollar each for this work. So I decided to write them through THE RESTITUTION and make the proposition to them, and if they responded I would enter the field. I will report my work through THE RESTITUTION. The brethren can send the money to Sister E. C. Daniel, Magazine, Ark., and she will report it through THE RESTITUTION, and if enough is not sent in to justify me in entering the field, she will return it to the senders. Brethren this is the Macedonian cry. Help us just one dollar each, and we assure you, you will never regret it. I will solicit subscribers for THE RESTITUTION, and report my work promptly. Hoping you can see your way clearly to respond to this call. I am yours in the one faith.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. This house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Praying and Hearing.

"To stretch my hand and touch Him,
Though he be far away;
To raise my eyes and see him
Through darkness as through day;
To lift my voice and call him—
This is to pray.

"To feel a hand extended
By One who cloudeth near;
To view the love that shineth
In eyes serene and clear,
To know that he is calling—
That is to hear."

THE PRINCIPAL CHARACTERISTICS OF THE BOOK OF GENESIS.

The word Genesis means "beginning" therefore the book of Genesis is the book of beginnings. "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." When that beginning was we are nowhere informed. In this sublime sentence we find the golden gateway between eternity past and the long aisles of coming time.

In this first chapter of Genesis we are ushered into the presence of earth's morning and also the dawning of human history. Man cannot count the ages which may have been included in the vast period of that "evening and morning" which were called "the first." We know that there were seven great epochs called "days" during which God wrought alone. His Word bringing order out of chaos and the dry land out of the seas. In those seven creative ages, which are called "evenings and mornings," every storm that swept over the chaotic earth—every earthquake that shook her surface and every volcano that poured out her burning lava wrought together in the great work of the completion of our globe.

When the mighty work was finished and man had been introduced upon the new born earth, "God blessed them and God said unto them, 'Be fruitful and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth." See Gen 1:26-28 Hence we see in verse 26 that the first deed ever made was a joint deed given to both man and woman—the dominion is given to "them," the commandment is given to "them"—"They twain" were equally honored and become equally responsible before God. When they had become equally disobedient, they heard the voice of the Lord God in the cool of the day and they hid themselves from his presence—from his lips they heard the curse pronounced upon them for disobedience and and also heard the curse upon the serpent and the promise of a redeemer. In this third chapter of Genesis 15th verse is the first prophecy of the Christ in the promise that the seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head.

It was evidently the angel of God's presence—the name-bearer of the Lord God who was "walking in the garden in the cool of the day" and through whose lips come these primeval revelations to our first parents, that it was the same bearing angel of God who was his messenger in his earliest revelations to the children of men is evident from Ex xxiii 20-21, and many kindred texts in Old Testament. See also Heb xi 2; Acts vii 53; Gal iii 19, etc., etc.

In these early revelations it is evident that there were not only lessons of obedience to him but also instructions concerning the altar and the sacrifice, for we read that both Cain and Abel brought "offerings" to the Lord.

When man sinned and fell away from God it was disobedience first and then, murder—afterward we have polygamy with Lamech and his two wives but as yet there was no polytheism. As surely as God was first, so surely did the doctrine of the One God precede the doctrine of many gods, and the farther we go back in all the old mythologies the nearer we come to the primeval principle of monotheism.

When Enoch "walked with God three hundred years," we may all understand that he received revelations of the Most High and his will concerning the children of men.

Noah also "walked with God" and he too was the favored recipient of divine revelation. When the flood had destroyed the world of the ungodly (chapters vi and viii) "Noah builded an altar unto the Lord and took of every clean beast and every clean fowl and offered burnt offerings on the altar." viii 20 The clean beasts and clean fowls having been provided for this purpose when the animals were taken into the ark. vii 2, 3.

In chapter xii we have the call of God "unto Abraham"—we have the record of repeated communications with Abraham—repeated revelations to this "Father of the faithful" coming also through the lips of God's chosen messenger or messengers. We have a record of the covenant thus made with Abraham and his seed. "And he saith not, And to seeds as of many but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ." Gal iii 16 Read carefully whole chapter. In the days of Abraham we have not only revelations concerning God and the altar and the sacrifice—but we have prophecies concerning the Christ, and we find that in this early period God had also a priesthood for "Melchizedek was a priest of the Most High God" to whom even Abraham paid tithes.

These primitive revelations of God to the sons of men account for the fact that in all religions there may still be found some vestige of the altar of the sacrifice and the priesthood. When the name bearing angel of the Lord communicated with Moses in the burning bush,—with him in the wilderness and on the Holy Mount—when "the law was given by the disposition of angels," it was a revival of earlier teaching through angelic ministry—a revival of the altar, the sacrifice and the priesthood belonging to the periods of God's earliest communications with men, therefore we need have no fear of any successful criticism of the book of Genesis from those who claim that any of its teachings were "borrowed" from the early Babylonians or Assyrians.

God's primeval revelation precedes the early races of men, having been given to the primogenitors of the human race, and we cannot wonder that some vestiges of this revelation may be found among all peoples.

The facts recorded in the xiv. of Genesis received an unexpected confirmation when in the tablets of Tel el Armana were found the names of the kings who are mentioned in the first verse of the chapter—the kings who captured Lot, the brother of "Abram the Hebrew." When he heard that his brother had been taken captive, he armed his trained servants and pursued them and smote them, "And he brought back all the goods and his brother Lot and his goods, and the women also and the people." verses 14-16.

On his return from this victorious pursuit "Melchizedek, king of Salem brought forth bread and wine; and he was the priest of the Most High God, and he blessed him. Verse 18-19. It was a surprize to many scholars to find that the tablets of Tel el Armana contained the names of the five kings, thus assigning them to the period where they are found in Biblical history, and not only this but also gave the name of Melchizedek as the priest king of Salem. It had been claimed that "the whole chapter was mythical" that Jerusalem did not exist in any form at so early a period," and "much less was it known by the name of Salem."

But the tablets bringing evidence from far distant sources have established beyond a question the historicity of the fourteenth chapter of Genesis.

"When Abram was ninety years old and nine" the same bearing angel of the Lord appeared to him again and made a renewed covenant with the promise of the birth of Isaac. "And I will establish my covenant with him for an everlasting covenant and with his seed after him." And yet God did "tempt" or test by commanding him to offer up this well beloved Son as a burnt offering. Abraham walked loyally up to the place of sacrifice and there learned lessons new of the faithfulness of God, for a lamb had been provided for the offering. All of these offerings from that of Abel in the morning of human history down to the last sacrifice made under the dispensation of the Old Covenant were prophetic of the Christ—they are pointed forward to "The Lamb who was slain from the foundation of the world,"—to that high priest who needeth not daily to offer up sacrifice, for this he did once when he offered up himself (on Calvary). Heb vii 27.

Isaac was the prototype of Christ. "In Isaac shall thy seed be called." He was the "only begotten Son." Heb xi 17. He was the child of the covenant born outside of ordinary natural law. He was "offered" as a type and received in similitude of a resurrection. "Accounting that God was able to raise him up even from the dead; from whence also he received him in a figure." Heb xi 17.

The promise made Abraham was renewed in Isaac, renewed in Jacob—extended to the twelve tribes, and Christ become the heir through the tribe of Judah, hence all the promises are fulfilled in the Christ and all those who become his are the "Seed of Abraham" and heirs according to the promise. Gal iii; Rom v; Heb vii; Heb xi.

From Isaac and Rebekah the line of descent passed through Esau and Jacob, but Joseph the well beloved son of Jacob was hated of his brethren—he was sold to the Ishmaelites for "twenty pieces of silver." But poor Joseph learned as many a loyal suffering soul has since learned, that man's extremity is God's opportunity. He learned that whatsoever God suffers to come to us is in some way or other for good. He learned that through the doctrines of trial and suffering, hope and joy are born—learned that "All things work together for good to them that love God—who are called according to his purpose."

Coming from a dungeon (Gen xli 14) to be made "ruler over all the land of Egypt" when he was but thirty years of age, he learned that God maketh even the wrath of man to praise him.

Having interpreted Pharaoh's dream concerning seven years of plenty to be followed by seven years of famine, the new "ruler" prepared to hoard the surplus grain of the plentiful years in treasure houses in the cities, that it might be ready for use in the coming years of need.

The beautiful story of Joseph and his brethren forms a very important feature of the book of Genesis—a complete victory of good over evil thus finds its place in history, and not only this but it introduces the people of Israel into Egypt where they were an important factor for four hundred years.

It was the political sagacity of Joseph which made all the land of Egypt the property of the crown, except that part belonging to the priests, and as it thus become in the days of Joseph so it remaineth until today.

When the people had no more money with which to buy grain, Joseph bought their cattle for Pharaoh, and the next year he began buying their lands for the crown. When the people had lived upon the price of the land until the amount of its value was gone Joseph made a liberal arrangement with them whereby they were furnished with grain for seed, and instead of giving one-half or one-third to the landlord, as is often done in these days, they paid only one-fifth of the produce to the crown as rent.

A singular testimony to the proof of the accuracy of the story of Joseph is thus found in the present political condition of Egypt and in the fact that the imperial ownership of the land cannot be traced further back than the days of Joseph.

Thus even a cursory view of the book of Genesis, shows that all the types, promises and prophecies culminate in Christ Jesus as the rightful heir to the inheritance. This will necessitate the resurrection of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob from the tomb of Machpelah and the return of the Christ as the promised seed of Abraham in order to fulfil the promise of an everlasting inheritance in the land of Canaan under the New Covenant.

Judgment of the Nations. No. 4.

ZECH. XIV.

We have in this chapter another prophetic description of the last great struggle of the world powers, prior to the Millennial reign of peace. This conflict ends in the overthrow of Israel's foes. It is styled the day of the Lord in which the nations (that oppressed Israel) will be gathered against Jerusalem to battle. The Lord says he will gather them, not for the purpose of giving them the final victory, however, but to bring about their final defeat, and inflict upon them well merited punishment. This seige or battle seems to be one scene in the drama of war waged by Russia as described in Ezekiel chapters xxxviii. xxxix. The object of Russia's invasion of the land is the immense amount of wealth accumulated there, not alone in the country and villages but also in Jerusalem, the metropolis of the nation. Her design is to take a spoil, a large proportion of which will be found in the Capital. The spoil taken by the besieging army will be divided within the city limits—not carried out and divided.

V. 1. The soldiers search for treasure in every building. For a time every thing is their will and pleasure. They are victors. Half of the city goes forth into captivity, and the residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city. When flushed with victory and elated over the rich spoils taken, the Lord appears on the scene. "Then shall the Lord go forth, and fight against those nations, as when he fought in the day of battle. He comes to vindicate and save his suffering people from their enemies who have spoiled them so long. Joel iii. 9—may be cited as a parallel prophecy. In Zech. xiv. the prophet simply speaks of the gathering of the nations against Jerusalem to battle. In Joel is a description more in detail concerning the preparations for battle and for war—the assembling of the nations which have maltreated God's people. The proclamation goes forth from Jehovah, "Prepare war, wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near; let them come up." v. 9. The implements of peaceful pursuits are to be converted into implements of war, and the weak will say I am strong. The massing of forces about the city of Jerusalem for this conflict is in the divine purpose, the bringing of them together for God's executive judgment to fall upon them. "Thither cause thy mighty ones to come down. These are the Lord's mighty ones, really so, in contrast with military chieftains who fancy themselves mighty because invested with a little brief authority by the governments they represent. At this point in the prophecy is a fitting place to make mention of our Lord's associate judges who are in the design and purpose of Jehovah to share in the judgments of the nations, and in the subsequent reign over them. "Thy mighty ones" is the phrase that introduces them as personal actors on the theater of Judgment. They are to come down. The nations and their leaders are to come up to the place of gathering, the valley of Jehosaphat, where the Supreme Judge says he will sit to judge all the nations round about. In v. 13 the agency of these mighty ones is clearly brought to view, "Put ye in the sickle, for the harvest is ripe; get you down; for the press is full, the fats overflow; for their wickedness is great. In Rev. xiv. 15, this judgment of the wicked nations is called "the harvest of the earth." If the righteous are to judge the world, as Paul affirms, and exercise the same executive power that Christ is to exercise, as he himself affirms, is it not in harmony with plainly revealed truth to find here in the prophecy of Joel this same class exercising executive judgment jointly with the Lord Jesus? Joel and Zechariah referring to the same judgment supplement each other. The former describes the preparations for war and the massing of forces, and the latter on actual conflict waged by the enemies of Israel; in which conflict Jerusalem is taken and one-half of the population are carried into captivity. Both speak of the infliction of punishment on the assembled nations. Joel refers to the shaking of the heavens and the earth, and Zechariah to the cleaving asunder of Olivet beneath the tread of the avenging Judge of all the earth. As my object in these papers is to show the future judgment of the nations at the coming of the Lord it is not necessary for me to notice every statement of the prophets, connected with this judgment. The constantly recurring question is, To what extent the judgment of the nations, as brought to view in the prophecies examined, affects the population of the earth at large. Putting the question in another form: Will none of the human race in the flesh survive this judgment? Some say none; God will rid the earth of all sinners; and all are sinners who shall be on the earth and not with the Lord in the air. But, did no sinners in all the history of the past survive a national judgment? Who dares to say no? Some expositors dare to say no to the other question, and when their attention is called to such prophecies as I have been examining they say these were fulfilled long ago. N. Pile says Zech. xvi. was fulfilled before the Christian era in the days of Antiochus the Great. All that is necessary to refute this theory of the past fulfilment is to call attention to a few things in this prophecy.

1. The Lord's feet stand upon the Mount of Olives, the Mount from which he ascended to heaven.

2. The Mount is cleft asunder, part of it moving north, and part of it south, thus forming what the prophet calls a very great valley by which the besieged flee.

3. Living waters (that flow continually) go out from Jerusalem, flowing eastward and westward into the Mediterranean and Dead seas.

4. The land turned as a plain from Geba to Rimmon south of Jerusalem.

5. From that day forward there will be no more utter destruction, and Jerusalem so often ruined by the hand of Israel's enemies shall be safely inhabited.

6. Those of these gathered armies that escape, seeing the hand of the Lord in his judgment became obedient worshipers and go up from year to year to pay homage to the King, and keep the feast of tabernacles.

7. Following the infliction of punishment on these armed forces, comes the punishment of non-combatants at home, styled all the families of the earth, for their refusal to go up and keep the feast of tabernacles.

8. Upon the bells of the horses shall be inscribed; Holiness unto the Lord, the same as was on the mitre of the high priest. Ex. xxviii. 36. This implies that all things, even the most common shall be sacred to Jehovah, and not merely the things which had a peculiar sanctity under the law.

I have selected those particulars from the prophecy, touching which I think it is impossible for any expositor, however skillful, to show a past fulfilment. So the prophecy remains to be fulfilled in that coming day toward which events are shaping themselves. We who believe that the coming of the Lord does not close the door of hope against nations in the age to come can triumphantly ask: When were all those things accomplished agreeably to the language of this prophecy? When was Olivet cleft in the manner as here described? What about, "no more utter destruction after destruction of Jerusalem and other towns of Palestine? Facts are stubborn things and must be reckoned with in our search for truth. Every particular in prophecy must find at some time subsequent to the date of its utterance its historical counterpart scored against it. This must be the test now as it was in the days of Moses. Has this and that come to pass? Tell us ye wise ones. Do not say, as one expositor now dead, said, That it (the prophecy of course) "smacks of flesh and smells mulish." It is true the terms horses, mule, pots, seethe and sacrifice, occur as a part of the prophecy, and it is not the part of true wisdom to sneer at facts. To take the prophecy as it reads may seem to some people altogether too literal; so they set themselves to objecting, urging that sacrifices will be out of place in the next age; that it is not to their taste to have mortals and immortals in the kingdom. Now, whether fastidious saints like such a condition of things or not, all that the prophets have mentioned as pertaining to the coming age will be there. Our likes and dislikes are not the criterion by which to settle the question.

This prophecy and many others relating to the close of this age and the beginning of next, clearly and unmistakably reveal the fact of probation and mercy for men after our Lord comes; that nations then will exist to be blessed by the benign government of King Jesus; exist to fill the earth with a numerous posterity of obedient children of God, to subdue the earth as decreed back at the cradle of the race; develope its resources and enjoy the fruits of moderate labor, and delight themselves with the beauties and harmonies of nature, and adoringly bow to him who is the Creator of all things.

Brother Tomkins has written on Matt. xxv. 31-46; so I will not consider this portion of Scripture.

JOHN L. WIKE.
(Concluded.)

Dear ones of like precious faith:

It has been many months since I have written a letter for the dear old RESTITUTION. Seeing in last week's issue of the paper, the obituaries of two with whom I was acquainted in years gone by, I thought I would write a few lines in sympathy:

Dear Sister Coffin of Champaign, Ill. Pa and I used to visit when Pa preached in Champaign Co. She was a dear good mother. May God comfort the bereaved ones.

Aud Bro. Holmes we visited when Pa was holding meetings in northern Ind., after the death of his companion. Sister Kinney you should feel so comforted to know you could have your father with you to the last, and be able to care for him. He had reached a ripe old age, few live beyond those years. We were grieved to learn that Bro. Lindsay was sick. We pray he may soon be able to go into the Master's vineyard where he is so much needed. I feel that I must comment on Sister Lucy W. Horner's little letter which is certainly to the point all the way through. You are right dear sister, there is no home in other churches for the people of God. My dear old father always contended for that truth. And Sister Minerva Gibbs article, how good.

Yes be ye separate saith the Lord, is proof enough for me.

May God help us to see the true way and walk therein.

Yours waiting for the Nobleman.

BROTHER D. C. ROBISON has issued a small 16-page tract on the subject "Man is Mortal." It is of convenient size to enclose in an envelop, and can be had for 2 cents each, or 15 cents for 12, or $1.50 for 100 copies. Bro. Robison is so well known as a clear and lucid writer that no words that we can pen would commend his work, more than will the bare announcement of his name. If you are in the mood to do a little missionary work send to Brother Robison at 596 So. Limestone St. Springfield, O. and get a supply of these tracts.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LVI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, APRIL 3, 1907. NUMBER 13.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, APRIL 3, 1907.

We give most of our space this week to our correspondents. Will get to all as fast as possible.

We were glad to learn, and we know all will join in thanksgiving, that our beloved Brother Woodward is able to again go out into the Master's work. He has been compelled to remain indoors nearly all the winter, suffering with the la grippe and other ailments. Now that he is again able to be out at work his old friends will be rejoiced to see him wherever he goes. We at Plymouth shall hope to have him visit us some time when Sister Woodward will be at some other point. There is a warm place in the hearts of our people for both Brother and Sister Woodward, and we want to have them feel that when here they are at home among brethren and friends, who praise the Lord for still sustaining them in the work of spreading the glad news of the love of God to mankind.

QUESTION BOX.

[Interested readers of the RESTITUTION who desire to have Scriptural questions answered in this department, should address Robert G. Huggins Box G, Oregon, Ill. No anonymous communications will be noticed.]

AN APPARENT CONTRADICTION HARMONIZED.

Matthew xxvii. 44 says, "The thieves also (plural number) which were crucified with him cast the same in his teeth." Mark xv. 32 says, "And they that were crucified (plural again) with him reviled him." No repentance there, but cruel tauntings. .....Two witnesses say: the thieves were reviling the Son of God while all were suspended in agony upon the cross.....We must accept the record of Matthew and Mark, and I believe Luke's original history must have been correct and in harmony with the other evangelists, but it was an easy matter for the translators to change the words to suit their theories.—B. W. Woodward, RESTITUTION, Jan. 23, 1906.

REPLY.

Of course "We must accept the record of Matthew and Mark;" and Luke's gospel is also binding on all who believe in the inspirational integrity of the Holy Scriptures. The probity of the Bible writers is not destroyed by the fragmentary nature of their writings. God, in giving evidence on any subject, always gives it "here a little, and there a little." Isa. xxviii. 10. Agreeable with this characteristic he gives a "little" (or part) of what occurred on the Cross, in Matthew and Mark, and then in Luke he gives "a little" more. In doing this he did nothing problematical. There is not even a seeming conflict, no clash whatever in the testimony of the witnesses. The contradiction is only apparent, and is easily harmonized. Accept what Luke says with unwavering faith; accept what Matthew and Mark says; accept what they all say, and let one writer qualify the statement of another writer; and when you combine what they all say, you will have the whole truth, and harmony. Let one writer qualify or amplify what other writers say, and you have a method of interpreting the Bible that will harmonize every contradiction urged by skeptics. Sister E. A. Reed in her book called "The Bible Triumphant," has admirably harmonized the difficulty which troubles Bro. Woodward. On page 80 she says: "It is plain that at first (according to Matthew and Mark) both of the thieves reviled the Messiah, and afterwards (according to Luke) one not only ceased to revile him, but reproved the other for so doing. Hence the infidel argues with great complacency, "The Bible contradicts itself." Surely this is a very weak argument for a man to offer, and that too in the very face of the fact that they hung over six hours on the Cross."

CHRIST'S BRETHREN.

A question was asked in THE RESTITUTION about two years ago. Would like for you to answer it: Who are the brethren refered to in Matt. xxv. 40?—P. B. Stouffer.

REPLY.

Speaking of Abraham's descendants God says in Gen. xii. 3: "I will bless them that bless thee, and curse them that curseth thee." From the time these words were uttered by the Deity to the present moment, history, without an exceptional incident, records how minutely God has fulfilled his words. As God has remembered his words to keep them in the past, we can conclude that he will, in the future, "remember his holy covenant." Lk. i. 72, and that without fail, he will keep it. We are not left to opaque inference here; we are expressly told that when the Lord comes the nations which have "blessed" the Jewish people in their afflictions, are to be blessed, while the nations which have "cursed" them, are to be cursed. Russia, the inveterate hater of the Jew, will yet "go forth with great fury to destroy," Dan. xi. 44, the Jews resettled in the Holy Land, Ezek. xxxviii. 11; and as the King o the North, Dan. xi. 40; Ezek. xxxviii. 15, he will defeat the King of the South (England in Palestine), and take half of Jerusalem captive, Zech. xiv. 2, and "plant the tabernacles of his palace between the seas in the glorious holy mountain;" yet, says the prophet, "he shall come to his end, and none shall help him." Dan xi. 45. Having cursed Israel he is himself cursed. While England and other nations have been friendly to the Jews, having "blessed" them in assisting them to return to the land of their fathers, and protecting them there, Isa. xviii. lxvi. 19, 20; lx. 12, will be "blessed" as especially favored subjects of the kingdom during the benign reign of Jesus the "King of the Jews." Matt. ii. 2.

While all this is plainly revealed and heartily believed by us, we do not believe that the positions of the nations during the reign of Christ, is taught in Matthew xxv., neither do I believe that the Jews are the brethren Christ speaks of in verse 40, as "my brethren." The theory which says, they are Christ's brethren is decapitated by one simple truth, namely, when Christ "Comes in his glory," v. 31, he places the sheep on his right hand and says to them: "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." v. 34. This invitation, "Come," is not given to sheep nations at the end of a thousand years; but when Christ "Comes in his glory," v. 31, "then" v. 34, he says this. He does not say to the sheep, "Come, be subjects of the kingdom;" but "inherit the kingdom." There is a great gulf of difference between inheritors of the kingdom and subjects of it. The subjects are mortal, though righteous, people; inheritors of it, are immortal saints, "Flesh and blood," says the apostle, "cannot inherit the kingdom;" they must be changed to immortality, 1 Cor. xiii. 50. The sheep, therefore, to whom Christ says, "Inherit the kingdom," are the sheep or saints now grazing in Christ's pasture, who know his voice, and follow him, as the Shepherd of their souls. Jno. x. 3-15; 1 Pet. ii. 25.

That Christ meant his saints, and not the Jews, by the words, "My brethren;" is further evident from the fact that Christ has explained who his brethren are. And in explaining who they are, he has inferentially explained who they are not. While Christ was himself a Jew, he has told us that the flesh is "nothing," Jno. vi. 63; and Paul affirms that the Jews who are only children of Abraham by fleshly ties, are not the children of God. Rom. ix. 6; Matt. iii. 9. To be plain about it, they are children of the devil, Jno. viii. 44, and can not, ergo, claim kinship with our blessed Lord. They were "a generation of vipers"—dangerous as snakes. Matt. iii. 7. They "both killed the Lord Jesus, and their own prophets, and have persecuted us; and they please not God, and are contrary to all men;" for their sins the wrath of God has come "upon them to the uttermost." 1 Thess. ii. 15, 16. That Christ the "Holy Child," Acts iv. 30, the Son of the Highest, Luke i. 35, would call these vipers and "children of the devil" "My brethren," is an outrage on reason; it would identify the blessed Lord with the devil. Jesus himself explains who his brethren are; hear him: All of the human race, whether Jew or Gentile, who do his Father's will. Matt. xii. 50. Every one sanctified by the truth, John xvii. 17. Of such he says he is not "ashamed to call them brethren." Heb. ii. 11. Christ would be "ashamed" to call "children of the devil" his brethren. Read Heb. ii. 11, carefully and notice particularly why Christ call us brethren: "They who are sanctified are all of one (Father); for which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren." If sanctification is the "cause" why he is not "ashamed" to "call them brethren," [illegible] ashamed to call an unsanctified [illegible] a brother. The conclusion is inevitable: The saints who do the Father's will, and are sanctified by the truth, in the present dispensation, are the brethren whom Christ owns as his in the day of his coming and glory. Mark viii. 38.

FORGIVENESS.

Why does God forgive?—Eld. Jos. Williams.

REPLY.

When the wicked return to the Lord, our God will have mercy and will "abundantly pardon" them. Isa. iv. 8; Why? Because:

1. God "delights in mercy." "Who is a God like unto thee, that pardoneth iniquity.....because he delighteth in mercy." Mi. vii. 18.

2. He forgives for his Name's sake. Psalms xxiii. 11; "For thy Name's sake, O Lord, pardon mine iniquity." Ps. xxv. 11.

3. He forgives because it augments his glory to pardon. "I will pardon all their iniquities, whereby they have sinned, and whereby they have transgressed against me. And it shall be to me a name of joy, a praise and an honour before all the nations of the earth, which shall hear all the good that I do unto them." Jer. xxxiii. 8, 9. Throughout eternity the pardoned and immortalized saints will sing in heavenly music, to the joy, praise and honor of our God, the forgiveness which God has so abundantly, and anxiously bestowed upon them through Christ's death and name. Rev. v. 9.

PEETWASHING.

Is feet washing a church ordinance?—A. M.

REPLY.

That it is a church ordinance, and binding on the people of God now is a conclusion reached by people who look narrowly, and unthinkingly at the statements, "Ye ought to wash one another's feet," "Ye should do as I have done unto you;" and "If ye know these things happy are ye if you do them." Jno. xiii. 14, 15, 17. Those who believe in ceremonially washing feet are in the habit of quoting these statements, and then giving a prolix discourse about how "awful" to neglect and even deny, as some people do, that we "ought" to wash "one another's feet." There may be such people in the world; I do not know. In all my travels I never met a man who denied we "ought" to wash feet, as Christ instructed us. Of one thing I am sure, and that is, the Church of God teaches we "ought" to wash feet, and that if we take Jesus for our example in this, we will be "happy" if we do as he directs us.

All admit that we "ought" to wash feet; but divergent views are held as to the manner of doing it. We deny it is a church ordinance to be ceremonially observed. Those who believe and observe it as a church ordinance affirms that:

I. Christ did not eat the passover, but a supper specially instituted the night of his betrayal. II. That this supper was a full meal. III. That the Lord washed his disciples' feet at Jerusalem the same time they had the breaking of bread. We destroy all these false positions by the following Scriptural propositions: I. Jesus ate the passover with his disciples—not a supper of his own institution. Matt xxvi; Luke xxii II. The feet washing took place at Bethany—not Jerusalem. Jno xiii 1, 2; xii 1, 2, 3; Matt xxvi 6, 7; Mark xiv 13. (Note, "They made him a supper." Instead of the Lord making them a supper, they made him a supper!) III. The breaking of bread is not a full meal—nor a supper. 1 Cor xi 23-26. IV. Feet-washing is an act of hospitality, a private duty, to be observed at home—not a church ordinance. 1 Tim v 10; 1 Pet iv 9; Acts xvi 15, 33; Heb xiii 2; Gen xviii 4; xix 2; xxiv 32. V. The apostles had the Holy Spirit, and it guided them into all truth. Jno. xvi. 13. If guided them to strictly observe baptism and the breaking of bread as church ordinances. But feet washing was never observed by the apostles as a church ordinance.

THE CLOSED DOOR: AGAINST WHOM, AND WHEN CLOSED?

What does closing the door mean in Matt xxv 10; Luke xiii 25? Against whom and when will it be closed?—John L. Barnes.

REPLY.

Noah was a righteous man (Gen vii 1, 5), and the Lord could not destroy him with the wicked in the deluge. xviii 23, 25. It is said, "The Lord shut him in" the ark. Gen vii 16. On this text J. S. Exell, M. A., remarks: Literally, "Then does Jehovah shut [illegible]." How touching! [illegible]fall "Then"—a closing [illegible] when a mother closes up about her dear ones for the night: "Jehovah,"—the God of covenant grace, the Becoming One, ever becoming some further and something fresh to those who trust him." Noah was a righteous man, therefore the Lord in mercy "shut him in." Truly this is "touchingly beautiful." But we must remember that while God "shut him in," graciously, he, at the same time, and with perfect justice, shut the door in the face of a world of sinners.

In shutting Noah in God shut a world of sinners out. "And the door was shut" (Matt xxv 10) is an expression borrowed from Dan vii 10. The thoughts, if not the words, are copied from Moses, and must, therefore, be identical in meaning. The door of God's kingdom now stands ajar for every coming and willing soul. But a time is coming when it will be shut.

I. The door closed. A door is used both ways—to either open and admit, or shut and exclude. To Peter was given the keys of the kingdom; the door has been opened in the gospel preached; those who embrace the gospel, and keep their lamps burning till the Lord comes, are wise virgins; they are ready for the marriage of the Lamb: "they went in with him to the marriage of the Lamb: "they went in with him to the marriage, and the door was shut." They are "shut in" as was Noah. Closing the door of the House (Luke xiii 25) or kingdom, means that all God's "wise virgins" who were "ready" for the Lord's coming, and who entered in for the marriage, are "shut in." When the door is closed every one within the house is "shut in," enclosed; and every one without, the door is "closed" in their face, and they are excluded from the kingdom to perish in "outer darkness." There is a proclivity among some people, especially the Universalist, to talk incessantly about the love, mercy and goodness of God; but they shudder at the justice, and deny the anger of God. The anger of God is not inconsistent with his mercy. Not only is not inconsistent, but God's anger is necessary to his mercy. Let those who are fond of talking softly about the love of God remember if God's wrath is not righteous, his mercy is not real. If God's anger toward the ungodly is not right, he is bound to pardon everybody. Pardon made compulsory is no longer mercy. If mercy is real, anger is real also. Destroy anger and you destroy mercy. Mercy is a lovely flower growing on the soil of divine anger, and you cannot take away the ground on which the flower grows without removing the flower too. If you like the flower, and want to keep it, keep the ground where it grows. These observations are for those who can see the mercy, love and goodness of God, but cannot see their opposite—the justice, anger and wrath of the Almighty. The door is closed.

II. Against whom? The context in Matt. xxv 10; Luke xiii 25, answers this important question. The "foolish virgins" were not fools in the sense of intellectual weakness, nor were they ignorant of the truth. God's Word is called a lamp (Ps. cxix 105), and this the foolish virgins had as well as the wise. Matt xxv 7. Their foolishness consisted in not keeping the light they had. Here apostates are clearly defined. Luke xiii 24 reads: "Strive to enter in at the strait gate." The "Master of the house" (v 25) is represented as in a sitting posture (Acts ii 34; Heb i 13), watching those who "strive" and those who do not. When the time arrives for him to make his enemies his footstool, he raises up, and the first thing he does is to "shut too the door"! We have learned whom he "shuts in;" now whom does he shut out. Every one which did not "strive" to "enter in;" all who sought to enter in by their own plan, and were not obey it, and are "workers of iniquity" by choice. Rom i 21-32.

III. As to when the door is closed: It is closed when Abraham and all the saints are glorified in the kingdom of God, and the wicked are punished; these are all synchronal events. They all occur when Jesus comes, the proof for which you will find in Luke xiii; Matt xxiv 25.

ROBT G. HUGGINS.

Dear Restitution:

Find enclosed renewal for my subscription to THE RESTITUTION. I certainly enjoy reading the paper, and as I have no preacher I stand in need of just such a good paper as THE RESTITUTION. Oh, how I wish everybody could and would read THE RESTITUTION, and believe its teaching, then they would understand and believe the Bible in its purity and simplicity. But the minds of the people are carried away with established theories, they think they can believe just anything and be saved, it does not make any difference about the gospel. But Paul thought different to that, he says, Though we or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel than that which we have preached unto you let him be accursed. Gal i. 8. And Jesus says, I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, if any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book, and if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book, Rev. xxii. 18, 19, so we should be very careful what we believe and teach. I trust it will not be long before we can identify ourselves with the people of God, by being baptized into the all saving name of the Lord Jesus, and W. H. Wilson has promised to come and help us put on that name. Paul says, For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ," so we get into Christ or put on Christ by baptism according to Paul, for "there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." We believe we have all the faith necessary in the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, but still we are not in a saved condition till we are baptized into the sin-covering name of the Lord Jesus, we are strangers from the covenants of promise having no hope and without God in the world. Eph. ii. 12.

I am as ever a lover of truth.

MRS. A. J. MARTIN.

Brethren, Beloved in the Lord:

I am at home; not feeling very well but able to do some writing. I have been a reader of THE RESTITUTION in all its changes since 1861. I was baptized by Jacob Shaffer in 1861. Bros. Shaffer, J. F. Wagoner and R. Corbaley were my teachers, and they were good instructors and good men. Bro. Shaffer and Bro. Corbaley have fallen asleep in Jesus. I loved these teachers dearly.

There was one lesson that I learned from Brother Corbaley that I shall never forget. I will tell it to our young preaching brethren. The last time I ever saw him, with my hand in his, he said, "Brother John, remember this, that you can catch more flies with molasses than you can with vinegar," and I add, "or salt and pepper either." But my motto is, "No compromise of truth with error."

In the fall of 1861, at Old Antioch Church at Conference meeting, Bro. Hugh Barnhill and Brother S. A. Chaplin, set me apart as an ordained minister of the gospel in the church of God. There was a strong attachment also for these two brethren. They too have fallen asleep in Jesus, sweetly sleeping low in the ground, resting from their labors and their works do follow them. I will never forget those good times we used to have with Bros. Wagoner, Cuffel, Shaffer, Corbaley, Hatch, Drew and others; but many of them have fallen asleep.

In the spring of 1869, May 8, I took my wife and little family, and went to Neosho Co., Kan., where we have resided ever since except two and one-half years we lived at or near Tempe, Arizona.

In Kansas we saw hard times with the rest of the early settlers, and with the doctrine I taught made it all the worse for me, but an honest and upright life made our enemies and all respect us. When I meditate and think of how many of our old soldiers of the cross, who at an early day went out into the field to help to clean away the rubbish and sow the seed of the kingdom, for others to follow. Let us count the old ones that are gone: Shaffer, Stephenson, Barnhill, Chaplin, Corbaley, Hatch, Carter, Kimsey, Oram, Gower, Hicklin. Oh how our ranks are thinning out. We have had several severe trials in our own family, sickness and death. In July 1906 my oldest brother died at the age of 79 years. So you see we have had our bitter with the sweet. Soon, soon will the old soldiers be laid to rest if the Lord does not come.

When I look back over my work, I feel almost as though I had done nothing; but when I see the confidence my dear brethren have in me, in the places where I have preached for 36, and 25 years, and where I have baptised grandparents, children and their grandchildren, and they are still anxious that Uncle John must preach for them, and while people of other denominations respecting me and allow me to preach in their churches I feel that my work is not all in vain.

I have adopted the rule "Therefore, all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do you even so to them; for this is the law and the prophets."

Many of our dear brethren and sisters whom I have baptised have been laid away in the grave, and I am just now wondering who will be the next one to follow them.

Dearly beloved, once more, pray for me, that my faith fail not. God bless you all, is my prayer. Amen.

UNCLE JOHN FOSTER.

Losses Compensated.

Consider even, the undoubted sorrows and trials of this mortal life. "Sweet are the uses of adversity." With all pains and losses there are sent blessings, or remedies, or, at least, alleviations if we will only receive them. Of old times was it found that what the Church lost by martyrdom was more than repaid by new accession of converts, and new fervor of zeal? The Church lost a deacon, Stephen; but how rich and strange the compensation, as from the deacon's martyred dust there sprang an apostle, Paul! For the individual, too, as well as the community diseases and calamity have their uses, their alleviations, even their ample compensations. Uses—for as much as they serve to refine, humble, and hallow the character. Alleviations—since "God stayeth his rough wind in the day of his east wind." And even compensation—for some help, some vintage, not seen at first, is sure to reveal itself to those that are watchful and wise. When Paul came to Macedonia "his flesh had no rest;" but God comforted him "by the coming of Titus." Thus, often when we are in great straits, some Titus comes—some friendly compensation—and we are not weaker, rather stronger; and after tears, sometimes in our fears, we are happier than before. It is true of life, as with nature, that with the dark cloud God sets a rainbow in the sky.

What can we do? What are we doing? What have we done? These are questions for the future, and for the present, and for the past. They are not to be considered all at once, but we have to make and to meet the answers to them in the passing time; and their result reaches into eternity. Our heeding this thought, or failing to do so, marks our improvement of life, or our failure to improve. Lowell says:

"Life is a leaf of paper white,
Whereon each one of us may write
His word or two, and then comes night."

As we cannot gather a rose and scatter its petals to the winds of heaven without some of the perfume resting on our own person, so we cannot do an act of kindness to another, without some portion of love's essence resting upon ourselves.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is represented by some one known to be trust-worthy.

We wish to avoid the labor and expense of mailing statements to our patrons. If each one who has not as yet paid for this year would send in his renewal at once, we will appreciate the favor.

Poetry.

"This Same Jesus."

This same Jesus! O, how sweetly
Fall those words upon the ear!
Like a swell of far-off music,
In the night-watch still and drear.

He who healed the helpless leper,
He who dried the widow's tear!
He who changed to health and gladness
Helpless, suffering, trembling fear!

He who wandered near and homeless,
By the stormy Galilee;
He who on the night-robed mountain
Bent in prayer the wearied knee.

He who gently called the weary,
"Come and I will give you rest!"
He who loved the little children,
Took them in his arms and blessed!

"This same Jesus!" When the vision
Of that last and awful day
Bursts upon the prostrate spirit,
Like a midnight lightning ray;

Then we lift our hearts in adoring:
"This same Jesus," loved and known—
Him, our own most gracious Savior—
Seated on the great white throne.

For this word, O Lord, we bless thee;
Blessed Master—changeless mate,
Yesterday, to-day, forever,
Jesus Christ is still the same.

LESSON FOR SUNDAY APRIL 14.

God gives Jacob a New Name, Gen. xxxii. 9-12, 22-30.

Golden Text.—Rejoice because your names are written in heaven. Luke x. 20.

Where dates and distances are given, they are not exactly accurate, but to indicate, for instance, about 40 miles north, saves the searcher from looking east, west or south. The last lesson left Jacob at Bethel, from there he went northeast to Haran, married Leah, and Rachel. Kept Laban's sheep for over twenty years. Laban did some mean things to him, but the Lord was with him, and prospered him till he had more than Laban. Gen. xxix. 30.

The Lord told him to return to Canaan, after consulting his wives, they felt without telling Laban know. Laban followed, but God warned him not to trouble Jacob, they made a peace covenant and Laban went home. Chapter xxxi.

Jacob went on, saw the angels of God, said they were God's host, and called the place Mahanaim, meaning God's host. Esau was coming with 400 men. Jacob was afraid, as years before Esau had threatened to kill him, and Jacob prayed. Lesson text, verse 9. O God of my father Abraham, and Isaac. It is a singular fact men—and women—according to Scripture, address or pray to God some over 4000 times but very rarely do they use the expression "My God," often thy God, our God—the covenant keeping God. 1 Kings viii. 23, the covenant to which Jacob was now the third party of the second part. This is the first recorded prayer. He pleads God's promise

10. I am not worthy. He that humbleth himself shall be exalted. Luke xviii. 4. He knew what mercy and truth was. He had left home with a staff. Like Moses he left all for the kingdom of heaven's sake. Heb. xi. 26. Now he had two large bands—great possessions. Gen. xxxii. 7.

11. He prayed for deliverance from Esau.

12. And reminded God of his great promise of the future.

24. Jacob had sent his people on before, a man—an angel, Jud. vi. 11. wrestled—held him—Jacob held too.

25. He prevailed not.—It is not clear what the object of the angel was, but he did not succeed by ordinary strength, using supreme power he put Jacob's thigh out of joint.

26. Jacob still held for a blessing. —From his youth up he had valued God's blessing above all else, the kind of blessing that delighted David. 2 Sam. i. 20.

27. What is thy name—Jacob—supplanter or following after.

28. Thy name shall be Israel—meaning, ruling with God. A power with God,—a prince with God,—truly a wonderful name. It seems to have been about seven years after before the name was used. When Jacob got back to Bethel the Lord again told him his name should be Israel. Gen. xxxv. 10. It is first used Gen. xxxv. 21. from there to Rev. xxi. 12. it is found about 2000 times, the name was applied to all the descendants of Jacob the twelve tribes, the Levites, though an important tribe in Israel were known as Levites Num. 3. 39. In the history of Israel—Jeshurun—they figure in almost every [illegible] ble condition of life. When the division took place, 2 Chro. x., the ten tribes were called Israel, the others Judah, the blessing of God on Jacob is sure. Israel will have a glorious future. Eze. xxxvii.

Jacob prevailed, not by strength, but by weeping and supplication. Hosea xii. 4.

29. The angel did not tell his name, but he blessed Jacob.

30. And he knew, and called the place Penuel—the face of God.—His impression was quit different from Gideon, Judges vi. 21 28. Gideon thought he would die because he had seen an angel face to face. Jacob knew he would live. that his prayer was answered. Esau would not kill him.

31. The wrestling—holding—clasping—was not in prayer alone—as we have been taught,—that also a bodily conflict the result of which Jacob could not hide, he halted—limped—as he passed on to join his company.

We here take leave of Jacob, Israel, as the central figure in our lessons, it is to be hoped that we have learned much from his example of faith and patience. As a man he is not rated very high by men in general, but before God, a man to be—and was—trusted, honored and blessed, and will be with the Lord Jesus Christ, and his fathers in the kingdom of God. Matt. viii. 11. May we also be there.

Is It Right?

Bro. Huggins:

After reading your kind letter in our RESTITUTION I have made a trial in my weakness to answer the question, "Is it right?" As this question can be answered in the affirmative as well as in the negative, I ask you to publish two answers, one on each side of the question, and then say which is the best. Hoping that many brethren will give their opinion on this serious question I am yours looking for "that blessed hope."

H. JUERGENSEN.

Is it right for believers of the truth to identify themselves with an orthodox church for the sake of having a "church home"?

"I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes; even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight." These words of joy from the lips of our Lord and Master are just the expression of my heart in answering the question above mentioned, and so I say, let us all humble ourselves to be babes, that we may receive the right answer according to the law, which is given us, the law of love. I do not want anybody, who reads these lines to feel hurt, when they do not agree with me, but nevertheless, I pray you to consider this matter, as it is a very serious one and should have the closest attention, as our whole future is involved in it or in other words, it means "life in the kingdom" or "death in outer darkness."

"Is it right?" This question can be answered in the affirmative and in the negative, and I do not like to answer it right now, but let us take up the other parts of the question and then come back to the question, and then answer it with a yea and a nay.

Is it right for a believer of the truth? Who is a believer of the truth? In John iii 16-18, Jesus is dealing with two opposite parties; a believer and an unbeliever: to the believer God has promised everlasting life, but he that believeth not is condemned already; because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God. So I say a "believer of the truth" is a person, who believes in the name of the only begotten Son of God. And Acts viii 12 confirms this statement by saying, "When they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women." In John xviii 37 we have recorded the words of our Savior, "Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice," and what has he just answered Pilate on his question, "Art thou a king then?" "Thou sayest that I am a king, to this end was I born and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth."

A "believer of the truth" is a person who believes that Jesus of Nazareth, the only begotten son of God was born to be the King of the Jews; and as the angel Gabriel told that Jewish maiden, saying: He shall be great and shall be called the Son of the Highest and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom shall be no end."

Beloved in the Lord! This is my creed, the shortest way to put it, and I do not consider a person who has a man-made creed (the socalled apostolic creed which is not mentioned in the Bible) or a person who has added something to these God sent words of Gabriel, a believer of the truth.

As the orthodox church may believe this all right in their way of believing, they do not teach the restoration of Israel and Jesus to be the king of the Jews, and ignore entirely the oath-bound promises of God to the fathers of the Jewish nation so they are without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world, and so I call them "unbelievers" and how can a believer unite with an unbeliever so as to make one, or in other words, how can a person be a "believer of the truth" and an unbeliever at the same time? Brethren, don't take anything short of the oath-bound promises of the God of Israel!

"Church home." The word home signifies the abode of the family to which one belongs; therefore when a person joins a class of people and calls that his "church home," he shows thereby that he belongs to that family; but God in his great wisdom reserved this right for himself, for on the day of Pentecost after the people had believed, repented and had been baptized by the apostles the record finishes in this wise, "And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved!" Now I am ready and willing to give you an answer to the question, "Is it right?" in this way.

IT IS NOT RIGHT!

As I have been trying to prove the question to the negative side, I beg of you to allow me to show you, why believers of the truth should have a church home without identifying themselves with an orthodox church! Paul wrote to "the Church of God at Corinth," What concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel (unbeliever)? And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God, as God hath said, I will dwell in them and walk in them; and I will be their God and they shall be my people. Wherefore and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you. And will be a Father to you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."

COME OUT FROM AMONG THEM

Children of the living God! When we repented and sealed the covenant with God through our act of obedience in baptism, we took upon ourselves to follow the teachings as laid down in Holy Writ and need not fear the talk of men, nor shrink to take the lonesome walk, but rather take courage and hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering, "not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is, but exhorting one another, and so much the more as we see the day approaching."

About three years ago the writer moved away from one of the largest congregations of the Church of God to a small village and could not find a believer and had no place where to go to worship; as we were only my wife and myself, I could not see how we could constitute a quorum. [illegible] my wife said we could, and so we agreed to bring the matter before the Conference of the Church of God in Ohio. At the Conference in Cleveland, Ohio, we met our beloved Bro. Underwood, and he proved to me, how necessary it was for us to remember our absent Lord, even where two are striving for the kingdom. Returning home we prepared for meetings, and so, brethren, you will find now a small congregation, perhaps the smallest congregation in the county, state or even in the United States, on each first and third Sunday of the month worshiping in the little green cottage on the hillside and having for our motto, "Fear not little flock, for it is the Father's good pleasure to give to you the kingdom." (God bless the church in the "little green cottage." Phil. ii, R. G. H.) These meetings are backed by a great power, which God in his great mercy and loving kindness has provided, the greatest thing in the world, the power of love.

Brethren, if our hearts are filled and energized with love to God and to Christ as the motive power of our [illegible] tion, then these meetings [illegible] ch, and all his children had [illegible] his steps.

[illegible] city pleasure. They will become to us, the joy and the rejoicing of our heart."

May this be the happy experience of all those two's or three's who are gathering on each first day of the week in remembrance of him, till he comes. I cannot leave the consideration of this important question more fitly, than by recalling the solemn and weighty words of Paul, when he did a last farewell to the Ephesian elders. "And now, brethren, I commend you to God and to the Word of his grace which is able to build you on and to give you an inheritance among them that are sanctified." Amen.

The Story of a Happy Christian Life.—No. 2.

I left Auntie Willard at the Woman's prayer meeting. Sister Cook had just asked her to pray, was she afraid now, do you think? Not in the least. We never find how strong we can be for God until we have won a battle or two like this. She knelt, and forgetting everything else but the love she felt for God and for poor lost human beings, prayed as she never had prayed before. She had no sooner ceased, when another voice took up the strain of earnest supplication and joyful praise, and then another, and another until five had followed her. There had never been anything like it before. All were blessed and comforted, and you may be sure the meetings were not discontinued. God always honors those who honor him. It was "a lasting triumph" for Auntie Willard—"as real as any ever won on the field of carnal strife."

She had other conflicts, but God never allowed her to be vanquished, not even when her little daughter, her first born child, was about this time taken from her. Her will acquiesced in the will of her God, she could hope in him, knowing that she should yet praise him who was "the help of her countenance and her God"—praise him, when that little child should come from the land of the enemy, and be her own again.

The Baptist denomination had made Dr. Willard their agent for the purchase of lands whereon to erect a theological seminary. These lands were in Covington Kentucky, just across the Ohio River from Cincinnati, and the doctor was to supervise the work of building, so the family moved over there. It was a field "white for harvest." One of the Baptist brethren offered a large room in his house as a place for the gathering of the children into a Sunday school, and helped in calling them together. But so delighted were the little ones to find friends who could teach them of Jesus that the room soon could not hold the large number that came, and the school was moved from Mr. J. W. Jones' into town, a short distance away, seventy-six pupils came the first day, and were carefully taught by Auntie Willard, her husband and others, according to the knowledge then in their possession. Having succeeded in establishing a sunday school, two evenings out of every week, were given up to the young people in Bible readings and in instructing them in the grand lessons of morality and virtue found in the pages of that holy book. Other evenings were spent in visiting the parents of the children, that by conversation and prayer those who had once been professors of religion, and who had grown cold, might be won back to duty, and bear their part in the work, so auspiciously begun.

It was a busy five years. Elder J. B. Cook and Dr. S. W. Lynn often came over to preach, and soon a little church was organized with nineteen members, with nineteen more added within a month. Auntie Willard and her husband, soon after this, invited their pastor to move into the house with them, assuring him that they themselves would support him and his family, without cost to the church, until such time as it should become strong enough to do this for itself. This he accordingly did, and the happy friendship, so knit between these people in those blessed years of daily association, was never broken until broken by death. Sister Susan L. (Huntington) Cook dying April 28, 1885, in the 86th year of her long and very useful life; and Brother J. B. Cook several years later, he being twenty years younger than his wife.

Dr. Willard's aged mother was also living in the family at the time. She had never accepted Jesus as her Savior; though her husband, according to the light vouchsafed to people in those days, had been for many years a prayerful and devoted member of [illegible] ch, and all his children had [illegible]

Auntie Willard felt that she could not rest until this dear mother should also find peace in believing, and spent the day after her arrival in fasting and prayer on her behalf. At ten o'clock in the morning was now the time set apart for prayer with the children. The mother was asked to join them, and readily did so, saying "But I do not know that I can kneel down I am so infirm." And yet she did kneel, and as soon as Auntie Willard had ceased praying, cried out, "God be merciful to me a sinner and open my blind eyes!" Auntie Willard instructed her as well as she was able, and the dear old woman was soon after baptised, and six months later fell asleep in the blessed hope of awakening in the resurrection to life everlasting.

A few hours before she died, she said, "Elizabeth, I shall have cause to bless God to all eternity that I ever saw your face; but for this I should now be without hope." She also left messages for all her sons and daughters exhorting them to be faithful and meet her in the kingdom."

Are there any of those whom we have met and passed on the journey of life, who can bless God for the meeting? Any who can rejoice, that because of us Christ has become to them their salvation? It is a dreadful thing to pass by people who are sinking in the floods, without stretching out a hand to save. It would be accounted a murderous act, were it only the present life that was endangered, what then shall it be considered, when the thing at stake is the glorious future life?

But what about the foster children? I do wonder if Auntie Willard's teaching and prayers had any influence over them? Indeed they had, every one of them were baptized before the organization of the church in Covington; from the oldest to the youngest, making profession of their faith in the Lord Jesus Christ as their Savior. I do not know what became of them, I wish I did. Perhaps some time I can find out, at least about Samuel Willard, I never knew, the names of the others.

The church and Sunday school planted at Covington, were in a flourishing condition, a house of worship had been built, there were meetings for missions and monthly concerts of prayer, and Auntie Willard and her husband began to think they could be spared to enter other fields.

Their pastor had lost his voice and health and a Dr. Roberts of South Carolina had taken his place in the pulpit. But alas! he was an advocate of slavery, and openly apologized for the system, even advising Auntie Willard to buy a good black girl to do her work! But she told him that "never, never would she do this;" that "her parents had raised her clear from that sin," and that "she should 'touch not, taste not, handle not,' the unclean thing," nor would she consent to hire a slave belonging to another, "feeling that whoever did her work ought to have the reward and not a rapacious master." She felt now that "it was time for them to leave and go where the air and soil were free.

Her husband had already purchased in partnership with two other men, quite a tract of land on the site of an Indian village in Kosciusko County, Indiana, and had laid out a town there, which he had named Oswego. A number of lots had been taken and it was becoming quite a village.

EMMA L. SMITH, Sec.

In Memoriam.

Sister Elizabeth Coffin fell asleep in Jesus in the 82nd year of her age, at her home in Champaign, Illinois, March 9. 1907.

"As sleep in Jesus blessed sleep
From which none ever wake to weep."

Elizabeth Tate was born in Dayton, Ohio, Oct. 28, 1825. She was united in marriage to Albert G. Coins, in January, 1843, to which union was born six children.

They resided in Indiana until 1856 when they moved to near Tolono, Illinois. Two years later she was left a widow with five children, one child having died previous to the death of her husband.

In 1875 she moved to Champaign, where she has since resided. Her children were all with her during her last sickness and tenderly cared for her, and laid her to rest in Mount Hope Cemetery to await the resurrection morning, when Jesus will come to awaken from their long rest those who have died in the Lord.

Now she sleeps, but the sleep of death will end with the morning of that day, when faith shall be turned into joyous realities of an immortal life.

The funeral sermon was preached by Eld. Stanley, pastor of the Adventist Church.

The last thirty-eight years of Sister Coffin's life was spent as an invalid.

The gospel hope cheered her during these years of suffering and trial.

She, with two of her daughters, Sisters Adaline and Ella Gardiner were brought into the faith through the teaching of the Word by Bro. J. S. Hatch.

She often spoke her appreciation of Bro. Hatch and his faithfulness in teaching them the truth. She was always strong in the faith and ready to give a reason for the hope of the gospel.

Those that came to call on her, were often given a Scripture, a tract, or a RESTITUTION to lead them to see the glorious truths she loved so well.

But I should not be faithful to the memory of this dear sister if I should neglect to speak of one thing that was the burden of this faithful mother. Her great desire was that all of her children should become obedient to Christ. She did not neglect to mark the Guide Book for those she loved so well," and our prayer is that they may become devoted to Christ and his Word as they were to this loved mother; ever cherishing the memory of her who cared for them and who gave them wise council, not only in things pertaining to this life, but of that which is promised to those that believe and obey.

More tender than a mother's love is the love of Jesus, who died on Calvary for you and for me. "Like as a father pitieth his children so the Lord pitieth them that fear him, for he knoweth our frame, he remembereth that we are dust," and because God so loved the world, "He gave his only begotten Son, that who so ever believeth in him might not perish but have everlasting life."

May we all prove worthy of this great love, and like our sister, remain faithful unto death.

"Though she sleeps 'tis not forever,
There will be a glorious dawn,
We shall meet to part, no, never,
On the resurrection morn."

When thou prayest rather let thy heart be without words than thy words without heart. Prayer will make a man cease from sin or sin will entice a man to cease from prayer. The spirit of prayer is more precious than treasures of gold and silver. Pray often; for prayer is a shield to the soul, a sacrifice to God and a scourge to Satan.—John Bunyan.

Communicated.

Evangelizing on the Pacific Coast.

I left Auburn Cal. for Tulare, via Sacramento, at 8 a. m. March 12th.

These towns in the foot hills of the Sierra Nevada Mts., and the rolling hill country northeast of Sacramento, make beautiful scenery. A good many orchards among these hills, some of them pretty, bearing orange groves. At a small village, called Penryn, we notice that the distance from San Francisco, is 118 miles, and from Ogden 716 miles.

A few miles farther down grade we reach Rocklin. The round-house is here which will soon be moved lower down to Roseville, and as Rocklin is noted for nothing but rocks, its prestige must soon give way to the Roseville, of the future. Here, at Rocklin, is where my newly made friend, Mr. Bancroft, lives. He is train conductor. Mrs. Bancroft is a well established gospel believer. Mr. Bancroft is a man of high morals. It is not always the occupation that determines the morals. All R. R. men do not have good morals; but they compare better than I once thought, with the rest of us.

The region about Rocklin is worth noting for its beauty. The rolling prairie covered by its carpet of green, and shaded by its evergreen live oaks, interspersed by still leafless, white oaks. Its occasional orchards, often of orange trees, the beautiful bright sky, seeming more glorious on account of some days of gloom and clouds, all make our world a desirable and an enjoyable place to stay.

In leaving Wolf I parted with those that I shall always hold dear as a people of unassuming ways, and of natural worth.

While I anxiously hoped that some, who have apparently become established in the things of the kingdom, would have rendered obedience during these meetings, and was disappointed, I feel confident that results will still follow.

If only one or two shall be led to obey the Master, it will repay time and expense, more than can be computed.

My stay with Bro. and Sister Cook was become like, and agreeable. My visit in the neighborhood was pleasant. During the meetings I formed the acquaintance of Mr. King and his wife. This young man is a San Francisco attorney. He lost his health as a rough rider in Roosevelt's noted regiment. He is seeking his health by dwelling at different altitudes in hills and mountains.

I felt a great interest in trying to get him and his wife interested in the truth, which will give mental and spiritual food to those of their intelligence and enquiring minds. They had heard no system that they could think of with satisfaction till in these meetings they learned that man is a unit being instead of a dual nature; and that Christ had come to save man and will bless the nations at his return.

I hope that their study may establish them in something better than skepticism.

I took the south bound train at Sacramento, at 10 a. m., and enjoyed the extensive Sacramento valley which stretches out in its millions of acres of level prairie lands, framed on the east and west by the distant ridge of mountains.

At Tracy we waited nearly an hour to change cars. We found Modesto to be a town of some rural importance, surrounded by a beautiful farming country, situated 99 miles south of Sacramento or 114 south of San Francisco. So beautiful a world as this would be good enough for eternity if sin and its consequences were removed. This level strip of country running hundreds of miles north and south through the San Joquin and Sacramento Valleys through the greater length of California is so similar in general appearance and outline that the strangers cannot determine where one valley ends and the other begins; no separating line. How fortunate if God's people could be united and submerged into each other so beautifully and completely. But it will not be so till in the age to come.

At that time, the knowledge of the Lord will cover the earth, as the waters cover the sea.

Merced is one of the pretty prosperous towns of this farming and stock region. It is 138 miles south of Sacramento. Its elevation is 171 feet above sea level. I find that the elevation has ranged from 23 to 171 feet, over the distance we have passed, since we left Sacramento; but we will get nearly 3000 feet high before we reach Los Angeles. Pretty well up into the clouds! I reached Tulare at 8 p. m. where Bro. Geo. Watts met me at the station; and took me to his home to entertain me for 24 hours or until the train of the next day should pass. We have planned this visit in order to arrange meetings at Tulare, as we shall return to Portland. We also have other meetings in view in this part of California at that time.

Bro. and Sister Watts are established in the faith. They first heard our system of faith about 15 years ago, from Bro. T. J. Whitsett in N. W. Iowa.

Our Better Side.

Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, if there be any virtue and if there be any praise, think on these things. Phil. iv. 8.

These words are an appeal to the best in human nature. In every man there is an angel and a demon; tendencies toward right, inclinations toward the wrong. There is no man so thoroughly bad that some good may not be found in him. There is no man so truly good that he is without imperfections. Every once in a while we say of a man that there is no good in him whatsoever. But that judgment is rather an expression of our attitude toward him than a real estimate of his character.

A Christmas card was in circulation last year which read: "There is so much good in the worst of us and so much bad in the best of us that it does not behoove any of us to talk about the rest of us."

We frequently speak of the fixity of character, but almost every passing hour our consciousness is undergoing change. The mechanism of thought, feeling, purpose, is one of stupendous variability. One hour we are under the influence of one set of emotions, the next hour these emotions are succeeded by an entirely different group of sensations.

In a sense we are all victims of the clock and the man of the morning and the man of the evening, while one and the same man, yet are two different men. On the purely spiritual side there is even a deeper mystery. Over the lives of the majority of men living within the confines of Christendom the Sabbath day casts something of its spiritual influence. There is some elevation of soul, some thought Godward, however slight, on the Sabbath.

Our liability to change under some influence from without is enormous, incalculable. A single glance at the face of Beatrice revolutionized the life of Dante. His case is typical. Today throughout all Christendom men are being strangely and wondrously affected by the sanctity of the home, the worship of God, the anthem, the voice of the preacher.

There is an unrealized self in every man. Now and then we catch gleams of our better life. They come to us in stray, sacred moments as prospects caught a few times from some lofty mountain altitude—the vision of that other being, that self buried down deep within us, that cries out now and then for freedom, for a larger, truer, nobler, divine life.

Every man may live a better life. Not in any ascetic, monastic scheme, which ties up our days and our souls as in a straight waistcoat, but in an alliance, a working compact between our souls and God.

Two young men came to this city from a western town. One of them had felt the narrow limitations of his boyhood. He thought, well as a man passes through this world but once, and he will be a long time dead, he might as well have his fling and see what there is in life, so he shunned the good people. He had seen enough of them at home. He visited the haunts of sin. Well, he has had his fling, his face and his eyes tell the tale.

The other young man came with the determination not only to make the best of his opportunities, but also, as Jean Paul Richter said: "To make as much out of himself as it is possible to make out of the stuff." He put himself in touch with the best associations, yes, he went to the church and was encouraged in his purpose. The passing years have witnessed not only his material success, but also his growth in manhood. He paid attention to what was best.

The difference between these two young men consisted simply in the different voices to which they responded. One responded to the highest, the other to the lowest. One endeavored to bring out the best, the other stifled and smothered the best.

My appeal to every young man who reads these words is: Overcome the lethargy and tyranny which holds you down to your lower self. Bring out the angel that is within you.—W. C. Stinson.

The Boy Who Cannot Wait.

The boy who cannot wait for a good time until it is ready for him, is the boy likely to get in trouble. He is the one who eats the apples swinging on the tree, before the warm sun has had a chance to ripen them for him. It is the same boy who, in haste for the first skate, braves all risks and takes his pleasure when others are waiting for another twenty-four hours' hard freeze to make perfectly safe the long stretch of shimmering ice. This boy has yet to learn that safety is cheap at the price of a little patience, and pleasure loses nothing by a reasonable postponement.

If we cannot wait for our good times till they are ready for us, we must take them green, and along with them dissatisfaction and frequently danger. If our impatience does not give the sour fruit a chance to ripen, nor thin ice time to thicken, we have no right to complain if the result is disastrous; and the same holds good of many other things we are inclined to grasp and make our own too quickly.—Young People's Weekly.

Faith is the starting-post of obedience, but what I want is, that you wait not for more light to spiritualize your obedience, but that you work for more light by yielding a present obedience up to the present light which you profess, that you stir up all the gift which is now in you, and this is the way to have the gift enlarged, that whatever your hand findeth to do in the way of service to God, you now do it with all your might. And the very fruit of doing it because of his authority, is that you will at length do it because of your own renovated taste. As you persevere in the labors of his service you will grow in the likeness of his character. The graces of holiness will both brighten and multiply upon you.

A New Tract.

The Great Divine Healer vs. Latter-day Healers, by Uncle John Poore.

A Tract for the last days. Should be read by every thinking Christian.

Paul 2 Tim. iii. 13. "But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived."

Matt. vii. 21. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works. And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

Brethren, these tracts have gone into many families, both to brethren and people of other denominations, a few infidels, and one Christian Scientist, and all seem to be well pleased with it; but only a few of the brethren have sent to me any help in the way of paying for the tracts, and tracts are very expensive. We are anxious to have more published on different subjects. Please help to send these Pearls out among the people.

Send orders to John Poore, at 2012 W. Corning Ave. Parsons, Kan. The price is 10 cents each.

The gift that rises supreme over all other gifts, is the gift of eternal life. The season when it is the custom to exchange gifts, is near at hand. In making a gift, the greatest good to the recipient of the gift should be considered in the selection of a gift. Would it not be wise to make a gift that may lead the one receiving the gift to receive also the gift of eternal life? Then, give your friend a copy of The Pine Woods Bible Class. It points out the way in a clear and simple manner, how the gift of eternal life may be secured. It would make the giver happy also, should it lead to that happy result.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

Editor Restitution:

Some of the brethren in this part of the country are anxious for me to take the field as an evangelist, but are so low and so poor, they are not able to support one. After much study I have decided to enter the field, provided I can have some assurance of support for my family. It has been the desire of my life to devote my time to the cause. The thought came to me, that if the brethren east, north and west knew it, they would gladly give one dollar each for this work. So I decided to write them through The Restitution and make the proposition to them, and if they responded I would enter the field. I will report my work through The Restitution. The brethren can send the money to Sister E. C. Daniel, Magazine, Ark., and she will report it through The Restitution, and if enough is not sent in to justify me in entering the field, she will return it to the senders. Brethren this is the Macedonian cry. Help us just one dollar each, and we assure you, you will never regret it. I will solicit subscribers for The Restitution, and report my work promptly. Hoping you can see your way clearly to respond to this call. I am yours in the one faith.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. T. J. Daniel.

Go and reap! The world is great harvest
Ripens round you far and wide;

If you cannot wield the sickle,
You can carry in the sheaves.

Will we be Among the Saved?

If Jesus came to the Jews, his chosen people, offering them salvation, and in their refusal of the precious gift he turned to the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name, who will eventually be his Bride, what kind of a people will he expect them to be? Has he made his expectations known to them, that they need make no mistakes in regard to his will?

A loving parent would not demand obedience of a child until he had first made his will known to that child. So Christ has made his will known to us in his Word, and warns us thus:—"My Word shall judge you in the last day," and if we are found worthy, he has sacredly promised wealth beyond any human conception, and life without an ending. But these happy conditions are only reached by obedience to certain conditions.

First, we are directed to a very straight and narrow road, where we must not expect over-much company, as very few are willing to comply with the given regulations; for none can start on the road without passing through the gate of belief. They must have perfect faith in the guide as he directs them through the second gate called Repentance. Here they must leave all their sins, few or many, and close the gate upon them; for there would be great obstacles and hindrances on this road; for just ahead is the third gate opens which leads to the fountain of cleansing where all traces of sins are washed away by obeying the Word which is to judge them at the last day; for this Word says, we are to be "buried with him by baptism into his death, that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life," which newness means a cutting off, or out of our life all unholy things such as the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, which are not of the Father, but of the world. All these being hurtful lusts which drown men in destruction and perdition. All goes well with the one starting in this new life until these explanations are made by the guide, then the complaint comes, "The way is too narrow." They were offended because of the Word. Their attention is called to a throng of richly dressed, jeweled and flower-bedecked people, from whence comes beautiful music, peals of laughter, all seemingly happy, and on their way to different places of amusement and revelry.

The question is asked, Who are those people, and have they too the restrictions and rules that we have? The guide lovingly answers, No! my child, those people have chosen the broad road and are carrying out their own wills not mine. For a moment they were touched to tears by the wonderful influence of his voice, but another shout of laughter decided several, and without a word of explanation they turned into a winding path and soon overtook the gay throng, who welcomed them gladly casting a triumphant look of scorn toward the few who were steadily following the guide. On they went with the careless throng until tired and worn they look for a resting place, but are told by a strange, hard-faced personage, to move on, this is no place for rest. Difficulties gather thick around them. No one to direct aright none to sympathise or help. What should they do? Only one thing they could do,—retrace their steps and reach as quickly as possible the narrow way again. No sooner determined than they discover a guide post where these words greet their anxious look, "He that cometh unto me, I will in no wise cast out." They hurry on the way and stop to read, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." O they were so tired, and rest so near at hand. The guide stood looking at them, they fall at his feet asking forgiveness—willingly it is given, and in his company they journey on, occasionally stopping to read such words as these: "Fear not little flock, it is your father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." Only bear in mind you are to be a peculiar people zealous of good works, and it may be through much tribulation you are to enter the kingdom; for those in this straight and narrow way trust the Christ for their future life and not Adam—while the world at large believe they already have the immortal life as a part of their being, and at death are taken to heaven and receive their reward; but my Word has been given that I would reward the saints at my second coming back to earth, not at death; for this mortal shall put on immortality, when the dead in Christ are raised, not before. So do not be deceived by the passing throng; for no true, loyal child of the gospel, will forfeit their right to become the beloved Bride of Christ, by uniting with that which is positively contrary to the 'bridegroom's Word.' Did you say we must have charity for all? Certainly. Love is a deeper word, and it was because I loved you so well that I told you all the truth in this matter. The multitudes wish to follow the fables of men. It is an easier way, not so many sacrifices to make, but it is my Word in the matter, and my Word shall be your Judge. Only the true and faithful ones have the promise of being my beloved Bride. Blessed indeed are all who choose the right, God given way.

Have you made your choice, dear reader? Be sure the Bridegroom's voice is calling you, keep in the narrow way, shun the company and influences of the broad road; for O, it leads to death, while the narrow road leads into the kingdom of God, where we wish be among the saved.

Notes on D. D. Lathrop's Article on Pre-existence.

"Ascending up where he was before." John vi 62 Compare chapter iii 13 with Eph iv 8, 9. "This going up" must imply that he already had gone down into the under world; and he who went down is the one who went up beyond the highest heaven." John viii 58 "I am"—note the present tense, and allow the grammatical usage; and don't read "Before Abraham was I was."

Consult Dr. Young's word for word translation "I am (necessarily) before Abraham's coming"—also to come to pass, to be produced, to be born, to come to be or become, that is come into existence [I am away from home without books, and quote from memory as best I can; so that you may get my understanding of the case in hand]. The truth affirmed is really intelligible when one considers the circumstances. Jesus was present with a view to a certain work for a purpose. And were it not for this, Abraham, nor any one else, would ever come from the unseen. How very comprehensive then the above assertion!

The prophetic utterance quoted from Heb x 4 agrees with the Hebrew idom, in asserting things that are not, as though they were, "Thou hast prepared me a body." No necessity of making a distinction between "me" myself and "body" any more than when it is said "my soul"—"O my soul," "Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell." Consult Psa. cxxxix. 13-16, "Thou possessed my reins—my inward parts—Thou hast covered me over in my mother's womb.....My substance—bones, frame, body—was not hid from thee when I was made in secret; worked over curiously in invisibility when your (the Creator's) eyes did see my unfinished frame (or body) being developed, fashioned continuously from day to day, during the appointed [marg.] days: And all were written in thy book, when, as yet, none of them existed." The Christ was manifested in flesh, to be sure. It is not what God can do in the exercise of his power. But we have to do with his message—his Word. Jesus shared in our common human nature for a purpose: he taketh not hold of angels, but takes hold of the seed of Abraham so as to help them out of trouble. These need his help, while those do not.

He was made out of a woman—made under law for a purpose. The Adamites are groundlings. He was generated by God Almighty, his Father, and therefore from heaven descended. And he the only One who could truthfully say—I came down from heaven—the bread of God. "The true bread"—etc. Examine John vi 62, 63, and compare verses 32, 34, 36, 48, 51, 53, 57. "Where he was before"—figuratively speaking—as in the case of others. In the bosom of his Father—emphasize verses 63, 64. Flesh as such literally cuts no figure here. But sacrificially it does though.

"Being poor" compare 2 Cor vi 10 with chapter viii 9, having a legal right to the throne of his father David, to say nothing of his rights as the Son of God—he laid aside all his dignity, and submitted to the will of his Father in all things, looking for that recompense awaiting him at the right hand of the Majesty on high. As it is written Psa cx 1; John xvii 5. Compare verse 1, it being the key to interpretation of verse 5, "Father the hour has come, glorify thy Son, so that the Son may glorify (honor) thee." The honoring of the Son at this hour or time makes it possible for the Son to honor the Father sometime in the future, namely, when he reigns in "times of restitution"—"In the dispensation of the fulness of times"—Then he will glorify the Father by causing the Father's will to be done on earth. The matter of verses 4 is a request, or rather, he affirms the completion of the work which the Father sent him to do, and for his redemptive work completed, he requests as compensation a seat of honor at the Father's right hand in "heaven itself," according to the prophecies going before concerning him.

Psa xvi 11, "In thy presence fulness of joy, at thy right hand pleasures for ever more." And Psa cx. 1, (or on) "I have said to my Adonay: sit enthroned at my right hand until I make thy enemies a stool for thy feet." These and other prophecies were familiar to Jesus when he made the request." Verse 5.

In view then, of all these circumstances, he prays, And now, O thou Father, glorify me at the side of Thyself (the right hand side, as Psa cx 1) before that (glory understand) of the world to be with the glory which I had with thee."

Aual from eini—present infinitive to be, not "was." See Rom. iv 16, "So that Abraham might be"—in the future Jesus himself is the subject of the sentence—"which I had with thee" "With, in the sense of "In company with." He had it some time before he made the prayer. At the time he made the prayer he had it not; but prayed for it as aforesaid. He selected three competent witnesses to accompany him into the "holy mount" and there was transfigured in their presence. Which was, referring to this, Peter says, 2 i 16, 17. "He received glory and honor from God the Father, when from 'he glory of the Divine Majesty, there were borne to his ears.....This is my Son, my beloved, in whom I delight. These were the words which we heard borne to our ears from heaven when we were with him on the holy Mount." They were "eye-witnesses of his Majesty." Compare 1 John i 2, 3. "In the mouth of two witnesses or three every word will be established."

Our subject treats of the "Word of life," that life which was actually made visible, and we have seen, and now bear our testimony to and tell you of; that age-life which was with ("with, in the sense of source) the Father and was then made visible to us. It is, we repeat, of what we have seen and heard that we declare to you so that you may have fellowship with us. Yes, truly fellowship with us means fellowship with the Father and with his Son Jesus Christ. The "we" in the case, refers to more than one. Both Peter and John have borne testimony and therein substantial agreement in their statements of the facts in the case. As to the glorification of Jesus in answer to his prayer; references may be had, John vii. 39; Acts iii 13; Phil ii 9; Heb xiii 8; 1 Pet iii 22, and numerous references. "And now, O thou Father, glorify me at the side of thyself; before that of the world to be; with the glory which I had with thee" upon the holy mountain.

Respectfully submitted by,
C. W. TOMKINS.

Notes by the Way.

After concluding our interesting meetings at Rush, near Fredricktown, Missouri, I took the train for Ardmore, one of the "outposts." One lone sister in all there is of the one true faith and hope of the gospel at this place. Sister Sims is one of the Camplins. On arriving there, I found her out of health, having trouble with the heart. The roads were excessively muddy, so much so, that it would gum up the carriage and wagon wheels so completely that they could not turn around. Under these circumstances it was not possible to hold public meetings. Nevertheless I don't think it was in vain that we met each other. It is a source of pleasure, strength and comfort to isolated ones, to meet and converse with some brother or sister of the same precious faith with themselves.

"Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love;
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above.
Before our Father's throne
We pour our ardent prayers;
Our fears, our hopes, our aims are one,
Our comforts and our cares."

After bidding [illegible] and other [illegible]s well, and I think [illegible] fine other fields of labor.

In due time I arrived at Arkansas City, Kansas. After a brief visit with Bro. and Sister Arthur Chaplin, Bro. Vickery, living some six miles distant, in the country, came for me. After dinner we took our departure.

In the neighborhood of Bro. Vickery's home, the brethren have recently built a nice church building. It is a real neat, well-built structure, and well finished, both inside and outside. The mechanical work was mostly done by the brethren and sisters. I think I can hear some one ask, did the sisters help in the mechanical work? They surely did. They had a heart in the work; they were bound to have a good church home. They helped to nail down the floor, and two sisters lathed the whole house, sides and ceiling, and sand papered the wood work, oiled and varnished it. It looks nice. A sister also built cement steps by the door of the church. How true the old adage: "Where there is a will, there is a way." Brother Butcher, Sister Rahe, and another sister whose name has slipped my mind, came from Blackwell, Oklahoma, to hear me; also Bro. Oliver, and a married son from Attica, came for the like purpose. How pleasant it was to meet dear ones in Christ.

I opened meetings on Sunday morning, although suffering from a cold contracted by a previous hard experience, through which I had recently passed. My topics were illustrated by charts. Very earnest and close attention was given by the audience to the expositions given. It is very encouraging to a speaker, to find that he has anxious auditors, desiring to drink in heavenly wisdom. As time went on, the audience and interest increased. The meetings continued until Thursday night, when my cold ended in a spell of sickness. A doctor was speedily sent for. After a careful examination, the doctor said that my lungs were badly congested. He at once set to work, and gave me a very vigorous treatment. He proved to be a very skillful physician, and soon checked the progress of the disease.

Bro. Butcher watched with me nights, and Sisters Hadrike and Rahe also assisted some during the day. With a competent doctor, and careful nursing, I was soon put upon my feet again.

Elder Oliver continued the meetings which I had begun over the following Sunday. I am told that the audience and interest still further increased.

I think the household of faith in this locality may take courage, and press with vigor on. Owning their own church home, no one can say, "Thus far shalt thou go and no further."

I feel under a great debt of gratitude to them, for their kindness in ministering to my necessities during my sickness. A kinship, fellowship, and love, exists between true believers, that can never be excelled by any organization on earth, either secular or religious. Even earthly kinship can never excell the heavenly kinship, which exists between true fellow-believers in the one true faith and hope of the gospel.

"Oh for a faith that will not shrink,
Though pressed by every foe,
That will not tremble on the brink
Of any earthly woe.
A faith that shines more bright and clear
When tempests rage without;
That when in danger knows no fear,
In darkness feels no doubt."

Having recovered from my sickness but feeling weak in body, I took the train for Blackwell, Okla. Bro. Butcher met me at the depot, and took me to the home of Sister Chambers, who is a daughter of Sister Rahe. Bro. Butcher's wife was also a sister to our Sister Rahe. Both Sister Rahe and Bro. Butcher make their home with Sister Chambers, Sister Butcher having fallen asleep in Jesus, about a year ago. Soon after arriving at Blackwell our meetings began. Interest and the audience grew as the meetings progressed. One encouraging feature was, that most of them attended the entire course of lessons. When that is the case, they will be sure to better comprehend the lessons. The seed found lodgment in some bosoms, I feel assured. Aside this, I noticed that believers seemed to take new courage, and expressed their determination to be more energetic in the work. They were even talking of building a new church house.

There was a Bro. Allen, who attended the meetings, who had no use of his limbs at all. He came on a wheel chair. The poor afflicted man was just hungry for the Word of life. He did so much enjoy the preaching of the Word, as illustrated by chart. When he shall reach the culmination of his faith and hope, then "the lame man shall leap as an hart."

The mayor of the city attended two meetings, and expressed his appreciation. He said that it was his desire to attend more, but said that official business would claim his time. We have some good sincere believers at Blackwell, and in time I believe they will accomplish some good work in that portion of the Master's vineyard.

"Stand up! stand up for Jesus!
The strife will not be long;
This day the noise of battle,
The next the victor's song;
To him that overcometh,
A crown of life shall be;
He with the King of glory
Shall reign eternally."

Having completed the work in the city of Blackwell, I started for my next appointment at Renfrow, Oklahoma. I changed cars at Medford, for the Rock Island R. R. I arrived at Medford, at about four o'clock, P. M., took a bus to the Rock Island depot. Train due at 7:32 P. M., but being behind time, the train did not reach Medford until 10:45 P. M. Arrived at Renfrow, at a little past midnight. I found John Fisk Jr., waiting for me. We then had a four mile ride before us, in a carriage, to his father's home. I remained there all the next day, until the time set to go to the meeting, some six miles distant. During the continuance of the meetings, I made my home with Bro. and Sister Wagoman, who resided some two and a half miles from the place of meeting. They did all in their power to make my stay with them both pleasant and comfortable.

There is a congregation of sixteen believers at Renfrow. I had no idea that a congregation existed at this place prior to arriving there; I expected to find one or two isolated ones.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

I found the congregation were experiencing opposition from another denomination, the same as others have experienced in other localities. They built a large new house within about two hundred yards of their meeting place, and were using both fair and unfair means to draw away people who might otherwise attend their services.

Our meetings at this place were very satisfactory. I never had better interested congregations anywhere. The members seeing the interest, and the increasing congregations caught the enthusiasm. The singing was good and lively, which helped so much to keep up the interest of the meetings. The interest was so great, that the meetings of the opposition were almost deserted. The effect of the meetings upon the believers at this place, was to give them new life, they have taken new courage, and have determined to press forward in spite of all opposition. The seed has found lodgment in the hearts of at least a half a dozen. More than one of these seekers bid me good bye with tears in their eyes.

I told some of the members at Blackwell, that I was going to Renfrow, with an impression on my mind that the meetings at that place was going to be a success. They surely were.

"Go work in my vineyard, oh, work while 'tis day,
The bright hours of sunshine are hastening away;
And night's gloomy shadows are gathering fast:
Then the time for our labor shall ever be past.
Begin in the morning, and toil all the day,
Thy strength I'll supply and thy wages I'll pay;
And blessed, thrice blessed the diligent few,
Who fulfill the labor I've given them to do."

On Tuesday morning, March 19th, I boarded the train for Carnegie, Oklahoma. Arrived at Chickasha, Indian Territory, at about two o'clock, P. M., where I was to change cars for the Mangum branch. Having some over two hours to wait, I stored my things in the ticket office, and went out for some dinner. I then walked about the business streets. A city primary election was in progress for city officers. There were five candidates for chief of police. I thought of how men will exert every energy, and use both fair and unfair means to obtain a small distinction among their fellow mortals. How little they care about the eternal weight of glory, which can never end. It is the case also with many professed believers; they don't half believe that which they profess to believe; if they really did believe it, they would not let the things of this life take precedence over the things eternal.

I next came upon a band of the Volunteers of America, who were playing upon instruments and singing while others beg.

In due time the train arrived, and I resumed my journey for Carnegie. At Roosevelt and Fort Cobb the Indians appeared to view. There was a camp of them at Anadarko. There is also another camp just west of Carnegie. I enjoy watching and studying these native Americans. As a boy I was always interested in reading Indian stories. Today I enjoy visiting their camps, and study their manners and customs.

March 19th was a very hot day indeed. At Chickasha I noticed the thermometer in the shade was ninety-one degrees above zero.

The train arrived at Carnegie on time. Bro. Morrow meet me at the depot. I then met Mr. Chandler. After supper, I went home with Mr. Chandler, and was heartily welcomed by Sister Chandler and family.

I happened to strike this place when farmers were exceedingly busy in putting in new crops, and finishing cotton picking, hence our meetings on week days were poorly attended. Sundays being the only time we could secure a good audience. I staid over two Sundays with them.

After the conclusion of the meetings I made a short visit with Bro. Morrow and Sister Dorsey in the town of Carnegie.

I expect next to visit Higgins, Texas.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

We trust correspondents will avoid personalities. Write on the subject—not the man. In explaining the meaning of certain texts that may seem obscure, one brother may give his idea of it, and if another differs it is not necessary to use language that will be insulting or in any way belittle a brother. He has as good a right to express his opinion as you have, and his opinion is as good as yours, if there is no positive authority to appeal to for settlement. This applies to matters that are non-essential to the gospel. The fundamental principles of the kingdom of God, and the good news concerning our Lord Jesus Christ, admit of but one conclusion. The things that are truth are settled, and it does not become us to be forever questioning facts. We need not discuss as to the establishment of God's kingdom—where it will be, and what and when; who its King will be who will be joint heirs in its glories and government. We have no occasion to dispute about the resurrection, the coming judgment. Their literality and surety is beyond question. We need not quarrel over the restoration of literal Israel. That the righteous will be rewarded with life—and the wicked punished with death is so clear that there is no chance for dispute. That Jesus Christ, the only begotten Son of God, is the only name by which we can enter into relationship with the family of God, is settled unquestionably. That man is sinful, and must be washed clean in the blood of the Lamb if he wants salvation, is clear to all. That we must repent of our wrong doing, and be immersed to get into his name, and then order our lives in accord with our profession, is settled in the fundamental principles of our faith and hope. Our lives must be in accord with God's will, else we have no claim to recognition at his hands. These things are the things that we as a church and people should be telling to the world. Being truth, settled and established, we have no need to be disputing, or "investigating" concerning them. Preach and write for the purpose of informing others of these matters, so they will see and understand, and lay hold on God in the appointed way. Suppose one brother has an opinion regarding the meaning of an obscure text, and ten other brethren have a different idea. Each has his say, all differing. After writing repeatedly week and month about, at last the ten give in that the first brother is right. How good he feels. He beat. He is satisfied, and laughs at the defeat of the others. Now please look the ground all over, carefully, calmly, soberly. Are you satisfied? Was the victory even worth the effort? What has been gained for Christ? You won a victory for yourself, and you are pleased. What did God get out of it? What real good did it do to your fellowman? If it did not further God's cause and also help lift up some poor sinner man, your whole effort is wasted; and more, you will have to answer to God for the waste. Preacher, writer, brother and sister, consider soberly and prayerfully before each sermon or article. If your effort is to be to put self to the fore, and satisfy the desire to gain advantage over another, then you better seal your mouth, and sheath your pen. Preach for God and fallen man. Write that others may know the love God has for humanity in its weakness. Preach and write because God's cause in the world needs your utmost endeavor.

Lesson for Sunday April 21.

Joseph sold by his brethren. Gen. xxxvii. 5-28.

Golden text. For where envying and strife is, there is confusion and every evil work. James iii. 16.

At the close of the last lesson Jacob—Israel—was leaving Penuel limping. Esau met him, the greeting was very affectionate. Jacob went on to Succoth, then to Shalem, where his sons made trouble for him. God told him to go to Bethel where he met him, and repeated the great promises. Jacob went on towards Ephrath. Rachel died on the way, and he came to Hebron, where his father Isaac died. Jacob and Esau buried him, and Jacob dwelt in the land of Canaan. Gen. xxxiii. to xxxvii.

Joseph was about seventeen years old, his father (Israel) loved him more than he did the others, for this reason they hated him. Gen. xxxvii. 2-4.

Verse 5. Joseph dreamed—Joseph was the best loved son of Israel's best loved wife Rachel. Gen. xxix. 18; Gen. xxx. 24. Joseph means increaser, he was the eleventh son Jacob, and first of Rachel. The history of Joseph shows that he—like his father—valued and treasured above all things, the covenants of promise, Eph. ii. 12, his brothers did not, was it any wonder that his father loved him the most? The natural affection was strengthened many fold by the love of God shed in their hearts, Rom. v. 5, and the exceeding great and precious promises. 2 Peter i. 4. Even at the present time, men who never saw each other, living in lands far apart, are bound heart to heart by learning of each other's faith in the promises made to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

Joseph's dreams were in accordance with his faith, his brothers doubtless knew that, and that made his dreams the more offensive. A living faith in God's Word, whether under the title of promises, or covenant, or the glad tidings of the kingdom, has always—and still does—produce enmity. See Jesus' words, Matt. x. 34-39.

7. It was directly personal.

8. And they were very angry, and their hatred of him was increased. It may be said, that had he been older and more thoughtful he would not have told his dream, and so avoided trouble. If Jesus had kept quiet, he would not have been crucified. If the apostles and others had not pressed the gospel of the kingdom, and Christ as the King, they might have lived and died in comfort. Those of faith cannot hide the truth.

9. Joseph told another dream—to them more insulting than the first.

10. Even his father rebuked him this time, but loved him none the less.

11. And also cherished remembrance of the dream.

12. Shechem—about 50 or 60 miles north of Hebron.

13. Surely Israel did not know of the intense hatred his sons had for Joseph, and Joseph did not know; the father was willing to send, the son was willing to go.

14. He arrived at Shechem.

15. He could not find his brothers.

16. He enquired for them.

17. Was told they were at Dothan some 20 miles further north—had likely gone there to procure better pasture for the flocks. Joseph went after them.

18. They saw him, and consulted to kill him,—the counsels of the wicked are deceit. The words of the wicked are to lie in wait for blood. Prov. xii. 5, 6.

19. Called "this dreamer."

20. They made up a lie so they could all tell the same story.

21. Reuben objected to blood shed.

22. As the oldest brother, he realized that the burden of the guilt would fall on him, he advised putting him in a pit, intending to rescue him after and take him home.

23. The coat was a token of affection from his father. Gen. xxxvii. 3.

24. In his anguish of distress he entreated them, but they would not hear, Gen. xlii. 21, they cast him into the pit. Madness was in their hearts. Eccl. ix. 3.

25. Eating, no doubt, good things Joseph had brought them from home. A company of Ishmaelite traders came in sight.

26. Judah saw an opportunity of getting rid of Joseph, and not have his death on their minds.

27. Let us sell him—they could make by him, he would be entirely off their hands, and besides he was their brother. This was satisfactory to all. Reuben was not present.

28. They sold him. Behold the eye of the Lord is upon them that fear him, upon them that hope in his mercy, to deliver them from death, to keep them alive in famine. His ears are open to their cry. Psa. xxxiii. 18, 19; Psa. xxxiv. 15. These words fit the case of Joseph so exactly that we can well believe God was watching, and overruling in his behalf.

A Bible School.

We take pleasure in stating that we have closed a very successful Bible school with the ecclesia at Springfield, Ohio. Our school began Wednesday evening March 13th and closed Tuesday evening March 19th. Our attendance was principally confined to the church here. We are pleased to say that we had mar[illegible] all our sessions. Those [illegible] of the faith expressed themselves [illegible] paid for their time and trou[illegible] subjects studied were as follows. The Bible as it was and as it is. This proved to be a very interesting subject to all present. It has taken many centuries to bring the Bible to its present form. We then took up the subject—God's purpose in creating the earth and man. Few people seem to see that God's plan of salvation has anything to do with the earth. In Isa. xlv. 18 we read, "For thus saith the Lord, that created the heavens; God himself that formed the earth and made it; he hath established it, he created it not in vain; he formed it to be inhabited. The Psalmist says, "The earth abideth forever." It is nowhere taught that the earth is for the purpose of peopling heaven. This proved to be a very interesting subject. The covenants of promise were next taken up and discussed.

In the Bible school we took time to teach the facts as we find them in the Book. We showed that these promises related to the future ruling of Jesus the Christ in the kingdom of God. And that the promises are verified in the New Testament. We closed our school by studying the kingdom of God as taught by Nebuchadnezzar's dream. Dan. ii. We showed that God's purpose in the beginning was to give man dominion. Adam lost it by disobedience; Christ gained it by obedience. The Bible plainly teaches that God formed Israel into a kingdom and ruled them as their king until they demanded a king like other nations. This kingdom was still called the kingdom of God, and was overturned during the reign of the wicked king Zedekiah. Ezek xxvi 27. This kingdom will again be restored and will be the fifth universal empire spoken of in Dan ii 44, and will not pass to other people but will remain forever. This is the kingdom about which the gospel is preached. It is good news or glad tidings concerning David's kingdom. Behold, a king shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment.

We hope to be able to hold a Bible school with each ecclesia throughout the state. It is our opinion that more local Bible schools should be held. Use the Bible as the principal text book and get all the helps you can. When Bro. Wilson publishes his student's text book it should be used. Our State and National Bible schools' are all [illegible] reach very few, while [illegible] schools can reach the masses. Our local schools are attended with very little cost to those attending. It will cost but little to have teachers come from a distance while it will cost the pupils a good sum to attend a State or national school. Brothers and sisters, let us have more local Bible schools that the ecclesias may become better posted in our text book, the Bible. Arrangements should be made to have two or three teachers to attend and instruct in these schools. These lines are written that others will give their opinions regarding the matter. We have the pleasure of introducing to those of "like precious faith" our young sister Miss Grace Staley whom we baptized into the sin covering name of Jesus the Christ. Sister Grace is a very intelligent young sister, and is the daughter of Sister Staley of the Springfield ecclesia. It is our prayer that she may add to her faith the Christian graces and that they may be in her and abound. That they may make her to be neither barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.

At the Breaking of Bread.

Springfield, Ohio.

Our lesson will be found this morning in Luke xii, 15, "And he said unto them, take heed and beware of covetousness; for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth."

1 Tim. vi. 7. "For we brought nothing into this world and it is certain we can carry nothing out, and having food and raiment, let us be therewith content. But they that will be rich, fall into temptation, and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition, for the love of money is the root of all evil, which, while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows." But how soon those sorrows can be healed if we will look more to the faith and lay hold on eternal life, and not the things of this life."

[illegible] says "All that a man hath [illegible] give for his life," how much ought we to be willing to give up all for that eternal life.

Matt. vi. 25, says, "We are to take no thought for our lives, what you shall eat, or what you shall drink, nor yet for your body, what you shall put on. Is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment."

How oft we find those possessed of this world's riches, what selfish lives they lead, caring little for the needs of their fellowmen. On the other hand we find some who possess these riches who are continually striving to overcome the evil of coveting after more and to live a life conformed to Christ's life, and try to become more patient, kind and loving, and denying themselves many of the comforts of life and the lusts of the flesh, toying by so doing to obtain that better life.

Our prayer is that we may all seek after that life and not covet the things of this world.

Grace Wilmore.

In Memory of Thos. H. Grant.

Again the congregation at Hansselaer are in sorrow, through separation by death of another dear brother, Thos. H. Grant.

He was born Jan. 17th, 1823 in Fleming Co., Ky. Died at his home in Rensselaer, Mar 26, 1907, at the age of 84 years, 2 months and eight days.

He was the second child in a family of ten children, born to Daniel and Rebecca Grant, five of whom survive him, and residing here, viz: Washington Stott Grant; Mrs. Ruth Phillips; Mrs. Josephine Warner; Alton and Shelby Grant.

He was united in marriage to Martha McDaniel June 20th, 1847, came to Jasper Co., Ind. in 1849.

To this union were born five children, all still living, viz:—Mrs. Livonia Hemphill of Greensburg, Kan. Mrs. Rebecca Hemphill, Franklin and Albert Grant of Rensselaer and Colfax Grant of St. Joseph, Mo. The mother having died Jan. 6, 1860, he was married again Sep. 17, 1863 to Hannah [illegible] Hemphill, who died Sep. 1, 1902 leaving no children of her own; but was a true and devoted mother to his beloved children, who esteemed her as a mother indeed.

He became a member of the congregation of the Church of God at Rensselaer, at the time of its organization in 1881. Never faltered in active service and true devotion, always at his post while strength lasted, even attending service when unable to walk without some one to support him, usually his devoted daughter, living with him—Mrs. Rebecca Hemphill, who also ministered to his wants in almost unparalleled kindness during his long and painful sickness, which he greatly appreciated, as also the assistance from others.

For the last few months he endured excruciating pain, but never murmured. His patient endurance was almost marvelous. He was entirely resigned to pass into the quiet, restful sleep of death, with the sure hope of a part in the first resurrection—to "die no more."

Though he is now dead, yet the influence of his unpretentious, yet noble Godly life, will live on, as an inspiration to others and a solace to his sorrowing family, relatives, and many friends.

After funeral on the 27th, listening to Paul's assurance of hope of receiving a crown of righteousness at that day, and also all that love his appearing, we laid him away in hope. May we also patiently run the race and receive the crown, at his appearing.

Conserve Your Vital Forces.

Every person is endowed with a certain amount of vital force and energy. The amount may be small, it may be large. If small it may often be increased by judicious action, and if large it may be diminished by indiscretion, neglect, or violation of natural laws. Deprive the strongest man of atmospheric air for a few moments, and his strength is gone. Deprive him of food or water a few days, and his strength will speedily vanish. Excessive exertion, lack of sleep, undue indulgence of the passions and appetites, all tend to weaken the constitution and impair the vital forces.

A person who spends more money than he earns is on the way to poverty. A person who spends more strength than he gains is on the way to death. He who neglects to take proper rest, who toils when he is exhausted, who gives to indulgence or pleasure the hours which should be sacredly devoted to repose, may impair his health so gradually and imperceptibly that he will not himself be aware of it, until the ruin is wrought and life is the forfeit.

There are many people who seem to have no conscience or thought with regard to their own bodily health. They act on the impulse of the moment, and have no regard for the morrow. Such persons waste their vitality, violate the laws which God has ordained should govern and conserve their physical constitutions, and at last in an unexpected hour go down to the grave.

There are times when almost any constitution is liable to be subjected to severe strain. Emergencies occur demanding unusual effort; persons are exposed to accidents, dangers and injuries. Contagious diseases, and epidemics prevail, which tax the vital energies to and in an unexpected hour a man may be called upon to meet special drafts upon his strength. If, like the prudent business man, he has reserved capital on which he can draw, he meets such crises and overcomes the difficulties; but if, like a poor financier, he has used his strength needlessly, and reached the utmost limit of his reserve force under ordinary circumstances, the extraordinary burden is sure to break him down.

Many persons lose their lives by diseases which in themselves were not necessarily mortal or even dangerous, simply because they were taken by them when they were "all run down," and were not able to resist even the slightest attack,—the last feather breaking the camel's back. There are constantly floating in the air germs of poison and disease. There are also latent in our own bodies, hereditary taints and elements of danger, which need but a spark to produce an explosion. The vital forces of the human constitution resist the encroachments of disease, and myriads of disease germs die in the uncongenial soil of a healthy and well-preserved physique, which is filled and thrilled with the spirit of life from God. On the other hand, if the constitution be impaired; if excess and over exertion have taxed it to the very verge of the breaking limit; if the stomach is deranged, the digestive energies enfeebled; if the lungs are cramped, and the breath is constricted and unnatural; if the appetite is perverted, and the mind is disturbed and uneasy; a very light attack of disease is frequently sufficient to destroy a man's life.

People note with surprise instances of sudden and premature death, forgetting that these sudden deaths are the result of long protracted processes of physical transgression, which persisted in, reach at last the only possible result. Men may trifle with these things, they may laugh at instruction, despise reproof, and neglect admonition, but the time will come when, struggling in the grasp of disease and physical decay, the physician will shake his head despairingly and say, "If there was anything to build upon the patient might be saved, but the constitution is broken, and there is no hope."

Guard your vital forces. Lay up strength against the time when you must encounter misfortune, contagion, disease and pain; and take such care of your physical strength that when that day comes you will ride triumphantly through the storm, and having listened to the words of wisdom, will find that "Length of days are in her right hand, and in her left hand wisdom and honor."—H. L. Hastings.

For Boys Who Smoke Cigarettes.

Only within the last score of years have the pernicious effects of cigarette smoking been fully appreciated. Today, insurance companies, banks, railroad companies, express, the U. S. Weather Bureau, and hundreds of other business organizations will not employ a man or boy who uses cigarettes.

Speaking a short time ago, an employer of skilled labor said: "I will not employ a cigarette smoker in any department of my business, and my reasons are not ethical, but strictly commercial. There are four of them:—

First. A cigarette smoker cannot be depended upon. This has been proved hundreds of times in hundreds of ways. In an examination into the cases of fifty men who failed at critical junctures, I have found that forty-three of the men used cigarettes. The poisonous nicotine which is drawn into the lungs is carried by the blood to the brain where it has the effect of stultifying mental activity. It renders the memory unreliable, and so dulls the reasoning faculties that [illegible] man cannot act quickly in an emergency.

Second. A cigarette smoker's person is offensive. The breath of a cigarette smoker is not only unpleasant to his associates, but it is also poisonous. Every pore in the body of a confirmed cigarette smoker exudes filth, which the nicotine and arsenic of the cigarette have generated. An employe whose habits are offensive, is not only disliked by the other members of the office staff, but he is also the means of driving customers away. The buyer these days expects to be treated with great consideration—if he isn't, he simply goes somewhere else to make his purchases.

Third. I always question the morality of a cigarette smoker, for I have found that 'birds of a feather flock together,' and that cigarette smokers are generally found around pool halls, saloons, tobacco shops and brothels. While a man may smoke cigarettes and not be a frequenter of these places, he is classed with those that do, and so I have always felt that I could not trust my business to one who was regarded in his community as belonging to the disreputable class.

Fourth, I would not employ a cigarette smoker in my office or factory, because his term of service would be short. A boy cuts his years of usefulness in half when he begins the use of the poisonous 'coffin nail,' for I know of nothing that so quickly saps the vitality of a vigorous young man, as the deadly cigarette.

"These reasons have always seemed to me sufficient grounds for my refusal to employ cigarette smokers."

What an indictment! Will the boy who reads these lines permit his body to be polluted, his morals contaminated, and his hope of developing into a strong, active, useful man be blighted by the use of the filthy cigarette? Will the boy who has already started on the downward career permit himself to be carried without protest into the lowest depths of degradation? Boys, brace up; be men; quit sneaking into the alley behind the billboards, or into the hay-loft of the nearest barn, to gratify your tastes for a nasty weed, that will inevitably work your financial, physical, mental and moral destruction. Boys, brace up; be men.

Poetry.

What of the Night?

"Watchman! watchman! what of the night?
Shadows and darkness encircle me quite!
Earth is enshrouded in midnight gloom;
Black as the pall that envelops the tomb;
Watchers are few, and mockers are bold—
The heavens are starless—the night-air is cold!
I am weary; O would that this night were gone!
I will watch for the day till the morning dawn."

Watchman! watchman! what of the night?
"In the east appeareth a glimmering light;
Faintly it gleams—but 'tis rising now,
And streaming afar—'tis the morning's brow!
Shadows are passing—the Day Star is out—
And the glory is flashing and leaping about:
And the golden flats that are poured o'er the earth
Foretell of the bursting morning's birth!"

Watchman! watchman! what of the night?
"Bay arches on all cloudless and bright!
And warmth, and light, and beauty are driven
To the farthest bound of the far-off heaven!
Flashing flames from the throne of God
Are bathing the world in a golden flood:
Seraph and cherub are crowding it on,
And the pure on their pinions are skyward gone."

Watchman! watchman! what of the night?
"Bursts on my vision a ravishing sight;
The Lord is in sight with his shining ones,
And the splendors of twice ten thousand suns!
He has come! Lo, the night-watch of sorrow is o'er,
And the mantle of midnight shall shroud me no more!
Pilgrim and stranger, haste to thy home,
For the morning, the beautiful morning has come!"

The Story of a Happy Christian Life.—No. 3.

I left Oswego growing into quite a village, with the light colored and stately Indian chief, Musquawbuck, and his tribe on a reservation close by. It was a lovely place for a town, the land was rich and level, and a fine lake lay just to the north, with grand farming lands all around it. Dr. Willard was obliged to be there much of his time. The question now came to Auntie Willard, "Would she go west?" "Yes, Lord," she replied, "to the ends of the earth if thou wilt go with me." Her husband knew nothing of her decision, and had not thought of making his home in Oswego, until about this time, when having returned from a business trip, he intimated that they might possibly have to remove to the place for a term of three years. He was greatly surprised when a young friend said, "Elizabeth is all ready to go!"

She felt that she could be a missionary in the new land, and the sacrifices she would be obliged to make—the leaving of her comfortable home with its delightful grounds—the giving up of the loving hearts in the Lord to which she clung—the separation from her father and only and beloved sister Rebekah—"weighed nothing in the balance with Jesus on the other scale." With this text in her thought, "And every one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother.....or lands for my name's sake, shall receive an hundred fold and shall inherit everlasting life," she could gladly face the dangers of a long and perilous journey over the worst of roads, with an infant son in her arms and another a few years old by her side,—leaving all behind, for the sake of him who had left all for her.

She found her new home neat and comfortable, and the people around her wonderfully kind. But her first experience at a monthly meeting in the new country was somewhat amusing. The people began to come Saturday night, for some of them lived as far as ten and twelve miles away. Mrs. French, the wife of the third partner in the firm, had prepared for them and took it all as a matter of course, but Auntie Willard was not looking for these country guests and was taken completely by surprise. The next day a still larger number came in wagon loads from long distances, and instead of going home when meeting was over crowded into her home and into other homes to be entertained. For a few moments she felt perfectly overwhelmed. How could she ever get dinner for so many? But stealing away by herself she bowed in prayer, and rose, quiet and ready for the work that lay before her, feeling that in entertaining these friends she was entertaining the brethren of Jesus, and that he would accept it as if done to him.

A Sunday school and prayer meeting was soon organized. A woman who had just buried a lovely child came to the prayer meeting that she might find some foundation for hope. She was pointed to Jesus as the resurrection and the life, and in a short time was baptised and asked that meetings be held in her neighborhood two miles away. As a result of these meetings thirty-eight members were added to the church, among the rest the husband of the bereaved mother.

But Auntie Willard little knew why God's guiding hand had led her into the wilderness; that a feast would be prepared for her there, that would last almost as many years as Elijah's journey was days in length. Yes and would continue to last her to the true mount of God and to that great city, the New Jerusalem descending out of heaven from God.

To stand up for the right might bring one like Mordecai into sackcloth and ashes, and cause loud and bitter cries, but the crown of gold and the royal apparel would be held in reserve." Auntie Willard came to Oswego in 1841, and in 1842 the message that Jesus was soon coming, was brought to her ears. Previous to this she had been taught that there would be a "a thousand years of glory before the coming of Jesus" and the establishment of his kingdom. Searching the Scriptures she found that the wheat and tares were to grow together until the harvest and that the harvest was to be at the end of this age or Christian dispensation. That the righteous and the wicked are to be found dwelling together as they were in the days of Noah and Lot. And that the mission of the gospel is not to convert the world but to gather out of it a people for his name."

My own dear father was the instrument used of God to proclaim these glad tidings, that brought the day of salvation a thousand years nearer. He was at this time 38 years of age, young and of timid disposition, he yet went forth, clad in homespun garments to preach the glad message in houses, school houses, barns and churches. He was ordained at his father's house the last day of August 1842, and preached at Oswego once every month, and on other Sundays to sister churches.

It did not look at first as if the doctrine of the near advent of Jesus would divide the church. All the members seemed to love it and to rejoice in it. But it is hard for people to follow in the track of truth if they find their leaders are not going that way and that they will be laughed at, and get the cold shoulder if they desert their leaders. The way to the kingdom is the way of the cross. There was a ministerial Conference at Oswego in Jan. 1843, that lasted for three weeks, and twenty-eight were added to the church. Elder Brown, the State missionary of the Baptist church was there, and in private conversation and in public bitterly opposed the doctrine of the Advent. His course awakened in many hearts a desire to know the truth and my father was requested to spend a week "in giving evidences from the Word of God and the signs of the times of the Advent near." This he did, and to the mind of Auntie Willard "it was a perfect Caleb and Joshua defence in the face of unbelieving, modern Israel of the return of the King of the Jews in God's own promised time and way, to possess with Israel the antitypical Canaan."

Shortly after the ministerial Conference of January, 1843, was over Bro. Willard was taken very sick, and lay for weeks hanging between life and death. He had only recovered so he could walk a little at a time around his room, when his second son, the little Rolando, four years of age, the flower of his group of three, a child lovely in disposition and comely in face and form, sickened and died. This brought on a relapse for the father. Did the happy Christian woman of my story—whose story is also the story of the Advent movement in northern Indiana, sink under this accumulation of troubles?

No, she made up her mind that she would not even mourn for the dear little boy, though God only knew the anguish of her heart. Was not Jesus coming; and would not God bring with him from the dead her dear sleeping one? God would help her not to mourn. Rolando had been looking for Jesus. So intently had he thought about it, that after he had gone to bed at night he would call out her, "Mama! Mama! will Jesus come before morning?" And she would have to go to him and talk in a happy childlike way about the savior he was hoping soon to see, and pray for him that he might be ready, and then he would fall asleep.

Bro. Willard finally recovered, and was able in the spring of 1843, to superintend the building of a house of worship at Oswego. It was so nearly finished by the first of ... Northern Indiana Baptist Association was held therein. It had met at Laporte in the fall of the previous year—1842, and Bro. and Sister Willard and my father had attended it and had found many of the membership deeply interested in the fulfillment of prophecy as set forth in the writings of William Miller and in the religious periodicals of the day. There were several Baptist churches in LaPorte County and father went out and preached to one of these in a country school house on Sunday afternoon. Many were anxious that he should, after the close of the Association, stay and deliver a series of lectures on the Prophecies, but he did not feel himself strong enough, nor well enough informed to do so. But many pleasant acquaintances were formed both by the Willards and himself, among these being Joseph, Mead, Theodore and A. S. Catlin, their sister—Mrs. Sarah Clark, and Mrs. Matilda Catlin the wife of Theodore. All of whom embraced the doctrine of the Advent near, and kindred views. They were very nice people, and letters from some of them are heirlooms among our household treasures. Matilda was a small woman, Sarah Clark quite tall. Auntie Willard was expecting these friends at the June Association at Oswego in 1843.

QUESTION BOX.

[Interested readers of the SENTINEL who desire to have Scriptural questions answered in this department, should address Robert G. Huggins, Box B, Oregon, Ill. Nonsensuous communications will be omitted.]

TWO KINDS OF SINS, THE PUBLIC AND PRIVATE.

Dear Brother Huggins:

Will you please explain 1 Tim. v. 24. What is meant by sins going before to judgment and some following after?—H. B. Hathaway.

ANSWER.

To "rightly divide the Word of truth" (2 Tim. ii. 15) or to correctly expound any text, especially a difficult one, as this passage admittedly is, we must be guided largely by the context. Give verses 19, 20, 21, 22 a thoughtful reading, and you will then solve the difficulties and lucidly explain the 24th verse. As rulers in the church, elders were not to be accused of sins unless proved to be guilty by two or three witnesses (19). All who were proved guilty of crimes were to be rebuked before all the church, that others might fear (20). This injunction was to be enforced without preference or partiality (21). "Laying hands" on people, that is, ordaining them to be elders in the church (iv. 14; 2 Tim. i. 6; Tit. i. 5) "suddenly" (verse 22) lacked judicious deliberation and proper caution. Unknown and untried men put in positions of trust hastily, might bring the truth into disrepute. Suddenly placed in responsible positions before they were known to be trustworthy, they might be sinners, and old master time, who does wonders, might expose their ungodliness. Now "keep yourself pure;" avoid "partaking of other man's sins" (22). This requires that you "lay hands suddenly on no man."

Now this contextual reading prepares us for, and brings us to the laconic verse: "Some men's sins are open before hand, going before to judgment; and some men they follow after" (the judgment) verse 24. The Greek for "open before hand" ought to be translated "palpably manifest" (A. R. Fausset, A. M.) The same word is translated evident in Heb vii 14: "It is evident our Lord sprang out of Judah." Literally "before" the eyes, that is, notorious. When the apostle speaks of sins which are open before the judgment, he means public sins; sins which are open, palpably manifest, evident, known, etc. Some sinners are hardened—they are past feeling (Eph iv 19); they have lost all sense of shame, and cannot blush. Jer vi 15. They sin with a high hand, and don't care who knows it. All sinners are not of this kind. Some so effectually cover their sins that they do not become known; their sins will be exposed, and turned wrong side out at the judgment. You see there are two kinds of sins; there is the palpably manifest, open, evident, going before to judgment, known, kind; the other kind Paul defines thusly: Some men (i. e., their sins) they follow after. Their sins are not open public crimes, loudly accusing, and generally known. They are private sinners. Their sins "follow after" the judgment. When the Lord comes in judgment he will bring to light the things of darkness (private sins, sins from which David ... pt (Psa xix 12), and ... manifest the counsels of the ... Cor iv 5. Our work will then ... n of what sort it is." 1 Cor iii 13. Sins, unknown before, are known now. Hence Paul's instructions to Timothy are in substance, "Keep yourself pure;" when others sin rebuke them before all; don't partake of other men's sins. Don't lay hands suddenly on some promising, but unknown brother. Be vigorous as an overseer in carrying out their instructions—in rebuking those who sin, whether in presbyters or people, and avoid participating in other men's sins by ordaining ungodly candidates. Remember there are two classes of sins, those "palpably manifest," and those not so; on the former you must act decidedly, whether to rebuke the people who sin in general, or to ordain ministers in particular. As to private sins, the judgment will bring them "to light." However successfully sins may be hidden now they "cannot be hid" then. You are only responsible for "palpably manifest" sins; you must not connive at these. Those that "are otherwise" the Lord will expose in the day of judgment. This explanation of the 24th verse also Scripturally elucidates the "good works" spoken of in 25th verse.

ROBT. HUGGINS.

A Righteous King.

"Behold a king shall reign in righteousness; and princes shall rule in judgment." Isa. xxxii. 1.

In all the ages past there has never been a king who has been able to rule the world with a righteous and just rule, even King David whom God said was a man after his own heart, made mistakes, and Solomon with all the wisdom he had, allowed the carnal nature to overcome him at times, and so it went on, and on, until we come down to king Zedekiah, whom God calls that profane wicked prince of Israel, and on account of his wickedness took the kingdom from him, and gave it over to the children of men, and God says it shall remain in that condition until he come whose right it is and I will give it him. Eze. xxi. 27. And it is in a broken up condition yet, and has become so corrupt, that even the leaders in the political world are wondering what the outcome will be. But to the student of prophecy there is a hope of something better to come by way of governmental rule, than has ever been. Yes, we are looking [redacted] to the time when God's kingdom will be restored back again, with Christ as king, to rule over it with a righteous rule, who will not make any mistakes, for he will not be partial to the rich on account of their wealth, neither to the poor on account of their poverty.

We read in Psa. lxxii. 1, 2, "Give the king thy judgments, O God, and thy righteousness unto the king's son. He shall judge thy people with righteousness, and thy poor with judgment." This will come to pass when the "kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ, and he shall reign for ever and ever," Rev. xi. 15. There are very few people in the world that believe that Christ will ever take the reigns of government on his shoulders, but let us see what the Scriptures saith. By turning to the second of Daniel we find a prophecy relative to the divided condition of the kingdom, and in the 44th verse it tells what is to take place, it says, "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever." And again we read, "And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him," Dan. vii. 27. This is very plain language and can be early understood if we believe that God is true, it does not say the kingdom in heaven shall be given to the saints, but it says plainly, that the kingdom and dominion under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High. Hence this brings us back to the words of our text. "Behold, a King shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment." David says in Psa. ii. 7-9, "I will declare the decree; the Lord hath said unto me, thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee, ask of me, and I shall give the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession. Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron; thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel." Daniel says, I saw in the night visions, and, behold, one like the Son of Man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the ancient of days, and they brought him near before him, and there was given him dominion, and glory and a kingdom, that all people, nations and languages, should serve him; his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed." Dan. vii. 13, 14. This is in harmony with the teaching of our Savior in Matt. xxv. 31, 32, "When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory." And O, what a glorious time that will be to those who have made themselves ready to come with him, this is when his judgment commences, verse 32, "And before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them one from another as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats."

The Revelator, says, "And they sung a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book and to open the seals thereof; for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests; and we shall reign on the earth," Rev. v. 9, 10. Dear ones of like precious faith, are we ready for that day to come, have we got oil in our lamps, or will they be empty if the Lord should come. Jesus admonishes us to "Watch therefore, for ye know not what hour the Lord doth come." Matt. xxiv. 42.

Submitted in love of the truth.

JOS. H. WILLIAMS.

Dear Brother Underwood:

Please allow me to say to those of like precious faith, that for the want of means I shall have to retire from the field. There has been about fifty dollars sent in, but have spent it paying my expenses, and food for my family. I regret so much to have to give up the work, but must care for those under my protection. How I am to return what has been sent in, I do not know, but I shall sure do it, as soon as possible. Many of those who responded, said not to return it, while others said nothing. All who wants me to return it, please drop me a card stating the amount, and where to send it, and I will get it up some way. While in the field I know some good was done at least. I converted a Second Adventist Preacher to the truth, and he cast his lot with us. He is a fine scholar and a logical preacher. The discussion between myself and John A. Cargile on the restoration of Israel, prepared the way for his conversion. We took the Bible and sat down and studied it closely on points of difference, and he saw the truth.

Thank God one more has been added to the one body, who is able to teach others. And, while I have to give up the work, I have the consolation to know that through my efforts, he will be preaching the glad tidings of the kingdom of God. He is zealous in the work, and a man of unblemished character. I want to thank those who have helped us, and assure them that they will ever be remembered by me in love. This is a good field, and O, how bad I hate to have to give up the work. But it seems that all of the one faith are poor, so far as this world's goods are concerned. Those who have means, don't seem to want to give it. I can realize the truth of James' statement, "Hath not God chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom, promised to them that love him." For years I have hoped the time would come when I could devote my whole time to the work. But now I have given up all hope. But when opportunity affords, we will do all we can. If any have ordered the Daniel-Cargile Discussion, and failed to get it, please notify us. We want every one to get it, and some times it gets lost in the mails. We will refill any order.

So dearly beloved, I now bid you good by. May we meet in the kingdom, and be permitted to see the "King in his beauty," and reign with him over the nations. Send no more help, unless it is a free will offering. And in conclusion let me again say to all who want us to return what they have sent us, write us, and we will manage some way to get it up. Of course we could not work without means to pay expenses and hoping enough would be sent to keep us at work, we went to work before we knew whether enough would be sent to keep us at it or not, and spent what was sent in. So again thanking you all, and asking you to remember me at the throne of grace, I beg to remain yours in the "Blessed hope."

T. J. DANIEL.

Account Giving.

There is certainly a great day of accounts coming, when our Lord will reward every one according as her or his work has been.

The great concern of each one should be, What have I done upon which to expect reward? If you should judge yourself, what would your judgment be?

Our talents differ, and each one will be held accountable for the use of such talent, whatever that may be. If you have only one, use that.

Some one says, what can I do? Why you can circulate literature teaching the truth if nothing else. There is no one but who can do that. Will that do any good? Oh, yes. Let me tell you something. Some people have bought several copies of "Pine Woods Bible Class" and handing them to their friends and neighbors. It being easy and attractive reading, most people will read it. It is bearing fruit already. I have just been told of a man who had become discouraged. He had listened to preachers of different denominations, and found they contradicted each other. He began to drift into infidelity, when a brother put a copy of Pine Woods Bible Class into his hands. Now in place of infidelity, he is rejoicing in new found light. It would take too much space to tell of other cases. Try this work, and add some stars to your crown.

The Students Text Book is already an assured success, and will be printed after I get home from this present trip.

I desire that all who want it, to send in their names in advance, that I may know how many to print. All you order now, you will be sure to get when printed. The price will be fifty cents.

Yours in the Blessed Hope,

W. H. WILSON.

Truths.

A good man is a silent homily.

Be doubly watchful in prosperity.

God's sweetest facsimile—obedience.

Give thyself early, wholly, to the Lord.

Christ's service is the highest dignity.

High motive can ennoble meanest acts.

As Christ died for sin, let us die to sin.

Let me be nothing, so that Christ be all.

Our leisure is the devil's tempting time.

We serve the devil if we serve not Christ.

Time will be priceless, ere we come to die.

Be generous, and God will send them means.

Think less of man and gain, than usefulness.

He is the greatest who serves Christ the best.

Life is a warfare, much more Christian life.

See that thy good thoughts grow to holy deeds.

Our praise should be as boundless as God's love.

Prayer is the ladder between earth and heaven.

None are so wrong as those whose lives are wrong.

Good is self-knowledge, but Christ-knowledge is best.

"Hear the Master's word of warning—
Watch ye, every one and pray!
Waiting for your Lord's returning,
For you do not know the day.
Keep your lamps all trimmed and burning,
Watch and pray lest ye should sleep!
Though the darkness seems increasing,
Still your faithful vigil keep!"

Obituary.

W. Loyd Hardy was born April 10, 1856 in Gaines, Kent Co., Michigan; died March 21, 1907, at Excelsior, Minn. Mr. Hardy leaves a widow, one sister and two brothers. He moved from this place several years ago, but was held in very high esteem in his home town where he had lived several years. He was a 32nd degree Mason, also a shriner, but all these worldly helps were not enough, for his wife informed us he was a very devoted Christian for several years preceding his death. He was reared in his youth by parents who kept the Sabbath. He was brought to his childhood home for burial, Elder B. W. Woodward officiating at the funeral.

Evangelizing on the Pacific Coast.

On March 14, I reached Los Angeles from Tulare, Cal., after a night's railroad ride.

This is one of the most noted tourist resorts in the world. People with money visit this beautiful city and region; but neither wealth, or pleasure brought me, but a desire to tell somebody of the time when the whole earth shall surpass this region in beauty and grandeur.

I went from the city out to Pomona, one of the most desirable localities of this Eden, and visited with Brother and Sister Sieth, and held counsel as to any prospect of gathering the few together, that not only believe in the coming Paradise, but are looking for the kingdom to come, and the will of God to be done on earth as it is done in heaven. Many repeat the petition, a few believe it will be answered, and less act as if they believe in, or anticipate such a condition "near at hand."

Conditions, for a present, or successful work are discouraging.

On Friday morning, the 15th, I retraced my 35 miles, over the Southern Pacific road, to Los Angeles, and took electric car about 15 miles out to Pasadena, to look up a few names, whose garments are not defiled with the filth of Babylon, and dirt of mammon.

At Pasadena, a variety of beauty, and grandeur made by man, and created, by his Creator, such as may not be surpassed, and scarcely equaled any other place on earth gladdens the eye. If, when as boys, we were discussing the lyceum question, "Which is most beautiful, the works of nature or the works of art?" we could have pictured this panorama, to the vision then both sides would have been sure that we gained the question. I wonder if we are not still overgrown boys, in the discussions of the questions that we have to do with, in this our more advanced life.

If you could combine the bright sky the snow-clad mountains, the green grass, the gardens of flowers, the lofty blocks for commerce, the church palaces, the edifices of learning, the mansions of millionaires; and then picture the trees, shrubs and flowers, they and their forms, foliage and fruitage, as semi-tropical, and combined as only God and millionaires can do such work; if your home had been in a northern climate, and your dwelling among the poor, then your spirit would swell with the ecstacy of youth too, even if you were starting down the shady bank of life, and were anticipating dark clouds, and gloomy valleys, before stepping into the cold, silent stream! If such corners of the earth can be made into such desirable places in a few years, what will God, angels and men accomplish for our now sin-cursed earth in a thousand years? it will be a place to be desired above all things. Brother! Pray seek and work for it.

Brother Elliott, of Central Point, gave me an idea that is worth thinking about, it is, that when the full number that shall reign with him are selected, he will come. Do we want him? Do we want a King, kingdom, a paradise? If so, and this idea is correct, we may hasten it.

On this interesting day I visited the dwelling place of Brother and Sister Kimball, but did not find them at home. I found Sister Huntoon, and spent two hours here. I found her daughter and son-in-law to be, both interested and interesting. These young people, and another son, a boy of 18, are the earnest people that Brother Dwiggins wrote of being baptized nearly a year ago, they having gone to Pomona for that purpose. If more would remember their Creator, in the days of their youth the world would be much better. On this same day, so faithfully spent in looking and working, I went back to the city and made another electric run of 15 miles, to Long Beach, where I found Bro. (Dr.) J. T. Smith. A great contrast in years, between this Brother, who is past 70, and those with whom we had visited at Pasadena. But when it comes to Bible truths there still burns in his heart the zealous fires of youth. His home was with the brethren of Cleveland before he came to this coast.

Here we are right on the beach of the Pacific Ocean, another of nature's indescribable grandeurs.

March 16th I spent a portion of the morning visiting with Brother Smith, and part of the time looking at the ocean, and admiring the buildings at this noted resort. About fifty people were trying in vain to catch the finny inhabitants of the ocean with no visible results. This was about as encouraging as the present prospect of becoming the fishermen of men here at Los Angeles, and its suburbs! The only thing is to return to the city, and to try to develop results. To do all we can is all that is required.

Went back to city and visited Bro. Wagoner and Brother Corbaley, but completed nothing in arranging for meetings. Stayed all night at rooming house, in the city and next day I went out to Brother Corbaleys and visited part of the Sunday. I learned of Brother Clarence Corbaley where to find the residence of Brother and Sister Knox. Found them strong believers in a restitution age, and life through Christ only. Efforts to continue the eye to some people had proved a failure, on account of their hobbies. They were discouraged. He had evangelized considerably.

On the morning of the 18th I went a number of miles, to a different part of the city to call on Sister Forsythe, formerly of N. Y. State. Found them living in a very pleasant home in a pretty part of the city. Remained for dinner, after which I called a few minutes at Mrs. Bailey's, a former member. Postponed making a call till a few days later so as to call on her mother, Mrs. Lamphere, at same time. Went to rooming house to stay at night.

On the 19th I called on Brother Clarence Corbaley, at the office of Bro. Taber, to consult over the prospect of getting the brethren together at some house or hall. Both these brethren were discouraged over any prospect of sufficient unity to form a church organization in the city, or even get the believers together.

After this interview I went to Bro. L. J. Kimballs, at South Pasadena. Brother Kimball is out in the mines; but Sister Kimball expressed an anxiety for a work to be engaged in and pressed to a successful terminus. They will do all they can.

After this visit I took the Southern Pacific train from Los Angeles to revisit Brother and Sister Stella, at Pomona, 35 miles east from the city. Here I learned that Brother Dwiggins had been enquiring after me, and was very anxious that meetings should be held.

In response to invitation, I took the train on the 20th and went six miles east from Pomona to Ontario, one of the beauty spots of southern Cal. In this village of cottages nestling among the trees and shrubs of this climate, I was kindly received by Brother and Sister Dwiggins. The readers of THE RESTITUTION know something of the years of labor, both with pen and tongue of this brother.

Sister Dwiggins is lately afflicted with blindness. How our sympathy goes out to those who suffer such distress. How gladly we will welcome deliverance. We could not reconcile our conditions under affliction, to the mercies of God if we did not know the sweet by contrast with the bitter; health contrasted with sickness; or happiness by comparison with suffering.

Lesson from xii. 48.

The Diaglott version, brothers and sisters, for this lesson is best, and reads thus. "He rejecting me, and receiving not my words, has that which judges him, the Word which I spake, that will judge him in the last day." The context, 49th verse, explains fully what will judge, the source of, and who the Judge will be—making binding the words uttered by Jesus in 48th verse.

What is the lesson here meant to imply, viz: "He rejecting me." The answer is forcefully given by Jesus himself to Jews who were at the feast in Jerusalem. John v. 40. The context, 39th verse implies that a knowledge of the Scriptures alone will not give aionian life. Hence the answer, "And yet, the Scriptures testifying of me, you are not willing to come to me that you may obtain life."

The import of the relative position between Israel after the flesh and the Israel that is by adoption—is. believing ones "walking not after the flesh but after the Spirit," see Rom. viii. 1 and Gen. xlviii. 5, 16, is apparent. Rejecting Jesus by the one—receiving the Word, Jesus and the Father who sent him by the other. As we all know a gracious inheritance was offered God's chosen Israel in the land of Palestine. Also an age-lasting inheritance in the kingdom of God—even immortal life. But to only those during Christ's ministery that received him—believing the Word and on the Father who sent him, gave he them power to become sons. And this number were then mea... real by adoption. "Begot... Word of truth." As Paul... Romans ix. 6, 7, 8, "For all th... are from Israel, these are not Israel. not because they are the seed of Abraham, are they all children, but in Isaac shall thy seed be called." That is the children of the flesh, these are not of God, but the children of the promise are accounted for the seed."

How imperative and how plainly discernable this lesson is, that we must believe God and his Word through his Anointed One to become children of God. And then by so doing adopted into his family by obedience of it.

Again to bring out the force of this lesson Jesus said as he taught in one of the synagogues on the Sabbath day. And they shall come from the east and from the west and from the north and from the south, and shall sit down in the kindom of God. And behold there are last which shall be first, and there are first which shall be last." Luke xiii. 29, 30.

Do we realize, brothers and sisters, the position we occupy as predestined and called children heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus the Anointed? First in right to the birth right? It is God's plan that it should be so. The first Israel shall be last, why? Because Jesus was wounded in the house of his friends. He was rejected, his Word scorned, he was crucified and cast from them.

Confessing Jesus as is eminently done today without having a knowledge of the Word avails nothing unto future life. As Jesus said in the 44th verse, He believing unto me, believes not into me, but into him who sent me. And he beholding me, beholds him who sent me. I have come a light unto the world, so that he believing unto me may not abide in darkness." So the Word judges us. If it dwells in our affections, it will raise us up at the last day. O I do rejoice that I ever heard the truth as it is in Jesus. And I know my brothers and sisters do, and that we have been brought out of the darkness into his marvelous light. I am glad to be of the Israel to whom Jesus is coming and from which he will gleam those who have loved him, believed into him and received him. And blessed be God for his gracious promise to forgive the iniquities of Israel after the flesh as a nation that they will enjoy the fruit of their labor in the land of promise and ... in the kingdom. Having lost ... position as crowned heirs ... reign with Christ. They are not looking and loving the appearing of the Messiah. But alas! will mourn and lament when they look upon him whom they pierced and rejected. And the will be the fate of all, Jew or Gentile who do not receive both Jesus and his Word. O may we all stand acquitted, approved and granted an abundant entrance into his glorious kingdom is my earnest prayer.

A New Tract.

The Great Divine Healer vs Latter-Day Healers, by Uncle John Foore.

A Tract for the last days. Should be read by every thinking Christian.

Paul 2 Tim. iii. 13. "But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived."

Matt. vii. 21. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works. And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

Brethren, these tracts have gone into many families, both to brethren and people of other denominations, a few infidels, and one Christian Scientist, and all seem to be well pleased with it; but only a few of the brethren have sent to me any help in the way of paying for the tracts, and tracts are very expensive. We are anxious to have more published on different subjects. Please help to send these Pearls out among the people.

Send orders to John Foore, at 2012 W. Corning Ave. Parsons, Kan. The price is 10 cents each.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. The Morning Cometh.

We wait, O blessed Jesus,
For yet a brighter hour,
Though clouds of sorrow linger,
And Satan wield his power.
Hope anchors on the promise;
God's Word can never fail;
The truth shall surely triumph.
The light shall yet prevail.

Night must have place to morning;
The Sun of peace shall rise,
And flood the world with radiance,
Too pure for sinful eyes,
And when the royal Bridegroom
Comes forth to claim his bride,
And on the clouds of heaven
In majesty doth ride,
Then shall thy waiting children
Adore earth's rightful King,
Angels shall swell the anthem,
While woods and mountains sing.

Return in all thy beauty,
Messiah! Lord of life!
Begin thy reign of glory,
And end this mortal strife!

Hebrews ii. 1.

"Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip."

What are the things we have heard? We heard and read, Christ is our Savior, through him only can we be saved. We know he came into the world to save us. He died on the cross so that we might be saved. By believing in him, repenting of our sins and being baptized, we have the hope of eternal life. If by meeting the requirements that are laid down for us. What they are, we are all acquainted and familiar with. The Word of God, the truth and the promises he has given us. Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip. Do we realize all that means? Let them slip. How easy it is to think, O, I'm all right, nothing would turn me from the truth. But there comes a time of trial, a trial of faith, some new doctrine springs up, or we get careless and mingle more in the world, or think its not worth the effort, so we let them slip. We perhaps do not realize all it means, "Eternal life." A life with Christ and his angels in a world made so beautiful its almost beyond comprehension. Are we working for that home? Do we keep the things we read of in his book before our minds? Are we mindful lest they slip away from us? We can only do so by being steadfast, earnest and faithful workers of the Lord. When Christ prayed to his Father, "Just before he was betrayed, he said, I have manifested thy name unto the men which thou gavest me out of the world, thine they were, and thou gavest them me, and they have kept thy Word. I pray for them, I pray not for the world, but for them which thou hast given me, for they are thine and thine are mine, and I am glorified in them. Holy Father! keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one as we are one. I have given them thy Word, and the world hath hated them, because they are not of the world, even as I am not of the world. Sanctify them through thy truth, thy Word is truth.

I love to read that prayer, I like to think Christ was praying for me, for us all. O, that we were more like him. If we could keep that prayer before us all the time, I know it would be easier to overcome the things of this world, and hold fast to the truth, keep before our minds all that is promised to us if we be faithful to the things we have heard. For if the Word spoken by angels was steadfast and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompence of reward. How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation, which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him.

But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor; that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man. For it became him for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the Captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings. For both he that sanctifieth and they who are sanctified are all of one; for which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren. Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LVI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, APRIL 24, 1907. NUMBER 16.

Did Christ Pre-exist?

If Christ pre-existed as the Son of God from the beginning, must he not have been immortal, and if immortal, how can we reconcile his birth, death and resurrection with that idea? Existing, he could not have been born, neither could he die, consequently could not have been raised to life again. This would remove the very foundation of our faith. "If Christ hath not been raised your faith is vain."

Christ was the only begotten Son of God. His existence as a son must have begun when "He (Christ) was begotten not of blood or the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." (Greesbach's rendering.) When the angel said to Mary "that which is to be born, shall be called holy, the Son of God."

An understanding of the Word, which in the beginning "was with God and was God, and that became flesh," will harmonize those passages which seem to teach a pre-existence. The Greek given us for Word (John i. 1) is logos, meaning mind, reason, wisdom, speech. In Heb. i. 2, we read, "through whom (the Son) also he made the worlds." Heb. xii. 3 "the worlds have been framed by the Word of God," in Prov. iii. 9, "The Lord by wisdom founded the earth," "when he prepared the heavens, I (wisdom) was there." In these texts, the Son, the Word, wisdom, are used identically. It is clear that the Word which was in the beginning, was not a person, but that which it signifies, mind, wisdom or purpose of God. Of Christ it is said, "His name shall be called the Word of God." On the birth of Jesus, God through the prophet said "They shall call his name Emanuel, which being interpreted, God with us." "God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself." Christ as the Word, logos, was in the beginning, with God, in that sense, was God. That God was to be manifested in the flesh, was predicted in the promise of the woman's seed, the child born, the Son given, and "When the fulness of time came God sent forth his Son born of a woman, born under the law," Gal. iv. 4. By virtue of his begettal, through his mother, he bore the nature of man, through the Father, his origin and character was divine. "I came forth and am come from God; for neither have I come of myself, but he sent me." Some may claim this text shows pre-existence, but it refers to his origin. He was sent of God, the apostles also were sent, John the Baptist was "sent from God." Read Christ's prayer in John xvii. showing the oneness of Christ with his Father, and that his followers, in the same way, might be one with him. "I and my Father are one," one in mind, one in purpose. "As my Father taught me, I speak these things." "God who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in times past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken to us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, through whom (as the Word, logos) he made the worlds."

Accepting Christ as the Word, which signified the mind, reason, wisdom, power of God, we can understand John vi. 62, a text given as teaching his pre-existence. He was also the bread from heaven, sent from God to give life to the world "As the living Father sent me and I live because of the Father, so he that eateth me, he also shall live because of me." John viii. 56, 58 in another text quoted, Christ was foreknown indeed before the foundation of the world, but was manifested at the end of the times for your sake. Christ as the pre-existent Word, was before the foundation of the world, was before Abraham. Abraham believed God, and looked forward to that day when the promise that in his Seed, Christ, all nations of the earth should be blessed, should be fulfilled and by the eye of faith he saw it and rejoiced. T. Nesbit offers a rendering of the passage (John viii. 58) "Before Abraham was, I am" conveying the sense of the tense of the original meaning, which is, "Before Abraham comes—about—for himself, I am existing" before the appointed time arrives for the receiving of the promise. Again in Eureka, Vol. I. "I am" is fully explained, referring to Ex. iii. 14, where "I am" properly rendered is "I will be," further giving the rendering from the Hebrew, of Jehovah, the true pronunciation, Yahweh, signifying "He who will be," the memorial name chosen to be known among his people, in this name declaring he would be a person or persons not yet manifested.

"Christ suffered for us." "Who his own self bore our sins in his body upon the tree," the body referred to in Heb. x. 5, 5. He came to do his Father's will, "God sending his Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, as an offering for sin, condemned sin in the flesh." After his resurrection he became the very image of his Father's substance. 2 Cor. viii. 9. Christ was rich in promise as the appointed heir of all things, in him are all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge hidden, yet he lived a life of poverty and self denial, for our sakes.

John xvii. 5. The glory which Jesus had with the Father before the world, was that which he had when he was the Word or power with God. 1 Cor. xv. 47. "The second man is of heaven." (R. V.) "Christ was from above." His origin was of the Father.

The Story of a Happy Christian Life.—No. 6.

You remember how the kindness of Auntie Willard affected Elder Barnes,—the minister who was preaching at Oswego, turn about with father, during the latter part of the summer and fall and winter of 1844? "If he had come there" she said, "to defend Baptist tenets against Bible truth at the expense of the feelings of herself and husband, he was completely disarmed," and she "could talk to him as freely on her change of views as she could to my father, he never grieving her but once by an unkind allusion in public to her discrepant faith." And father, on the other side was still more careful not to wound the feelings of his brethren who differed with him as to the time when Jesus would appear; not for fear of man, not for earthly fame, or emolument, but lest he should offend God. It was a painful position for both preachers. They were tied hand and foot as it were, and could do little for the salvation of men until released. Auntie Willard felt keenly "the pressure that was upon her," for although "she cried to God to put the words in her mouth that others were holding back, she could find no place for utterance." She prayed "to God that he would bring out their ministers to sound the alarm, that the church might awake to her duty, and sinners flee to Christ for refuge before the coming storm."

The sword coming—the judgment near and none to warn! How could she keep silent? "Ah me," she cried, "the harvest of the field is perishing! O Lord send by whom thou wilt send, only let thy truth be manifested in our midst!"

"Sweet confidence then filled her soul, that she would be led of the Lord, and that in due time relief and deliverance would come to the church." How her prayer was answered you will shortly see, but just now we will go back to June 8, 1843. Now Auntie Willard nor my fa[illegible] reminiscences [illegible] that date, but in our Kosciusko Co., History—Lewis Publishing Company, 1887, it is stated on authority of a Mr. Heber Reed, who it is said "went over to Oswego on that day"—June 8, 1843—"to see the performance," at French's house, where several of the Jones' and French families and others had gathered at sunrise for a song and prayer service,—Dr. Miller being one of that number,—that shrouds were donned," that had been copiously prepared for the occasion, and a terrific thunder-storm coming up during the forenoon, the people wept, prayed and shouted themselves into a perfect frenzy" but that "in the afternoon it cleared up and the disappointed Millerites pulled off their ascension robes, and went home to get something to eat," and that "the failure of the prophecy caused murmuring among the brethren and sisters, and the society disbanded." It was just such scoffers as these that the early church had to meet,—scoffers, who aimed—not only by ridicule but by telling point blank falsehoods,—to bring the truth of God into disrepute. There never was an ascension robe made at Oswego, or anywhere else by believers in the coming of Jesus.

The Mr. Ezekiel French at whose house this sunrise prayer-service is said to have been held was hostile to the doctrine of the Advent. His brother Aaron also opposed it, but Jacob French and his wife, who lived at Bone Prairie, two miles north of Oswego, were believers. How it was with the James family, I do not remember, for I was then but five years old. If they believed the truth when this prayer-service is said to have been held, they did not remain steadfast. And as to Wm. Miller being in Oswego that particular day, he was [illegible]-ro to his life, nor was Hiram Miller there until years afterward. Nor was it possible for the Advent believers to disband at that time, for the simple reason that they had not as yet formed themselves into a society but still held their membership in the Baptist church, and the fact is they never did disband, but held together until death and removals had so depleted their numbers that meetings were no longer possible.

To return now to 1844. When Auntie Willard was crying to the Lord "to send some one to Oswego through whom his truth might be manifested to the people," the time when it was expected the Lord would come was close at hand. No wonder it was hard for her to keep still! I do not see how she could. I remember as if it were yesterday the solemnity of my father's and mother's faces, in those momentous days; remember the tones of awe in which the people talked, as one after another the signs that had been seen in the heavens were spoken of.

Jonah ii. 9.—But I will sacrifice unto thee with the voice of thanksgiving; I will pay that that I have vowed.

This was Jonah speaking after his deliverance. We are apt to be humble and penitent when we are in trouble or prosperity to be willing to sacrifice unto the Lord.

He does not require burnt offerings as a sacrifice, but willing service unto God. Let us sacrifice a part of our time to the study of God's word. And a portion of the money that is entrusted with us. Let us make a vow to render unto the Lord that which belongeth to him, and see that we keep this vow. For as Jonah said, "Salvation is of the Lord." And it is only through his mercies, that we can be saved. In the 6th verse of this same chapter, Jonah describes his feelings while he was housed in the great fish, which God prepared. He [illegible] closed me about, the [illegible] bound the head. I [illegible] was about me forever. But this forever had an end. For he afterwards said, the Lord hath brought my life from corruption.

The bars of the earth would have held him forever only for the mercies of God. Just so with us, when we go down to the grave. We would be there forever only through the power and goodness of God to call those who are worthy to life again. We of ourselves are as helpless as Jonah was.

How willing we should be to make great sacrifice to show our appreciation of the great sacrifice Christ made of his life, in order that we might have life through his death and resurrection. Christ said, "I am the resurrection and the life, he that believeth on me though he were dead, yet shall he live.

And while people all over our land are keeping this day as a memorial of the resurrection of Christ. How little most people think depends on the resurrection, when the Bible teaches that all depends on this. If the dead rise not, then is our hope in vain. Yes this is our only hope for those who have died. And we pray that before another Easter day, the Lord will have come and called to life his sleeping saints.

Report of Meetings Held in Lakeside, Chelan Co. Wash.

Left Waterville, Wednesday morning, March 6th to hold a series of meetings at Lakeside, on request of Brother John Howell. There is a meeting house in the place belonging to the Congregationalists, and although it was built as a Union house they would not allow us the use of it. We however secured the use of a large hall where we held meetings Wednesday and Thursday evenings.

The hall was used several nights in the week for dancing and basket-ball, therefore we could not have the uninterrupted use of it, so a private house was secured and the meetings continued there. We visited the people in the daytime, talking privately with them in their homes, then publicly in the evenings. Gave eighteen discourses in all, had the best of attention throughout, the audience increasing in size as the meetings progressed. The first night there were twenty-five, the last evening there were thirty-eight.

The meetings resulted in six coming forward for baptism, which was performed in beautiful Lake Chelan, noted throughout this country for its wonderfully pure, clear water, almost transparent.

The names of the dear ones added to the household of faith were Bro. Fred Higley and wife Emma. They were immersed on Sunday and left the following Tuesday for Nebraska, where they will make their future home; Sister Edith Merrit; Sister Martha Mudgett; Brother Randall Shepherd and his wife Myrtle; others will be obedient later on.

The meetings closed Wednesday evening March 27th. On Thursday evening following the members met at the home of Brother John Howell and perfected a church organization, with Brother Howell as Elder; Brother Randall Shepherd, Deacon; Sister Myrtle Shepherd, Secretary; Sister Edith Merritt, Treasurer, and Sister Howell as organist.

For the present they will hold meetings in a private house. Much credit is due Brother Howell for the success of the meetings. One year ago he sent for me to come up and talk to the people, but no meetings were held at that time as no house could be secured.

May the dear Father keep them in the love of the truth.

The Restitution advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Who is the Criminal?

A ragged, shivering little boy was brought before a magistrate for stealing a loaf of bread from a grocer's window. The grocer himself was the informer. The judge was about to pass sentence on the little wretch, when a kind lawyer offered the following considerations in mitigation of his offense:

"The child," he said, "is the eldest of a miserable group. Their mother is an incorrigible sot; their father lies low in the drunkard's grave. This morning when the act was committed, the mother lay drunk upon the floor, and her children were crying around her for bread. The elder boy, unable to bear such misery any longer, rushed from the hovel, resolved to obey that paramount law of nature which teaches us the principle of self-preservation, even in disregard of the law of the land. He seized the penny loaf from the grocer's window, and returned to that wretched home, spread the unexpected morsel before his hungry brothers, and bade them 'eat and live.' He did not eat himself. No. Consciousness of the crime, and fears of detection, furnished a more ungrateful feeling than that of hunger. The last morsel was scarcely swallowed before the officer of justice entered the door. The little thief was pointed out by the grocer, and he was conducted before the public tribunal. In the midst of such misery as this, with the motive of this little criminal before us, there is something to soften the heart of man, though I deny not that the act is a penal offense.

"But the tale is by no means told. This little circle, now utterly fallen and forlorn, is the wreck of a family once prosperous, temperate, frugal, industrious and happy. The father, strange as it may appear, was once a professor of religion. The very first drop of that accursed tincture of destruction which conducted him through the path of corruption to the grave, was handed to him by this very grocer, who now pursues the starving child of his former victim for stealing a penny loaf. The farm became encumbered; the community turned its back upon the miserable victim of intemperance; the church expelled him from the communion; the wife sought in the same tremendous remedy for all distracting care, an oblivion of her domestic misery. Home became a hell, whose only outlet was the grave.

"All this aggregate of human wretchedness was produced by this very grocer. He has murdered the father, he has brutalized the mother, he has beggared the children; he has taken possession of the farm, and now prosecutes the child for stealing a loaf to keep his brothers from starving!

"But all this is lawful and right; that is, it is according to law. He has stood upon his license. The theft of a penny loaf by a starving boy, where his father laid down his last farthing for rum, is a penal offense!"

What a Book Said.

"Please don't handle me with dirty hands, or leave me out in the rain. Books catch cold as well as children.

"Or make marks on me with your pen or pencil. It would spoil my looks.

"Or lean on me with your elbows when you are reading me. It hurts.

"Or open me and lay me face down on the table. You wouldn't like that.

"Or put in between my leaves a pencil or anything thicker than a single sheet of this paper. It would strain my back.

"Whenever you are through reading me, if you are afraid of losing your place, don't turn down the corner of one of my leaves, but have a neat little bookmark to put in where you stopped, and then close me and lay me down on my side, so that I can have a good, comfortable rest.

"Help me to keep fresh and clean, and I will help you to be happy."

The announcement of the Illinois Conference as given in another part of this paper is wrong. It should be Aug. 21 to 26—not 28 as it now reads. This will be changed next issue.

Since the announcement of the date for holding the Torch Lake Bible School, as given in last week's issue, matters have arisen that leave the time indefinite. It will be announced as soon as arrangements can be perfected.

Brother and Sister James Burkey who have lived northeast of this city for many years, and are members of our Plymouth church, have gone to El Paso, Texas. The climate there has been helpful to their son, and as Brother and Sister Burkey have been in poor health, they wish to see if the change will be beneficial to them. We are sorry to have them go from our midst, but will rejoice if they regain a degree of health by the move. They have ever been faithful at the services here when possible, and may the Father in heaven bless them in their new home.

Honor to Whom Honor is Due.

While reading Sister Wince's excellent article, "The Story of a Happy Christian Life," I thought as she referred to many of the pioneers in the faith, how necessary that we have a history of those earnest workers that those just now coming to the front in Bible and literary work, may realize some thing of the difficulties they waded through, and the deep and difficult questions they mastered in such a way they cannot be successfully controverted.

We have noticed some articles in these wise days that might cause those unacquainted with the faith to think them ignorant, a sort of "rough rider" fanatical set of people. Let me correct any one of such opinions. Many of those men and women were not only well educated but were graduates of colleges, understood Greek, Hebrew and Latin with other necessary wisdom, and were as well, and perhaps better fitted to unravel the mysteries of prophecy than our learned men of today. We often see this expression in print, "O that was nothing but Millerism." Do you know who Wm. Miller was? He was a Baptist minister, a fine Bible student and an honest man. When he started the world with his announcement of Christ's coming it stirred the Christian world as it never has been before or since. Thousands accepted Christ than where only a few comparatively had been moved before. No one in Europe or America was able to answer his arguments. But the set time passed, and Christ delayed his coming. Was it Miller who made the mistake or the chronologist? Miller set the ball rolling and thank God it has never stopped, but the Bible has been searched and studied as never before. Many grand truths have been brought out. It was not for one man to do it all. We must remember the church had been in the wilderness, under the little horn power, the man of sin, the mystery of iniquity that had begun to manifest itself in Paul's time and for 1260 years dominated the earth, that power that thought to wear out the saints of the Most High, and to change times and laws, and under which power the true gospel was nearly obliterated from the face of the earth. But since the great reformation a host of noble souls have been exhuming and bringing out the truths of the blessed Bible, noble, sacrificing workers. Luther did his work well, brave soldier that he was. He would go to the city of Worms and defend what he knew of the truth, if the devils were as thick as the tiles on their houses. Calvin, Wesley, Alex Campbell, all contributed to their share of gospel work. Then we had a J. B. Cook, a ripe scholar, R. V. Lyon left a rich church and good salary to preach a pure gospel, receiving little pay and few thanks, which has always been the common lot of the one who was willing to earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints. Then we have C. F. Sweet, Joseph Marsh, Wiley Jones, J. S. Hatch, E. [illegible] wife, J. M. Stephen[illegible] dear Father Chaplin, what [illegible] life he led, a ripe scholar and [illegible] defender of the faith. Then O. R. L. Crozier and wife, both living, but now feeble beyond work, both fine scholars and grand defenders of the truth in early pioneer battles. We would not forget our grand old war horse L. H. Chase, and his able son L. C. Chase, how they are missed in Michigan. Then we could take columns speaking of Bro. and Sister Wince, Bro. J. F. Wagoner, the Wilsons, Bro. Joblin and many others whose life work like my own is nearly finished, but space will not permit, but from each of these our young writers could learn many things, and many of them are just as capable of deciding a prophetical problem as some of later date, who are so sure they are the only ones who have decided those matters for all time and eternity. Let us all try and be humble, modest, earnest defenders of the gospel, ever remembering that what we do not know would make a larger volume than what we think we know.

Yours for the truth.

The Doctrine of a Future Life, By James Strong, S. T. D, L. L. D., Reviewed. No. 10.

Dr. Strong says on page 101, "An attempt has recently been made to elude the force of these conclusions (of endless suffering) by the supposition of a second probation after death."

But is it any marvel that thinking men should seek a source of relief from the horrible dogma of endless misery, and so with the new but false idea attempt to relieve the divine administration of injustice?

But if the protestant church, instead of receiving the papal "hell" which should never have appeared in the English Version, had believed and promulgated the true doctrine of the Bible, namely, the destruction of the wicked, there would have been no such resorts as referred to above; and there would have been no Universalists or restorationists, and fewer unbelievers, skeptics and infidels.

After his argument against the erroneous idea of a second probation after death, Dr. Strong continues (p. 103,) as follows: "The only other release which human ingenuity has been able to devise from the dungeon of despair and misery is the theory of the annihilation of the wicked."

Dr. Strong is not candid, if not untruthful in the above statement; for he knows (as will be seen when he refers to the Scriptures quoted to prove annihilation) that it was not "human ingenuity that devised this theory," but God, who, through his inspired servants has said in 200 passages that the wicked shall "perish," "die the second death," be "destroyed" by being burned up "root and branch" "burned up as chaff, as tares and withered branches."

But the Doctor continues and says: "But to this (theory) again there are insuperable objections—Biblical, (?) moral and philosophical (i. e. the passages that the wicked shall be destroyed are morally and philosophically wrong!) First, it is wholly unwarranted by Scripture, (an assertion which we shall show is not true.) All the passages popularly quoted in its favor are perversions of exegesis that will not bear the test of careful analysis and inspection."

If "all those passages are perversions," then, either the inspired writers and our Lord Jesus Christ, or the translators were woefully mistaken! But those Scriptures will overthrow, as we shall see, his and the popular "exegesis," and will "bear the test of careful analysis and (close) inspection" of all lovers of, and candid seekers for the truth. But he continues and says: "They (the passages) chiefly rest upon a false interpolation of the words life and death; or their equivalents, which as we have seen are applicable to the soul only in a figurative sense, and simply and really denote merely his (or his soul's) happiness and not its existence." [!!!]

Dr. Strong, unfortunately for himself has here made a great mistake in using the word "interpolation" instead of interpretation in his false charge; for "interpolation," in this connection means the "foisting" of a word or words on to another word or words, "wrongfully and without warrant," thus changing the sentiment or truth expressed. The Doctor has evidently made this charge to lull suspicion from himself for he must know he has made it plain that he is [illegible] soul figuratively" as [illegible] every intelligent reader of the Bible knows that he states what is not true; for all these words are spoken of the person, the man, and not the "soul entity in man."

Now let us see the Doctor's "interpolation," first of the terms "soul" and "spirit." He and the orthodox churches are not satisfied to use these terms as found in the Bible, and so they "build," or add to them, without warrant, and therefore wrongfully the words "immaterial, immortal, deathless and never dying" souls and spirits. The following two stanzas of a beautiful hymn, except the palpable contradiction between the first and last verse very forcibly illustrates this point, as it is a favorite hymn and very frequently sung with unction and pathos.

A stranger to keep I have,
A soul to glorify;
A never dying soul to save
And fit it for the sky.

Help me to watch and pray,
And on thyself rely,
Assured if I my trust betray,
I shall forever die.

How a "never dying soul" can "forever die" is more than a poet or Solomon can tell, and it does not correct the contradiction by asserting that the "second death" is a moral or spiritual death, for what is called a spiritual death is a state of sin—"dead in trespasses and sins," as the apostle says, and not a penalty for having sinned. There is not even an intimation in all the Bible that spiritual death is the penalty for sin. If this be true where does it leave Dr. Strong and all who believe with him, but virtual rejecters of all the numerous Scriptures that declare that the wicked shall be "burned up," "and that "perish" and be "destroyed."

But the Doctor's "interpolation" is also seen in the word "life," for he has foisted the word "happiness" with emphasis for the term "life." And he with all Greek scholars, know that the Greek word zoe does not mean "happiness," even in a remote sense. The definition in the lexicon is "life, i. e. the state of being alive." Zoe aionion, life everlasting is, [illegible] fore, living forever, or as Christ [illegible] "He that eateth this bread shall live forever!" Perhaps the Doctor does not know that zoe is the life-word for the next world, i. e. the new earth, and that psuche is the life word for this world, and is used by Christ as follows: "For whosoever shall seek to save his psuche—life shall lose it, but whosoever shall lose his life for my sake shall save it. For what shall a man be profited, if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own life or "himself" as St. Luke has it. Revision.

Dr. Strong has attempted to make null and void all the 200 passages of Scripture which not only explicitly and emphatically declare that the wicked shall "perish" and be "destroyed," but in what way they will be destroyed, namely, by being burned up as "chaff, tares," and "withered branches" by the one word "figurative!" He says—"they [these passages] are applicable to the soul in a figurative sense!" That is, they prefigure, according to his, and the popular churches' creed, that to "perish" is to live forever in misery, and to be "destroyed" is to be preserved in hell to be tormented forever, and to be "burned up as chaff," is to burn forever, or, not to burn at all! Such a transformation of language; such a radical change of the well known meaning of words, the result of which is a virtual rejection of the pure Word of God by his friends is sufficient one would think, to make the angels of heaven blush for such inconsistent, illogical, creed-bound teachers.

It will be pertinent here to ascertain if possible, what Dr. Strong means when he asserts that the passages alluded to should be taken "in a figurative sense," and we remark, that he could not mean anything else than that God did not mean what he says of the end of the wicked! If so, then, it is also pertinent to ask such persons to tell us why did not God say what he did mean?

As an illustration of this "figurative sense," we call attention to one of the strongest and clearest cases of the end of the wicked and the manner thereof, as stated by John the Baptist and forerunner of [illegible] says (Matt. iii. 12 [illegible] in the other world. The [illegible] Edwards and his [illegible] overs are gone forever. This is the Twentieth century. They say that the Rev. R. H. Torrey, the evangelist, believes in a hell of fire and brimstone; but if so, he is one of a very small and rapidly decreasing number. Intelligent men today cannot be scared by talking of a literal hell of the brimstone kind. I know no preacher who preaches that doctrine today, and I do not believe in it for myself. I take it that hell is something like the reaction of wrong doing upon a man's self. If you break any law in your body, you must suffer the consequences without fail. If you break a moral law, there is a similar reaction on your soul. The reaction is like that of a boomerang. If you take poison into your stomach, your body will die. You can no more break a moral law and not suffer than you can a physical. Hell is the rebound of a man's dark acts on his soul—the boomerang effect of his dark deeds. The better hell to warn men of is the hell of their own wrong doing—the hell that is the consequence of their own voluntary acts. Man knows the effect of the laws of health. Warn him of the effect of the breach of moral laws."

The most scholarly contribution to the discussion came from the Rev. Zachariah Crowley, of the Philippine Islands.

"The medieval idea of hell," he said, "stems from the misinterpretation of the Hebrew word 'sheol.' There is no justification for regarding it as a place of eternal torture. It is deep (Job xx. 8) and dark (Job xi. 21), in the center of the earth (Num. xvi. 30), having within it depths or depths (Prov. ix. 18), and fastened with gates (Isa. xxxvii. 10) and bars (Job xvii. 10). In this cavernous realm are the souls of dead men, the Rephaim and Shepirite (Psa. lxxxvi. 13, etc.) In the New Testament the word 'hades,' like 'sheol,' sometimes means merely the grave (Rev. xx. 13, etc.) It is in this sense that the creeds say of our Lord: "He descended down into hell." On the other hand, there is no doubt that hades is also used in the New Testament to mean a place of torment (Luke xvi. 23, etc.), but there is no proof that this torment is to be eternal. The belief in a state of eternal torture is principally grounded on the parable of Dives and Lazarus, but modern scholarship has shown that this passage abounds in Hebrew metaphors which have been literally and crudely translated and forced to mean that Dives was in a place of torment from which there was no escape."

While we cannot agree with all to be found in the above article, yet the position taken by these leaders of the great body named shows an advancement which but a few years ago could be hardly hoped for. If Methodism accepts the views stated in this article, there can be but one of two conclusions reached by them,—either that man is mortal, or that God has provided universal salvation. Let us trust that they may come out fully into the light.

Announcement.

The Annual June Meeting and Conference of the Church of God in the State of Indiana, will be held at Antioch Church, commencing Friday morning June 7, and continuing over the following Sunday.

A committee has been appointed to arrange a programme for publication. It is expected that our home preachers will be assisted in proclaiming the glad tidings by those who preach the gospel in other States.

We trust that all who can will meet with us, that our hearts may be cheered by your presence, and by your words of faith and hope. If we shall bring to this meeting a free will offering of love to God, and charity toward all, God will bless us and our meeting shall be a blessing.

To reach Antioch Church those coming by train will come either to Plymouth, or to Argos, where conveyance can be had to the place of meeting. Once more we urge you to come—come in the spirit and love of Christ.

Those coming to Plymouth please notify J. H. Willey, Plymouth. Those coming to Argos, please notify Wm. Hallsback, Argos.

J. H. Willey, Pres.
Lydia Hallsback, Sec.

To ruminate upon evils, to make critical notes upon injuries, and be too acute in their apprehensions, is to add unto our own tortures, to feather the arrows of our enemies, to lash ourselves with the scorpions of our foes, and to resolve to sleep no more.

Hidden Ones.

Yes, there are such; many of them. "The Lord knoweth them that are his." There are quiet, retiring, lowly followers of Jesus of whom the organized church knows nothing—the Lord's violets, concealed from public view, and revealed only to the careful student of the Christian life by the fragrance of their modest piety. They are found in obscure nooks and corners, in thatched cottages or mud huts in country lanes, or in attics or cellars in great towns, whence the incense of their heart worship ascends in heaven with acceptance because they themselves, have already been accepted in the Beloved One. It may be that this simple piety flourishes in a room next door to a demoniac who makes the air tremble by his ribaldry and blasphemy. It is of no use to deny the Divine Sovereignty. Facts are excellent exponents of doctrine. How comes it that a thin partition is all that separates a lowly living child of God from a boisterous and odious child of the devil? I almost envy these hidden ones. It seems so poetically attractive to get away from the perpetual tumult, and to live alone with Christ. But this looks selfish. I wait until an honorable discharge comes from my Commander. But I wish these hidden ones would not remain in concealment. They lose the blessed feeling of communion with brethren in Christ, whose hands and hearts their presence would strengthen in the duty of testimony. I am certain that the organization of great hierarchies has damaged the Christian faith enormously. The sublime simplicity of apostolic institutions has been destroyed by this crafty device of the enemy. But this is no reason why any disciple of the Lord should become a practical hermit. Every saint should seek the fellowship of "the sons of God."

The question is not one of personal safety; that is a settled matter in the Lord's hands; but it is one of fellowship and witness-bearing. The hidden ones should not continue hidden in these days. They think their light feeble. Probably it is; but it is thoroughly genuine, even from the divine standard; therefore it should be "set upon a table" that others may see it and glorify God. The disappearance of the smaller stars from the splendid roof which the Divine Builder has placed over our heads would sadly dim its midnight glory. So we want the little lights to come into the church for the benefit of the dark world, and the honor of that Wonderful One who holdeth the stars in his right hand and walketh among the golden candlesticks.—Dr. Lemke.

Complimentary to the Jews.

The Jews are among the most moral and law-abiding citizens of any community, and are no public expense whatever, either as criminals or paupers. It is the exception when one of their number is found in any of our prisons; none of their children are in houses of refuge; none of their adults in our almshouses. They have their own hospitals for the sick, and homes for their friendless children. They are loyal people to any government in which their lot may be cast. As a tangible proof for their loyalty to our land, they have our coat-of-arms embroidered on a velvet curtain, which hangs in front of the holy places in their synagogues, in which are deposited their Scriptures; and always at the end of their Sabbath religious services they repeat a prayer (in English) for our president and all in authority. There is a yearly record kept by the Jews of all crimes committed by their members in every country; and it is asserted by one of their highest officials that not more than one Jew in fifty years is hung for murder throughout the whole world.

Editor Restitution:

I would like to say through The Restitution that Brother Huggins will preach at the Restitution Church, Clark Co., Ill., commencing on Saturday night before 1st Sunday in May, and holding over the Second Sunday. All are cordially invited to attend the meetings.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

We wish to avoid the labor and expense of mailing statements to our patrons. If such one who has not as yet paid for this year would send in his renewal at once, we will appreciate the favor.

Poetry.

My Hands and His

My hands were filled with many things
That I did precious hold,
As any treasure of a king's—
Silver, or gems, or gold.
The Master came and touched my hands,
(The scars were in his own),
And at his feet my treasures sweet
Fell shattered, one by one.
"I must have empty hands," said he,
"Wherewith to work my work through thee."

My hands were growing feverish
And cumbered with much care;
Trembling with haste and eagerness,
Nor folded oft in prayer.
The Master came and touched my hands
With healing in his own;
And calm and still to do his will
They grew—the fever gone.
"I must have quiet hands," said he,
"Wherewith to work my works through thee."

My hands were strong with fancied strength,
But not in power divine;
And bold to take up tasks at length,
That were not his, but mine.
The Master came and touched my hands,
And mightily were his own,
But mine since then have powerless been,
Save his are laid thereon.
"And it is only then," said he,
"That I can work my works through thee."

Bible School Department.

The plan for local Bible school as suggested by Bro. Robison is a good one, and the fund that was started by the Home Department was for the purpose of sending out as many workers in the field as the fund would support. It was hoped that there would be enough money in the treasury to send out at least one worker by Aug. 1, 1907.

It is the doing and not the dreaming that counts in Bible School work. We need to wake up and catch up, and have money in the Treasury to supply the demand in this field of work. Instead of a small sum, let us have enough in the Treasury by July to push the work forward.

In order that the work already begun may not become demoralized because of lack of united effort, I would suggest that instead of discussing through the paper the various opinions as to how the work should be conducted, each person who is interested submit a carefully outlined plan, to be considered at the annual meeting of the Bible School Association. Not only this, but send immediately to Sister Woodward, treasurer of the Bible School Association, what you can to meet the demands in this field of work.

The first three days of the annual meeting will be a convention of workers. The date will be announced later. This makes it possible to meet in Conference and decide upon a definite plan of work for the coming year. What we need is system in our work. If the truth Jesus taught, that "a house divided against itself cannot stand," had been heeded in the past, the cause would not have suffered as it has for lack of financial and moral support. We need have no fear of what the result will be when a body of workers is well organized.

Without unity of action among our people in the several States there will always be demoralization, and inactivity, a lack of unity of faith as well as of action. For example, in Sunday school work, some are using one kind of literature and some another. This literature comes from various sources, and is published by denominations advocating Sabbath keeping, universal salvation, immortality of the soul and various other doctrines. Now can we wonder that there is so little accomplished in the local Bible School. These schools needs to be provided for and it will take some sacrificing on the part of our people to catch up what we have lost by not giving attention to the needs of our local Bible School work. If the church in general, and the individual members in particular will take the responsibility that they should take in this matter, there will be enough in the treasury before the appointed time for our Association meeting, not only to put workers in the field, but to provide suitable literature for the coming year.

The matter of graded work has been noted in the paper the past year. The principles of gradation are clearly defined.

1. The teaching must go step by step, from the scholar's level.

2. We must connect each step with the one preceding.

3. We must adapt the lesson to the grade, or in other words, we must adapt the lesson to the scholar.

It is important that our workers come together to systematize our work and plan for better work. The Institute work will follow our workers' Conference and all our workers should plan to be present and take part in this gospel work. Our workers are so few and our members so scattered that it is necessary to unite our efforts and meet these conditions the best we can. So in devising a plan for needs, we must, being few in numbers and isolated, plan for the good of all.

Where financial support must be enlisted from isolated ones, they should have a part in the work and feel that it is a united effort in a united church for the good of all, not only where churches are already established but to help them in establishing the truth in their own communities. The plan for the Home Department will meet this need if we can supply literature suitable for this purpose.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

Dear ones of the Home Circle:

We have had a fine review of the book of Genesis by Sister Reed. We hope she will assist all she can in keeping up the Home Department study, and give us notes on oriental manners and customs, and information regarding recent discoveries.

LESSON FOR SUNDAY MAY 5.

Joseph, the wise ruler in Egypt. Gen. xlviii. 38-49.

Golden text. If any of you lack wisdom let him ask of God. Jas. i. 5.

Last Sunday's lesson closed with Joseph asking the butler and baker to tell him their dreams. They did, and he gave the true interpretation—meaning—as God revealed it to him. There is a God in heaven that revealeth secrets. Dan. ii. 28.

The explanation of the dreams was, the baker was to be hanged, and the butler restored to his place. Joseph asked the butler to remember him to Pharaoh, the butler forgot Joseph.

Two years after Pharaoh dreamed, his dreams impressed and troubled him, none of his wise men could explain them. Just then the butler remembered Joseph, and told the king. Joseph was brought. Pharaoh asked him if he could tell the meaning of dreams. He said he could not, but God could and would. The dreams were told and explained—interpreted—to the full satisfaction of Pharaoh. There were to be seven years of plenty followed by seven years of famine—scarcity. Joseph said, this is true. God has said so, it will come to pass. He then gave Pharaoh some advice about saving the grain—as much as possible—during the years of abundance, that there might be enough for the years of dearth. His advice was considered good.

Lesson text verse 38, Pharaoh consulted his servants, none could be found equal to Joseph, none that had the Spirit of God, none who knew, and were known by the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

39. Pharaoh confessed that Joseph's God made him wiser than any in his kingdom.

40. And at once placed him in authority over all his household—servants and officers of any and all ranks, next to Pharaoh himself.

41. Also over all the land and over everything on it or in connection with it. He would see that the land was properly cultivated, and the seed sown that would produce the kind of grain best suited for food during the long famine. The seven years of dearth would seem many times longer than the seven years of plenty.

42. An engraved ring to stamp or impress seal orders. The writing which is written in the king's name, and sealed with the king's ring, may no man reverse. Esther viii. 8.

Joseph was dressed and decorated to suit his position as supreme ruler over Egypt. Under similar circumstances Daniel was dressed and made third ruler in Babylon. Dan. v. 29.

43. Joseph was introduced to the public in a royal procession, riding next to the king, and proclaimed governor of Egypt.

44. I am Pharaoh—my authority and power in Egypt is absolute—beyond any question—so have I made yours.

There are many instances of men being raised from poverty to power, some by patient perseverance, some by a change of circumstance, but it is open to strong doubt if there ever was a case just equal to that of Joseph, from a slave in prison to ruler in a great and powerful kingdom.

The Lord maketh poor, and maketh rich, he bringeth low, and lifteth up, he raises the poor and the beggar, and sets them among princes. 1 Sam. ii. 7, 8.

King David
eph. The king sent and
Joseph—made him lord and control his princes, and teach senators wisdom. Psa. cv. 20 22.

Solomon says of wisdom, "By me kings reign, and princes decree justice. Prov. viii. 15."

It is a sad reflection on our present boasted civilization, education and cultivation that there are thousands of laws enacted to secure justice, to control and punish crime, and hundreds more are being added every year by our rulers. Here we call attention to the golden text, which says, ask wisdom of God. If from the book of Deuteronomy alone our rulers would seek out the common laws governing nothing of the religion they would be able to combine enough wisdom in a very small book to rule any or every nation, and create a semi-paradise, if said laws were applied and observed.

He that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of God. 2 Sam. xxiii. 3. God, by the Holy Spirit, moved David, 2 Pet. i. 21, to speak this simple, yet definite command or charge. David himself worked under this rule, and he left his kingdom to his son Solomon, so perfectly organized—in such complete order that there has never been a kingdom since equal to it. By a deep, conscientious respect for God's will—instructions—Joseph became the wisest ruler of all the rulers in Egypt. Considerable has been written about Joseph as a type or figure of Christ, in some points there is a similarity, but it is not a Bible theme.

45. There are various translations of Joseph's name. Bread provider or life preserver come as near as any. According to some accounts the priest of On was a man of great authority.

Joseph made himself acquainted with the country. Like all of God's faithful ones, he must know for himself.

46. Joseph had been about thirteen years in Egypt, and most of that time in the house of a ruler, so he knew the inner and upper life of the Egyptians.

47. The earth brought forth—the Lord blessed the land. Lev. xxv. 21.

48, 49. Joseph gathered the food—corn, grain—most likely wheat—the word corn is used for all cereals. He began keeping count, but the abundance was such, counting was given up.

When the Lord Jesus is ruler, there will be such a blessing there will not be room enough. Mal. iii. 10. The greatest blessing will be life for evermore. Psa. cxxxiii. 3.

P. REILL.

The Hour of Judgment.

It is worthy of note that in the prophetic hour to come the presence of the one body is recognized. The various changes or aspects that transpire under the first four seals, and also under the seven vials, the recognition of the saints, the one body glorified, the living sanctuary as actually present is clearly stated. It will not do to overlook this fact, as it materially helps us to understand some things revealed that cannot otherwise be clearly apprehended.

In my last the sealing of the 144,000 was under consideration as the preparatory work in establishing the kingdom of God among men and the further execution of the divine purpose, in making manifest the knowledge and the sovereign authority of Israel's God among the nations.

I notice briefly the following items concerning the sealed ones.

1. As virgins not defiled with women, that is they have not affiliated with the apocalyptic women, having been kept separate from the old mother and all her daughters and granddaughters. It can hardly be affirmed of Gentiles that they are free from the spiritual wickedness of the apostasy, especially Gentile Christendom.

2. They are the firstfruits unto God and unto the Lamb; that is they are the firstfruits of a national harvest that is to follow.

3. They sing a song peculiar to themselves and exclusively their own, for no others are permitted to learn that song but the 144,000.

4. They sing in the presence of the one body indicating that they are a distinct and separate company from the saints. In view of these facts it cannot be truthfully affirmed that the 144,000 symbolize the saints in Christ of this and previous ages.

The great and bountiful harvest that comes as the after fruit, is de great multi ith a loud
vation to our God who sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb." Rev. vii. 9-10. The reader will perceive that here again is another and distinct company, clothed in robes of white, and bearing palms of victory in their hands. This incoming multitude from all nations, kindreds and tongues can be considered by the student more in detail with profit.

1. They serve God day and night in his temple, they are not as yet in the innermost parts of the temple but perform a service pertaining thereto. Their place and employment is thus especially expressed in words.

2. They are washed, cleansed, justified, and come out of great tribulation. Tribulation really is the lot of all, who enter the service of Christ. Paul is careful to inform us, that it is "through much tribulation that we enter the kingdom of God," and again "all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." 2 Tim. iii. 12. The tribulations of the godly in this age are "light afflictions" indeed as compared with what will transpire in the hour of judgment. If they persecute you in one city flee ye to another, Says Jesus, by this means martyrdom was often avoided, but in the hour to come there is apparently no city of refuge—in fact no middle ground of neutrality and safety. I reserve for another article the further consideration of the trying ordeal of the future hour.

4. They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more, neither shall the sun light on them nor any heat." This language is descriptive of the suffering they endured in their loyalty to the Lamb. Hunger and thirst is a condition of "indescribable distress." Esau when he felt the pangs of hunger preferred to part with his birth right, rather than to endure the torture of an empty stomach. Doubtless there have been many Esaus since, who would or have forfeited their right or title to plenty, if they had not yielded to the insatiable cravings of appetites. The heat of the sun, the scorching fire of imperial authority shall no longer afflict them with persecution, and torment their life with the heat of its fiery indignation, "For the Lamb who is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters, and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes." When they shall have quenched their thirst at the living fountains, their tears will cease, for the cause thereof will have been wiped out of existence forever. The trial of their faith is ended, their tribulation is past, former things are passing away, and the hour of trial, makes the store of good things in reserve taste all the sweeter.

We sometimes think our lot is a hard one, when in reality we have no experimental knowledge of suffering for the truth's sake. We may be spoken evil of, and our society shunned, and our convictions of truth ridiculed, but all this breaks no bones, nor does it inflict any bodily injury. There is no danger of the stake, or of the prison or even the denial of civil and religious liberty. We are permitted to proclaim the truth when and where we please, and the law of the land protects us in the exercise of this liberty, but this condition of things has not always prevailed, nor will it always continue. Our present heritage is an exceedingly favorable for the study of the Word and the growth of knowledge in things divine, that there is great danger of neglecting the opportunities of the hour, through the enticing influences—yea, the enervating effects of the prosperous times. It is the right use of our advantages, that demands vigilance upon our part, if the favors we enjoy shall profit us in the end. Shall we loiter along the way, in a dilly dally fashion (like a boy chasing a butterfly until it is too late to mend? If so future regrets remember will not compensate us for what we have lost. Gird up thy loins and press forward.

Evangelizing on the Pacific Coast.

On March 27, I went from Tustin to Los Angeles and enquired of Brother and Sister Knox about the prospect of finding a hall to hold meeting on Sunday. Brother Knox telephoned to Broadway for me and learned that balls.

"And after this I bal

The lady who rented me the hall donated $1.00 of the amount and I took the responsibility of advancing $3.00. I stayed over night at Brother Kimballs again and went on the 29th to the beautiful city of Pasadena. I spent the forenoon looking at this nicest of towns and the surrounding country, and went to Sister Huntoons and took dinner. In the afternoon young Brother and Sister Kunkle insisted on securing a conveyance and taking me on the most beautiful drive of my life, and as pretty as can be had on earth. I remained that night at Sister Huntoons.

On the 30th I returned to Los Angeles and out to Brother L. V. J. Kimball's home in South Pasadena. As his home is situated a few steps from the ostrich farm I enjoyed an hour looking at those wonderful kings of birds of monstrous size and queer habits. I was pleased in meeting with Brother Kimball, and impressed with his interest in his study of prophecy, which he understands to be fulfilled in events yet future, in literal days, and as pertaining to literal Babylon, to be soon fulfilled in Mohammedism instead of having been fulfilled in by gone years under Catholics; without professing ability to reject his method of interpretation by conclusive evidence, or to accept it by sufficient evidence, I must say that light must be gained by investigation, and brethren should not shut out the light on a subject that requires as careful, historical study as this subject.

On Sunday, the 31st, we assembled at the hall located in the heart of this city of 230,000 inhabitants. Number of attendance at 10:30 A. M. and 2:30 P. M. ranged from 20 to 25, that professedly believe in the kingdom of God, in the age to come.

"The Russellites," as they assailed, held a meeting in another hall in the same building at the same time; from the members of that people residing in this city they probably exceeded us in attendance.

Although I was almost sick I tried to talk at both meetings to influence the brethren to combine and increase their strength and usefulness in the city and toward each other. If all had come that profess to believe in the Age to Come views, we should have had between 30 and 40 in attendance; but for reasons we did not learn many that come obeyed did not come. Perhaps two-thirds of those present lived outside the city limits.

Among those that took an active part in conferring concerning holding regular meetings, were Brethren Kimball, Dwiggins, Hatch, Stella, Wagoner, Smith and Knox. A committee was selected at 10:30, to act on the question of a permanent place and time of meetings, and report at 2:30, with the object of bringing believers into active working order. At the appointed hour they reported favorable to securing a hall and meeting every two weeks and either having a sermon from Brother Dwiggins or Brother Kimball or others, or having Social meeting of brethren. It was decided that I should remain in the city, over another week and should give discourses in the same hall at 10:30, and 2:30 April 7th.

Immediately after this date I shall hope to start north and if the brethren can arrange meetings to meet the people, in the order given: at Tipton, Tulare and Oleander, and at other places in California as may be planned with brethren interested in having meetings. I should state that at these meetings the brethren devised a plan to secure money to pay future and present rent for the hall and appointed Brother B. W. Wagoner committeeman in charge for two months, but did not accomplish a permanent organization.

For reasons of which I am ignorant the brethren who have moved to this city from Plymouth, Ind., did not get to these meetings. They were represented alone by Brother Clarence Corbaley, grandson of our esteemed Bro. Richard Corbaley, now deceased, and with whom in past years I have done considerable evangelizing. I am afraid they are discouraged with the prospect of getting together a people who are harmonious in their views. Eighteen years of evangelizing has convinced me that if we look for absolute perfection in either unity of doctrine or practice, we will only meet disappointment and failure. The extremes in this city along the lines held by the Age to Come people are represented by bodies (organized I believe) and known as Christadelphians, also as ilitas. They, as my readers are ffer in many points to the taken by these people. If we are alr that these extremes may lead us to errors that may, on either hand be increased by leading us to greater extremes we are as well guarded in this city against this danger as in any locality that we can find to do organized work. Perhaps the facts that these two bodies are organized in the city and meet in halls in the same building, should prove a benefit to a church here in protecting our organization against the "theories" entertained and made prominent by these bodies which are so alike and yet so dissimilar, because those holding with the Christadelphians will unite with them, and those adhering Russellism will go there as they should. But some of us can go to neither extreme.

Then let us build up the Church of God in Los Angeles. To do a successful work in this we must organize. We must have a basis of truth to unite on. Let it be, Life through Christ in the Kingdom of God, with the bonds of charity and faithfulness.

Strong churches exist in this city of Seventh Day Adventists and Advent Christians. So the doctrine of Conditional Immortality is well represented. Let us seek for glory, honor and immortality.

W. L. SKEELS.

To the Household of Faith, greeting:

While tarrying within this vale of tears, and while still pressing toward the mark for the Prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus, we are prone to ask: Why have we been so signally tried? Why have we been led through a pathway of thorns so grievous? Each time we are sent to the Word. From it we are assured that the Lord still loves us. Knowing that his ways are above our ways, I am trying to exercise patience; believing that in the end I shall receive the Reward, if I faint not. As the years of tribulation wane, I am able to say, "Though he slay me yet will I trust in him." Notwithstanding all this, and his assurances of mercy and of love to comfort and to sustain through these years of pain and helplessness, I am constrained to still ask for sufficient strength to rise and to walk, and, too, that the almost unendurable pain may be taken away. May I not ask that you plead my cause at the throne of grace? That my faith may endure to the end; and, that the Lord's coming be not delayed I earnestly pray.

Obituary.

Died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. C. Graham, in the town of Scammon, Kan. Friday, March 29, 1907, at the ripe age of 69 years, 4 months, Mrs. Sophronia A. Evans, of cancer of the stomach. She was a great sufferer.

She was born in Nashville, Tenn. Nov. 23, 1838. Sister Evans was twice married. Her husband left her with three children at his death. She afterward married her first husband's brother, and to them was born eleven children. She lost her second husband a long time ago, and only seven children are left, who with several grandchildren are left to mourn.

She was baptized into the all saving name in 1872, and died in the blessed hope of the soon coming of the Lord, to restore all things, which God hath spoken by all the holy prophets since the world began.

The funeral services were conducted by Uncle John Foore of Parsons, Kan., after which she was laid to rest.

JOHN FOORE.

Dear Restitution:

Brother Seneca Goodman died near Laverne, Woodard Co., Okla., of dropsy of the heart, Oct. 5, 1906.

He was born in 1840. He heard the blessed truths of the coming of the Lord and the sleep of the dead in 1860, proclaimed by the 1st Advents. In 1867 he was married to Esther Pulver, of New York State. Seven children were born to them, three of which are dead.

They moved to Iowa and lived there 26 years, and then came to Oklahoma in 1890.

His wife helped him with his preaching, and they went everywhere proclaiming these grand truths. His wife and daughter, Mrs. Shellenbarger united with the Church of God at Laverne, Okla., where the funeral was preached by Elder Owens, Brother Goodman was very zealous and cautioned them strictly to not have any errors over his dead body. He was a close Bible student. His wife still preaches and aims to devote her life to this work.

Great Truths.

Great truths are greatly won. Not found by chance,
Nor waited on the breath of summer-dream;
But grasped in the great struggle of the soul,
Hard-buffeting with adverse wind and stream.

Not in the general mart, 'mid corn and wine;
Not in the merchandise of gold and gems;
Not in the world's gay hall of midnight mirth,
Not 'mid the hours of regal diadems;

But in the day of conflict, fear, and grief,
When the strong hand of God, put forth in might,
Ploughs up the subsoil of the stagnant heart,
And brings the imprisoned truth-seed to the light.

Wrung from the troubled spirit, in hard hours
Of weakness, solitude, perchance of pain,
Truth springs, like harvest, from the well-ploughed field,
And the soul feels it has not wept in vain.

The Man Whom Jesus Sent Away.

One man Christ turned away; one prayer of such reasonableness that we all should pray it, he refused. And to our human sight the prayer was not only reasonable, but it appears also to ask a necessary thing. The demoniac of Gadara sees the man who has delivered him entering a boat to go away across the water, and he begs the privilege of accompanying his deliverer. This privilege Christ denies; and the denial is not based on any such fact as that the saved man's motives were frivolous curiosity, or momentary excitement, or baser ambitions. There is not the least doubt that this nameless convert was sincerely anxious to be with Christ. He admired the power and graciousness of Jesus. He was grateful for deliverance in extreme helplessness. His admiration moved him to desire closer and elevating contact with Jesus. His gratitude prompted him to serve as a Master the Savior whose voice had broken his fetters. More important than all else was the redeemed man's terror of the past and apprehensions for the future. The living death from which he had been rescued must have made him shrink from living away from the sweet and healing presence of the Master. He had been, too, the innocent occasion of worldly loss to the owners of the swine, whom his devils had carried into the sea; and he may have feared to live among men who valued their pigs more than a neighbor's soul. It seemed, therefore, reasonable that he should be taken into the departing boat, allowed to live in the blessed sunshine of Christ's nature, permitted to escape from a worldly and angered community. But Christ refused this reasonable request, and sailed away, leaving his latest convert alone in that unsympathizing and mercenary world.

Why? Because there was work for the delivered man to do there in Gadara. The order is imperative, "Go home to thy friends." There is alleviation of the sentence in its first words. Not all Gadara is incensed against him. His friends have loved him and tried to help him. They bound him for his own sake, when that became necessary. There would be welcome for him at home. The converted man is always alive to the sweetness of home ties; the love that he feels toward God strengthens every tie of kindred or affection. If he could not go with Christ, he would pray, "Let me go home." But he was to go home, to be a living sermon and an unimpeachable witness for Christ. They knew at home what he had been; his changed nature they of all men would feel most. Across the water, as a stranger, the story of his malady would seem but a fable. At home it had been an awful and agonizing reality. Christ did not lead about with him a train of "his cures." He left them where he found them, where their past was known, where there recovery would be realized. But he is not only to stay at home. He is to tell the story of the Divine compassion that saved him. They might have inferred that some wonderful doctor had cured him; it is his business to tell just how it was that he was delivered and redeemed, and to claim the honor of it for the divine compassion. Here, then, was a work which no other man in Gadara could do. This work Christ gently lays on the young convert, and then sails away. The sweet face is gone, and the poor man will see it no more in this world except as a faithful memory shall reproduce the grave and tender lines of it in his soul. But he is left with the next best thing to Christ's personal presence; he is left thoughts. And ever as he [illegible] work there will grow in him a feeling of confidence that Christ gave him something better than he asked. As a companion of Jesus he might have had pleasure; as a witness for Jesus at the spot where his testimony would win men to Christ's cause, he will see that he is in a post of honor. Somehow he will keep, there in Gadara, the Master whose business calls him to other scenes. Even as he walks men will say, "This is the man Christ saved." Even as he tells his story they will believe it, because they know what he was before Christ found him.

Is it necessary to dwell on the parallel of our own life? We also have been refused when we wanted to find a life alone with Jesus. We also have watched a departing boat bearing away Christ, as it seemed to us, and sending us back to the homes where we had sinned. An ascetic desire springs with every conversion. To be alone with Jesus; to live out of the cold and worldly circle of the old life; to escape into some form of perpetual hymn and sacrifice; to be ever by the smoking altar, and to breathe only the incense of our holy censers swung in the rapturous air of our conversion. Who has not felt that? But Christ has refused us all. Not even Mary could forever sit at his feet. To-morrow he will be away on itinerants of love. Not one of us but must go home to our friends and tell the story of the divine compassion. That world where we sinned is the world where we can speak by life and lip with power. Our Gadara we may make a better than the temple of meditative retirement. The sacrifice we make of selfish piety may be rewarded by the incense that rises from useful lives—a sweet savor even to ourselves, as well as to our Master. He did not all go away in the boat; he left part of himself in Gadara. The man who may have wept to see the last of the lessening sail drowned in the blue wave and sky will keep Christ living on that inhospitable shore. So, too, the convert who imitates the Gadarene demoniac as he follows the command of Christ will take Christ and keep Christ in the inhospitable atmosphere of the world to which, by living and by speaking, he keeps repeating the story of divine compassion.—Christian Advocate.

Dear Brother Underwood:

I wish to report to THE RESTITUTION the work that has been done at this place, Camden, Ill., by Bro. S. J. Lindsay. He has just left us after holding a series of meetings lasting twelve nights and added three to our number, Sister Lelah Peterson, Sister Ida Robins, and Brother Artie Chapman, having put on the saving name by being buried in baptism.

Our class now numbers sixteen, nearly all of whom have been baptized within the last year.

We have all been strengthened by the weekly visits of THE RESTITUTION, the comments on the Sunday School Lesson and the Pine Woods Bible Class being very helpful, and especially the Question Box, having found some of the things discussed that we wished to know.

Our Helping Fund

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

WHEN you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill, we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and seal that.

[illegible] his work [illegible]
The great concern [illegible] should be, What have I done upon which to expect reward? If you should judge yourself, what would your judgment be?

Our talents differ, and each one will be held accountable for the use of such talent, whatever that may be. If you have only one, use that.

Some one says, what can I do? Why you can circulate literature teaching the truth if nothing else. There is no one but who can do that. Will that do any good? Oh, yes. Let me tell you something. Some people have bought several copies of "Pine Woods Bible Class" and lending them to their friends and neighbors. It being easy and attractive reading, most people will read it. It is bearing fruit already. I have just been told of a man who had become discouraged. He had listened to preachers of different denominations, and found they contradicted each other. He began to drift into infidelity, when a Brother put a copy of Pine Woods Bible Class into his hands. Now in place of infidelity, he is rejoicing in new found light. It would take too much space to tell of other cases. Try this work, and add some stars to your crown.

The Students Text Book is already an assured success, and will be printed after I get home from this present trip.

I desire that all who want it, to send in their names in advance, that I may know how many to print. All you order now, you will be sure to get when printed. The price will be fifty cents.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

Syriac New Testament.

A new edition of Murdock's Translation of the Syriac New Testament has just been issued by a Boston publishing house, and we have arranged to supply our readers with the work. The regular price is $2.50, and every Bible student should own this book. It is bound in half leather, and lies open in the hand when being used. The printing is clear and plain and the paper excellent. We have been arranged with the publishers that we can supply this book for a limited time only at a reduced price, which will enable all who wish this valuable aid to the study of God's Word to possess it. We can offer it now at $2.00 post paid. All who wish to avail themselves of this low rate should do so at once.

BROTHER D. C. Robison has issued a small 16-page tract on the subject "Man is Mortal." It is of convenient size to enclose in an envelop, and can be had for 2 cents each, or 15 cents for 12, or $1.50 for 100 copies. Bro. Robison is so well known as a clear and lucid writer that no words that we can pen would commend his work, more than will the bare announcement of his name. If you are in the mood to do a little missionary work send to Brother Robison at 596 So. Limestone St. Springfield, O. and get a supply of these tracts.

A New Tract.

The Great Divine Healer vs Latter-Day Healers, by Uncle John Foore.

A Tract for the last days. Should be read by every thinking Christian.

Paul 2 Tim. iii. 13. "But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived."

Matt. vii. 21. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works. And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

Brethren, these tracts have gone into many families, both to brethren and people of other denominations, a few infidels, and one Christian Scientist, and all seem to be well pleased with it, but only a few of the brethren have sent to me any help in the way of paying for the tracts, and tracts are very expensive. We are anxious to have more published on different subjects. Please help to send these Pearls out among the [illegible]

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk; money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When sending a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's benefficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. My Bible and I.

We've travelled together, my Bible and I,
Thro' all kinds of weather, with sunshine and sigh!
In sorrow or sunshine, in tempest or calm;
Thy friendship unchanging, my hope and my psalm.

We've travelled together, my Bible and I,
When life had grown weary and death drew was nigh!
But all thro' the darkness of mist or of wrong
I found there a solace, a prayer, or a song.

So now, who shall part us, my Bible and I?
Shall "isms" or "schisms," or "new lights" who try?
Shall shadows for substances, or stone for good bread,
Supplant thy sound wisdom, give folly instead?

Ah, no! my dear Bible, exponent of light!
Thou Sword of the Spirit, put error to flight:
And still through life's journey, until my last sigh,
We'll travel together, my Bible and I.

Some Evidences that the Bible is True.

1 Peter iii. 15, "Be ye ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason for the hope that is within you."

You have a hope. That hope is a hope of an existence beyond this present life. Of that hope it is not my intention to bring in question at this time. But only, is your hope well grounded? It must be based on the Bible as that is the only book or Word that teaches of a future life. Is the Bible what it represents itself to be? A revelation of the Creator or God, to the created or man? Is the Bible story true? What evidence have you that it is? Should one ask, can you tell?

Just a few thoughts occur to me. There are two classes of evidence. First, evidence from without the Bible. History that coincides with what the Word says; and second, the indisputable evidence of the Word. Evidence is being unearthed through Egypt of the residence there of the children of Israel.

There is nowhere extant such a consecutive history of creation as is given in a few words in the 1st chapter of Genesis. Details are lacking, yet modern science in trying to tell by all the light that can be gathered from all the centuries, agree with this simple recital to this extent. 1st, the heavens and earth were first created; that it must have been in a nebulous form; that is, to quote the Scripture, "without form and void." 2nd, a separation between the earth and sun and other planets. 3rd, the dividing of the land from the water. 4th, the earth commenced to have vegetation before fish or animals appear. Then the fish appeared, afterwards the fowl, then the animals, every creeping thing and all kinds of cattle and beast; and last the man appears. All science, I say, teaches that in exactly this order every thing must have been created. What the length of each period termed a day, was, we do not know.

In the seventh chapter of Genesis, we have a little more extended story of the flood. And while several so-called Bibles, make reference to a flood, and it is a tradition with nearly every people, yet here in simple language is by far the most explicit account we have of the great event that has left its traces on every country on the face of the earth. An event that only can account for the great erosions and misplacement of rocks and the wearing of granite boulders until they are rounded like marbles and scattered all over the land, which is of much more recent geological formation.

That man lived before the flood, and survived it, is proven from the lapse of time that would be necessary to create man from the lower order of beings that naturally would have survived, being many times greater than the actual time that has elapsed since the flood.

The book of Jonah is probably the

VOLUME LVI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAY 1, 1907. NUMBER 17.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief in the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

burnt of the whole books to believe. This is the record of God's command to Jonah to go to the city of Nineveh and tell them that their city would be destroyed. For many years, possibly centuries, atheists and unbelievers pointed out that there never was such a city as Nineveh. And that the whole story was false. In 1840 an explorer by the name of Layard, discovered the ancient site, and up to 1859 excavated a considerable part of the city, and in Cuniform writing, found the very names of the kings spoken of in holy writ, and also some of the names of their Jewish contemporaries, thus confounding the unbelievers. Much more on this same line can be written, but we now wish to refer to much better evidence that is contained in the Word itself.

1. There was no pecuniary reward to any of the writers of Holy Scripture; but on the contrary, they were persecuted and often killed. So much so, that Stephen at the time when they stoned him, said, Acts vii. 52, "Which of the Prophets have not your fathers persecuted," and "They have slain them that showed before, the coming of the Just One." And Paul quotes, from first Kings, when he says, Rom. xi. 3, "Lord they have killed thy prophets and digged down thy altars." The argument in this is simply, they the prophets, had very strong motives for writing that which profitted them nothing in this life, but persecution. We think the best evidence that they wrote for the reason that they give for writing, viz., because, "Thus said the Lord God."

2. The remarkable harmony in what was written, even though centuries may have rolled between the dates, and though written by men of different stations in life, in different ages and conditions, yet all agree, and the writings come together and make a perfect whole. So much so, that we think it the best of evidence that none but an infinite mind could possibly have dictated the writings.

One of the most remarkable prophecies is found in Dan. ii. 29 to 45, inclusive. To get the full connection, read the whole chapter. This image's head was of fine gold. His breast and his arms of silver, his belly and his thighs of brass, his legs of iron, his feet part of iron and part of clay, (39 and 33). Now opens the most sublime chapter of the world's history. Eight short chapters of the inspired record tell the whole story. 37th verse, "Thou, oh King, art a King of kings, for the God of heaven hath given thee a kingdom, power, strength and glory." 38, "Thou art this head of gold." 39, "And after thee shall arise another kingdom inferior to thee, and another kingdom of brass, which shall bear rule all over the earth. And the fourth kingdom shall be as strong as iron, the feet and toes are as iron mixed with miry clay." A history of the world's principal kingdoms from that date on down past our times. How has history borne out the prophecy? Let us see.

The Babylonian kingdom was founded by Belesis, 747 B. C. This ruler is also called in secular history, Nabonassor, and this kingdom arose from the ancient Assyrian Empire, founded by Nimrod, great, great grandson of Noah, which had governed Asia for about 1800 years. Nebuchadnezzar added to his kingdom the provinces of Phoenecia, Asia Minor, Egypt, Syria and Palestine. These, with the ancient Babylonians, embraced all of the known world of any national influence or power.

Babylon became connected with the people of God, or the Jews, by the capture of Manasses, king of Judea, about 677 B. C. and hence comes into prophecy at that time. It was the head of gold. The character of this empire is indicated by the head of gold. It is a golden kingdom of a golden age. Babylon, its metropolis, towered to a height never reached by any of its later rivals.

Situated in the garden of the east, laid out in a perfect square, sixty miles in circumference, 15 miles on each side, surrounded by a wall 350 feet high and 87 feet thick, with a most around it of equal cubic capacity. What man could have known there by as its walls. Divided into 676 squares, each 2½ miles in circumference by six 50 streets each 150 feet in width, crossing each other at right angles. Its 625 square miles laid out in luxuriant pleasure gardens and grounds, interspersed with magnificent dwellings. 60 miles of outer wall and 30 miles of river wall through it center. Its 150 gates of solid brass, its hanging gardens, rising terrace above terrace, till they equalled the height of the walls themselves. Its Temple of Belus, 3 miles in circumference, its royal palaces, one on either side of the river Euphrates, with its magnificent tunnel under both rivers and walls connecting the two palaces. Hours might be spent in describing its magnificence. Enough is said so one can easily see how it was termed the head of gold. It was, and is, recognized by most historians to be the first universal empire.

The next verse shows it was the kingdom more than the man that was referred to. Verse 39, "After thee shall arise another kingdom inferior to thee and another third kingdom of brass, which shall bear rule over the earth."

Of the fall of this wonderful city, all are familiar. How the Medes dug a huge trench and drew off much of the water of the river Euphrates, running it around the city. How, in their drunken revelry, the 25 gates on either side through the city were left open. How the soldiers waded under the city's walls then gained the streets and palaces. And how, when the Prophet Daniel, was reading the writing on the wall, "Mene, Mene, Tekle Upharsin," "Thou art weighed in the balance and found wanting," the soldiers were striding down the guards and captured the city.

Thus was the second universal kingdom established on the earth. The Medo-Persian, the silver of the arms and shoulders, and a little more remarkable is the fact that the kingdom had two limbs or arms. One the Medes and the other the Persians.

And another third kingdom of brass shall bear rule over all the earth. On the field of Arabella, Alexander decisively defeated the forces of the last Persian monarch, and was acknowledged the king of all the earth. Thus was the Persian kingdom destroyed and the Grecian kingdom set up. A few years later Alexander died in a drunken spree, only 33 years old.

There has never been but one other universal empire. And that was the Roman Empire. The historian Gibbon may have had this prophecy in mind when he wrote, "The arms of the republic sometimes vanquished in battle, always victorious in war, advanced with rapid steps to the Euphrates, Danube, the Rhine and the ocean, and the image of gold or silver or brass, that might serve to represent the nations or their kings were successively broken by the iron monarchy of Rome." He again adds, "The empire of Rome filled the world," and when that empire fell into the hands of a single person, the world became a safe and dreary prison for its enemies. To resist was fatal. To fly was impossible. Verses 41 and 42 tells that the kingdom was partly strong as iron, yet will be partly weak as miry clay. Rome was divided into ten smaller kingdoms, and although it has been tried to unite those kingdoms, notably by Napoleon, yet it never was, nor can be done. The royal families intermarry. It is a set principle of royalty, yet they will not cleave one to another, even as iron will not cleave to the miry clay. The next two verses tell of the grandest, most sublime event that the world has ever known. It is not my purpose at this time to write of that as it is not yet fulfilled. But as all the rest has been, can you doubt for a moment the balance will be? Could man or any set of men have written as accurate a history, telling so much in so few words?

Our belief or disbelief is formed by the evidence, whether we acknowledge it or not. Take it to your own [illegible]. What think ye? Is it true? [illegible] cannot understand [illegible] rule not on one animal. Not on the man alone; nor on the colt alone, but on both. Just notice the reading. Would man devise this thing? If so, for what cause?

Psa. cviii. 22, "The stone which the builders rejected is become the head-stone of the corner."

23, This is the Lord's doings. It is marvelous in our sight."

Also Isa. xxviii. 16, "Therefore, thus said the Lord, Thy in Zion for a foundation. A stone, a tried stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundation. He that believeth shall not make haste."

Matt. xxi. 42, "Jesus said unto them, Did you never read in the Scriptures, The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner. This is the Lord's doings, and it is marvelous in our eyes."

43, "Therefore say I unto you, the kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof."

Psa. lxix. 21, "They gave me also gall for my meat, and in my thirst they gave me vinegar to drink."

Matt. xxvii. 34, "They gave him vinegar to drink mingled with gall."

Psa. xxii. 18, "They parted my garments amongst them and cast lots upon my vesture."

Mark xv. 24, "And when they had crucified him, they parted his garments, casting lots upon them, what every man should take."

THE PASSOVER LAMB A TYPE.

Ex. xii. 46, "Neither shall ye break a bone thereof."

Psa. xxxiv. 20, "He keepeth all his bones, not one of them was broken." John xix. 33, "But when they came to Jesus, they saw that he was dead already. They broke not his bones."

1 Cor. v. 7, "For even Christ, our passover, is sacrificed for us."

"He was oppressed and afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth. He is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he opened not his mouth."

9, "And he made his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death."

It is difficult for me to see how any one can read the Prophecies of his death and burial, then read the simple record of it all, by so many witnesses, without faith and no abiding belief that is indeed the Word of the living God. The apostle Peter said, speaking of the vision on the mountain, and hearing the voice:—

Peter ii. 19, "We have a more sure Word of prophecy whereunto ye do well to take heed as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts."

HIS RESURRECTION FORETOLD.

Psa. xvi. 10, "For thou wilt not leave my soul in hell, neither wilt thou suffer thine holy One to see corruption." Isa. xxv. 8, "He will swallow up death in victory, etc."

Psa. xlix. 15, "But God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave, for he shall receive me."

The resurrection in Mark xvi., Luke xxiv., John xx. and 1 Cor. xv.

One of the very strongest factors or causes that appeal to one to believe is this fact. All shades of religious belief, Christian, Jew, Mahommedan, Pantheist, or what not, all agree that Jesus of Nazareth was the highest type of man of which we have any record. He sought not to further his own selfish ends. His entire teaching and the life he lived was unselfish, and in his mouth was no guile. He either was what he represents himself to be, or he is the exact reverse of all this and was an hypocrite, and a deceiver of the greatest magnitude. Which do you believe? He says, "Search ye the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they that teach of me." Throughout all his ministry, he taught that the Scriptures were true, and on several occasions he opened the understanding of his followers that they might comprehend them. Had they not been true, he would not have taught them.

You believe that Jesus was just, true and wise. Is it not therefore [illegible] to believe what he says and taught, then to say or think, or believe that what the great Master taught was not worthy of all credence and belief?

EUGENE C. WEAVER.

At the Breaking of Bread.

PSALM I. 7.

The Lord is good, a stronghold in the day of trouble; and he knoweth them that trust in him. And again Esaias saith, There shall be a root of Jesse, and he that shall rise to reign over the Gentiles, in him shall the Gentiles trust. And the disciples were astonished at his words. But Jesus answered again and said unto them, Children, how hard is it for them that trust in riches to enter into the kingdom of God. Therefore we both labor and suffer reproach, because we trust in the living God, who is the Savior of all men especially of those that believe. God is my salvation; I will trust, and not be afraid; for the Lord Jehovah is my strength and my song; he also is become my salvation. Therefore with joy shall we draw water out of the wells of salvation. Praise the Lord, call upon his name, declare his doings among the people, make mention that his name is exalted. If we believe God we will trust him as Daniel did. Then the king arose very early in the morning, and went in haste unto the den of lions. And when he came to the den, he cried with a lamentable voice, unto Daniel; and the king spake and said unto Daniel, O Daniel, servant of the living God, is thy God, whom thou servest continually, able to deliver thee from the lions? Then said Daniel unto the king, My God hath sent his angel, and hath shut the lion's mouths, that they have not hurt me: forasmuch as before him innocency was found in me, and also before thee, O king, have I done no hurt. So Daniel was taken up out of the den, and no manner of hurt was found upon him, because he believed in his God.

Obituary.

At the home of Bro. and Sister William Plummer, north of Hillsburg, Ind., occurred the death of their daughter Laura. She was born July 11, 1885; died April 14, 1907; age 21 years, 9 months and 3 days. She leaves father, mother, three brothers, two sisters and a host of friends to mourn her loss. In the home she was obedient, kind and affectionate. In the neighborhood she was loved and respected by all. For a time she was the secretary of the Sunday school. The most important event in her life was embracing the "promises of God" and in obedience to the requirements of the gospel was baptized into Christ. Her sickness covered a period of three and one-half years. In her distress she sought the Bible for consolation and comfort. When no longer able to read from its pages she requested other members of the family to read to her. She was "faithful unto death."

The funeral services were conducted by Bro. George Neff of South Bend. He pointed the sorrowing to the Lamb of God and bid them to look through their tears to the "Dawn of the golden morning." We believe our sister is "asleep in Jesus."

She will sleep, but not forever,
There will be a glorious dawn;
She will rise to live forever
In the resurrection morn.

Editor Restitution:

I would like to say through THE RESTITUTION that Brother Huggins will preach at the Restitution Church, Clark Co., Ill., commencing on Saturday night before 1st Sunday in May, and holding over the Second Sunday. All are cordially invited to attend the meetings.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.
B. J. WOODS.

Remember that gentle words will soften the heart, and in after years, when thou shalt be gone, they will linger around it, and be a shield to guard it against temptation. It is the kind word that memory twines around our hearts and guards them with care.

Plymouth, Indiana, May 1, 1907.

Brother Lindsay of Illinois was with the Argos Church last Sunday.

Sister Woodward of Dutton, Mich., is to visit Chicago the 2nd Sunday in May and preach for some of the brethren on the south side of the city who cannot well attend the other services.

The Plymouth Church had the pleasure of listening to two discourses by Sister Woodward on last Sunday. Her visits are always pleasant and profitable, and arrangements have been made for her, or Brother Woodward, to come to Plymouth once each month the present year.

The Committee appointed to arrange a programme for the Indiana June meeting at Antioch will soon have their work outlined. The speakers who will be in attendance so far as known are Brothers Lindsay, Waggoner, Halstead, Wincenand Neill, which insures a treat for all who attend.

The Committee who have the Bible School work in Indiana in hand, wish us to say that the next session will be held the week following the Antioch Conference, and the place is at Plymouth. The different meetings will be in charge of competent teachers, and all who can arrange to attend will surely be profited.

Is it Right to Join One of the Nominal Churches, in Order to Have a Church Home?

My answer would be emphatically, No! My reason, how can two walk together except they agree? We are admonished to speak the same thing, the blessing being promised on conditions that we are united in our prayers touching the things desired. The brother or sister when well settled in their new home, kneel in the prayer meeting, one prays that his immortal soul may go to heaven at death, the other prays, Thy kingdom come, and at that coming may I be raised at the first resurrection to immortal life. What a jargon in a professed Christian home. Such divisions in a home could be best expressed in the words of the dying Altamont. It would be the severest part of hell to one who loves the truth. I have sometimes noticed those who use this argument, Our people are not doing any thing, to be the very ones who were giving their presence and money to other churches, and leave God's cause to suffer, instead of putting their shoulder to the wheel and helping to move the car, working with a will. God has no use for soldiers who are always looking for places to find fault and afterward desert. But O how much easier it is to go with the throng, the broad way is the frequented route and the majority will go there. Sometimes I suppose we feel like Elijah, the prophet, we are alone and they seek our lives; but beloved, now as then, God has reserved a goodly number, who have not bowed their knees to Baal, he will have his number, and the right kind of material too. I cannot believe it will be those decoyed from duty's post into other churches for a home. How innocent seems the urgent invitation, Come join our church, you have none of your own here, and you need a church home, and we do not care about the little differences in opinion. You think it over, and conclude you can do more good, and perhaps teach some one the gospel truth, join the church, and O how soon your lips are sealed. You are made to understand the first time you approach the sacred truths of Christ's second coming to raise the dead, the establishing of his blessed kingdom, etc., that you must put a padlock on your mouth, and keep still, no opportunity to earnestly contend for the faith, but you must sit mute, dumb before your pretended friends and hear every Sunday the pastor earnestly contend for what you know is not true. What kind of a home would that be, friends? Be careful, God will ask you to give an account of your deeds some day, what will your answer be when asked, what have you done with the talent I gave you? It will make a difference then what you believed and taught. Dress a man in white and set him to [illegible] in a coal yard, [illegible] appearance be in a very [illegible] We cannot help being influ[illegible] our surroundings. Did you ever see an honest democrat go into the republican party for a political home, or a worthy republican unite with the democrat party, whose principles are so antagonistic to each other; one would be as reasonable as the other. I thought Bro. Wm. Wilson had the right of it. Come out of Babylon, my people, then stay out, not desiring like Israel of old to go back to their leaks and onions and garlick; their murmurings and disobedience resulted in their carcasses falling in the wilderness. The sword of the Lord and of Gideon prevailed, may we be true Gideonites, being content with God's plan, and never go back into Babylon for a home. We have in mind a young sister whom we baptized into Christ several years ago. Chicago has been her home for several years, she has had good instruction and understood the gospel, but circumstances threw her into the society of Catholics, and on last Easter Sunday she was sprinkled, took her confirmation name, and went to living with the old Grandmother, the Papal Roman church. God pity her, is all we can say. We do not wish such people any harm. God will take care of them in his own time, but as for me and my house, we are going to journey on with the little flock, the Church of God; and my prayer is, that we may all be satisfied with our dear old home, and not sacrifice it for uncertainties.

LESSON FOR SUNDAY MAY 12.
JOSEPH FORGIVES HIS BROTHERS. GEN. XLV. 1-15; I. 15-21.

Golden Text. "Be ye kind one to another, tender hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you." Eph. iv. 32.

In the last lesson Joseph had gathered grain beyond all calculation. He had two sons. In gratitude to God he named them Manasseh—forgetfulness, and Ephraim—fruitful. The famine began to be felt, the people appealed to Pharoah. He sent them to Joseph. He opened the storehouses and sold grain to all from far and near.

Food began to be scarce in Canaan. Jacob sent his ten sons to Egypt to buy. Joseph knew them, they did not recognize him. Small wonder, he had been about twenty-two years in Egypt. When they sold him he was a youth of no value or promise—in their estimation—now he was—Zaphnath-paaneah one of the great men in the world. He tried them in several ways until he got them in his power, and they at their wits end. Read Genesis chapters 42, 43, 44, one of the most interesting of interesting stories, and has the charm of being true. We now come to the lesson.

Verse 1. The long pent up emotions burst forth, he wanted to be alone with his brothers.

2. His yearning affection found vent in tears, he wept for joy.

3. Getting control of himself he said, I am Joseph, doth my father yet live? First a startling revelation, next an affectionate inquiry for his father who loved him, and whose faith he shared, or of like precious faith, 2 Peter i. 1. His brothers were so astonished—confounded and frightened they could not answer.

4. They had shrank or drawn from him in their fear. He spoke kindly to them, and they were assurred that he meant them no harm.

5. Do not any longer torment yourselves concerning me. God sent me here for a purpose.

6. There are five more years of dearth. It is likely these five years would seem like several times five.

7. God who knows the end as well as the beginning, made provision for faithful Jacob and his son Joseph, others shared in the blessing.

8. God had made him a father—a provider,—a caretaker, and counsellor to Pharoah.

9. Haste, tell the good news to my father. Do not forget to give God the glory, and bid father come to me.

10. You will dwell in Goshen,—the finest pasture land in the South or Lower Egypt.

11. I will take care of you.

12. You see that I have power to do as I promise.

13. Tell my father all, so that he may feel sure, and come back as soon as you can and bring father.

14. Benjamin was his full brother. Gen. xxxv. 24.

15. His affectionate kindness overcame his brothers fears, and they talked freely. Chapter l. 15. Jacob —Israel—had been in Egypt seventeen [illegible] them for w[illegible] seemed to think he was [illegible] ves. Seventeen years of godly [illegible] ple had no effect upon them, the[illegible] like the idols of silver and gold [illegible] but they saw not, ears but they heard not. Psa. cxv. 4-6.

16. They sent a messenger.

17. With their Father's dying request, and their own prompted by their own guilty fears. No wonder he wept tears of sorrow at their utter want of brotherly affection, and their distrust of him after all he had done to them and for them.

18. They all went to him and declared themselves his slaves. This action on their part verified his dreams. Gen. xxxvii. 5-9.

19. Fear not. I will not harm you

20. What you did for evil, God turned to good. We have the full proof before us today—this present time.

21. Now—fear not, I will continue to take care of you just as I have done. They were assured and comforted. The provisions of the golden text were not applied in this lesson, the kindness, tenderheartedness and forgiving was all on one side, not to one another.

Those who understand God's law of forgiveness and from the heart obey it, conforming to it, working it out in their daily lives have a delightful appreciation of God's love and tender mercy, they have an inward joy that the natural man knows nothing of. Notice the title is, Joseph forgives his brothers, but the word forgive is not once used. As a matter of words forgiveness is neither asked by the brothers, nor offered by Joseph, and yet, in all the Bible there is not a more perfect act of forgiveness among men. He forgave from the heart, not from the mouth.

If you forgive you will be forgiven. If you do not forgive you will not be forgiven.—This is the law of forgiveness in words of the Lord Jesus. Matt. vi. 14, 15. And the forgiveness must be from the heart. Matt. xviii. 35, otherwise it would be of no value. Joseph had received God's truth and loved it, and had the promise of salvation. The love of God for him, and his love for God made it no[illegible] easy but a pleasure for him to[illegible] his brothers. There is ful[illegible] Joseph's kindly, fre[illegible] forgiveness was of no [illegible] brothers beyond that they [illegible] safe, they had no interest in the everlasting covenant, Gen. xxii. 17, 18; Heb. xiii. 20, made to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. As they had no interest in this eternal life giving covenant, they had neither faith, hope nor charity—love, 1 Cor. xiii. 13. Joseph had all three, and so have all those who have obeyed from the heart the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, God has forgiven them for Christ's sake.

Editor Restitution:

Not long ago I noticed the following question in The Restitution:—"What does the closing the door, in Matt. xxv. 10; Luke xiii. 25, mean? Against whom, and when shall it be closed?"

May I give my views on this subject, if done in a kind, Christian manner?

First, then, let me say the closing of the door spoken of in Matt. xxv. 10, is for the purpose of excluding a class of people from the presence of others already gathered.

Who are they, I hear you ask?

They are not a worldly class neither the ungodly or the sinner. In no sense do the five foolish virgins represent a wicked class. These virgins were among the ten when called to go out to meet the bridegroom. All looked alike, appeared alike and all went forth apparently with the same interest and love to greet the coming bridegroom. According to the account these five foolish ones desired to be faithful and in readiness to meet the coming bridegroom as were the other five. Loyalty and true friendship to him was stamped on their every act. When the startling cry was made at midnight, "Behold, the bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him," these five virgins heard the cry and appeared to be as eager to respond to the call as were the five wise ones. Therefore they cannot represent a rebellious class. If I am not correct then where the hope for the nations after Christ as the Bridegroom comes, as Brother Wince has so beautifully and truthfully pictured to our mind in his late articles in The Restitution entitled "Judgment of [illegible] The five foolish [illegible] [illegible] a stranger doth not [illegible] [illegible] joy.

A Boy's Influence.

"I wonder why Samuel Darrow is so much loved," said a visitor at the house of a friend of the Darrows.

"I know," piped a little voice, "it's 'cause Sam loves everybody."

"How do you know Sam loves everybody?"

"'Cause I sees he does. Now, there's little Jim Blake, his father drinks, and sometimes Jim don't brieg any lunch to school. Then Sam divides his lunch with Little Jim always. And when the boys made fun of Jim Short because his elbows were out, Sam gave 'em a look that they won't forget in a hurry."

"A look! What would boys care for a look?"

"Well, sir, if you'd seen Sam's look you'd understand. It was just as if he'd said: 'Now, ain't you ashamed of yourselves—making fun of a poor little fellow, who wears the best he's got?'"

"Does that look of Sam's make the boy's angry?"

"No, sir, it makes 'em ashamed, and they like Sam all the better for it."

"What else does Sam do?"

"Oh, I couldn't begin to tell you all he does, but he's forever doin' something for somebody. That day Roy Dick Mills got hurt, Sam carried him all the way home in his arms, an' Dick just loves Sam. When Burt Brown broke his leg, Sam went to see him every day; and when Billy Chester was sick, you'd ought to've seen the nice things Sam took him."

"But what has Sam Darrow done for you?"

The little fellow's face flushed, then he said in a low voice, looking up deprecatingly: "You wouldn't think I came near being a thief and a liar once, but it's so. I found something I wanted, and no one knew but Sam. 'I'm going to keep it,' I told him; 'they won't know who's got it.'" Sam gave me that look, then he said, 'But you will know, and so will God.' So I took it back to the owner."—Mrs. W. S. Barker.

To-day's Duty

"It will not last long. Your day, my day, the world's day, the day of opportunity, the day of grace, the day of salvation—all days are swiftly passing away; and the great day, the last day, will surely and speedily come." So speaks a wise man. He speaks well. Time is short. Our waking hours are soon over. The cradle and death chair of Frederick the Great in the Hohenzollern museum are placed side by side. With all of us they stand near together. The time allotted us to do our work for God will soon have emptied itself into the ocean of eternity. We must seize the present opportunities. Their neglect can never be repaired. We have our work to do. We have a daily work. It is more important than we know. Let us be up and doing. Remember what Jesus said: "I must do the work of him who sent me while it is day; for, behold, the night cometh, when no man can work." Only one conscious of the necessity will be able to say, when the sun is setting, "I have glorified thee on the earth. I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do."

Matthew Henry's Testimony.

By the creature here we understand, not, as some do, the gentile world, and their expectation of Christ and the gospel, which is very foreign and forced; but the whole frame of nature, especially that of this lower world; the whole creation, the compages of inanimate and sensible creatures, which, because of their harmony and mutual dependence, and because they all constitute and make up one world, are spoken of in the singular number, as the creature. The creature that is now thus burdened shall at the time of the restitution of all things "be delivered from this bondage into the glorious liberty of the children of God," (verse 21) that is, they shall no more be subject to vanity and corruption, and the other fruits of the curse; but, on the contrary, this lower world shall be renewed; when there will be new heavens, there will be a new earth. 2 Pet. iii. 13; Rev. xxi. 1.

At the second coming of Christ there will be a manifestation of the children of God. And this redemption of the creature is reserved till then; for as it was with man and for man that they fell under the curse, so with man and for man they shall be delivered. All the curse and filth that now adheres to the creature, shall be done away then, when those that have suffer[illegible] with Christ upon earth, shall reign with him upon earth.—Com. on Rom. viii. 19 23.

No Compromise for Truth.

Compromises are the order of the day. They are manifest in business. They are manifest in politics. Sad to say, they are manifest in religion, and that where principle and conscience are at stake.

Yet there never can come a time in the experience of all Christians, Christian associations or corporations, when they can afford to compromise for one moment an iota of truth or justice or honor for aught the world can bestow or that seemingly is to be gained by the compromise. We are not to do evil that good may come.

There are methods of work, there are ways of propagating the gospel, when compromises may be made between men of decidedly different opinions, without affecting honor, truth, or justice, even though selfish dignity is humbled. Here the Christian should be willing to compromise. If his brother must have a crutch to walk with, let him go a little slower. But when the honor, the integrity, the purity, or the principles of God or his cause are at stake, never. Compromise in the one case is disloyalty to God in the other, it is not "submit[illegible] one to another in fear of God."—Signs of the Times.

Sometimes good people honestly differ from each other. In some instances the difference is of a doctrinal nature, in others it relates to men and measures. At one time "our beloved Barnabas and Paul" dissented from each other's opinions to such an extent that they parted company to prosecute separate missionary tours. Again Peter was to be blamed, and Paul withstood him to the face. Euodia and Syntyche, two women of Philippi, perhaps deaconesses in the church, seem to have been at variance, and were besought by Paul, with all the affection of a father, and all the tenderness of a mother, "that they be of the same mind in the Lord." He repeats, "I beseech," as if he would admonish each one separately, and with the utmost impartiality. "In the Lord," the true element of Christian union. For those "in the Lord" by faith to be at variance is an utter inconsistency. "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also who shall believe on me through the word: That they all may be one; as thou Father, art in me and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me." Jno. xvii. 20 21.—J. H. Vandever.

Patient Waiting.

Not now, my child—a little more rough tossing;
A little longer on the billow's foam,
A few more journeyings in the desert darkness,
And then the sunshine of thy rather's home!

Not now; for I have wanderers in the distance,
And them must call them in with pain of love;
Not now; for I have sheep upon the mountains,
And them must follow them where'er they rove.

Not now; for I have loved ones and am weary;
Will them not cheer them with a kindly smile?
Sick ones, who need thee in their lonely sorrow,
Will the - not tend them yet a little while?

Not now; for wounded hearts are sorely bleeding,
And them must I teach these widowed hearts to sing
Not now; for orphans' tears are quickly falling;
There must be gathered neath some sheltering wing.

Go, with the name of Jesus, to the dying,
And speak it as none else all the living can;
Why should thy fainting heart grow chill and weary?
Canst thou not watch with me one little hour?

One little hour, and then the glorious crowning;
The golden harp-strings, and the victor's palm,
One little hour! And then the hallelujah!
Eternity's long, deep thanksgiving psalm!

Come Let Us Reason Together.

There must be a peculiar fascination about the Sabbath question, for there are many moods and expressions, that carry it into almost every subject and sermon by a seventh day advocated, especially by the regular seventh day Adventists. I have heard many able men of that faith preach upon different topics, yet it was marred in some part by an injection of the Sabbath question, when to my mind it was irrelevant to the subject in hand. Within the past few months I have learned through different publications and tracts, that there are quite a number of the brethren of the household of the one faith, that are falling into line as Sabbath keepers and bring in the major portion of the Decalogue to prove that it is binding upon the followers of Christ, and come very close to affirming as do the Seventh Day Adventists, that there is no salvation only to those who keep it. Therefore there is life in the Mosaic Law, which is contrary to the teaching of Paul in Gal. iv. 11, 21. Is it not far better to cling to the positive statements of the gospel, rather than to grope in the vast labyrinths of the Decalogue for something of doubtful import when applied to Christians? I have noticed too, in the writings of some of our brethren, that they make a frequent use of sarcasm. This I regard as extremely hurtful, for there are but few if any, but what are sensitive to sarcastic remarks, and I have yet to learn that there is any argument in sarcasm; no earnest reasoner likes to have sport made of his honest thoughts and convictions. The question has often been asked, to whom was the Law including Sabbath keeping given? We have two answers. Adventists going back to creation while a far larger number claim it was given to all men, i. e., inferentially, else why are Christians under obligation to keep it. But Moses says, "Hear O Israel the statutes and judgments which I speak in your ears this day (1450 years B. C.) that ye may learn them and keep and do them. The Lord our God made a covenant with us in Horeb. The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us, who are all of us alive this day, Deut. v. 1, 2, 3. God also exhorts them to remember that they were in bondage to the Egyptians and because through a mighty hand, and a stretched out arm, he had brought them out from under bondage he commanded them to keep the Sabbath. Was this commandment given to any other nation except to those who had been in bondage to the Egyptians? I cannot find that it applies to any other people, except the strangers within the gates of Israel; every one dwelling among them were subject to Israel's jurisdiction, the same as it is today among the nations of the earth; every person living in our land is subject to our laws as long as he may chose to live here.

The law that was given to Moses was to guide them not only in a spiritual sense but in secular affairs as well. These laws were for their guidance while they were under judges, and when God had given them a King to reign over them, they were incorporated in the laws of the kingdom, as will readily be seen by reference to different biblical writers.

Samuel told the people of Israel "that as long as they continued to obey the Lord and keep his commandments, he would remember them and suffer them to continue: but if they turned from him to do wickedly he would destroy them." 1st. Sam. xii. 25. They rebelled against God and he overturned the kingdom. Ezek. xxi. 27 and it will so continue until the Master comes, when it will be restored with Christ as King of kings Is it reasonable to suppose that after a government was destroyed its laws would be in force?

It is true that after the establishment of the Roman Empire, the authorities permitted the priests of the Jewish nation to govern them to a certain extent, in that they did not interfere with their religious worship, yet they were regarded as Romans and were held accountable to the civil law, and paid tribute thereto.

Paul was a Pharisee, the strictest of his sect, yet he claimed protection of the civil law; and I am fully persuaded that it is a misapplication of Scripture to claim that Paul had reference to the law of Moses, when he said love was the fulfilling of the law. Nearly the whole of the xii. and xiii. chapters of Romans, is an exhortation to Christian graces but not one word about the Law of Moses, but evidently has reference to being subject to the laws under which we live, for if they resisted that law they resisted the ordinances of God, Rom. xiii. 2. And further on Paul enumerates certain commandments, all beginning with Thou shalt not, i. e., if we keep the law of justice, love and right, we shall not do any of those things named in Rom. xiii. 9, but never any mention of the Sabbath.

Again let us ask if a government is destroyed would it be reasonable, that some portion of its laws were to remain in such a manner, that a people living perhaps hundreds of years after were held amenable to that portion? hardly. Well then why should it be thought reasonable that the ecclesiastical part of the Law of Moses is binding upon Christians, and the law of ordinances be obsolete. It is assuming too much to separate the different portions of the law.

It seems to me that the old Law has met its fulfillment as far as this dispensation is concerned according to the plain and positive statements of Scripture, as given by the inspired writers, and it is hardly worth while to thresh over the same old straw expecting to get any more grain out of it, yet it may be well enough to mention a few passages that have not been commented upon at length. It would be pertinent perhaps, at this time to ask, that if it is incumbent upon us to keep the Sabbath, in order to be saved, why was Jesus the great Teacher, also Paul the great apostle to the Gentiles silent upon this question, especially when giving the different commandments, in answer to direct questions upon the same topic?

Again if we are to keep a day, how are we to know when we have the right one, or the one given to Moses, or perhaps at creation? Some will say oh that is a frivolous question; but it is not a frivolous question, but the answer to it is vital to the Sabbath keepers position. It is acknowledged by learned and scientific men, that the Julian Calendar was extremely faulty and it was changed to the Gregorian, which is far better, but still is not perfect. Time is a very elusive element, if we may call it an element, when you come to measure it, and the deepest and most far seeing men of all ages have spent their lives in the study of a correct method of reckoning. The delicate mechanism for measuring time is affected by heat and cold, by wet and dry, snow and rain, storms, etc., etc., interfere with correct measurements. Much attention was given to the study of time during the Babylonian, the Persian and Grecian eras, yet all differed, none correct; and for 600 years between 800 A. D. & 1400 A. D., there was scarcely any attention given to the computation of time. They knew it was cold in winter and hot in summer, and they cared for little else, except to fight, rob and plunder. I could fill this whole paper, in the facts deducted by scientific men on time reckoning and there is but one thing they all agree upon, and that is there is none of them absolutely right. They have come so near perfection, however, that there is but one day of 24 hours lost in 3323 years. That is close enough for practical business, but this fraction that is lost is one of those provoking decimals, that will always [illegible] fore evident [illegible] starting point. [illegible] just to rest from physical la[illegible] day in seven, all reasoning minds will admit; and certainly one day in seven is not too much to devote to the study of God's Word that we may be guided by it the rest of the week, but when I come to point out a particular day and say that is Holy, I am surely at fault. When the gospel was first given to the Gentiles at Antioch and other places, certain men came from Judea and taught them saying, "Except ye be circumcised after the manner of Moses, ye cannot be saved." And when they had come to Jerusalem, certain Pharisees said it was needful to circumcise them and command them to keep the Law of Moses, Acts xv. 1, 5. These Pharisees did not specify any particular part of the law to be kept, and the balance left out; then where do these last day followers of the Decalogue, get their authority to keep the Sabbath and leave out the rest?

When the apostles and elders came together to consider this matter, Peter stood up and opposed it. For says he, "Why tempt God to put a yoke upon them, that we nor our fathers were able to bear?" After they had fully discussed the matter, they sent word back to Antioch, that they had heard that some had told them (the Gentiles) that they must keep the Law; but Paul and Barnabas further wrote them, that they had given them no such commandment but they told them in very plain language, what was necessary for them to do, but keeping the Sabbath was no part of it. There was a necessity of the law, for Paul says I had not known sin without the law, for says he, I had not known lust except the law said thou shalt not covet, Rom. vii. 7, which fact is embodied in the commandments; but think you that Paul had reference to the Law given on Sinai? By no means; for if this was true, there was no knowledge of sin for the first 3000 years of the world's history. No, it was the knowledge of right and wrong, of good and evil.

When the gospel of the kingdom has been taught and it is obeyed by going down into the watery grave of baptism and are raised up to walk in newness of life, we walk in the footsteps of our Great High Priest who was made a priest, not after the law of a carnal commandment, (as was Aaron) but after the power of an endless life, Heb. vii. 16. There was no perfection, no justification, no righteousness, no life under the Levitical priesthood, therefore the priesthood was changed, and of necessity a change of the law also. Heb. vii. 12.

But why need we go on and bring up a multitude of texts, when one saith the Lord is sufficient. We again reiterate, that we earnestly believe that six days out of seven is all that should be given to secular affairs, and as it is the law or custom to refrain from physical labor on the first day of the week, why not obey the injunction of the apostle Paul, and be subject to the powers that be. If we keep the great law of love as given us by our Lord and Master, we will surely be saved.

In conclusion, permit me to make a few comparisons that may possibly add to the correct understanding, of a mooted question, "John the Baptist preached repentance and baptism; and when he had finished his labors, by being put to death, he had fulfilled his course, i. e., his work had came to an end." Acts xiii. 25. "They that lived at Jerusalem and their rulers, because they knew not the voice of the prophets, condemned Jesus and by so doing fulfilled that part of prophecy, and it came to an end. After Jesus was condemned, he was put to death, and fulfilled what was written of him; there was no further need of that prophecy, Acts xiii. 29. God raised Jesus from the dead, thus fulfilling the words of David. Paul in his exhortation to Timothy, says I have kept the faith, I have finished my course," his work was at an end his mission that Jesus had called him to do was fulfilled. 2 Tim. iv. 6, 7. Christ is the life giver. The mission of that Law was fulfilled when it was nailed to the cross. There never was a carnal law written without limitations. The law of God, the laws of love, is Scriptural, therefore eternal, unchangeable. Did you ever call to your mind the fact that you might keep the Sabbath to a strict letter of the Decalogue, and still be a sinner carnal, and outside the pale of the Promise? I submit the above article, well aware of its imperfections, and [illegible] crude manner of expression. [illegible] trust it may be the mea[illegible] [illegible] may be [illegible] spirit in which it is given.

In One Hope of Your Calling

It is no easy matter for an alien to see the importance of the one hope Hope is the product of faith. Establish your faith and your hope will naturally follow. Hope is made up of expectation and desire. If we are taught to believe that we are to inherit heaven as a reward for our righteousness our hope will expect and desire the same. Expectation is looking forward to. Our mind is fixed on the promised reward. Desire is to wish for earnestly. From what source must we get our faith and what must it be? Paul says, I am made a minister according to the dispensation of God which is given to me for you, to fulfill the Word of God, (marg. fully to preach the Word of God) even the mystery which hath been hid from ages and from generations, but now is made manifest to his saints; to whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles; which is Christ in you, the hope of glory. Col. i. 25, 27. Paul was called according to God's purpose to preach his Word fully The mystery that was preached had been hidden for ages. The angels desired to look into it but were not permitted. Abraham saw it and rejoiced. The hidden mystery contained the riches of the glory of God. Which is Christ in you, (among you) the hope of glory. This is the one hope of your calling. Again we have the message in this form. And hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus; that in the ages to come he might show the exceeding riches of his grace in his kindness toward us through Christ Jesus. The riches of his grace will be shown in the ages to come toward us (who have the one hope) through Christ. In 1 John iii. we have this hope more fully explained. Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God? Now are we the sons of God, and it doth n[illegible] appear what we shall be; but w[illegible] that, when he shall ap[illegible] like him; for we shall [illegible] (our expectation and desire[illegible] when he (Christ) shall appear[illegible] before) that, we shall see him as he is, not as he was. To see him as he is will be to see him in his glory. He will be the "King in his beauty." If we are children of God, we are then heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ. To be a joint-heir with him is to heir alike the promises that his Father has made to him through Abraham, which is "In thy seed shall all nations be blessed; and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies." They shall have the right to bind kings with chains, and their nobles with fetters of iron; to execute upon them the judgment written; this honor have all his saints. Psa. cxlix. 8, 9. The Psalmist here gives us a glimpse of God's purpose in those who are called in the one hope of your calling. The angels are God's messengers sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation. God hath not said to the angels at any time, Thou art my son, this day have I begotten thee. To this son he saith, Let all the angels of God worship him. To the Son he saith thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever; a scepter of righteousness is the scepter of thy kingdom. Hab. i. David said in 2 Sam. xxiii. The Spirit of the Lord spake by me, and his word was in my tongue. The God of Israel said, the Rock of Israel spake to me, He that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of God. And he shall be as the light of the morning, when the sun riseth, even a morning without clouds; as the tender grass springing out of the earth by clear shining after rain. Although my house be not so with God; yet he hath made with me an everlasting covenant, ordered in all things, and sure; for this is all my salvation and all my desire, although he make it not to grow. The Spirit spake unto David and promised him a son who should rule, stating the character of his rule. He must be just ruling in the fear of God. Has the world had such a ruler? History fails to speak of such as having ruled. Behold a king shall reign in righteousness and princes shall rule in judgment. Isa. xxii. 1. The eyes of these rulers shall not be dim, and the ears of them shall hear[illegible] eyes shall pierce through [illegible] and they shall [illegible] hope that is an anchor [illegible] both sure and steadfast, [illegible] entereth into that within the veil. Whither the forerunner is for us entered, even Jesus made an high priest forever after the order of Melchisedec. This hope is called the "hope of the gospel." A hope that produces good news concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ. God hath chosen the poor of this world rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to them who love him. He that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure, as Christ is pure Can a man purify himself without having this hope in him? Certainly not. The conditions are to have this hope in him. In order to be purified we must be active. We must come in contact with something pure. The apostle Peter says, Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God and of Jesus our Lord, according as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue; whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises; that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust. And beside this, giving diligence, add to your faith virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness and charity. If these (the Christian graces) be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall be neither barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. By the addition of these graces they make you pure. We are to be diligent in this life. We cannot stand and be inactive. We must be steadfast, unmovable in the work of the Lord. A sluggish stream is always corrupt. We should remember that whosoever striveth for the masteries is not crowned except he strive lawfully. In order to win a prize he must be active. We are admonished to walk in the new life. This does not mean that when we have put on Christ that we may sit down or spend our lives in accumulating wealth, and expect to reach the kingdom of God. We are not to be anxious about the things of this life, but seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added.

The law given to the alien and that given to the heir are very different. The alien is required to believe the gospel of the kingdom of God, reform his life, that is renounce former traditions and then put on Christ in the prescribed way. As many as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise. We might ask what promise? Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made He saith not, And to seeds as of many: but as of one, and to thy seed, which is Christ. God promised the land and eternal life to Abraham, so we become co-heirs to the same promise. Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism unto death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. We can only walk in the new life after we have been introduced into it by being buried with Christ in baptism, not before. Merely being good does not make us one of Christ's brethren. This law to the alien given by Peter in Acts ii. and x. and by Paul in Acts xvi. 31, also by Philip in Acts viii. 12, 37, is very plain. After having put on Christ we are admonished to purify ourselves even as Christ is pure. If we should receive eternal life we must know the only true God and Jesus Christ whom God has sent.

Yours in the hope.

The Story of a Happy Christian Life.—No. 6.

When the friends were talking about the signs in the heavens my uncle William J. Chaplin was carrying me home from grandather's. The night was intensely dark. I looked toward the east to see if "the pillars of fire and vapor of smoke were there, but all was as black as midnight. There had been meeting at grandfather's house. A few days later, father, on returning from an appointment said, "It will only be two or three days now, until Jesus will be here!" And that you may understand just when this was, I will explain. The Hebrews began their Sacred Year with the new moon of the Vernal Equinox, [illegible] called the first month Nisan or [illegible] consisted 30 days, and took in part of our March and part of our April. It was in this month that the Passover Supper was eaten. The second month was Jiar or Zif, with 29 days, taking in part of April and part of May; Sivan, the 3d month corresponding with the latter part of May and the forepart of June; when the second festival was held, called the feast of harvest, the day of first fruits, and the feast of weeks or Pentecost. Then followed Tammuz, the 4th month, made up of part of June and part of July. Av or Ab, corresponding to part of July and part of August, it being 5th in the list. Elul, the 6th made up a part of August and a part of September, and Tisri, or Tisbri Ethanim, the 7th month, taking in part of September and part of October, in which the third festival—called the Feast of Tabernacles, or feast of in-gatherlng, when the fruit-harvest, and the whole produce of the ground was gathered in. The other months were Bul the 8th, Kislen the 9th, Tebeth the 10th, Shebat the 11th and Adar the 12th. But it is with Tisri, the 7th month that we have to do. The 10th day of this month was the most important of all the Hebrew year, for it was the Day of Atonement—the day when the High Priest went alone behind the second veil into [illegible] tabernacle that is called the holi[illegible] all, but "not without blood wi[illegible] offered for himself, and for the [illegible] of the people." If his offering [illegible] cepted, he came out and bl[illegible] multitudes who were standi[illegible] out, watching anxiously for [illegible] ing; just as Moses and Aaro[illegible] them in the days when the tabernacle was first set up in the wilderness.

Auntie Willard, my father and mother, and all the rest of the dear Advent believers, knew that Jesus was their High Priest, and that he had gone into the Holiest of all to appear in the presence of God for us, and that, as the High Priest under the Law, came out of the sanctuary to bless the people, so would our Great High Priest come out of the "true tabernacle" in the heavens, to bless them that were looking for his appearing,—the one blessing,—being a type or shadow of the other.

They believed moreover, that, as the blessing in the type fell on the 10th day of the 7th month, or Tisri, it would also fall on that day in the antitype, and so they fixed on this day for the coming of Jesus; do you understand? This was probably correct. Jesus will in all likelihood come on the 10th day of the 7th month, which begins at 6 o'clock on the evening of the 19th of our September, and ends at 6 o'clock on the 20th. But they supposed that the prophetic period of 2,300 days, or years, spoken of in Daniel viii. 13 19, beginning at 457 B. C., when Artaxerxes made a decree that Jerusalem should be rebuilt, and covering a period of 70 weeks or 490 years that—cut off from the 2300 years, extended to the baptism of Jesus, and also covering the time that the daily sacrifices of the Jews would last, and Jerusalem and the Jews be trodden under foot by hostile powers,—reaching as it did to 1844, marked the time when Christ would come; when instead, it marked the taking place of entirely different events. It was on the 1st day of Nisan, or March 21st, 1844, that "the Sultan of Turkey was obliged by the European powers to relinquish the practice of executions for apostasy and to make a decree granting religious toleration."

That was the beginning of the destruction of Mohammedan rule,—or in other words, the beginning of the cleansing of God's Sanctuary Land. God does not do everything in a moment. It will take time to complete the cleansing. Country after country has been lost by Turkey; it will not be much longer, until her feet will be taken off from the neck of Jerusalem.

Be a working Christian or you will be a worthless one. Christ's design and desire in saving you was to save others through you. Work not to get saved, but because you are saved. Your personal piety needs exercise and airing. Thank God that religion makes you useful. Golden opportunities are within your reach on every hand.

George Elliot: O the anguish of that thought, that we can never atone to our dead for the stinted affection we gave them, for the light answers we returned to their pleints or their pleadings, for the little reverence we showed to that sacred human soul that lived so close us, and was the divinest thing that God has given us to know!

Two Women Who Discovered the Greatest Bible Treasure of the Century.

Probably the two most learned women in the world, certainly the foremost women biblical scholars are Mrs. Agnes Smith Lewis and Mrs. Margaret Dunlop Gibson, of Cambridge, England, who have just been on a visit to this country.

They discovered what is known as the Siniatic palimpsest, the oldest known manuscript of the four gospels. This is the most important discovery of Biblical manuscripts which has been made in modern times.

Remarkable to say, Mrs. Gibson and Mrs. Lewis are twin sisters. Clearly it is a case of inherited talent.

The university honors won by them are extraordinary. For the first time in its history, Heidelberg University conferred the degree of Doctor of Laws upon women when it gave that degree to Mrs. Gibson and Mrs. Lewis. The University of St. Andrew's has given Mrs. Lewis the same degree, and the universities of Wittenberg and Halle each made her a Ph. D.

The earliest known date of a gospel manuscript, prior to this discovery, is reckoned to have been 160 A. D. The Scientifics are inclined to believe the Siniatic palimpsest dates back to say truly 100 A. D., and that is held the writers are regarded as the greatest Conference contributors to biblical knowledge. When Mrs. Lewis and Mrs. Gibson made their great discovery they were on a caravan journey of exploration in the heart of the Arabian desert. They found the manuscript in the cellar of an ancient Greek monastery, almost as old as the Christian era, built on the side of Mount Sinai. They had reason to believe that manuscripts of great value had lain hidden there untouched since the days of the Apostles, although, strange to say, the possibility had escaped the rest of the learned. The two sisters decided to go alone in search of the treasures in spite of all dangers and difficulties. They fitted out their expedition at Cairo, where they engaged a dragoman, camels and guards. Then they went to Suez and from there made a journey into the desert for nine days, pursuing a general southeasterly course, nearly the same as that followed by the Israelites during the Exodus.

Then they reached St. Catharine's Monastery, which is a vast rockbound pile on the side of Mount Sinai. It is surrounded by an outer wall that was built when the place was fortified by the Roman Emperor Justinian in the fifth century. It was founded at least 200 years before that. It is now held by a colony of Greek Catholic monks. They can read modern Greek only as a rule and have no knowledge of any ancient tongues. They possess a vast quantity of ancient manuscripts of the character of which they are totally ignorant.

After long and minute examination of these the sisters found the palimpsest of the gospels. Palimpsest is a parchment from which the writing has been erased to make room for another. In this palimpsest the second or later writing was clearly entitled "The Lives of Holy Women." Between the lines could be detected the faint traces of an earlier writing erased to make room for the second on the precious vellum. Fortunately the action of the oxygen on the traces of the first ink had rendered it visible with the lapse of centuries, although, doubtless, it was quite invisible after it was first erased.

This faint writing, when studied by Mrs. Lewis, proved to be a Syriac version of the four gospels made within one hundred and fifty years of the birth of Christ. Mrs. Lewis was able to read the Syriac, because she had begun the study of that language when Rendel Harris found "The Apology of Aristides the Just" in Syriac. Before that she was an accomplished Arabic scholar.

When they realized their tremendous discovery they set to work and laboriously photographed every page of it. One sister held the book and the other the camera. Mrs. Lewis afterward published a translation of the Syriac gospels and of the later "Lives of Holy Women." Both sisters made a second visit to the monastery and made a perfect copy of the palimpsest.

They discovered many other documents of the greatest value in the East. At Jaffa they secured the first leaf of the original copy of the Book of Ecclesiastes, the only absolutely original manuscript of [illegible] existence.

Both sisters have written many volumes upon biblical and other learned subjects, and also works of fiction and of general literature. They are the twin daughters of John Smith, a lawyer, of Irvine, Ayrshire, Scotland. Both married English scholars. The Rev. Samuel Savage was the librarian of Corpus Christi College, Oxford, and Dr. Gibson was the best known Translater of Cervante's poems.

The learning, the industry, the enterprise and the courage shown by these two women have impressed the entire world.—Selected by J. L. Wines.

Announcement.

The Annual June Meeting and Conference of the Church of God in the State of Indiana, will be held at Antioch Church, commencing Friday morning June 7, and continuing over the following Sunday.

A committee has been appointed to arrange a programme for publication. It is expected that our home preachers will be assisted in proclaiming the glad tidings by those who preach the gospel in other States.

We trust that all who can will meet with us, that our hearts may be cheered by your presence, and by your words of faith and hope. If we shall bring to this meeting a free will offering of love to God, and charity toward all, God will bless us and our meeting shall be a blessing.

To reach Antioch Church those coming by train will come either to Plymouth, or to Argos, where conveyance can be had to the place of meeting. Once more we urge you to come—come in the spirit and love of Christ.

Those coming to Plymouth please notify J. H. Willey, Plymouth. Those coming to Argos, please notify Wm. Ralleback, Argos.

We wish to avoid the labor and expense of mailing statements to our patrons. If each one who has not as yet paid for this year would send in his renewal at once, we will appreciate the favor.

Our Helping Fund

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

When you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "The Restitution," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and send that.

[illegible] accounts [illegible] reward every one according to his work has been.

The great concern of each one should be, What have I done upon which to expect reward? If you should judge yourself, what would your judgment be?

Our talents differ, and each one will be held accountable for the use of such talent, whatever that may be. If you have only one, use that.

Some one says, what can I do? Why you can circulate literature touching the truth if nothing else. There is no one but who can do that. Will that do any good? Oh, yes. Let me tell you something. Some people have bought several copies of "Pine Woods Bible Class" and handing them to their friends and neighbors. It being easy and attractive reading, most people will read it. It is bearing fruit already. I have just been told of a man who had become discouraged. He had listened to preachers of different denominations, and found they contradicted each other. He began to drift into infidelity, when a brother put a copy of Pine Woods Bible Class into his hands. Now in place of infidelity, he is rejoicing in new found light. It would take too much space to tell of other cases. Try this work, and add some stars to your crown.

The Students Text Book is already an assured success, and will be printed after I get home from this present trip.

I desire that all who want it, to send in their names in advance, that I may know how many to print. All you order now, you will be sure to get when printed. The price will be fifty cents.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

Brother D. C. Robison has issued a small 16-page tract on the subject "Man is Mortal." It is of convenient size to enclose in an envelop, and can be had for 2 cents each, or 15 cents for 12, or $1.50 for 100 copies. Bro. Robison is so well known as a clear and lucid writer that no words that we can pen would commend his work, more than will the bare announcement of his name. If you are in the mood to do a little missionary work send to Brother Robison at 596 So. Limestone St. Springfield, O. and get a supply of these tracts.

A New Tract.

The Great Divine Healer vs Latter-Day Healers, by Uncle John Foore.

A Tract for the last days. Should be read by every thinking Christian.

Paul 2 Tim. iii. 13. "But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived."

Matt. vii. 21. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the Kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works. And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

Brethren, these tracts have gone into many families, both to brethren and people of other denominations, a few infidels, and one Christian Scientist, and all seem to be well pleased with it; but only a few of the brethren have sent to me any help in the way of paying for the tracts, and tracts are very expensive. We are anxious to have more published on different subjects. Please help to send these Pearls out among the people.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Poetry.

Words of Cheer.

Hal weary soul, how goes the conflict?
Droops low thy courage with the day?
Has grim, impassable, the rock-walled,
Beclouded heights across thy way?
Be not dismayed; the circling shadows
The panoply alone have formed
From subtler foes; behold, thy Guardian
Beside thee moves, an One full-armed.

Invisible to thee? Yes, doubtless;
Great weariness bedims thy sight.
But list; does not thine ear unfeebled
Yet catch the clank of armored Might Omnipotent? Canst thou not, faltering
In human weakness 'gainst great odds,
Perceive a strengthening touch that whispers,
"The battle is not yours, but God's"

'Tis even so; thou art not plodding
Alone thy Savior's weary way.
He walks with thee, thy soul enduing
With strength proportioned to thy day.
And as the stride and duty quicken
In successive, and round thee roll,
Lest power within the heavens waver,
Thy Lord fights with thee, soul to soul.

Communicated.

Dear Brother Underwood:

As you know, Bro. W. O. Steffa, who resides in the city of Pomona, Cal., is, and has been for many years a reader of THE RESTITUTION and a strong advocate of the doctrines promulgated by that organ of the Church of God. There being no congregation of our people in Pomona, Bro. Steffa and his wife and daughters sought a place where they might attend Sunday School. They found what they sought in the Christian Church of that city. Brother Steffa and his wife were both made teachers soon after they began attending that school. Brother Steffa had a large class of adults. He was so kind and gentle in the presentation of the truths of the Bible as he understood them, and yet so firm that his class began to diligently study the "Word" to learn whether these things were so. The result was, that some time ago, by request, Bro. Steffa organized another Bible class outside the Sunday School. This class met usually on Sunday afternoon. This class had no direct connection with the Sunday School, but most of the members, if not all were members of the Sunday School. The whole matter has been carried along by Brother Steffa for months and years, with such good results that he was invited a short time ago to address all the teachers of the Christian Church Sunday School which he did. His subject was "The Second Coming of Christ." A large audience listened to him. The interest was so great that "The Daily Progress" of that city, published the address the next morning in full. The address is so well prepared, and the occasion leading up to it is so out of the ordinary, that I hand you the paper containing it with the request that you publish it in THE RESTITUTION.

I am informed by Bro. Steffa that there are seven or eight persons who have been attending his classes, that have become dissatisfied with their baptism. They have begun to cry "What shall we do?"

This whole matter shows what can be done by a quiet, persistent, kind and determined effort. May God help us to improve the time. I am of the opinion that there is a greater per cent of professed Christians today making enquiry about the second coming of Christ than ever before. Let us stand by the old Gospel Ship and ride safely into harbor with the Lord Jesus as our Captain and Pilot.

R. S. DWIGGINS.

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST.

In John xiv. 2, 3, we have Jesus saying, "I go to prepare a place for you,.....I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also," and in Acts i. 9-11, we learn just how he went. "And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight. And while they looked stedfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel; which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." John tells us in Rev. i. 7, that he will "come in the clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him; and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him."

Christ is a literal, personal being; and his coming will be literal and personal. He went away in a cloud of glory; he will return in the same manner. When he comes every eye shall see him. And when this time shall come a day of wrath will come upon all the earth and cause them to wail. Rev. vi. 14-17. "And the heaven departed as a scroll when it is rolled together; and every mountain and island were moved out of their places; and the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bond man, and every free man, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains; and said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb: for the great day of his wrath is come; and who shall be able to stand?" And the happening at this time will be "sudden destruction cometh upon them.....and they shall not escape." 1 Thess. v. 3.

To this class of people "the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night; for when they shall say peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them." But there will be some at his coming that will not be overtaken as a thief in the night. "But ye brethren are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief. Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day, we are not of the night, nor of darkness." 1 Thess. v. 4, 5.

There will be two classes living when Christ comes, one will be saying, "Peace and safety," they are not expecting his coming. They are putting the evil day afar off. As a result it comes to them as a thief in the night, they are taken wholly by surprise. It will be to them as the flood was to the Antediluvian world in the day of Noah, the result will be the same. Luke xvii. 27-30. The other class Paul calls "the brethren," they are the children of light. Christ's coming will not be to them as a thief in the night for they are expecting him. A day of salvation and joy to them that are looking for him, because in Heb. ix. 28, we read "And unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation." The greeting will be, "Lo, this is our God: we have waited for him and he will save us: this is the Lord: we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation."

The wicked cry out in despair when they see Christ coming, to them it is the day of wrath; but the righteous who are looking for his coming and have made preparation to meet him, hail his coming with joy. To them it means salvation; to them it is the realization of that blessed hope. If the cry should suddenly be raised, "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him," would it cause joy or would it strike terror to our souls?

It seems to me that these are questions of vital importance to every one in this day and age. This same Jesus who left the earth over eighteen hundred years ago is soon to return to earth, not to endure the insults and abuse of wicked men, but to mete out justice to those who have despised his mercy, and reward those who have kept his commandments. In John xiv. 3, Christ promised to receive his disciples unto himself and they are to remain with him. The dead and the living that are his will meet him at the same time. Paul says, in 1 Thess. iv. 14-17, "For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him; for this we say unto you by the Word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep; for the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord."

These texts help to show the all important place that the second coming of Christ has in the plan of redemption.

First, notice the purpose of his coming, "To receive them unto himself, that where he is, there they may be also." So if Christ never comes, then his disciples with the rest of the righteous will never be with him.

Second, if he never comes the dead will never be raised, for they are raised at his coming.

Third, notice that one does not precede the other to meet him, but they are all caught up to meet him together when Christ descends from heaven with a shout.

It will be seen by this Scripture that Christ does not reach the earth at that time, but the dead and living saints are changed and go to meet the Lord in the air. But then, when will all eyes see him? That will be when Christ sits upon the throne of his glory, Matt. 31, 32, "And all nations are gathered before him," and in Dan. vii. 18, when "the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom for ever, even for ever and ever." In Phil. ii. 9, 10, Paul tells us, "Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name, that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth," and in harmony with this Scripture we read the words of the prophet Isaiah ii. 2-4, "And it shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it; and many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths; for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem; and he shall rebuke many people; and they shall beat their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into pruninghooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn War any more." A prophecy not yet fulfilled.

From these Scriptures it will be seen that when Jesus and his saints are once organized into a kingdom they will then appear and take possession of Jerusalem and send forth the law and all nations shall serve and obey him by going up from year to year to worship the Lord. Then will every eye see him.

We learn from 1 Cor. xi. 26, that "as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death till he come." And we gather around the table every first day to remember him until he comes again, and our presence at this service is a testimony that we are looking for him. There can be no doubt of the certainty of his coming for he himself said, "If I go I will come again," and the message he sent back to the church in Philadelphia was "Behold, I come quickly." Rev. iii. 11.

Peter in his second epistle when speaking of the unbelievers and scoffers of the last days says, "But the day of the Lord will come," 2 Peter iii. 10, and come in a most unexpected manner; come as a thief in the night. The truth of his coming, I think will be admitted by all. We are looking for him and many are praying for him to come. It is the desire of our hearts and this is in harmony with the prayer Jesus taught his disciples to pray, "Thy Kingdom Come," and as he is King, he would of necessity have to be here to have charge of the kingdom when that prayer is answered.

Paul's description of his coming is a glorious event, and his expectation of receiving his reward was at Christ's appearing; for he says in 2 Tim. iv. 7, 8, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge shall give me at that day; and not to me only but unto all them also that love his appearing." Jesus says in Rev. xxv. 14, that [illegible] "the [illegible] not be given until the resurrection. This takes place at the second coming of Christ. This is why Paul speaks of it as "That Blessed hope," and this simply serves to magnify the importance of that glorious event.

This event is the realization of the Christian's hope: for Paul declares that if the dead are not raised, which occurs at his coming, and will not occur unless he does come, then our preaching is vain, we are yet in our sins and they which have fallen asleep in Christ are perished. This being so, we can easily see why it is that the coming of Christ was kept so prominently before the minds of the early Christian church by the apostles.

Christ is represented as coming in the clouds; it may not be mere clouds of saints such as dust in the sky, but rather clouds of glory caused by the shining splendor of that glorious host which accompanies him. Its splendor will outshine the sun and as that cloud nears the earth, then it is that the voice of Christ is heard calling forth the sleeping saints. At his bidding they will come forth clad in immortality. The living righteous are changed from mortal to immortality in the twinkling of an eye; and together with the resurrected saints they are caught up to meet the Lord in the air. Angels gather together the elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other, friends long separated by death are again united nevermore to part; and all together, one glad, glorious and triumphant throng they will be with the Savior; "For," says the prophet, "the ransomed of the Lord shall return and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away." Isa. xxxv. 10.

In view of these Scriptures pointing directly upon the revelation of our Savior, is it not our duty as teachers of the Gospel of the Kingdom to proclaim this important fact to our children that they may grow up in the knowledge of Christ's coming, as all depends upon his coming. The dead will never live and the living will never be changed to immortality until he does come. So it seems to me that if we do not teach this truth, we neglect our duty as servants of the Master.

In Acts i. 3, Jesus says he appeared to the apostles by the space of forty days speaking to them the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and in the sixth verse they asked whether or not he would restore the Kingdom to Israel, and in Acts viii. 12, while Philip was preaching to the Samaritans, he says, "But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the Kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women." So let us pray, "Thy Kingdom Come," and proclaim the good news, and when he comes he will say, "Well done."

SIGNS OF HIS COMING.

The signs of his near coming are in much evidence. In the physical signs we see great disasters, caused by the uncontrolable elements, such as cyclones, earthquakes, distressed by fires, pestilence and famine, which strikes terror to everybody, and we see these conditions existing at the present time, fulfilling the words of Jesus in Luke xxi. 26, Men fainting for fear, and for expectation of the things which are coming on the world for the powers of the heavens shall be shaken.

In the intellectual signs we see the hurried strides of inventive genius endeavoring to control the forces of nature and give rapid transit and increase knowledge. In Dan. xii. 4, the angel speaks and says: "But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words, and seal the book, even to the time of the end; many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased,"—a fact that none will deny. The advantages of our school system has given a vast increase in educational lines. In the political signs, there will be great national distress, and wars. Great changes will take place in the nation's affairs and all will say we will have "Peace and safety" by having a well equipped navy and army ready to force peace at the point of the bayonet. Then sudden destruction will fall upon them.

Spiritual signs—An apostasy of unbelief, lukewarmness and worldliness are among the professed people of God, in harmony with the Scripture in 2 Tim. iii. 5, "Having a form of godliness but denying the power thereof." Many are unsettled and dissatisfied with their church relation and are at a loss to know what to do. So many different denominations and leaders are in the religious world that all becomes confusion to them and the result is they fall away and become cold and indifferent, as will be seen at the present time, fulfilling the words of Paul to the Thessalonians 2 Thess. ii. 1-3. "Now we beseech you brethren, touching the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and our gathering together unto him; to the end that ye be not quickly shaken from your mind, nor yet be troubled, either by spirit, or by word, or by epistle as from us as that the day of the Lord is now present; let no man beguile you in anywise for it will not be except the falling away come first, and the man of sin be revealed."

Another sign, is in the persecuted Jew. On account of the murder of the Messiah, God scattered them among all nations and he was prophesied by Moses in Deut. xxviii. 37 that they would "become an astonishment, a proverb and a by-word among all the peoples whither the Lord shall lead thee away." This we know to be a fact. But God speaking through the prophet Ezekiel xxxvii. 21, 22, says: "And say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land: and I will make of them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel; and one king shall be king to them all; and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all." And Jesus said unto them, "Verily, I say unto you, that ye which have followed me, in the regeneration when the Son of Man shall sit on the throne of his glory ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israell."

Just a few years ago the land of Palestine, the land God promised to Abraham and his seed was sparsely settled and its soil uncultivated and unproductive and the gates of the city were closed to the Jews under penalty of death in case they tried to enter the city. But the eyes of the Jew is ever on the land of promise and since the Zionist movement in 1898, and gaining concessions with the Turkish government the way opened for the Jew once more in fulfillment of prophecy to get possession of their own land. And today there are more Jews in the city of Jerusalem than there were in the time when Ezra and Nehemiah led them back to Jerusalem out of Babylonish captivity, and the land in general is putting on a prosperous aspect after many hundred years lying in a desolate state as was prophesied should be. All of the signs mentioned come under our own observation and all are the fulfillment of prophecy. The fact of the Jews returning to that land is a sure sign that the day of the Lord is near at hand and that the Word of God is true.

Then it remains with us to heed the admonition in Titus ii. 12, 13, teaching us that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world, looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ.

A man in a blouse once said: "I have no more influence than a farthing rushlight." "Well," was the reply, "a farthing rushlight can do a good deal. It can set a haystack on fire; it can burn down a house; yea, more, it will enable a poor creature to read a chapter in God's book. Go your way, and let your farthing rushlight so shine before men, that others, seeing your good works, may glorify your Father which is in heaven."

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Obituary.

Eliza M. Shankland was born in Eaton, O., July 16, 1818, and when about ten years of age removed with her parents to Indiana, where she resided during the remainder of her life.

She was united in marriage, Dec. 14, 1840, to P. G. Smith, with whom she lived as a devoted, faithful wife until the time of his death, which occurred in 1901, in the 83rd year of his age; since which time Sister Smith had lived in their old home in West Lebanon, and in which her beloved husband had died, one of her devoted daughters residing near by to minister to mother's wants.

Bro. and Sister Smith were pioneers of western Indiana, both as citizens and members of the body of believers in life only through Christ and kindred truths. For nearly a half century their comfortable home was open and a hearty welcome extended to all lovers of truth, and any of our brethren who preached the gospel in Warren County, Ind., thirty and forty years ago will remember these two veterans of the faith. Their home was not only open to the lovers of truth, but their purse also was open to freely support the proclamation of the gospel of the kingdom. Although very charitable and tolerant with those whose religious views ran counter to their own interpretation of Bible truth, yet they were both uncompromising in their loyalty to righteousness and their faith in the gospel, and remained steadfast unto the end, always being ready and abundantly able to give a reason for the hope they entertained.

Bro. Smith died in the fall of 1901, in the 83rd year of his age, the writer officiating at his funeral service. Through some oversight notice of his death did not appear in THE RESTITUTION at that time, hence particular mention of the death of this noble soldier is here made.

Sister Smith died April 22, 1907, in the 89th year of her age. Funeral services were conducted by the writer from the same room in the home where like services were held for her beloved husband 5½ years ago, the four daughters who also rejoice in the hope of the soon coming kingdom being present together with many of their neighbors and friends who came in sorrow to pay tribute to the memory of this venerable soldier of the cross, who had fought so many battles and had fallen with the blessed assurance that she had "fought a good fight" and had "kept the faith" to the closing hour. She and her beloved husband lie "side by side," sleeping in Jesus. May the Master soon come to break the silent slumber, and give his beloved eternal life.

The Influence of Temper on Health.

Our English contemporary, Capital and Labor, which is generally correct in its assertions, thinks that, while excessive labor, exposure to wet and cold, deprivation of sufficient quantities of necessary and wholesome food, habitual bad lodging, sloth, and intemperance, are all deadly enemies to human life, none of them are so bad as violent and ungoverned passions. Men and women have survived all the former, says the writer, and at last reached an extreme old age; but it may be safely doubted whether a single instance can be found of a man of violent and irascible temper, habitually subject to storms of ungovernable passion, who has arrived at a very advanced period of life. It is, therefore, a matter of the highest importance to every one desirous of preserving "a sound mind in a sound body," to have a special care, amid all the vicissitudes and trials of life, to maintain a quiet possession of his own spirit.

John Newton: We can easily manage if we will only take each day the burden appointed for it. But the load will be too heavy for us if we add to its weight the burden of tomorrow before we are called to bear it.

The World to Come.

This combination of words does not occur very often in King James' translation of the New Testament. In Matt. xii. 32 it is stated that the sin against the Holy Spirit "shall not be forgiven * * * in this world, neither in the world to come. In Mark x. 30 it is affirmed of the persecuted that they will receive eternal life in the "world to come," and so in the parallel passage Luke xviii. 30. These words occur also in Heb. vi. 5 which reads, "Have tasted the good Word of God, and the powers of the world to come." Again Heb. ii. 5, "Unto the angels hath he not put in subjection the world to come whereof we speak." Eph. i. 21 reads in reference to Christ's exaltation that God set him, "far above * * * every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that (world) which is to come." With one exception "world" in the passages quoted is the English rendering of the Greek word "aion." defined by Young age, indefinite time, dispensation. The exception is Heb. ii. 5, where the original word is oikoumene, defined by the same authority, habitable earth or land. "To come" in the passages cited qualifies world or age, thus making these texts refer to a future age or world. The equivalent of "the world to come" is "that world," as used by Jesus in contrast with "this world." Answering the Sadducees he said, "The children of this world (age) marry and are given in marriage; but they who shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry, nor are given in marriage." Luke xx. 34, 35. These passages, in the light of the definition of the two Greek words aion and oikoumene, cannot refer to heaven as the home of the redeemed. The great majority of readers on reading these Scriptures, at once think of heaven. World to come does not mean a place to which the righteous go at death. World or age of these texts is coming in the sense that next year or the next century is coming, by the revolution of the earth around the sun. Each of the cycles brings us nearer the great day or reward.

The world to come, when it comes, will put us in possession of eternal life. Jesus on the throne of his glory, and the habitable earth in subjection to him. There are ages to come, according to Ephesians ii. 7, foreshowing that the illimitable stretch of future time will be measured by a succession of ages, to each of which will be assigned some special work in God's unfolding scheme, affording to his redeemed church ever fresh occasions for admiring his wisdom and love. Just a little way in the future begins that marvelous period of a thousand years, styled in popular language "the millennium," the age of subjugation, or putting of all opposing power under the Messiah's feet and destroying as the last enemy death itself, the great conqueror of the race. Beyond the close of that age out into endless duration floats the sweet strain of "no tears, no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain." Rev. xxi. 4. What scenes of delight! what lovely forms! What landscapes of transcendant beauty on which to gaze! What holy society with which to mingle! What noble characters of all the ages with whom to hold converse! and what music shall swell and tremble on the pure air of Canaan! Yes, scenes surpassing fable, and yet true; scenes of accomplished bliss! which who can see, though but in distant prospect, and not feel his soul refreshed with foretaste of the joy. Will the earth with its sons lingering beauties of Paradise end in smoke? Will it burn up, or blow up or freeze into a cold body unfit for forms of life? Scientists have suggested all these ways for the earth to go out of being. But the voice of Revelation contradicts the theories of men. "One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh, but the earth abideth forever." Eccl. i. 4. "Who laid the foundations of the earth that it should not be moved for ever." Psa. civ. 5. The future habitable earth is to be subjected to Christ. Why believe that it will be blotted out after it is thus subjected. The earth is to be filled with the glory of the Lord. When thus filled why destroy it? It was to be inhabited by man as its rightful tenant, who was to multiply and fill it. It is not yet filled though this was Jehovah's purpose. It was to be subdued or made subservient to man's uses. This is only partially carried out. The scientists who flippantly pronounce the doom of our planet view it in the light of the boy's cob house, built to be kicked to pieces. This is an impeachment of God's wisdom. The ages to come and ages to come of the texts quoted, stand related to the earth and its obedient occupants, for it is written, "The righteous shall inherit the land and dwell therein forever." Psa. xxxvii. 29. The kingdom which the saints are to possess is described as being under the whole heavens (Dan. vii. 27) and as, symbolized by the stone magnified to a mountain, filling the whole earth. It is this kingdom that the saints take and possess forever, even for ever and ever. Dan. vii. 18.

When the kingdom shall have been established and Jesus and his co-rulers in possession, open and avowed enemies destroyed, great armies disconfitted, what then? What about earth's population at large? The illiterate of the east, the unfortunate classes of bread winners in various pursuits, scrimping to make ends meet, always struggling to solve the problem of bare existence? Has not the Psalmist referred to such in this pathetic strain, "He shall deliver the needy when he crieth and the poor that hath no helper," (Psa. lxxii. 12), and verses 13, 14, "He shall have pity on the poor and needy. He shall redeem their soul from oppression and violence, and precious shall their blood be in his sight." Countless thousands in civilized lands are today blistering their lips with the sad words "no body cares for us." The other day I was reading in Josiah Strong's book, entitled "Our Country," in the chapter dealing with the problem of poverty in the great cities especially New York. The description is a quotation from the report of a commission chosen by the city authorities to investigate the condition of the poor in certain quarters of the metropolis. The description in bare detail is so pathetic and appalling that when I read it tears flowed from my eyes, and I exclaimed from the depth of my heart, Come Lord Jesus! Come quickly! What affected me most was the condition of childhood in these purlieus of vice, poverty, shame, ignorance and misery. Think of it, ye who have hearts of pity. Children reared in utter need of every thing essential to their well being and happiness. No companionship but vileness, no playground but narrow and filthy alleys, or the narrower tenement rooms. No air to breath but that reeking with foulness thick enough to be stirred with a stick. No sunshine but such as straggled in between buildings and through smoke and emanations of festering garbage heaps. No delightful objects and scenes on which to look with childish eyes—instead only the ugly, repulsive and loathsome forms of clumsy art all about them, even the "human face divine" here under the bad conditions of health, appearing sickly and sallow, and wearing the impress which long familiarity with vice is sure to be daguerretyped there. To such children born into the merciless grip of poverty and vice there is really no childhood. They were described as looking old in their tender years. At the present time all that is being done by the few kindly hearts and hands enlisted in behalf of the suffering millions of our race crowded and huddled together in the great cities of the civilized world, is but as the drop in the bucket, and the small dust of the balance, weighing almost nothing against the mighty mass that needs lifting from its condition of want and depravity. Once on his throne and his mighty host of teachers and reformers educated for all kinds of reformatory work are about him, what will he do? Destroy the entire population of the globe? There are quite a number of expositors who say that is just what he will do. But what shall we do with this 72nd Psa. from which I have quoted. The King is on his throne and his work before him. It is written, He shall break in pieces the oppressor. There are in his broad dominion very many who are not oppressors. They are here designated "thy [illegible]," "the needy" and it is said he will deliver, spare help, save and redeem them. This is what he does for them in contrast with what he does to oppressors. Vs. 2 and 4, represent him as a judge vindicating the cause of his people and reversing the false judgments of human courts. It will not do to say that this glowing prophecy met its accomplishment in Solomon. I know it reads above the page "David's prayer for Solomon." Human hands put these words there. David's prayers sometimes had a wider scope than Solomon's reign. They took in the reign of his greater Son. The Psalm describes a reign of which Solomon's peaceful reign was but a faint type. Look at the duration of the fear, or reverence for this branch of David's house. "As long as the sun and moon endure throughout all generations." (verse 5) and the duration of peace in his day. Verse 7, "His name enduring for ever, and all nations calling him blessed;" verse 17 and last, the whole earth filled with his glory. There will be such a condition of earth's population at the time referred to by David, that nothing less than the surpassing wisdom, power, goodness and mercy of the Son of God, will be adequate to settle all the questions which will need adjusting at that crisis in human affairs; questions which had previously engaged the attention of statesmen, judges, Christian philanthropists and moral reformers, and exhausted their wisdom to devise ways and means, that at best could only mitigate the evils that appealed to them for remedy. What a splendid opportunity for the Son of David to put in practice his superior wisdom his ability to rule to administer justice and equity, and to extend mercy and benevolence to cases needing these. As we gather from this Psalm such will be the field of his administration and that of his immortal associates. The earth will be the theater of his and their future action, following which as a result all nations will praise him.

The Story of a Happy Christian Life.—No. 7.

The prophetical times do not terminate at the coming of Christ and the resurrection of the dead, they cover the duration of the rule of Rome, of Turkey and Russia, and their alienation of the Holy Land and Jews; the re-building of Jerusalem; the salvation, in a temporal sense, of Egypt etc, all connected with the days of Messiah's coming but not pointing out the hour when he will appear.

We ought to study these prophetical periods, as we did our lessons in arithmetic in school-days; go over them again and again until we are perfectly familiar with them; with the historical events at which they commence, and with those at which they terminate, and also their measures in both solar and lunar time. Could we attend a Bible School, week after week, as we used to attend day school, and have these matters demonstrated to us by a competent teacher, and go over the problems ourselves one by one, working them out on the black-board, it would be of incalculable value to us, and not only to us, but also to others whom we may be called upon to teach. I have followed H. Grattan Guiness, as to the application of the period given in the preceding article. Professor Totten's application of it is entirely different, but as my purpose in giving it, was only to show that our early Advent believers, looking upon it as they did, as a measuring line that reached from the decree of Artaxerxes to the coming of Christ, and finding that it terminated in 1843 or 1844, fixed upon those years as the ones in which to look for his coming. I will give no other explanation but will return to my story.

But here is a letter from Bro. N. M. Catlin, written to my father May 24, 1844. That was just before the Association was held by the Baptists in Oswego, June 1844. He must have been one of the friends that Auntie Willard was looking for at that meeting; for he regrets in his letter that he cannot be there.

I will give you some of the extracts from the letter that you may see how the dear Adventist brethren felt as the day drew near, when they expected Jesus would appear in the clouds in power and great glory. He says:—

"The time of trial has arrived; meeting houses are closed against us; members who believe the advent near are excluded from the church; our names are cast out as evil; yet I rejoice, remembering the promise; I have com[illegible]ing the apostle [illegible] xi., can be better [illegible]od if we keep in mind the fact that in the Old Testament the veil was the emblem of maiden modesty before man, Gen xxiv 65, and conjugal chastity, Gen xx 16. For a woman to have her head uncovered would indicate independence of her husband, and that she had withdrawn from his power, I Cor vii 4; hence a suspected wife had her head uncovered by the priest. Numb v 18. Paul affirms that the woman is of the man, v 8, that is, Out of the man, Gen ii 23; that she was created for the man, v 9. For this cause, v 10, the woman must wear a covering—a badge which expresses her subjection to man. Because women are subject to their husbands, they are not, for this reason, a slave to their superiors any more than children are slaves to their parents. I Tim iii 4, 5. God's law, Gen iii 16, Nature itself, I Cor xi 14, and custom, v 15, all unite in one voice declaring woman's subordination to man. The woman who denies her dependent condition, and who, through pride, usurps man's authority, and claims to be his equal, violates God's law, and becomes by her immodest conduct, a thing of naught so far as man is concerned. In aspiring to be a king she forfeits her position of Queen, and looses all that is Queenly, womanly and sisterly. Her long hair is her glory and covering, v 15. Let her remember to be dependent, humble, loving and sisterly, as the Scriptures require, and she will find herself Queen on earth, the glory of man. v 7.

The Angels That Left Their Habitation.

Will you be kind enough to explain what Peter and Jude mean by the angels that left their habitation, estate, etc.—J. S.

Reply.

The Hebrew word Malak, generally translated angel in the Old Testament, means a Messenger, agent. The Greek word Angelos, translated angel in the New Testament, has the same meaning. The word angel is like the word general, judge, president, etc.; it states position and not nature. It is an office—one sent, a messenger—Hence one may hold the office whether mortal or immortal. God may send a mortal man as a blessed refreshing from contemplating the disappointment of the disciples when our Lord was crucified. They freely owned that they 'had hoped that it had been he which should have redeemed Israel.' But their disappointment was for their good. The event which seemed to them the ending of all their hopes, was really the foundation of hope for them in time to come. So I think it will be with us. This will be for our good. It has already resulted in good to me. I am determined by the help of the Lord to fast often, pray much, and do the will of my God 'till he calls me hence.

I think now we should betake ourselves to the faithful study of God's Word, and try to find out what is yet for us to do to prepare for Savior's advent. I think he will have a tried people. Let us see if there is not something more for us to do to prepare ourselves to meet our Judge in peace.—Elizabeth P. Willard.

The Millennium.

When and for what purpose is the Millennium?—Emma Lindsay.

Reply.

Millennium is from the Latin Mille, a thousand years, and annus, a year. The word Millenium means the one thousand years during which Christ will personally reign on the earth, assisted by the glorified saints, Rev. xx. Christ's advent is pre-millennial, 2 Thess. ii. His reign begins at his coming, Rev. xi. 15, 16. Therefore the reign of Christ is subsequent to his coming.

The purpose of his reign is tersely stated by Paul to be the subjugated of "all enemies," 1 Cor. xv. 25. Governments will be destroyed, Rev xi 15; Zech xiv 9; Ezek xxxvii 22. Ignorance will be removed, Isa ii 3, 4; xxv 6, 9; Jer iii 17; Isa xi. And finally death itself, "the last enemy," will be extirpated, 1 Cor xv 26."

to jog their memory, to call attention to what they once knew.

Now we take God's Word and read about the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrha and the unfaithful Israelites after they came out of Egypt. Using these remarkable historic events as mileposts in the great highway of the past, we expect within reasonable proximity to Israel's fall after their deliverance from Egypt, to find angels who sinned and fell. So we ask, What other remarkable fall, a fall of messengers, took place in the neighborhood of Israel's deliverance from Egypt? Read Numb xiii. Send thou men, v 2 And Moses sent them, etc.; v 17. They were sent—were Messengers—and these spies are called angels. Jas. ii. 25.

Thank the Lord, we have found the angels that sinned! They were made messengers by divine command. They were carefully selected as representative, intelligent men. But they "sinned;" "left their habitation," "first estate" etc. They spied out the "land flowing with milk and honey." It was theirs by promise (Gen. xv. 18, 19), and they were told to go in and take it, but they "left it" like cowards, and were cast down into the darkness of hades, there to be held with "chains of darkness" until the judgment of the great day. Dear reader, take this lesson to yourself. Let us not fail to enter into God's rest through unbelief and sin, as they did. Heb. 4.

Robt. G. Higgins.

Surely It Cometh.

Quickly, unexpectedly, but surely, the day of the Lord cometh. There will be no great preparation that can be seen with the natural eye in advance of the coming of the King of kings, as is usual with royal personages. The daily papers will not chronicle the time of the advent; the streets will not be illuminated and carpeted to receive the heavenly Bridegroom; the populace will not be astir in expectancy. It will be as in the days of Noah. There will be marrying and feasting; there will be quarreling and fighting, gossiping and backbiting; there will be lying and opulence and fraud. Some professed followers of Christ will be sitting in the theater feasting lustful eyes on half-nude forms, and listening to the obscene utterances of the vilest of the vile. Some will be whirling in the giddy dance instead of being at the prayer-meeting. There will be no signs to mark the coming, except the signs that Christ tells us of in the Word, signs that are now everywhere apparent, marking the near approach of the heavenly footsteps. There are signs in the physical world, as he said in the Word.

There is a wonderful preparation going on in the spiritual realm. God is opening the eyes of some of his saints to see the closing conflict of the great spiritual warfare of the age. Damned spirits from beneath are doing the hardest fighting they have ever done. Apolyon's army is on the field in full force. Legions of devils fill the air, pouring upon the earth wars, pestilence, plagues and famines, and filling the minds of men with delusive doctrines and damnable heresies. But they that are with us are more than they that be with them. Angelic hosts encircle the saints, and there are whisperings of courage and blessed assurance of divine protection. The furnace fires of trial are at high pressure, because the time is short to finish the refining process. God is making preparation to send forth loud, long calls to the sleeping multitudes. "Awake! awake! O Zion! Put on thy beautiful garments, O Jerusalem!" John xix. 9, 10.—Mary W. Chapman.

Bro. Underwood:

In speaking about the early pioneers of the Church, by Sister Wince, Bro. Woodward and others, there is one brother who should not be forgotten. I refer to Brother D. T. Halstead. He was early in the contest for the right, and has stuck to it all the way.

The Rest in Store.

There remaineth a rest
For those who are blest,
With pardon from sin;
And who lovingly live in
The way Christ hath shown,
And in knowledge grow on.
Who have courage to speak
His Word to the weak;
Who never falter in doing,
And by good deeds keep wooing
In his way keep straight on,
Ad, all the day long.
Those who run well the race
May their Savior embrace,
When he comes them to claim;
Those his jewels to name.
Aye, they answered his call,
Were espoused to him all;
True, true, there is rest,
For each one as blest.

LESSON FOR SUNDAY MAY 19.
ISRAEL ENSLAVED IN EGYPT. EXO. i. 14.

Golden Text.—Then they cried unto the Lord in their trouble, and he saved them out of their distresses, Psa. cvii. 13. We are now entering on the consideration of some of the events recorded in the book of Exodus—Meaning the going out.—The people of Israel leaving Egypt.

In the last lesson Joseph had made himself known to his brothers, had forgiven them, and asked them to make haste, let his father know, that he was still alive, and bring him to Egypt. Israel—Jacob—Nearly fainted when he heard of Joseph, whom he had long mourned as dead. He went to Egypt, having seen his much loved son, he was willing to die. The Israelites dwelt in Goshen, choice land in Egypt. Jacob was introduced to Pharoah. The famine proved very severe, the people bought as long as they had money, then they gave their cattle in exchange for grain, then their land, and lastly themselves, thus every body and every thing in Egypt belonged to Pharoah. The famine was over, Joseph gave the people seed for the land for which they were to give Pharoah one-fifth part of the produce—crop. Joseph did not buy the land of the priests. Pharoah gave them that. The death bed scene recorded in Gen. xlix., is the most remarkable in the world's history. Jacob charged his sons to bury him in Canaan, they did, the funeral was large, magnificent and most impressive, Gen. l. Jacob died in faith, Heb. xi. 20, 21. Joseph also died in faith that the Israelites would go back to Canaan according to God's promise to Abram, Gen. xv. 13, 14, and charged his brethren to take his bones with them, Gen. l. 25. Heb. xi. 22.

There is no other story that is just like the life long story of Joseph. Let young men take special notice that he is not mentioned as being "smart" nor even a pusher, but whatever he was put to do, or could do, he did it the best he knew how, that was the secret of his success, and the secret of the success of every successful man since. As a means of success to eternal life, he had full faith in the promises of God to Abraham, Isaac and his father Jacob.

In last Sunday's lesson the Israelites were welcomed to Egypt and honored. In this lesson they are made slaves, both feared and despised. God, in the peculiar manner of letting Abram know that he would possess the land of Canaan forever, told him that his seed would be strangers—not citizens or inhabitants,—and slaves, and illtreated, but the nation that enslaved them, he would judge, Gen. xv. 13, 14. You will notice that the word slave is not used in the Bible but once, Rev. xviii. 13. The Bible words are bond, bond man, bond woman, bond servant. Cast out this bond woman, Gen. xxi. 10, Abraham's slave. Slavery is mentioned early in the world's history. All slaves were not abused. Many of them were well taken care of, and even held positions of trust and honor. Such was not the case with the Hebrews. They were in bitter bondage. The oppression became unbearable. They groaned and cried unto God, Exo. ii. 23, 24.

When Moses and Aaron went to Pharoah with the message from God to let his people go, Pharoah said, Who is this Lord, that I should obey his voice? I will not let Israel go. Then he gave orders to put more work on the men, and the Hebrew overseers were beaten because they did not force the workers to do the extra work. They, the overseers complained to Pharoah. He accused them of being idle—lazy—and demanded that they [illegible] bricks per day th[illegible] charged Moses and [illegible] the cause of their extra t[illegible] appealed to the Lord. Read Exo. v.

The Lord said. I will redeem you out of their bondage Exo. vi. 6. Moses reported this to the Israelites, but they were so crushed and despondan', they hearkened not for anguish of Spirit—mind—and cruel bondage, Exo. vi. 9. Truly it was a barbarous inhuman slavery. It drove the down-trodden Israelites beyond desperation, they had almost reached the sullen and indifferent state. Moses referred to their bondage as the iron furnace of Egypt, Deut. iv. 20. Jehovah referred to the covenant he had made with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob concerning the land of Canaan, and said, I have heard the groaning of the children of Israel.....I have remembered my covenant. I will rid you of their bondage.....Ye shall know that I am the Lord your God, which bringeth out from under the burdens of the Egyptians, Exo. vi. 5-7.

Pharoah will let you go hence, he shall surely thrust you out, Exo. xi. 1.

Ye came out of the house of bondage Exo. xiii. 3.

Lesson Text Verse 1. These are the names of the children of Israel. Gen. xlvi. 8-27.

2, 3, 4 and 5. All the souls,—persons the correct word. We have passed from the study of men, and families, to the history of the nation.

6. The result of the process of time.

7. According to God's promise Gen. xxii. 17, partly fulfilled in the past, to be completely so when the kingdom is restored to Israel, Exo. xxxvii. 21, 22.

8. A king of another dynasty—another kind of government. Not of the shepherd kings of Joseph's time. Had no interest in the great and good deeds of Joseph.

9. He was somewhat surprised and alarmed at the healthy and rapid increase of the Israelites.

10. Deal wisely—artfully, politically—use policy—There was nothing of common interest between the Egyptians and Israelites. The Israelites were the objects of God's promises. The Egyptians had gods many.

11. Pithom and Raamses,—Store houses or cities, supposed to have been in Goshen, explorers are sure they have found the site of Pithom, but not Raamses.

12. God for his people. Pharaoh against.

If God be for us, who can be against us? (with success) Romans viii. 31.

The failure of Pharoah's plan troubled them.

13. The Egyptians began the oppression of slavery.

14. The old way of brick making by hand, even under fair ordinary circumstances was very hard grinding monotonous work, under Egyptian slave drivers it must have been indeed bitter servitude. A detailed account in Exo. v.

According to many modern stories, the first part of the golden text has been often carried out, and the baneful part is, that those who have cried to the Lord in their trouble, never do it any other time. Let us impress ourselves with this great truth. Those who were saved out of their distress were those who had heard, and believed, and confessed their faith in the covenant made with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. When they were in trouble and cried to the Lord, they were helped. At the present time the promise is, He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, Mark xvi. 15, 16. Thanks to God and the Lord Jesus Christ for the promise.

P. Neal.

If such a change is made it will be to enable more of our workers to be present. The date will not be earlier than July 25th, if such change is made.

Brother Wince will present the subject of "Scripture Symbols" at two sessions of our Institute work.

This study will be very instructive because Bro. Wince is not a novice. He has given much time to this study and we may consider that our time is well spent under the instructions of such teachers.

Remember, dear young people, as Bro. Woodward has suggested, Bro. Wince and others are noble defenders of the truth. We will do well to sacrifice other pleasure in order to receive instruction from these capable teachers of the Word. Knowing full well that we must take up the work of teaching sooner or later, let us avail ourselves of every opportunity to prepare for this great work.

[illegible] study of [illegible] able one.

While the Bible is essentially one Book, its different books were written by many authors at different times under circumstances that gives each book a distinctive characteristic.

These books as we have observed, were circulated separately before they were gathered together into the Canon of Scripture.

In the study of these different books in order to derive full benefit from the Sacred writers, we must meet them on their own ground as much as possible.

Since our study began some objections have been noted to the study of Old Testament literature for young people.

Yet these books, as we see, set forth the story of redemption, and while some are more important than others, none could be spared in telling the complete story.

Each book has a spiritual and moral purpose in view, and when the historical setting is taken into account, these books of the Old Testament and their teaching are seen to be so far in advance of their times as the New Testament and its teaching is in advance of our own age.

Some who do not realize this are apt to misjudge and misplace the teaching. For instance, one will say, "Jesus' teaching on the Mount was not intended for this age; for we cannot live up to it under present conditions." But note this, In every age God has separated to himself a people who are set as lights in the world. They are reflecting the light in advance of their own generation. God is separating you from the present evil world and he expects you to reflect his truth. He expects us to practice his teaching though it requires us to live in advance of the present evil world and the surroundings in which we are placed. If we could have this continually in mind, what manner of persons would we be in all manner of conversation and conduct.

The book of Genesis is a book whose characteristic feature is one of personal character. Did you notice how the author relates in minutest detail some incidents—turning points in the lives of these men? If you did not, read again the story.

Again, why does the author of Genesis relate these incidents of evil doings? In this we find the purpose for which the book was written. It was necessary to describe man's primeval condition and his lapse into sin which rendered salvation indispensable.

Man's place in [illegible] is given; the presence of evil [illegible]explained. Jehovah, the one God, is clearly distinguished from the host of heathen gods, and as a solemn protest against that system was the call of Abraham to go from his country and friends, there to separate a chosen people from which Messiah was to come. A Messiah who should redeem mankind from his fall into sin.

When we judge these characters, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and Joseph by the standard of perfection, the New Testament teaching, we see how imperfect they were. They were human like ourselves, failing in points judged by the perfect standard. Yet when we judge them by the surroundings in which they moved, we find how far in advance of the people they were with whom they sojourned. God called them for a purpose, and these were obedient to his calling.

Here in Genesis begins that wonderful story of faith and obedience. That faith that lifted these men above the surroundings in which they lived, and made them shine as stars in the midst of darkness, a gloom as deep as midnight. There in the midst of gloom, in peril, and almost despair we hear the voice of a man in prayer, "O God of my father Abraham, and God of my father Isaac, the Lord which saidst unto me, Return unto thy country and to thy kindred, and I will deal well with thee; I am not worthy of the least of all the mercies and of all the truth, which thou hast shewed unto thy servants."

Does not this man's faith rise in judgment upon those who are living in the light of the mid-day sun?

Let us here learn the secret of true faith in God, a faith that leads on in the path of obedience, ever rising higher and higher above the weaknesses of those who trust in their own strength, and the moral influences of those [illegible]

As we [illegible] of the [illegible]like [illegible] Had Joseph been living in the gospel age illumined by the manifold revelations of God, would not his character still be counted as the highest type of Christian development? Yet his character was developed in a heathen land under the most depressing conditions.

Let us study well these lessons that we may be able to understand what is meant when we read. "Be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world." And again, "Ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people. That ye should shew forth the praises of him who called you out of darkness into his marvelous light." "Hereunto were ye called, because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that we should follow in his steps."

Harriet E. Price.

To the Household of Faith greeting:

We want your attention for a few minutes as we have good news to tell. Bro. W. H. Wilson has visited us and helped us to put on the royal and sin covering name of the Lord Jesus in baptism. We have waited and trusted these many years that our baptism would be consummated according to the Scriptures, and we feel like we owe very much indeed to our dear Bro. Wilson as he came many, many miles to perform this most important and essential rite for us, yea essential, for we believe eternal life hangs upon it. Now Paul says, "Know ye not that so many of us have been baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death, therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life, for if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death we shall also be in the likeness of his resurrection." So we must be buried with Christ in the liquid grave before we can be raised with him from the literal grave. No baptism, no part nor lot in Christ's glorious resurrection which was an incorruptible and immortal resurrection. So we consider baptism of vital importance to us. Jesus says Rev. xx. 6, Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection, on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years. We want a part in the first resurrection and reign with Christ a thousand years, when he comes to establish his kingdom on the earth. Then he will put down all rule and all authority and reign as universal king on David's throne, then the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea. We are not now in the condition we were before our baptism. Paul says, "that at that time ye were Gentiles in the flesh without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world. But now, (since baptism into Christ) "Ye are no more strangers and foreigners but citizens with the saints and of the household of God, and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone." Now we ask the brothers and sisters every where to pray for us that we will not, but that we continue grounded and settled and not moved away from the hope of the gospel, "For we are made partakers of Christ if we hold the begining of our confidence steadfast unto the end. Now to him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, be glory in the church throughout all ages. Amen.

We remain in hope of eternal life when Jesus comes.

Mrs. A. J. Martin,
Mrs. Ernest Cromwell.

Elder Huggins:

I have a question as to when the "Last Days," or "Times," set in. Joel ii. 28-32, prophesys of a time when certain events would take place, viz:

1. "I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh".....Also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my spirit."
2. "Wonders in the heavens."
3. "Sun turned into darkness."
4. "Moon into blood."

In Acts ii. we have an account of the pouring out of the spirit on the Day of Pentecost. Peter says that fulfilled Joel's prophecy, with regard to

1. The pouring out of the spirit.
2. "Wonders in heaven," "Blood" "fire," "smoke," etc.
3. "Sun turned into darkness."
4. "Moon into blood," etc.

As to the time when these events were to become historic facts, he says, "before that great and notable day of the Lord come." In verse 17 he says: "It shall come to pass in the last days, saith God."

The last days of the old dispensation ended when the veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom, and the first days of the New, in force and effect when opened to us "through the veil; that is to say his flesh."

At the time the spirit was poured out the "flesh" "Veil" was in effect, and the Priest was in the holiest of All, officiating in the capacity of the priest. This clearly shows the last days of the Old were ended, and the first days of the New were begun, when the spirit on Pentecost was poured out.

What are the "last days" Peter speaks of?

Are the first days of the new dispensation, the last days of the Old? Did Peter refer to the "last days," of the New dispensation? If so, then please show how the last days of the New could exist contemporaneous with the beginning of the New. Please show when the darkening of the sun, and the moon turned into blood became historic facts?

Were not these to become facts when the spirit should be poured out? Did not Peter affirm, that the pouring out of the spirit on Pentecost fulfilled Joel's prophecy?

Did the great and notable day of the Lord come before Pentecost?

W. H. Wilson.

(The above letter by our esteemed Bro. Wilson is printed, not for the purpose of reply, as the writer has given up the Question Box department, but that some brother "mighty in the Scriptures," might have the opportunity of rendering the truth a service by expounding in a satisfactory way, the important Scriptures inquired about in our Brother's letter. God add his blessing to all efforts to make his Word clear. Your Brother, Rout. G. Hudgins.

The Bible Our Book.

As the mariner uses the compass by which he steers, as the captain of a vessel uses his sextant to ascertain his exact position when at sea, and a pilot uses his chart to guide the vessel so that the shoals and rocks may be avoided, so should we use the Word of God—the Holy Bible. Amid the strife of tongues, the clash of creeds, the collision of interests, and the Babel of sounds, which would bewilder our souls, let us listen to the still, small voice of God speaking authoritatively and distinctly in tones of mercy and love the Word of life. If we wish to escape the phosphoric vapors arising from the deadly marshes and swamps of infidelity, or popery and priestism, we must study prayerfully, constantly, intelligently, the Word of God—the Scriptures—the light of life—for they speak of Christ.

Safe in Jesus.

In the second century they brought a martyr before a king, and the king wanted him to recant and give up Christ and Christianity; but the man spurned the proposition. But the king said, "If you do not deny, I shall banish you." The man smiled and answered, "You cannot banish me from Christ; for he says he will never leave me nor forsake me." The king became angry and said, "Well, I will confiscate your property and take it all from you." And the man replied, "My treasures are laid up on high; you cannot get them." The king became still more angry and said, "I will kill you." "Why," the man answered, "I have been dead for forty years; I have been dead with Christ; dead to the world; my life is hid with Christ in God, and you cannot touch it."

Charity is never lost; it may be of no service to those it is bestowed on; yet it ever does a work of beauty and grace upon the heart of the giver.

When you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "The Restitution," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and send that.

The 49th Annual Conference of the Church of God in Michigan, will be held in Dutton, Kent County, Mich., Thursday evening May 30, 1907, and continue over the following Sunday, May 30th, 31st and June 1st and 2nd. Once again the invitation comes from Dutton, the dear old gathering place, to have the Annual Meeting held at their place. In the past there have been many good and profitable meetings, and it is expected that this meeting will be enjoyed by all, and all that are interested in the truth are cordially invited to attend. A program is promised and will be published as soon as arranged. Dutton is situated on the Michigan Central R. R. ten miles southeast of Grand Rapids.

Emma Jackman, Sec'y.

The Annual June Meeting and Conference of the Church of God in the State of Indiana, will be held at Antioch Church, commencing Friday morning June 7, and continuing over the following Sunday.

A committee has been appointed to arrange a programme for publication. It is expected that our home preachers will be assisted in proclaiming the glad tidings by those who preach the gospel in other States.

We trust that all who can will meet with us, that our hearts may be cheered by your presence, and by your words of faith and hope. If we shall bring to this meeting a free will offering of love to God, and charity toward all, God will bless us and our meeting shall be a blessing.

To reach Antioch Church those coming by train will come either to Plymouth, or to Argos, where conveyance can be had to the place of meeting. Once more we urge you to come—come in the spirit and love of Christ.

Those coming to Plymouth please notify J. H. Willey, Plymouth. Those coming to Argos, please notify Wm. Railsback, Argos.

The annual May Meeting of the Churches of God along the Niagara, will be held at Fonthill, Ont., May 17-19, 1907. The regular time for this meeting would be one week later, but by placing it at the above date, the services of Mrs. Mary A. Woodward have been secured.

Fonthill now boasts of a new trolley line, The Niagara Central Route, which has recently inaugurated a schedule to its doors from Thorold. The trolley can be taken at Port Dalhousie or St. Catherines by people traveling from the west or north, and those from the east and south will find it very convenient to take the trolley at Niagara Falls, either side of the river.

This the third annual meeting that the Church at Fonthill has called. The members have learned that the impulse which these meetings give to the work is indeed great, and they feel very thankful to all who give their influence to the work by attending these meetings.

Every one interested in the truths of the Bible, is most urgently requested to attend.

Last year a step was taken in the direction of organizing a Niagara Conference, embracing the congregations and isolated members in Ontario and Western New York. The thought has also been suggested that the geographic limitations be enlarged so as to make it possible for all the brotherhood in those parts not already organized into conferences, to co-operate in this movement, under the heading possibly of the Northeast Conference. One of the objects of such an effort would be to strengthen one another through meetings similar to this one.

Another object is to systemize a plan whereby all could unite in carrying the work to new fields, encouraging men and women of talent and ability to proclaim the truths of the Book of God.

Let all who think they might be interested in such a move try to attend this gathering, as also any who are interested only in the local meeting.

F. L. Austin.

The Twentieth Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus in Iowa, will be held at Waterloo, Ia. Aug. 17-25, inclusive. Programme will appear later.

Selections.

Notes by the Way.

Having closed the services at Boise, Oklahoma, I then went to Carnegie, and for a day and a night visited with Bro. Morrow, and Elder Dorsey. We had a pleasant visit together. Near this place is an Indian camp. Indians are to be seen on the streets of Carnegie at almost any time. They reminded me of the many romantic Indian stories I used to read when I was a boy. They are the same today. They wear their hair as long as a woman, put up in three braids, one on each side of the face, and one on the back of the head, wrapped around with some bright colored cloth. They still love to wear those long ear ornaments, and they also love to paint their cheeks a bright vermillion, but the white women prefer to have a pale face, they use a white powder.

The government obliges the Indian to wear some kind of pants when they appear on the streets, but even then, they wear the white cloth rolled up around their waists. They are something like the leopard, which does not change its spots. The Indian has neither beard, mustache, or eyebrows, they pluck them all out with a small pair of pincers.

The time came for me to say good bye to the dear ones in Christ. Mr. Dorsey accompanied me to the train, where I started for Higgins, Texas. Quite a number of Indian men, women and children got on board the train bound for Anadarko, where there is another camp of Indians. The Indian women had a jolly time, conversing and laughing. The men never exhibit any emotions either from mirth or sorrow; it is considered a weakness, unmanly and undignified for a man to express such emotions.

After a journey of two days and one night, I arrived at Higgins, Texas. Here I met Sister Long and husband, and Bro. and Sister Randolph, and enjoyed a splendid visit. At this place I spent my time in taking a much needed rest, in place of preaching. I did preach once, however. The pastor of the Methodist church came to me and requested me to preach to his congregation on the Sunday night. I accepted of his invitation, and preached the words of truth and righteousness to a good sized congregation, to which they gave respectful attention. A number came to me after the close of the services and expressed their appreciation.

I enjoyed my visit at Higgins so much. We communed together over the blessed things that are so near to the hearts of true and faithful believers, who are untainted with erroneous liberalism.

Mr. Long is connected with the National Bank of Higgins. I was invited to visit the bank. Bro. Randolph and myself did so. We were invited inside to inspect the machinery of banking. Mr. Long showed us the vaults, and other appliances necessary to the running of a banking business. I was especially interested in what they call a fire and burglar proof safe. It is considered so safe that insurance companies will insure banks which use them, against the loss of money contained therein, against both fire and burglars. Mr. Long opened this, and showed us the inside containing bags of money, and explained its merits, and intricate locks. It has both a combination and a time lock. If a person should succeed in opening the combination lock, the time lock could not be opened by any one until the time shall have expired at which the lock was set.

We also received an invitation from the Editor of the city paper to visit his office. After leaving the bank, we visited this plant. The proprietor then showed us his printing material and machinery. Being an old time printer myself, a printing office always had an attraction for me. We enjoyed talking for a time about things pertaining to our craft.

After hearing about the fire and burglar proof vault, it made me think about another fire and burglar proof bank,—the Bank of Heaven. That is absolutely proof against either moth, thieves, or fire. The question comes to me how many have treasure in that bank? The Banker is coming soon to give the depositors all that is their due. Can you remember the dates at which you made deposits? Are you sure that you have made any deposits there at all? If you haven't any thing there, or have no account with that bank, the Banker will have nothing for you when he comes to reckon with, or settle the accounts of depositors. Make haste to deposit all you possibly can before the Banker comes. This bank pays much larger interest than any earthly bank.

It would be good business judgment to deposit in this bank. The time came to say good bye to the dear ones in Christ at Higgins.

I then started for my next appointment at Brownwood, Texas. This was a new "out post," over six hundred miles distant. I found that I would have to change cars at Fort Worth, and wait eight hours for my train. Knowing this, I wrote to Bro. S. T. Blessing, who met me at the depot. He then took me to his business place, and entertained me right hospitably. He showed me the principal points of interest about the thriving city of Fort Worth. We talked some on that which is nearest our hearts. The time seemed to pass so rapidly. The time came to part company, and I then resumed my journey to Brownwood. As I stated before, that this place was a new "out post." I found here only two believers, who had not as yet obeyed the gospel, but were anxious to have the opportunity to do so. I preached a series of discourses, to such as came to hear, and some of these expressed themselves as receiving benefit.

On Sunday afternoon we took a drive up the river for about two miles, where we could find a convenient spot to administer baptism. We then entered the stream and I baptized into the one sacred name Mrs. A. J. Martin, and Mrs. Bertha Crandwell. As I raised Sister Martin from the watery grave, she exclaimed, "Praise the Lord!" I now introduce to the household of faith these two sisters. Please write to them at Brownwood, Texas, and bid them welcome into the family. These believers were well informed and are deeply in earnest. Like most believers, they were poor in this world's goods. Before I left, Sister Martin handed one dollar and a half, with the remark, "I can only offer you a widow's mite." That was all right, I don't regret going there, although I had to travel over six hundred miles to get to this "out post." I should have been unworthy of bearing the sacred name of Jesus, if I had refused to make a sacrifice to assist these dear ones to put on the sacred name of Jesus. Sacrifices add to our account in the Bank of Heaven. Deposits placed there pay much better than any earthly gain.

While at Brownwood, I received an invitation from a Christadelphian brother, to stop off at Lometa, and preach over Sunday at his place. I accepted the invitation. Having bid good bye to these new members of our Father's family I started about seven o'clock for Lometa, and arrived there about nine o'clock A. M., on Saturday. Doctor L. met me at the depot, and took me to his home, and hospitably entertained me. The Doctor found that every place where a public meeting could be held, had been previously engaged, so I could not hold any meetings there. However, we had pleasant talks together on matters pertaining to the Blessed Hope. On Monday morning, about nine o'clock, I started for Alvin, Texas, about 300 miles further south, about twenty-nine miles from Galveston. I arrived at Alvin, about 8:15 P. M., and was warmly greeted by Sister Carlton, husband and daughters, and also Sister Bender.

Alvin is called the garden spot of Texas, and it surely is. The first crate of strawberries was picked in December, and at this date (April), they are still being picked. I have enjoyed feasting on this delicious fruit. As I walked in the Carlton garden, it was delightful to see the beautiful roses, and enjoy the delightful odor. Roses always find a place on the dining table. I also saw the green oranges hanging in clusters upon the tree. The green figs are developing finely. There is a factory being built here to preserve the figs from the fig orchards. The orange groves are also promising a fair yield.

I did not preach here, but enjoyed a short rest, and a pleasant visit with God's faithful children at that place. May we all meet where partings will be no more.

My next appointment is at Nottaway, Texas, this is also a new "out post," where I have never been yet. I start for that place in the morning. You will hear from me again soon.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

W. H. WILSON.

We wish to avoid the labor and expense of mailing statements to our patrons. If each one who has not as yet paid for this year would send in his renewal at once, we will appreciate the favor.

Account Giving.

There is certainly a great day of accounts coming, when our Lord will reward every one according as her or his work has been.

The great concern of each one should be, What have I done upon which to expect reward? If you should judge yourself, what would your judgment be?

Our talents differ, and each one will be held accountable for the use of such talent, whatever that may be. If you have only one, use that.

Some one says, what can I do? Why you can circulate literature touching the truth if nothing else. "There is no one but who can do that. Will that do any good? Oh, yes. Let me tell you something. Some people have bought several copies of "Pine Woods Bible Class" and lent them to their friends and neighbors. It being easy and attractive reading, most people will read it. It is bearing fruit already. I have just been told of a man who had become discouraged. He had listened to preachers of different denominations, and found they contradicted each other. He began to drift into infidelity, when a Brother put a copy of "Pine Woods Bible Class" into his hands. Now in place of infidelity, he is rejoicing in new found light. It would take too much space to tell of other cases. Try this work, and add some stars to your crown.

The Students Text Book is already an assured success, and will be printed after I get home from this present trip.

I desire that all who want it, to send in their names in advance, that I may know how many to print. All you order now, you will be sure to get when printed. The price will be fifty cents.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

W. H. WILSON.

Syriac New Testament.

A new edition of Murdock's Translation of the Syriac New Testament has just been issued by a Boston publishing house, and we have arranged to supply our readers with the work. The regular price is $2.50, and every Bible student should own this book. It is bound in half leather, and lies open in the hand when being used. The printing is clear and plain, and the paper excellent. We have so arranged with the publishers that we can supply this book for a limited time only at a reduced price, which will enable all who wish this valuable aid to the study of God's Word to possess it. We can offer it now at $2.00 post paid. All who wish to avail themselves of this low rate should do so at once.

Barman D. C. Robison has issued a small 16-page tract on the subject "Man is Mortal." It is of convenient size to enclose in an envelop, and can be had for 2 cents each, or 15 cents for 12, or $1.50 for 100 copies. Bro. Robison is so well known as a clear and lucid writer that no words that we can pen would commend his work, more than will the bare announcement of his name. If you are in the mood to do a little missionary work send to Brother Robison at 506 So. Limestone St. Springfield, O. and get a supply of these tracts.

A New Tract.

The Great Divine Healer vs Latter-Day Healers, by Uncle John Foore.

A Tract for the last days. Should be read by every thinking Christian.

Paul 2 Tim. iii. 13. "But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived."

Matt. vii. 21. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works. And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

Brethren, these tracts have gone into many families, both to brethren and people of other denominations, a few infidels, and one Christian Scientist, and all seem to be well pleased with it; but only a few of the brethren have sent to me any help in the way of paying for the tracts, and tracts are very expensive. We are anxious to have more published on different subjects. Please help to send these Tracts out among the people.

Send orders to John Foore, at 2012 W. Corning Ave. Parsons, Kan. The price is 10 cents each.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Your loving brother.

The River of God.

The River of God, how serenely it flows!
An antidote sure for our cares and our woes;
How refreshing the draught from its blossom-fringed side,
Giving beauty and strength that will ever abide.

Poor travelers we, on this desert plain,
Where comes not dissension, nor pessimism,
Let us turn our weary steps to the river so clear;
And banish all doubt and each withering fear.

Bleat River of God! by the side I will stay
And hear thy dear music as life wears away;
I would join in thy song with a calm, trusting heart
Till I to the clime of the holy depart.

And there, where is flowing the River of Life,
Where come no sad thoughts, and no wavering strife,
I shall see the fond friends of my spirit once more
As they roam in the light of Eternity's shore.

Oh, theme most transporting! a heavenly home
Where earth's weary children shall purified roam,
Where a halo of bliss shall encircle each brow,
As before God's bright throne they adoringly bow.

The Hour of Judgment.

There are doubtless many difficulties to be encountered in reading, and correctly apprehending the things revealed in the book of Revelation. It is folly on the part of man to assume that he justly understands all knowledge necessary to a proper interpretation and application of the things revealed by symbols, and in a form so enigmatical as is manifest in the construction of the apocalypse. The design of its makeup appears to be two-fold, to conceal, and yet reveal.

It is a source of bewilderment to those who are indifferent and disinclined to make any effort to understand the work and purpose of Jehovah; but to those who hunger and thirst after knowledge divine it is a gentle tonic, creating anew a spiritual appetite that instead of debilitating, invigorates and strengthens not only our understanding, but our faith and confidence in all that the prophets and apostles have written. It therefore it bewilders and blinds those who love darkness rather than light, it most assuredly enlightens and encourages the faithful, who patiently and persistently seek to know more and more of the wisdom and knowledge of the Creator's work in the earth. Moreover, what is still more refreshing to the earnest seeker after an understanding of things prophetically revealed, is that the light thereof is constantly increasing, slowly it may be, but shining more brilliantly on his pathway as he moves onward in the study of the Word.

An outline view of events transpiring in the hour of judgment is given in language as follows:

"And I beheld when he had opened the sixth seal, and lo, there was a great earthquake, and the sun became black as sack cloth of hair, and the moon became as blood; and the stars of heaven fell unto the earth, even as a fig tree casteth her untimely figs, when she is shaken of a mighty wind; and the heavens departed as a scroll when it is rolled together, and every mountain and island were moved out of their places. And the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains and the mighty men, and every bondman, and every free man hid themselves in the dens, and in the rocks of the mountains. And said to the rocks and mountains, Fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth upon the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb, for the great day of his wrath is come, and who shall be able to stand." Rev. vi. 12-17. The foregoing picture of what will occur in the prophetic hour to come, is in general terms descriptive of such a political and ecclesiastical upheaval, as the world of mankind had never witnessed before. It is a sudden and violent interruption of the ordinary course of things that no human agency can either restrain or control. The political and ecclesiastical sun and moon are darkened, and the stars fall to the earth, that is the present rulers, kings and princes are brought down on a level with the masses, and seek to hide themselves from the face of him whose indignation is made manifest in the wrath of the Lamb.

It is hardly justifiable to infer that such a political and ecclesiastical revolution as the foregoing quotation indicates will occur in a moment of time, for the number and magnitude of events that transpire in the "great day of his wrath" require time, in order to accomplish the work designed.

The hour of judgment and the great day of his wrath are identical, that is descriptive of an epoch, styled in another place "a little season." The details that go to fill up the outline of the picture are symbolically set forth by the seals, and the seven vials of wrath. Four of the seals are descriptive of events that occur in the hour of judgment, and beyond a doubt in my judgment all the vials of wrath are executed in the same hour, for they "fill up the wrath of God" or the execution of those judgments, that brings the nations into subjection to the Lord Jesus and his saints.

John was in the Spirit of or in the Lord's day, that is in the day when he takes to himself his great power and inaugurates his reign on the earth. It is dramatically expressed as follows, "I looked and behold a door was opened in heaven, and the first voice which I heard was as it were of a trumpet, talking with me, which said, Come up hither, and I will show thee things which must be hereafter, and immediately I was in the Spirit." The heaven into which John entered through the open door, was the future heaven established in the Lord's day, or in the hour of judgment. If we would see things as John saw them we must keep in his company, and see them from the same point of view. What did John see? The answer follows, "Behold a throne was set in heaven and one sat on the throne." What more did he see? And round about the throne were four and twenty seats, I saw four and twenty elders sitting, clothed in white raiment, and they had on their heads crowns of gold.....And in the midst of the throne and round about the throne, were four living creatures full of eyes before and behi. Rev. iv. For a full description of the 24 elders and the 4 living creatures the reader has only to turn and read the whole of the 4th chapter. The question arises what and who do the four living creatures represent? They are said to be full of eyes before and behind and also within, indicating that they are full of life and intelligence. Fulness of life justifies the conclusion that they are spiritual beings, and therefore immortal and incorruptible. They are identified by the song that they sing in ascribing praise and worthiness unto the Lamb that was slain. And they, the 24 elders and 4 living creatures, sung a new song saying, Thou art worthy to take the book or scroll and open the seals thereof, for thou wast slain and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred and tongue and people and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth."

It will be seen from the above testimony, that the 24 elders and the 4 living creatures represent the saints, the one body of Christ glorified and exalted to reign as kings and priests on the earth. They are present when the first four seals are opened, thus showing that the events symbolically represented under the first four seals transpire in the hour of judgment. The little book or rather scroll was written within and without, the seals on one side, and the trumpets on the other. The seals on the outside of the scroll had to be opened, before it was possible to learn what the trumpets signified, because all the trumpets come to the light under the seventh seal. The seventh seal and the seven trumpets in time are co-extensive, that is they compass all the time devoted to the events transpiring under the trumpets. Of course this is a long period extending back from the hour of judgment over all the historic events and agencies that bastioned to the development of the great apostasy, the downfall of pagan Rome, and the visible manifestation of the papal hierarchy, including the judgments that followed against the Greco-Latin mongo worshipers of eastern and western Europe, of which we have hardly as yet seen the full end.

But some one may ask, how I know that the first four seals are descriptive of events that occur in the hour of judgment? My answer is first, I know by the symbols employed interpreted i. the light of what the prophets have written. The visions of John are all rooted and grounded in the prophets. The old Scriptures are the best commentary, and the only reliable source of light by which to interpret the book of Revelation.

Again, not only what is seen, but what is heard when the seals are opened shows and determines when and where the things seen transpire. "I saw when the Lamb opened one of the seals, and I heard as it were the noise of thunder, one of the four living creatures saying, "Come and see." Now the four living creatures represent the saints the one body of Christ, redeemed by the blood of the Lamb could not say, "Come and see," unless they were actually present to witness the things seen. The proof therefore that the events seen under the first four seals transpire after the resurrection of the one body of Christ is conclusive, for the words "Come and see" emanating from the redeemed saints could not have taken place in the early centuries of the present era. But what did they see? On the opening of the first seal, they saw a white horse, his rider, and a battle bow in his hand going forth conquering and to conquer." Learned expositors have taxed their ingenuity almost beyond measure to find a pagan Roman horse that would meet the requirements of the vision. In my judgment the Roman horse has no place in the apocalypse, and no argument is necessary to dispose of it. There are 4 horses seen of different colors and they are all Israelitish, indicating a change of conditions that take place as related to both Jew and Gentile.

Accepting as a first principle of interpretation that the visions of John are rooted in the prophets, I turn for an explanation to Zech. x. 3, "For the Lord of hosts hath visited the house of Judah, and hath made them as his good horse in the battle," and as the house and his rider were seen going forth conquering and to conquer, the prophet adds, "And they shall be as mighty men which tread down their enemies in the mire of the streets in the battle and they shall fight because the Lord is with them."

Again the rider of the horse holds in his hand a battle bow, and by the aid of the prophet this is identified as Jewish, even the arrows of that battle bow are clearly set forth as follows, "When I have bent Judah for me filled the bow with Ephraim, and raised up thy sons, O Zion, against thy sons, O Grecia, and made thee as the sword of a mighty man; and the Lord shall be seen over them, and his arrows (Ephraim) shall go forth as the lightning." Zech. ix. 13-14. Both houses of Israel are here brought to view as the active agents of war and conquest. The Lion of the tribe of Judah will be their leader and commander in the hour of judgment. I do not deem it necessary to enter into the details of the second, third and fourth seals. On the opening of which a voice is heard emanating from the camp of the saints "Come and see." Then follows the red black and pale horse, showing the different stages conditions and aspects of the situation that obtains in the evolution of events that transpire in the great day of his wrath. It would be interesting to notice the various changes that occur under the symbol of the horse, but I cannot at present command the time and space to elucidate what the reader can do for himself.

On the opening of the fifth seal the scene changes in what is seen, and in what is not heard. The words "Come and see" do not appear, and hence the voice that utters them is not heard; and why? Because the one body glorified is not present to witness the scene, rather they are the subjects of what transpires under the fifth seal, even their coming forth from the state of death, and their approval by the Judge of the quick and the dead. "When he had opened the fifth seal, I saw under the altar the souls (persons) of them that were slain for the Word of God and for the testimony which they held. And they cried with a loud voice, saying How long O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth. And white robes were given unto every one of them, and it was said unto them that they should rest yet for a little season, until their fellow servants also, and their brethren, that should be killed as they were, should be fulfilled." Rev. vi. 9-11.

The following points in the vision demands our attention: 1, They are under the altar; 2nd, They were visible souls, could be seen, they had been slain, but are now in the vision alive, and white robes were given unto every one of them, showing in the gift of white robes their approval; 3rd, They cried with a loud voice, must therefore have been resurrected living persons; 4th, Their blood had been shed, not because they refused to worship the beast or to receive his mark either in their forehead or in their hand," if such had been the cause of their death, it would have been stated, for the Holy Spirit always gives expressi[on] ideas in words few in numb[er]

The cause of their [illegible] these words "for the W[ord] and for the testimony wh[ich] they held." This is certainly explicit and plain, and needs no further comment.

"The altar" is specific. What altar? I answer, the golden altar of incense, See Rev. viii. 3. No other altar has any place in the apocalypse. The altar of incense under the law had its place in the holy representing that condition in which the saints in Christ are now in, that is in the holy place, but when they pass in to the most holy become incorruptible and deathless.

The Lord Jesus is the antitypical golden altar of incense, and this is the altar they are under, hence says the apostle, we have an altar whereof they (the alien, stranger) has no right to eat. The faithful in Christ eat of this altar, the emblematic bread, commemorative of the death of him by whose blood they are saved. They cried with a "loud voice," How long, O Lord," etc. Expositors have concluded that it was their blood crying for vengeance, from under some imaginary altar of pagan persecution, away back in the early centuries of the present era. It is not necessary to consider their expositions as anything more than their opinion—no evidence to support thereof is offered, and I forbear offering any argument to refute what I consider mere guesswork. A "loud voice" does not emanate from unconscious blood, but from a multitude of white robed saints. "They shall walk with me in white," says the Spirit, "because they are worthy." Rev. iii. 4, 5, and again "he that overcometh the same shall be clothed in white raiment." The raiment of white is not given until they are approved and made welcome into the presence of the Lord. They must rest for a "little season," not permitted to enter upon the execution of judgment, or to avenge their blood immediately upon their contemporaries. There is, however, an appointed time, when the execution of judgment will be given unto them. The "little season of rest continues until their fellow servants and brethren are killed as they were, but of these we will speak of later in the next article. The active agents of judgment in this "little season" the prophetic hour appears to be Israel, Jehovah's "battle bow" and his goodly horse in battle. The signs of the times show the tread of events preparatory for the coming crisis. Even now thousands of Israelites are in the land, and many other thousands will be on the ground in a few years more. Silently and almost imperceptably the hosts of Israel are gathering where they will be needed as the "battle bow" of the Lord's anointed. Israel is looking homeward as well as for the purpose of bettering present conditions, but in the providence of God it is for the purpose of having his "goodly horse of battle" ready for the day of conquest, neither Israel nor the nations of the Gentiles understand the divine purpose of latter day events. The great powers of the world are preparing for war, as the best guarantee of peace, but in the meantime anxious and jealous of each other in their efforts to gain every advantage in the way of commerce and trade, and to monopolize the markets of the world: nations of the east and west. We are living in the time of Jehovah's preparation, when the ambition and enterprise of man is being utilized to hasten the consummation of the divine purpose. The Russia Gog power of the north crippled by war and held in check by revolutionary troubles at home is no longer prepared to threaten the Muslem with destruction, or expulsion from Europe; and therefore unable to molest the Sultan who holds the key to the door of entrance to the Holy Land. The Turk has been slow to unlock the door as yet, but the time is coming when he will open the door wide for Jewish emigrants and settlers. The near future is full of great and startling changes in the political and ecclesiastical world.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LVI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAY 15, 1907. NUMBER 19.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-rulers with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

land Willard to my father, that the friends were now expecting the Lord to come in April, which would be Nisan or a part of Nisan—the first month of the Sacred Jewish year. Brother J. B. Cook was at Indianapolis, warning men and women to flee for their lives from the judgment that was in all human probability but a week away, but having been sent for by Brother and Sister Willard to come on to Oswego and assist in the meeting, he at once set out in his own private carriage to make the journey, though the distance was 150 miles and the roads almost impassable. At one of the worst points on the way he came very near turning back, but hitching his horse by the roadside, he sought a retired spot and kneeling down, asked counsel of God. Was it given do you think? I am just as sure of it as I am that I live. God does hear and answer the cry of his children when in distress. He does make a way for them through the flood when they depend only upon him. But what do you suppose he said to Brother Cook, and how did he convey the message? He spoke to him in the words from his own precious Book—"Forasmuch then as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind." It was enough. If God had spoken to Brother Cook in audible voice, instead of speaking to him through his Word, he could not have risen from his knees more strengthened than he was by that solemn message. He could come on now, for he was "armed" not only for the toilsome journey but for whatever of suffering might come to him at the end.

When he reached Oswego he found the meeting already in progress, and Elder Barnes and his helpers, earnestly working to save sinners. Father and Elder Greenleaf were there. (This Brother Greenleaf was another minister, who [illegible] my father, Feb. 1, 1846. In [illegible] ter he says: "As to our reception and action on the cry, 'Behold he Cometh!' (10th, 7th month.) Some of the brethren, acting in consistency with their faith, quit their business and waited the issue. The time passed, and they were compelled to confess that the Lord did not come on the 10th day of the 7th month. Yet his promise, 'I will come again,' will be fulfilled in his 'Times,' (1 Tim. vi. 15,) and by the grace of God, and light of his Word, they would try to wait and watch and pray, 'and account the long suffering of God salvation,' and by so doing, 'be found of him in peace without spot and blameless at his appearing.'" * * * As to himself he says, "Being called upon to advocate so new, strange and unwelcome a doctrine as definite time, I became the subject of much gossip, but to all such my answer was that of David, 'I believed, therefore have I spoken.' * * * God was in the Great movement of the seventh month * * * The prayer of the true church now crying in the spirit of the importunate widow, 'Thrust in thy sickle for the time is come for thee to reap,' will prevail and bring earth's exiled King!".

This is only a brief extract from a very long letter, but it will show you that there was no faltering by our brethren in Northern Indiana in those trying days.

The brethren to whom Brother Catlin was preaching were mostly on Stillwell Prairie in the south part of Laporte County. There were two more of the Catlin brothers beside N. Mead and Joseph. Their names were Sprague and Theodore. I think their wives were also believers. Am certain about this, as to Matilda—Theodore's wife, for she attended our meetings and I corresponded with her later on.

Sister Sarah (Catlin) Clark, was another of the Catlin family who had accepted the truth. All these were friends of Auntie Willard, of her husband, and of my own dear parents as well. They were very earnest men and women and beloved wherever they were known. You will hear more about them when I get farther along in my story.

About the 7th of February 1845, a protracted meeting was commenced in Oswego, and it seems from a letter written a little later by Brother How-[illegible] ter, that [illegible] Greenleaf, the one eight and the other seven years of age were buried by my father "in the likeness of Christ's death," in the mill-race at Oswego,) Elder James Martin and one of the first Baptist ministers to preach in all this region—the man who organized the first Baptist Church at Syracuse, —the one who assisted father in a protracted meeting at Bone-Prairie, during which more than twenty were baptized (Jan. or Feb. 1843,) and who assisted by Solomon Wedge, had ordained father, was also there.

[illegible]

Auntie Willard was working with the rest, urging the unconverted to come forward. Two ladies said they "would go if she would go with them." She did so, but no sooner had she taken her seat than she "felt forsaken of the Lord." When asked to "pray for them" she was "weak and powerless and was given to feel that this course was out of God's order for this meeting; that the first work must be done for the church; that God had a controversy with his people, and would not use them for the conversion of sinners until this was settled." She could do no more work in that direction until she had farther light.

Brother Cook was now sent into the pulpit, and continued to preach day after day and night after night until near the close of the meeting. The plan of God from Genesis to Revelations, was spread before the people "in light so new and captivating that the disaffection of brethren was for the time being, forgotten." "The visions of Daniel and John were made plain upon tables." The empires of Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece and Rome were proven to be in the past. There was but one more kingdom to come and that was the kingdom of God. It had belonged to David. It was now to be given to Christ. The 1260 years of papal persecution were over and at their close had come the predicted darkening of the sun and moon, the fall of the stars and the shaking of the powers of the heavens. The measuring periods given by Daniel and John had at least some of them, run out. What more was there before us to be fulfilled? The next sign to appear would in all likelihood be "the sign of the Son of Man in heaven," followed closely by the mourning of the tribes of earth, as gazing upward at the sign, they saw "the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with great glory." But I can give you but a faint idea of Brother Cook's preaching. I think it was like the message that fell from the lips of Noah when the Day of Doom drew near.

Plymouth, Indiana, May 15, 1907.

Brother George Neill will preach at the church in Plymouth next Friday evening.

The programme for the Antioch Conference is published this week. With Brothers Wagoner, Halstead, Lindsay, Wince and Neill to preach the Word, we are assured of variety enough, and the talent represented is beyond question able to instruct and edify. Come and have a good meeting at Antioch once more before the Lord comes.

The Editor and wife enjoyed a visit with the church at South Bend last Sunday, and listened to Brother Neill preach two excellent discourses. The churches that have Brother Neill to serve them are to be congratulated, as he is a good student and thoroughly in earnest in his work. Brother Neill left a position that was worth much more in dollars and cents than he can hope to get for preaching, to take up this work, and he should be sustained and encouraged and commended for the course he is pursuing. May the Lord bless his efforts.

The Committee on Bible School to be held one week after the Antioch Conference announce in this issue that Bros. Lindsay and Wince will be the teachers. This insures all who attend that the sessions will be full of interest and profit. At least profit will be there for all who will take it. A "school" implies that study is an essential element, if the student wishes to be benefitted. Let there be a good attendance, as the schools of the country will be out then, and it will be a good time for the young to come and learn from the Word of God lessons that will be of value to them. A good attendance is essential to the success of this School, and those interested in the work in Plymouth are anxious to make a sacrifice to further [redacted] all come.

Not long since there was placed in my hands an article entitled, "No Scriptural Reason for a Millennium." The following questions were asked, What use is there for a millennium? Why should we hope for one? What more could be done toward the redemption of fallen man in a millennium? We wish to notice these questions. Believing as the religious world does today we admit that there is no use for one. If our so-called immortal souls go to their rewards or punishment at death there is no use for one. Neither is there any use for the resurrection or a future judgment. Why? Because we have been rewarded or punished. We mean those who have died. In view of the fact that Jesus will come to this earth again and reign in righteousness with his saints there is need of a time to accomplish this work. See Psa. lxxii.; Isa. xxxii.; Acts i. 11 with many other Scriptures. To reject the Scriptural doctrine of the "age to come" is to reject the gospel preached to Abraham, "In thy seed shall all nations of the earth be blessed." Will the writer affirm that this seed has or is now blessing the nations? If so, how? Peter declares in Acts iii. 21, that the heavens must retain Christ until the times of restitution of all things spoken of by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began. Again we read in Acts xv. 14. Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles to take out of them a people for his name. And to this agree the words of the prophet, as it is written, "After this (the taking out of the Gentiles a people for his name) I will return and will build again the tabernacle of David which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up. Please read Isa. lv. and Amos ix. 11-15. The above Scriptures affirm that Jesus will come again and will build up David's throne and will bring about universal peace on earth. Those who deny the future reign of Christ and his saints nullify the whole gospel plan wrought out by God through Jesus the Christ. Paul in Eph. ii. 6-7 says that God hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly (high) places in Christ Jesus; that in the ages to come he might show the exceeding riches of his grace in his kindness toward us through Christ Jesus. When Peter asked what shall we therefore receive, Jesus answered, ye who have followed me, in the regeneration when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel. Matt. xix. 28. In Matt. xxv. 31, He (Jesus) will sit upon his throne when he comes with all his holy saints with him. Then will he judge the nations. Why should we look for one, says the writer? The "age to come" is the time when the saints will be given power over the nations. Rev. ii. 7, 11, 26, 27. We look for it because it is our salvation. Psa. xcix. reads thus. For the Lord taketh pleasure in his (saints) people; he will beautify the meek with salvation. Let the high praises of God be in their mouth, and a two edged sword in their hand; to execute vengeance upon the heathen, and punishment upon the people. To bind their kings with chains, and their nobles with fetters of iron. To execute upon them the judgment written; this honor have all the saints. This may be a little too actual for those who ignore the doctrine of a future reign on earth of Jesus and his saints. Nevertheless it is plainly taught by the prophets and Christ. The good confession that Jesus made before Pilate was that he came into this world as King of the Jews, when the kingdom of Israel was overturned (Eze. xxi. 27) it is written that it shall be no more until he comes whose right it is and I will give it him. The gospel of the kingdom of God embraces the good news of the restoration of this overturned kingdom. The covenant that God made with David embraces these facts. See 2 Sam. xxiii. Verse 5 reads thus, Although my house be not so with God; yet he hath made with me an everlasting covenant, ordered in all things and sure; for this is all my salvation, and all my desire, although he make it not to grow. You will observe that this was all of David's salvation and desire. Again he says, I will be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness. He did not desire to go to heaven because God had promised him his reward [redacted] earth. Psa. xxxvii. To look for.

[redacted] accomplished some good [redacted] whole proof is along the line of modern day religious thought. We ask him to furnish one plain passage of Scripture in proof of the doctrine that the righteous shall inherit heaven as a reward for their righteousness. In more than a score of places does he (God) say that the meek shall inherit the earth not heaven. He (the writer) further states that the earth is now being filled with the knowledge of the glory of God. This does not harmonize with the teachings of Jesus and the apostles. The days of the coming of the Son of Man shall be as it was in the days of Noah. Was the earth filled with the knowledge of God then? Paul says, that evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived. Again the same apostle says, The time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall heap to themselves teachers having itching ears. And they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned to fables.

The above Scriptures do not teach that the world is growing better and that the earth is being filled with the glory of God. Those who have the truth on this question do not believe in a "larger hope" or a "second chance." The truth is that God has provided salvation through Jesus the Christ. If he neglects or rejects this offer he cannot expect a resurrection to eternal life. If we trifle with God we become the losers. Our heavenly Father is now offering us the opportunity to become his children and his heirs. If we become obedient to his commands we are promised a position in the kingdom of God. Rev. iii. 21; v. 10. Those who are chosen during this age will become the princes who shall rule in judgment. Isa. xxxii. 1. There is much Scripture that could be given as proof of the future reign of Jesus and his saints but we will not offer them. The writer says, "The saints will dwell in heaven, the place of their reward." I offer the following text in opposition to what the writer says, "The righteous shall never be removed; but the wicked shall not inherit the earth." Prov. x. 30. It is strange that men will make such statements.

The Resurrection.

This subject of the resurrection has been studied, and argued, and talked about more than any other almost, for to all it is such a question of vital importance that we can never cease trying to fathom its meaning. And as we grow older, and our loved ones pass away one by one it is an ever recurring thought and the deeper and deeper grows our interest. It may be an old, old story, but to us it is ever new. We may not be able to bring out any thing new, but we can study and give our opinion and conclusions on the subject. Not merely our private opinion, but our opinion well grounded on the Scripture.

It seems to me that the heavenly Father never intended to tell us all about these things, but just here a word and there a word, and thus try our faith and trust in him. And we do believe that which ever way it is, it is God's way and his way is always just and right. But we are to add to our faith knowledge, and as this is what we meet here for, to gain all the knowledge that we can, it seemed fitting that we should take up this question.

Mankind in all ages whether civilized or savage have had some idea however crude, of a life beyond this, a future state of existence. Even the Indian dreams of the happy hunting grounds where his fathers have gone, and in every human heart there is a desire and a longing for something more satisfactory than the present life, so our hearts and our minds are always open and ready to accept the hope of the resurrection from the dead, and to a life that is more complete and soul satisfying than this.

Life here is so short and uncertain that we cannot really set our affections on the things of earth, and we cannot help but feel that this is not our abiding place, that it is not all of life to live, nor all of death to die.

The phase of this question of the resurrection that we might consider or study tonight is this, When does the resurrection take place? Does it take place immediately after we die; and do we fall asleep here and awake in his presence so soon, and does this corruptible put on incorruption and this mortal put on immortality then? [redacted] sleep until Christ comes to [redacted] ing dead? Paul says in [redacted] But every man in his [redacted] Christ the first fruits, then after [redacted] they that are Christ's at his coming. Then he says cometh the end, when he shall have delivered up all things, all authority and power to the Father, that God may be all in all. And then farther on in the same chapter, Cor. xv. 51, he explains how the resurrection will be and says, Behold, I show you a mystery, we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption and this mortal must put on immortality. Then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory.

Now if we pass on to our reward, and to the judgment and resurrection as soon as we die, as so many seem to think, where would be the purpose of his coming the second time; for the judgment and the resurrection have been going on all the time, and there would be no graves to open, no dead to raise, no judgment to take place only for the comparatively few that would be on earth when he comes. Only a drop in the bucket to the countless millions that have lived and died before he comes. Death is always spoken of in the Bible as a sleep, not as a conscious state of existence. Thes. iv. 13. But I would not have you ignorant brethren concerning them which are asleep. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. For this we say unto you by the Word of the Lord that we who are alive and remain until the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep, for the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with the voice of the archangel and the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord.

2 Tim. iv. 7, Paul says, I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course I have kept the faith, henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord the righteous Judge will give me at that day, and not to me only, but to all those who love his appearing.

John xiv. 2, Jesus says, I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also. Have we any promise of the resurrection from the dead until he who is our life shall appear? But this we know, that whether we wake or sleep, we are in his loving care, and he will never forsake us, but will save to the uttermost.

Child Nurture.

From the words of Solomon, "Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it," to the New Testament utterance, "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap," and even to the well known proverb, "As the twig is bent the tree is inclined"—all point to the great importance attaching to the instruction given in the early years of a child's life—aye even to the earliest days. What more helpless than the tiny infant depending as it does for its very life absolutely upon the care and nurture of those about it, and yet what mere full of wonderful possibilities, of great tendencies for either the good or the evil? Like a sponge it seems to absorb every influence about it, or like the sensitive plant that responds immediately to the touch, or is altered by the slightest breath that breathes its atmosphere upon it; or again like the potter's clay yielding under each touch in the plasticity of youth until the shape finally hardens into permanent character "when he is old." How important because how dangerous are these early years! how important that the soul shall receive the right touch to yield the harmonious shape, that the little twig shall receive the right bending to insure perfect symmetry to the full grown tree! And already within this mite of humanity are tendencies and impulses—some that will inevitably issue into good if allowed to grow; others that must as invariably result in evil if not checked and uprooted. And to those whose cry is, "Let the child develop freely according to his nature," our answer is "We are not so foolish with our gardens and farms, for we know that Nature yields both weeds and flowers, and if we are looking for the flowers we must uproot the weeds and uproot them before they have choked or retarded the growth of the plant." Hence childhood is the natural time for this training—a training that must begin at birth and continue until "he is old"—a training that is more than simple teaching—for a child is not a vacuum that is to be crammed with knowledge, but a germ of great possibilities that is to be developed. Teaching fills the mind—training shapes the habits. Teaching ends with the lesson—training ends with the application and eventuates in character. Principally because parents haven't recognized the fundamental distinction between training and teaching, they cannot lay hold of the promise of Solomon that "when he is old he will not depart from it."

And into the hands of the parents as God's representatives on earth has been placed the responsibility of pre-empting this virgin soil of the child's mind for good growth before it is filled up with the evil. This training or pre-empting of the mind must of necessity take two forms—the positive or culture side, and the negative or restraint side. The first consists of gentle, loving nurture of the good impulses, affording them more and more opportunities for expression; the second is more akin to discipline, to that exercise of parental authority or compulsion which while not harshness, is yet a loving firmness. "Spare the rod and spoil the child" is as true today as in the olden time when first spoken; and while "rod" here does not necessarily mean "hickory stick," yet it stands as a symbol for correction or for the just returns of wrong-doing. We are all under discipline—in truth, nothing is achieved without it. The apprentice to learn his trade must subject himself to this discipline. The college athlete who would "so run that he may obtain" must subject himself to a rigid training which is a form of discipline. A rugged moral growth is hardly possible without discipline, and the parent who in an unwise love would remove all difficulties and place no restraints, is developing the germs of degeneracy. It is true, man is to attain unto freedom as his highest birthright, but freedom in no wise forbids but rather necessitates authority. For "perfect freedom is perfect obedience to the perfect law."

While it is true that in the training of our children they often suffer from too little parenting, it is oftener that they suffer from too much. The fond mother in her mistaken idea of love and unselfishness often gives herself and her time too absolutely to her children, thus not only rendering them selfish, unappreciative, ungrateful, irreverent, but in reality becoming selfish in that respect herself, for she owes something not only to her neighbors, but to her Maker, and to the service of his kingdom on earth, which she cannot well render when so absorbed by her family. She owes something to herself as well—a time to improve and develop the gifts with which God has graciously endowed her. Such over-indulgence to the child when the father's means and the mother's time and labor are made tributary to his every want and whim, creates a hot-house plant, pampers it into degeneracy by lessening every difficulty attending growth, makes a sovereign of the child and a slave of the parent. Even children must learn to want—to wait—to work.

But a word here should be spoken in relation to the question of compulsion or discipline as it touches the religious life and the observance of church-going. The present is witnessing too great a prevalence of irreverence and neglect of church attendance on the part of our young people. The choice is too often left to their capricious decision. The need of parents is to master the art of parenthood—to understand how to awaken and preserve the child's love and reverence and lend it to apply the same to its church life, if necessary, by parental authority, but best of all by example. You can scarcely hope to make willing church-goers of your children unless you are willing church-goers yourself. Irreverence in the church can usually be traced to irreverence in the home. The cause lies there and the remedy also. Church training can at best only supplement home training; it can never supplant it. But since we cannot impart what we do not possess, it behooves our mothers and fathers to be what they wish children to become. They cannot transmit character unless they have character; they cannot make honest children unless they themselves are honest and they cannot make truthful children unless they themselves are without guile. We may rest assured that there will be no comfort in our religion to ourselves, nor will its influence be of any use to any one else, if we even suspect ourselves of being in any way disloyal to it in our daily conduct. Parents, your influence is paramount! Mothers, your early lessons are never lost! You are the makers of destinies, shapers of history; be true to your weighty responsibilities.—Lutheran Observer.

Palestine in London.

The Royal Agricultural Hall in Islington has been secured for June next, and is to be transformed into a veritable miniature Palestine, with every phase of the life of the Holy Land represented. Those who visit it will be able to study native arts and crafts with the artisans at work, plying their trade with the Old World tools—the same as in Bible times. In an improvised field the farmer will be seen ploughing with the native plough and his yoke of oxen, just as did Elisha of old. A life-size home from Bethany will make us familiar with the life of the modern "Marys" and "Marthas," while a Bedouin encampment will have much to teach us of life in Patriarchal times. The botanical section will contain living plants, trees and shrubs from the Holy Land and the natural history section many living specimens of birds, locusts, reptiles, etc. Interesting models of gigantic size and exquisite workmanship will fill one of the great galleries.

One of these models alone—that of a gigantic raised map of Palestine, will be sixty feet long—the largest ever seen in Europe. The antiquarian section also promises to be of unusual interest, with its casts of tablets, inscriptions and diagrams, bearing witness to the historical accuracy of the Word of God. Then there are promised Eastern life scenes, native music, living pictures of Jerusalem, forming altogether an exhibition at once unique and altogether novel, and will, no doubt, attract large numbers.

The manager is the Rev. Samuel Schor, a native of Jerusalem, and a clergyman of the Church of England, who has had great experience in arranging similar exhibitions, though on a smaller scale, in the provinces. It is under the auspices of the London Jews' Society, with the Bishop of London as president, and a strong committee in course of formation to organize it. That it is a great undertaking may be guaged from the fact that over 8000 voluntary workers are being secured to act as stewards.

Dear Brother Underwood:

We want to express our appreciation of the new feature of The Restitution, the "Question Box." It is invaluable, and the questions ably answered. Then, too, the Bible School department is intensely interesting, and in many other ways the paper is getting better and better. God will reward you and those assisting you in due time.

Please send The Restitution to the following addresses for three months.

May the blessing of God follow you in your work.

Yours, in the One Hope.

S. H. Thomas.

Editor Restitution:

We rejoice in the fact that on the 27th day of April 1907, Sister Martha Walls of Antioch, Ill., was buried in baptism by Brother Huggins in the all saving name of Jesus Christ, putting off the old Adamic nature, and putting on the new man Christ Jesus. Being planted together with him, in the likeness of his death and resurrection.

Sister Walls was formerly a member of the Presbyterian Church; but for some time has been a close student of the Bible, and in studying God's Word she was brought to see the difference between man-made creeds, and the "Gospel of the Kingdom," as it was taught by Jesus, and the apostles, and that it is through faith and obedience that it becomes a power to save. May the grace and favor of God, and our Lord Jesus Christ, be with her in the start she has made for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus, is our prayer.

Poetry.

"E'en Though it Be a Cross."

An earthly "cross" in patient meekness bearing,
The while we wander in this pilgrim land
A heavenly crown of matchless glory wearing, Placed on each head by God the Father's hand.

The heavy "cross" on earth—the crown in heaven;
The sorrow here—beyond the mighty joy.
The raptures of a soul with all forgiven:
A blest eternity without alloy.

It may be that the "cross" we have to carry
May bow our very souls to earth with grief,
And darkly round our path wild clouds may gather,
While anxiously our spirits seek relief.

Yet when the gloom is deepest, and the heaviest
Seemeth to us the cross we have to bear,
Faith in our Father's love can also triumphant,
And show the "crown" of joy that we shall wear.

It may be that the "cross" of suffering
Is one known only to ourselves and God;
When strongest love is powerless to aid us,
Or ease one atom of the crushing load.

Yet even then one thought may bring us comfort—
He knows our grief, for he has felt the same;
His spirit has been bowed in deepest anguish,
Who claim the "Man of sorrows" for his name.

Then let the gloom around our spirits gather,
Let every earthly joy and comfort flee;
Blest be the "cross," though heavy that shall bring me
Nearer to thee, my God, nearer to thee.

QUESTION BOX.

[Interested readers of the RESTITUTION who desire to have Scriptural questions answered in this department, should address Robert G. Huggins Box G, Oregon, Ill. No anonymous communications will be noticed.]

THE NECESSITY OF CHRIST'S DEATH.

During his personal ministry Christ preached to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. Was it possible for them to receive him; if so was his death necessary? If it was not possible for them to receive him why did he preach to them?—G. W. Smith.

REPLY.

We cannot write upon hypothetical questions like this [illegible] with the strength of settled convictions. Some times Bible writers introduced hypothetical premises, and reasoned out results: but they were inspired, and their conclusions infallible. 1 Cor 15. Good brethren sometimes venture where angels dare not tread. They reason on the uncertainties of an "if" until they become mere speculators. Once get away from the law and testimony, Isa viii 20, and one guess is as good as another. It becomes expositors of the Word to stay close to what is written. Let us be careful. It may be that the following remarks, based on the authority of the inspired Volume, will be helpful to readers in general, and Brother Smith in particular.

1. It was not possible for the Jew[illegible] nation to receive Christ; this would have falsified prophecies which predicted his rejection by them. [illegible] Isa liii 6, 9, 10.

2. After quoting one of these prophecies John says, They could not believe. Nevertheless, he adds among the chief rulers also many believed on him, Jno xii 39-42. While, then, the nation rejected Christ, Jno i 11, individuals received him, v 12.

Prophecies are generally national in their scope. The prophecies made it impossible for the Jewish nation to accept the Anointed. Good and honest hearted people, Matt xiii, received him gladly and joyfully.

3. Therefore Christ's death was absolutely necessary, not only for Christ individually, Heb v 8, 9, but for all of the Jewish nation, and of all nations, who sought and are seeking to escape the condemnation of the law of sin and death, Heb ix 15, 22, 28; Rom viii 3.

"PASSED FROM DEATH INTO LIFE."

Dear Brother Huggins:—Some time since in THE RESTITUTION the passage in Jno v 24, is passed from death into life, was explained as meaning that the saints at the resurrection will be passed from death into life without coming into judgment. If this be the meaning of that expression what shall we do with Jno iii 14: We know we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren. He that loveth not his brother abideth in death. Also Eph ii 1: And you hath he quickened who were dead in trespasses and sins. I would be glad to have light on these passages.—F. M. Howell.

REPLY.

The word Krisis translated condemnation in Jno v 24, is translated judgment thirty-nine times in the New Testament. The word [illegible] means, The point of time when an affair, movement, or course of action, must terminate, or take a new course, or be turned back; the decisive moment; the turning point. (Webster). The judgment is the point of time when the sinner's course in sin must terminate. It is the decisive moment with him. As the judgment condemns the sinner for his iniquity, the word Krisis necessarily means condemnation, and is so translated in Jno iii 19; v 24. In Jno v 29 the same word is translated damnation. It is also found in Matt xxiii 33; Mk iii 27. The wicked are to be judged; condemned, and suffer the damnation of hell, Gehenna. As they are raised from the dead to be condemned, their resurrection is called the resurrection of damnation, Jno v 29. All who know the truth but will not believe it are condemned already, Jno iii 18. That is they are under the sentence of death. This penalty for sin is plainly written in God's law. Rom vi 23; and when Christ comes he will execute, (Jude 15) the sentence. He that heareth my words, and believeth on me.....shall not come into judgment, condemnation, damnation, Jno v 20. Of course not! We love the brethren, and this is an evidence that we have passed from death unto life. We are now quickened, Eph ii 1, into the Christ life; we pass from the law of sin and death to the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus, and are made free, Rom viii 2, when we obey the form of doctrine preached by Holy men, vi 17. There is therefore now no condemnation for us if we walk after the spirit, Rom viii 1. A law from which we have been made free cannot bring us into condemnation. The wicked, being violaters of God's law, are condemned by it. They are raised in the resurrection of damnation; the righteous in the resurrection of life. Keep this distinction in your mind and all is plain.

IS SALVATION UNIVERSAL?

We trust in the living God, who is the Savior of all men, specially of those that believe, 1 Tim ii 10. Do you understand by this verse that all men will ultimately be saved?—E. D. Lindsay.

REPLY.

I have not so learned Christ. Eph iv 20. The word Savior in 1 Tim iv 10 is from Soter, and means preserver. God is the preserver of all men, now v 8: He sends his rain on the just and unjust, Matt v 45; he deals kindly and fatherly with the wicked as well as with the just. He graciously preserves the life of the wicked, shows them the long suffering and goodness Rom. ii. 4, that they may be saved if they will. 2 Pet. iii. 9. His delay in their damnation not only gives them opportunity to be saved, but makes his justice stand out in bold relief when he executes "upon them the judgment written." Psa. cxlix. 9. Our God has told us that if we sow to the flesh we shall reap corruption, Gal. vi. 8, but he does not "speedily" Eccl. viii. 11 give us the harvest; he tells us, however, that he is "not mocked," and that "it shall not be well with the wicked" Eccl. viii. 13. His loving hands now holds in abeyance the penalty of his violated law; he is the Savior now of even unbelievers 1 Tim. ii. 4; that is, he is their Preserver and Benefactor. He is Savior of all men potentially v. 16; of believers alone effectually 1 Pet. i. 9. God has decreed that the wicked (not their sins) must die. Ezek. xviii. 20. When "Watchmen" xxxiii. 6, 7, or preachers of the Universalist faith declare that a man may sow to the flesh and then reap everlasting life, he thinks to "mock" God. When he says "it shall be well with the wicked"—so "well" that he will be saved, he belies the Word of God. When he proclaims that "the soul that sinneth it shall live" he utters blasphemy. He "strengthens the hands of the wicked that he should not turn from his wicked way, by promising him life." Ezek. xiii. 22. This was one of the "lies" preached in Ezekiel's time, and which made "the heart of the righteous sad" see v. 22. It avails nothing to say, "O they will not get immortality, just eternal life;" or "O, they will not be kings and priests; they lose this position and reward." The text says it is a lie to promise the wicked "life"—that it strengthens his hands in sin "that he should not turn from his wicked way." What did this? "By promising him life." Not one word about immortality (as distinguished from eternal life;) not a word about "position" or reward. Life—LIFE—LIFE. That is what the universalist promises every man, and that promise, when believed, confirms people in [illegible]. All such die unwarned, and as "watchmen" we are responsible for their blood. We must die for our unfaithfulness, Ezek. xxxiii. 7-9.

Be careful, dear ones in the Lord. In getting away from eternal torment do not get away from "the wrath of God" which is "revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unright-[illegible]." Rom. i. 18. A truth exaggerated becomes a lie. A truth is often over-stated. Sometimes our dear brethren unthinkingly endorse an extreme statement, before they see the absurdities to which they are logically committed. They look only at the point of doctrine under discussion, and do not see other doctrines inseparably entwined with it. Without looking at logical sequences, disconnecting the theory presented from all its dependent doctrines, they decide as to the truth of the dogma, thus isolated! Dear ones, stop and think! Universal salvation will never trouble you if you will keep in your mind conclusions to which it leads. I will state a few of these conclusions. Absurdities to which this view of salvation drives one can be numbered by the dozens; for lack of space we only state two or three:

I. Salvation means deliverance or rescue. How can there be any salvation when there is nothing to be saved from? If there is no future punishment there can be no future salvation. If sin is punished in this world there is no salvation in this life; and if there is no future punishment to which sinners are liable, there is no future salvation. Universal salvation when carried to its logical sequence, means no salvation at all!

II. If men are punished awhile for their sins, and then let go into the home of the blood-washed throng among the redeemed, themselves redeemed, salvation is separate from, and independent of forgiveness!

III. If the punishment to which the wicked are subject is remedial and not penal (which by the way is only purgatory white-washed;) if it is disciplinary not punitive; if they come out of it purified, not destroyed; then we should not preach the gospel; we should do nothing else but pray for God to speedily and abundantly pour out his wrath upon the ungodly that they may be "purified."

IIII. And finally: If sinners [illegible] "purified" by punishment their punishment (not Christ) saves them. Therefore salvation is independent of Christ's death, sacrifice and atonement! Salvation through punishment would have been universal had there been no Christ! Jesus is no longer Savior: his atonement is denied; forgiveness is displaced; his Sonship is repudiated, and God's law of pardon is made void. It sends its shocking vibrations through the entire system of divine truth. "A word to the wise is sufficient."

Teacher. What subject shall we study to-night?

Ella. Last Sunday night I listened to a [illegible] on "The Birth of the Spirit." The preacher affirmed that the aforesaid birth was an experience which comes to the natural man in this life only, and if it is not experienced prior to its suspension, they never will receive the Spirit Birth. I would suggest for our study the following topic:

WHEN, AND BY WHAT MEANS IS THE BIRTH OF THE SPIRIT PRODUCED?

Teacher. Is the "Birth of the Flesh," and the "Birth of the Spirit," totally distinct,—the one taking place after the expiration of the other, or is the Birth of the Spirit simply a morally improved natural man?

Ella. They are totally distinct.

Q. Please give proof.

A. See 1 Cor. xv. 46: "Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual."

Q. Well, to what time does the word "afterward" refer during, or after the expiration of the "natural?"

A. Speaking of those who have previously been "begotten of the Spirit," before the expiration of the natural, we read in 1 Cor. xv. 42-44: "It is sown (or entered the state of death) in corruption; it is raised (or emerges from the state of death) in incorruption; it is sown (dies) in dishonor; it is raised (emerges from the state of the dead) in glory; it is sown (or enters the condition of death) in weakness: it is raised (or revives) in power; it is sown (or dies) a natural (or animal) body; is raised (or stands up again) a spiritual body." To affirm that it is sown (or enters the state of death) an animal body, and revives from the state of death, still an animal body, is to wrest the Holy Scripture, for the purpose of sustaining the opinion of man. It will be seen that the word "afterward," [illegible] to the time when the animal shall cease to exist, and not during its existence.

Q. What will insure the animal being revived a spirit being, having the nature and life of the Spirit?

A. There is only one way, it (the natural) must first come in touch with a prior existing higher or spirit life which is above it. See John iii. 3, "Except a man be born again (margin from above) he cannot see the kingdom of God." He must both be "begotten" and "born" from "above." Says Jesus. "All that owes its birth to human nature alone, is only human, (not human and spirit) and all that owes its birth to the Spirit is spiritual. Do not be surprised at my telling you that you (who are only human) all need to be born over again. The wind blows where it will, and you can hear the sound of it, but you do not know where it comes from, or where it goes; and it is the same that owes his birth to the Spirit." 20th Cent. Trans.

Teacher. Now, Carrie, When Jesus was "sown," or entered the state of death, was he a "natural" or a "spirit" being?

Carrie. Why a "natural" person.

Q. What evidence have you?

A. See Rom. viii. 29: "That he might be the firstborn among many brethren."

Q. Could this mean the "firstborn," according to the flesh?

A. It could not. We know that such was not a fact. While it is true that he entered the death state as an animal body, he did not come forth an animal body, as many affirm that the "many brethren" will; but he was a sample as to how the "many brethren" will come forth. He experienced the new birth without first reviving as an animal body, and so also must the "many brethren."

Q. Have you another proof text?

A. Yes, sir; the Scriptures are plain on this point. Please see Col. i. 15, "Who is the image of the invisible God, the first-born of every creature."

Q. Did he revive first, and then afterward experience the new birth?

A. No, Sir; the facts of Scripture emphatically contradict such teaching. Neither will the "many [illegible]ren" first revive in the animal [illegible] not three. See 1 Cor. iv. 42-[illegible] which is sown is an animal b[illegible] which rises is a spiritual body." 20th Cent. Trans.

Q. Have we other Scriptures which show Jesus to be the beginning of this new creation or birth of the Spirit?

A. Yes. See Rev. iii. 14; "The faithful and true witness, the beginning of the creation of God."

Teacher. I will ask Lud to tell me what part of man are people trying to save?

Lud. Why, the supposed immortal soul or spirit.

Q. What is the nature of the supposed immortal soul or spirit?

A. They affirm that it is spirit.

Q. Well, then, if its nature is now, and always was spirit, could it experience a change from the natural to the spiritual?

A. No, sir; if it always was spiritual and never natural, it could never experience the new birth, consisting of a change of the natural to the spiritual.

Q. Such being the case, then, what chance, then, is there for its entering the kingdom of God?

A. Very slim, indeed.

Q. Why so?

A. Because Jesus says: "Except a man be born of water and of the spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God."

Q. Which is said to be the "man," the body or soul?

A. The soul.

Q. What is its nature said to be?

A. Spirit.

Q. Then being spirit and not animal, it could never exchange the animal for the spiritual, and by this change experience the new birth?

A. No, sir, never.

Q. What then?

A. Why simply this, Jesus says: "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God." And this immortal soul man, being already Spirit, could not be born of the spirit, and hence there is no kingdom of God for it.

Q. Are the laws which govern the development of the Spirit life equally as necessary to be complied with as those which govern the production of the animal life?

A. Yes, sir, they are, and if not complied with, there can be no bringing to birth, children after the power of an endless life.

Q. Did Paul recognise the fact that they must be developed according to some well-defined law?

A. Yes, sir; he did.

Q. What did he call that law?

A. "The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus."

Q. What attaches to the animal nature?

A. Sin, and its penalty—death.

Q. Where can the "Spirit of Life be found.

A. "In Christ Jesus."

Q. Where must we go to secure "the Spirit of Life?"

A. "Christ Jesus."

Q. Cannot it be secured from Adam?

A. No, sir.

Q. Why not?

A. Because in him is found only "the law of sin and death."

Q. What power has "the law of the Spirit of life" over "the law of sin and death?"

A. Says Paul: "The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death."

Q. What is the present nature of all those who are in Christ Jesus?

A. "Earthly."

Q. Will they always remain "earthly?"

A. No, sir. "As we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly" or spirit nature.

Q. What will produce this birth of the Spirit?

A. We must first come in touch with the heavenly life, by complying with "the law of the Spirit of Life." The animal organism must first es-[illegible] a [illegible]correspondence with the Spirit life, because that only possesses the essential elements of eternity. We are by this means brought to correspond with God, who is Spirit. This life can never come from generation, but by the re-generation, or the new birth. Re-generation is governed as much by law, as generation is. Re-generation can never come, unless the law which governs its development, is strictly complied with.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

Announcement.

A meeting of the Sisters Aid Society will be held, as usual, in connection with the Conference at Dutton. It will be called at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon, after the usual order of business. The President, Sister Woodward, desires every sister at roll call to respond with a Scripture text containing the word "work," and to give an exhortation along the line of the text if possible. It is a good way for us thus to strengthen and encourage each other.

We urge every sister to be present. There is much to be done, and let us not be slothful in the Lord's business that is entrusted to us.

"Let us not be weary in well doing for in due season we shall reap if we faint not.

BIBLE SCHOOL ANNOUNCEMENT.

The Bible School connected with the Indiana Conference will convene at Plymouth on Monday morning, June 10th, and continue one week. This is the week following the June meeting at Antioch, and Plymouth is only five miles from Antioch.

Young people, come to the June meeting prepared to stay for the Bible School. Come and begin to prepare yourselves to fill up the ranks as the older ones cannot always be with us, and we must have some one to carry on the Lord's work. You will be well repaid for this week of Bible study. Brothers Lindsay and Winch will have charge of the work.

There will be no tuition fee. Those coming will please notify Mrs. J. H. Willey, Plymouth, in advance, and she will see that you have a place to stay.

We say again, come, both old and young. Come with your heart in the work, and you will never regret the time used during this week of Bible study.

A New Tract.

The Great Divine Healer vs Latter-Day Healers, by Uncle John Foore.

A Tract for the last days. Should be read by every thinking Christian.

Paul 2 Tim. iii. 13. "But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived."

Matt. vii. 21. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works. And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

Brethren, these tracts have gone into many families, both to brethren and people of other denominations, a few models, and one Christian Scientist, and all seem to be well pleased with it; but only a few of the brethren have sent to me any help in the way of paying for the tracts and tracts [illegible]ary exp[illegible]

Syriac New Testament.

A new edition of Murdock's Translation of the Syriac New Testament has just been issued by a Boston publishing house, and we have arranged to supply our readers with the work. The regular price is $2.50, and every Bible student should own this book. It is bound in half leather, and lies open in the hand when being used. The printing is clear and plain, and the paper excellent. We have so arranged with the publishers that we can supply this book for a limited time only at a reduced price, which will enable all who wish this valuable aid to the study of God's Word to possess it. we can offer it now at $2.00 post paid. All who wish to avail themselves of this low rate should do so at once.

BROTHER D. C. Robison has issued a small 16-page tract on the subject "Man is Mortal." It is of convenient size to enclose in an envelop, and can be had for 2 cents each, or 15 cents for 12, or $1.50 for 100 copies. Bro. Robison is so well known as a clear and lucid writer that no words that we can pen would commend his work, more than will the bare announcement of his name. If you are in the mood to do a little missionary work send to Brother Robison at 596 So. Limestone St. Springfield, O. and get a supply of these tracts.

WHEN you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but, if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and send that.

LESSON FOR SUNDAY MAY 26.

CHILDHOOD AND EDUCATION OF MOSES. EXODUS II. 1-15.

Golden text. Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and was mighty in words and in deeds. Acts vii. 23.

In the last lesson the Israelites were in bitter bondage in Egypt. Seeing that his plan of severe slavery was a failure in keeping down the robust growth of the Israelites, Pharaoh became desperate, and commanded that all the male children born to the Hebrews should be killed as soon as born. This murderous scheme also failed.

The term Hebrew was first applied to Abram. Gen. xiv. 13. There is some doubt about the origin of the word Hebrew. It may have been from Eber, the grandson of Shem. Gen. x. 21-24. Eber is a Hebrew word signifying, From the other side, perhaps because Abram came from the other side of the Jordan, or the other side of the Syrian desert. Another accounting is, that Abraham was called a Hebrew because he lived in Hebron.

Some time ago attention was called to the fact, that in the RESTITUTION Sunday school lesson notes, there was but little attention paid to historical or general information. The reason for it is that such information is often guess work. The Bible—Word of God—is given for salvation to eternal life, and that is promised with it, therefore guessing is very dangerous. In these notes we try to deal with Biblical facts, and would again impress the student, teacher and reader with the great and serious importance of acquiring knowledge of, and direct from the Bible. Volumes and volumes have been written on the life and history of Moses, but all that is positively reliable is found in the brief account in the Bible. The great work of Moses among the Israelites is stated in the Bible at much length, but his direct biography is short, but intensely interesting.

Lesson text verse 1. His parents were Levites descendants of Levi the third son of Jacob and Leah. Gen. [redacted] marriage. It was base at great risk to both parents and child. In Heb. xi. 23, we read that his mother hid him "By faith." This is a remarkable statement, as no reason is given for faith in this instance, as in nearly all other cases of faith, mentioned in Heb. xi.

3. In perfect keeping with this we can say, By faith she took for him an ark of bulrushes. The word ark is from the same Hebrew word as in Gen. vi. 14. Make thee an ark of gopher wood.

Bulrush—a strong reed or stalk, grows along the Nile 12-15 feet high. The Egyptians made ships with it. Is. xviii. 2. Called the papyrus plant, from which came the word paper. The Egyptians made paper from the pith of the reed. She laid the ark among the flags—weeds.

4. His sister Miriam, Ex. xv. 20, about twelve years old kept watch, far enough away not to excite attention or suspicion.

5. Bathing in the Nile—at this point—was then a common habit. This led to the discovering of the ark by Pharaoh's daughter.

6. When opened, the baby cried. The king's daughter must have had a kind heart, she had full sympathy for the helpless, and apparently deserted baby. "Pity is akin to love" nationality was forgotten, the cruel command of Pharaoh was ignored.

7. Miriam, likely pretending curiosity, came forward, and offered to get a Hebrew nurse for the foundling.

8. She got the permission, and called the mother of Moses.

9. Pharaoh's daughter gave her the child to take care of, and promised to pay her. She was now one of the servants of the royal household. Her faith—like the faith of all the faithful before, and since—was tried and tested. Her faith had not failed, thus far it had borne splendid fruit. She could now take care of her own child under royal commission and protection.

10. In the process of time Pharaoh's daughter took him, adopted him. He became a member of the royal household. There is much speculation as to where and how he was educated. The golden text gives all the real information. Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians. That means that he was highly and thoroughly educated, as the Egyptians are well known to have been—at that time—a nation far advanced in all general knowledge, as well as the higher branches of culture. Details of his education as the son of Pharaoh's daughter are unnecessary, as well as unreliable. He had a higher and better education than any of that Egypt could furnish, just how he came by it is not known. His mother had faith in God. The faith of Abraham. Gal. iii. 7. There were others in Egypt among the Israelites who held "the faith." Moses was instructed to go, and gather the elders of Israel. Ex. iii. 16. He must have learned among the Israelites of the gospel—glad tidings—that was preached to Abraham. Gal. iii. 8. Read all of Gal. iii. Even at this time 1907 if one comes in contact with those who hold "the faith" in the love of it, one is sure to hear of it, and every opportunity is gladly given to learn, to believe and obey it. Moses valued this part of his education—the covenants of promise, Eph. ii. 12, more than all the wisdom of the Egyptians. His prospects in the court of Pharaoh were power, honor, riches and luxury as long as he lived, faith in God, promised affliction now—in this life. Heb. xi. 24-27. But glory, honor, immortality, eternal life, Rom. ii. 7, with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and all the prophets in the kingdom of God. Luke xiii. 28. It was this faith in this education in the things concerning the kingdom and the Christ, Gen. xxii 17, 18; Gal. iii. 16, that enabled him to write the first five books of the Bible, including that grand song of triumph and prophecy. Ex. xv. 1-19. And that still greater song of things past, present and to come, also the prophetic blessing of the tribes of Israel. Deut. xxxii. and xxxiii. By faith and meekness—humility—more than all men, Num. xii. 3, Moses was permitted to see more of the glory of God than all men. Ex. xxxiii. 18-23. God made known his ways to Moses. Psa. ciii. 7. Truly Moses was educated in the ways of God. This knowledge in him became wisdom. He was the faithful servant of God. Heb. iii. 5. The story of the childhood and education of Moses, and the after readi[redacted] rule, to bring [redacted] obey the gospel of the kingdom. Paul pointed this fact out to the Church of God in Corinth, I Cor. i. 26. Moses was not only doubly educated, but made the best use of his best knowledge, and became an educator for nearly all the prophets and apostles, and for all the faithful since and now. Acts xxviii. 23. We may have all the education, all the wisdom of this world, but we cannot believe in the Lord Jesus Christ unless we believe Moses. John v. 46, 47.

Announcement.

The 49th Annual Conference of the Church of God in Michigan, will be held in Dutton, Kent County, Mich., Thursday evening May 30, 1907, and continue over the following Sunday, May 30th, 31st and June 1st and 2nd. Once again the invitation comes from Dutton, the dear old gathering place, to have the Annual Meeting held at their place. In the past there have been many good and profitable meetings, and it is expected that this meeting will be enjoyed by all, and all that are interested in the truth are cordially invited to attend. A program is promised and will be published as soon as arranged. Dutton is situated on the Michigan Central R. R., ten miles southeast of Grand Rapids.

Emma Jackman, Sec'y.

The Annual June Meeting and Conference of the Church of God in the State of Indiana, will be held at Antioch Church, commencing Friday morning June 7, and continuing over the following Sunday.

A committee has been appointed to arrange a programme for publication. It is expected that our home preachers will be assisted in proclaiming the glad tidings by those who preach the gospel in other States.

We trust that all who can will meet with us, that our hearts may be cheered by your presence, and by your words of faith and hope. If we shall bring to this meeting a free will offering of love to God, and charity toward all, God will bless us and our meeting shall be a blessing.

To reach Antioch Church those coming by train will come either to Plymouth, or to Argos, where conveyance can be had to the place o meeting. Once more we urge you to come—come in the spirit and love of Christ.

Those coming to Plymouth please notify J. H. Willey, Plymouth. Those coming to Argos, please notify Wm. Railsback, Argos.

J. H. Willey, Pres.
Lydia Railsback, Sec.

The annual May Meeting of the Churches of God along the Niagara, will be held at Fonthill, Ont., May 17-19, 1907. The regular time for this meeting would be one week later, but by placing it at the above date, the services of Mrs. Mary A. Woodward have been secured.

Fonthill now boasts of a new trolley line, The Niagara Central Route, which has recently inaugurated a schedule to the doors from Thorold. The trolley can be taken at Port Dalhousie or St. Catherines by people traveling from the west or north. Those from the east and south will find it very convenient to take the trolley at Niagara Falls, either side of the river.

This the third annual meeting that the Church at Fonthill has called. The members have learned that the impulse which these meetings give to the work is indeed great, and they feel very thankful to all who gave their influence to the work by attending these meetings.

Every one interested in the truths of the Bible, is most urgently requested to attend.

Last year a step was taken in the direction of organizing a Niagara Conference, embracing the congregations and isolated members in Eastern and Western New York. The thought has also been suggested that the geographic limitations be enlarged so as to make it possible for all the brotherhood in those parts not already organized into conferences, to co-operate in this movement, under the leading possibly of the Northeast Conference. One of the objects of such an effort would be to strengthen one another through meetings similar to this one.

Another object is to systemize a plan whereby all could unite in carrying the work to new fields, encouraging [redacted] and women of talent and [redacted] to proclaim the truths of the [redacted] such a move try to attend [redacted] ring, as also any who are [redacted] ed only in the local meeting.

The Twentieth Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus in Iowa, will be held at Waterloo, Ia. Aug. 17-25, inclusive. Programme will appear later.

O. A. Adams, Pres.
Eva L. Stearns, Sec.

The annual Conference of the Church of God in Illinois will convene at Oregon, Aug. 21 to 26, inclusive.

The Bible School will begin on Aug. 12, and continue till the opening of conference.

Let all plan to be present at both Bible School and conference, as the present indications lead us to expect the best meeting ever held in this place, where good meetings of this nature are always the rule. Can you afford to stay away?

Emma L. Smith, Sec.

Hereafter my home will be Scholls, Oregon, and Address, W. L. Skeels, R. D. 1, Laurel, Oregon.

Will all persons interested in the truth, and all isolated brethren within the State with whom we are not acquainted, please write to us? Beloved, we are anxious to locate and correspond with you, that we may impart unto you some spiritual gift.

Address S. J. Lindsay, State Evangelist, or Robt. G. Huggins, Box G. Oregon, Ill.

Account Giving.

There is certainly a great day of accounts coming, when our Lord will reward every one according as her or his work has been.

The great concern of each one should be, What have I done upon which to expect reward? If you should judge yourself, what would your judgment be?

Our talents differ, and each one will be held accountable for the use of such talent, whatever that may be. If you have only one, use that.

Some one says, what can I do? Why you can circulate literature teaching the truth if nothing else. There is no one but who can do that. Will that do any good? Oh, yes. Let me tell you something. Some people have bought several copies of "Pine Woods Bible Class" and handing them to their friends and neighbors. It being easy and attractive reading, most people will read it. It is bearing fruit already. I have just been told of a man who had become discouraged. He had listened to preachers of different denominations, and found they contradicted each other. He began to drift into infidelity, when a Brother put a copy of Pine Woods Bible Class into his hands. Now in place of infidelity, he is rejoicing in new found light. It would take too much space to tell of other cases. Try this work, and add some stars to your crown.

The Students Text Book is already an assured success, and will be printed after I get home from this present trip.

I desire that all who want it, to send in their names in advance, that I may know how many to print. All you order now, you will be sure to get when printed. The price will be fifty cents.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Restitution."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you are interested in then.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is: "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. The Coming of His Feet.

In the crimson of the morning, in the whiteness of the noon,
In the amber glory of the day's outpour,
In the midnight, robed in darkness, or the gleaming of the moon,
I listen for the coming of his feet.

I have heard his weary footsteps on the roads of Galilee,
On the temple's marble pavement, on the street,
Worn with weight of sorrow, loitering up the slopes of Calvary,
The sorrow of the coming of his feet.

Down the minster-aisles of splendor, from behind the chrysolite,
Through the wondering throng, with motion strong and fleet,
Sounds his victor tread, approaching with a music far and dim—
The music of his coming feet.

Sandaled not with shoon of silver, girdled not with woven gold,
Weighted not with shimmering gems and odors sweet,
But white-winged and shod with glory in the Tabor light of old—
The glory of the coming of his feet.

He is coming, O my spirit! with his everlasting peace,
With his blessedness immortal and complete,
He is coming, O my spirit! and his coming brings release,
I listen for the coming of his feet.

THE SILVER LINING ON THE DARK CLOUD OF WRATH.

It is thought by some expositors of prophecy that the question of Israel's and Judah's restoration and blessing nationally is nearly disposed of by a classification of the prophets, thus: "Of the sixteen Old Testament prophets, thirteen are recognized as uttering their prophecies before or during the captivity. Such being the case all can readily see that where any one of these prophets spoke of a return on the part of Israel it may have had reference to the return which actually occurred when the Jews returned from Babylon." This leaves three, Haggai, Zechariah and Malachi whose prophecies were uttered after the return. It is thought that the first and the last make no mention of a return and that the second spoke of a deliverance of Jerusalem by the intervention of Jehovah in the days of the Maccabean revolt against Syria. Thus it is supposed that the question is settled beyond any reasonable doubt. It is observed that in the quotation from the paper before me the writer says, Where any one of the thirteen prophets spoke of a return on the part of Israel, may have had reference to the return which actually occurred when the Jews returned from Babylon. Whither wittingly or unwittingly the way this passage is worded it leaves the question in doubt as to whether the return from Babylon is final or not, leaving the question open as to future restoration and blessing. So the discussion remains on. If he thought the question settled, "may" was the wrong auxiliary verb to use; so some other expositors choose to say that all references to a return spoken of by these thirteen prophets may not, and in fact does not refer to a return from Babylon. There are some references in these prophets to a return or restoration that does not answer to the historical description of the return from that captivity. Perhaps H. E. Thompson (the quotation is from his article No. 6, in World's Crisis Feb. 7, 1906) felt the force of the arguments on the other side, and chose to appear modest instead of dogmatic.

The classification of the prophets for the purpose of helping out the argument as against a future restoration is no new thing to me. Well on to half a century ago it was resorted to by expositors who said God was done with Israel after the flesh. What if thirteen prophets out of sixteen did prophesy before and during the captivity of the Jews in Babylon? Did this fact limit their prophetic vision? Did not their prophetic telescopes sweep the world's horizon down to the consummation and finishing of the mystery of God. Rev. x. 7. Their mission was to scan the whole time subsequent to their days till the last scene in the drama of sin should be enacted and universal righteousness brought in, and all this for our enlightenment and comfort. A number of these prophets lived years before Nebuchadnezzar set out as God's hammer to break in pieces the nations, and predicted the nearer captivity of Judah but were not limited to this, for plainly their forecast extended to the overthrow of the nation, the destruction of the temple, and capital city and the dispersion of this unhappy people among all nations, by the Romans in the year seventy of our era. No one would think of confining their predictions to the captivity and deportation of Judah to Babylon as all they foresaw. If then the scope of their prophecies as to evil to the Jews took in the siege by the Romans and its consequent suffering and captivity, why could not their prophecies include by still broader scope restoration and national blessing to follow this later and far greater captivity? Accordingly we find on the pages of these same prophets of evil glowing pictures of mercy and blessing to come after the ending of the long night of sorrow, as the silver lining on the thunder cloud of vengeance.

In harmony with the prophets who preceded him the greatest prophet of all did not leave this sinful and unhappy people forever under the wrath of God. Blended with his sad lament over their fallen condition and impending doom are accents of mercy and blessing. Behold your house is left unto you desolate, For I say unto you, ye shall not see me hereafter, till ye shall say, "Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord," (Matt. xxiii. 38, 39) i. e. till those hosannas to the Son of David, with which the multitude welcomed him into the city shall break forth from the restored nation as their glad acclaim to their once pierced but now acknowledged Messiah. Over a long stretch of centuries the veil has been upon their heart, but it will be taken away as Paul assures us, (2 Cor. iii. 16) then they will see in that Man of sorrows their mighty Deliverer. The glory will be upon both houses of Israel when he who is to be a light to lighten the nations and the glory of God's people Israel, "Comes to Zion and turns away ungodliness from Jacob." Rom. xi. 26. Every Bible student, it matters not what view he holds in reference to the destiny of the two houses of Israel, in viewing the present and past condition of the Jews as brought on them by the Romans will quote the prophecy of Moses and apply it to them; and rightly too. But it will be objected to by some that the curses and blessing alternating in the lot of this people finally terminated with the curses resting on them in their scattered condition among all nations whither Moses said they would be driven in consequence of their national sins, so long and often repeated as to exhaust Jehovah's patience, and wear out his forbearance; and this seals their national doom. Not so. Blessing is predicted to be the final condition of "the race of the weary foot," the "wandering Jew." On this point Moses is not silent. Deut. 30th chapter beginning with verse 1 shows God's favor toward them in turning their captivity by gathering them from all nations, and bringing them into their own land; circumcising their heart to love him, and by making material blessings to abound toward them. Such is the glowing prospect before the still scattered house of Judah. The day will come when they will call to mind the blessing and the curse and turn to the Lord who has pledged himself to grant them mercy wherever they reflect upon both his goodness and severity. Some will say the extension of mercy and goodness to the scattered nation is conditional. Be it so. So were the curses. Plainly here is a prophecy of what these people will think and do on their part and just as plainly a prophecy of what the Lord will do on his part. It is affirmed that they shall turn unto the Lord and obey his voice. It is also affirmed that he will turn their captivity and have compassion on them; and in addition to this he will circumcise their heart to love him. Here is a change wrought by the Lord and refers to character. Where is the man who can have the effrontery to say the Lord will not do this? I admit that it is a matter of co-operation, the Lord and his people working together. So we can confidently affirm that God will at some future day regather the scattered and pealed people and save them with an everlasting salvation. Praise the name of our covenant keeping God!

These thirteen prophets abound in prophecies and promises relating to the two houses of Israel, of such a nature that it is absolutely impossible to limit them to the return from Babylon. That what the writer quoted from is wrong can be shown from the fact that the Ten Tribes, who went captivity was more than a hundred years earlier than that of Judah, never returned. Promises to this house must be accomplished future to the return of the Jews under Ezra and Nehemiah—promises made specifically to them apart from Judah. Hosea's prophecy in the main is devoted to Israel but with occasional reference to Judah. Their apostasy is fully set forth by the prophet, in consequence of which God rejected them saying, "Ye are not my people and I will not be your God." Yet following this, and in almost the same breath, it is written, The number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered; and it shall come to pass instead of that where it was said unto them, Ye are not my people [illegible] them, Ye [illegible] God. Ye are not my people [illegible] nothing less than the utter rejection of them nationally, a disannulling of the covenant on the ground of their gross violations of its conditions. On the other hand the words, Ye are the sons of the living God must mean the very opposite, that nationally they are accepted, brought into covenant relation to their God and into the full enjoyment of all the blessings promised. This condition follows the other in natural order as numerous predictions of the prophets show. Not my people, then afterward, finally and forever, sons of the living God. Can any one logically and Scripturally reverse these conditions? For a time God abandoned this idolatrous people. This is shown under the figure of a lewd woman following after her lovers, but unable to overtake them. On account of her lewdness God says, I will cause her mirth to cease, her feast days, her new moons and her sabbaths, and all her solemn feasts." Hosea ii. 11. With the 14 verse begins the enumeration of promise to this same woman and verse 19 sets before us her betrothal, "I will betroth thee unto me forever; yea, I will betroth thee unto me in righteousness, and in judgment, and in loving kindness and mercies." This latter condition is covenant relation with Jehovah as her husband comes last again, as I have shown in the other prophecies to which attention has been called. There are numerous other prophecies which show that the destiny of both houses when God is done with them is the blessing and not the curse. The house of Israel or Ephraim has been taken into covenant relation, for this was to be their lot while still separate from Judah. While in this condition of separation they were to be far more numerous than Judah and possessed of military strength sufficient, not only to maintain their national existence, but extend by conquest the bounds of their dominion. The 54th chapter of Isaiah with others of like import is proof of this. I close by stating that Judah is yet a dispersed and persecuted people and just so surely as this is their present condition their future will be one of blessing and prosperity beyond anything in their past history.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LVI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAY 22, 1907. NUMBER 20.

What Do You Believe.

As I am frequently asked the question What do you believe? and with what religious body I am connected, wherein I differ from other people, and why I cannot take part with them in their labors, I take this method of informing all who either from curiosity or sincere motives, may desire to know my position religiously.

WHAT I DO.

I am one of a few that are scattered abroad in the United States, Canada, Britain and other parts of the world, and of the same body as were certain ones in ancient times who were addressed by the apostle Paul as the "Ecclesia tou Theou," a Greek phrase which in the English tongue signifies the called out of God. The members of this Ecclesia, or body of called out ones, were first called Christians, at Antioch, but in order to distinguish ourselves from the many counterfeits that now exist, we use the general appellation of Immersed Believers in the Gospel of the Kingdom of God. This signifies that we have believed the Gospel of the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ the Son of the living God. Matt. xvi. 16, and have subsequently obeyed it by being buried by immersion in the all-saving name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins.

WHAT WE HOPE FOR.

We hope to come to the promises made to our fathers Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. The same hope for which Paul stood before king Agrippa, and was judged, for the hope of the promise made of God unto our fathers; Acts xxvi. 6, 7, unto which promise our twelve tribes, instantly serving God day and night, hope to come. For which hope's sake, king Agrippa, I am accused of the Jews.

This promise is to [illegible] and is based upon the covenant of promise, affirmed with a most solemn oath of the Eternal One himself. Heb. vi. 17, Wherein God, willing more abundantly to show unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath; that by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us.

We hope by virtue of this, and another covenant of promise made with David, to be sharers in the Messianic government, which is to be set up in Jerusalem.

WHAT WE DO NOT HOPE FOR.

We do not hope to go to heaven when we die, because we know from a careful study of the Bible, that as it is expressed in the language of John Wesley, such an opinion is without the slightest foundation in the oracles of God.

The Savior said No man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of man which is in heaven. John iii. 13. Peter says in Acts ii. 34, David is not ascended into heaven. Paul in Acts xiii. 36 says, For David, after he had served his own generation, by the will of God, fell asleep, and was laid unto his fathers, and saw corruption. But he whom God raised again saw no corruption. But David said I will be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness.

WHAT WE BELIEVE.

We believe in one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in us all. Who, as the Eternal One, in power almighty appeared unto Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and announced himself to Moses, by the glorious and fearful name Yahweh, or He Shall Be, as a memorial unto all generations.

We believe, as he announced to Moses, the Yahweh, our God is One, and not three; he is Yahweh Echad, the one Jehovah, and not a trinity God.

We believe that in that name deliverance is to come to Israel, and to all nations, and that from the rising of the sun unto the going down of the same, the Name shall be great among the nations.

We believe the great salvation to be a deliverance from death by a resurrection, and a sharing in the glories and honors of the kingdom of God.

We believe the instrument of that salvation is a righteous Branch of David, a descendant according to the flesh, whom God has anointed, or made a Messiah for that purpose and will by him rule and judge the world in righteousness, having given assurance thereof unto all men by raising him from the dead.

We believe that Jesus of Nazareth is that Messiah, that righteous Branch, the seed of David according to the flesh; born or made of a virgin, Mary, a descendant of David, consequently the woman's seed; that he was begotten of the Holy Spirit, consequently he is by Spirit generation the Son of God. Luke i. 30-32; Matt. i. 20-23; Luke ii. 10, 11.

We believe that he was rejected by his own nation, that he suffered under Pontius Pilate, was crucified, dead and buried; that he arose from the dead the third day, and was seen by his disciples for a period of forty days after his resurrection.

We believe that he ascended up into heaven and sat down on the right hand of God the Eternal Father, there to remain until he comes to reckon with the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth. The called out ones have passed through the krima judgment, as also did the head of the body—Christ. Baptism of suffering, krima, Luke xix. 10-16. The first saying, Lord thy pound hath gained ten pounds—rule over ten cities. The second, rule over five cities. The third, Out of thine own mouth will I judge thee, thou wicked servant.

Now the house of God have passed through their trial, as did the Lord—[illegible] judgment of suffering. Now [illegible] Acts xvii. 30; 1 Cor. vi. 2-4; June 14, 16.

I have established the principle that in the administration of divine judgment three consecutive acts are gone through: 1 The trial, 2 The decision, 3 The carrying of that decision into effect. When therefore, the Scripture speaks of judgment to be administered by divine authority or appointment, a trial must of necessity make up a part of that judgment, for there can be no just judgment administered, either human or divine, without a trial. The church has its trial in this life, the world in the next.

We believe after the judgment all not having their names found written in the book of life, are cast into the lake of fire, which is the second death. Rev. xx. 11-15.

We believe that Christ will descend bodily and personally to this earth, as he went up from it, and that his feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east. Zech. xiv.

We believe that he will then receive of the Lord God the throne of his father David, that the rod of his strength shall be sent out from Zion, and he shall rule in the midst of his enemies, strike through kings in the day of his wrath, and wound the heads over many countries. Psa. cx.

We believe that the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom, under the whole heavens, shall be given unto the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him. Dan. vii. 27; ii. 44.

We believe in the restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since world began. Acts iii. 21.

We believe that the kingdom of God is the kingdom of Israel restored, with Jesus of Nazareth as its King, his called and chosen and faithful ones, raised from the dead, with the living ones, as its rulers or judges, associate kings and priests, who shall reign on the earth, associated with Christ as his Bride. Acts i. 6; Rev v. 9, 10; xix 7-10. Its subjects will be the residue of men not chosen. Acts xv. 16-18.

The proclamation of the things concerning this kingdom, is the Gospel,

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken, by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other Bible truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

and faith in them and a subsequent immersion in water for the remission of sins, and induction into the Holy Ones, is absolutely necessary to entitle any, Jew or Gentile, bond or free, male or female, to heirship, and final participation in the glories and honors of the kingdom of God.

These things belong truth, all other systems, however plously framed and put together, are errors. There is no neutral ground to occupy. We must be for the truth, or we are against it.

Holding fast this hope and faith, we cannot associate religiously with or give fellowship to, aid, or bid God speed, to any other sect or name, knowing but the One Spirit, One Hope, One Lord, One Faith, One Baptism, One God and Father of all, yet holding ourselves in readiness at all times to give an answer to any one that asketh a reason for the hope that is in us with meekness and fear. The Lord says, Come now, and let us reason together.

We further believe what is in that square on the right hand corner of THE RESTITUTION. I hope, brethren and sisters, that these questions are satisfactorily answered, and I ascribe myself as your Brother, in patience waiting for the kingdom of God.

A New Tract.

The Great Divine Healer vs Latter-Day Healers, by Uncle John Foore.

A Tract for the last days. Should be read by every thinking Christian.

Paul 2 Tim. iii. 13. "But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived."

Matt. vii. 21. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works. And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

Brethren, these tracts have gone into many families, both to brethren and people of other denominations, a few infidels, and one Christian Scientist, and all seem to be well pleased with it; but only a few of the brethren have sent to me any help in the way of paying for the tracts, and tracts are very expensive. We are anxious to have more published on different subjects. Please help to send these Pearls out among the people.

Send orders to John Foore, at 2012 W. Corning Ave. Parsons, Kan. The price is 10 cents each.

The Story of a Happy Christian Life.—No. 9.

Those most interested in Brother Cook's preaching brought their Bibles. More Bibles were sold in those few days in Oswego, than had been sold before in a whole year. Auntie Willard was pleased. She had never had such an experience before. "It was like a new conversion, even Jesus seemed new to her, for she saw in a new light the whole plan of redemption. The Bible was new, for its treasures were being unfolded as never before. What could she do? She was not her own; she had been bought with a price; hence it was not for her to turn aside and confer with flesh and blood. Would she hear? Would she believe? Would she obey? Were the stern questions [illegible] and to be solved. On the one side, a church that she loved, that she had prayed for, and had seen grow from infancy—the young converts—the Sabbath school, so long her nursery, that she tenderly loved those with whom she had taken sweet counsel in the female prayer meeting, to whom her heart was knit in Christian bonds, her all seemed to center there. On the other hand was the truth of God. To embrace it, was to give up all these! Had she strength for the step? I have! was her decision. My fate for time and eternity is bound to that of truth, as was Ruth bound to Naomi. Its people shall be my people, and its God shall be my God! Some must and will follow the cloud and pillar of fire."

Auntie Willard's expressions here may sound strange, coming from one who had long before this confessed her faith in the doctrine of the speedy advent of Jesus, but my dear young friends, it is a very different thing to embrace a truth and stand right where you are, going on just as you had before, clinging to your treasures with no thought as to how that truth is to fare, from what it is to embrace truth and step out all alone to be mocked and spit at, leaving all that you love behind. Could she embrace truth by forsaking all? was the question that now confronted her. Her decision was that she could. The Lord was indeed leading her as she had felt that he would. Will she be the first to step out? We shall see.

The community for miles around had been stirred by Bro. Cook's preaching. The explanation of the visions of Daniel and John and of Habakkuk second, "were a fruitful source of marvel, and brought great numbers; and it was also soon noised abroad that some were offended. This reached a class that nothing else could and they came to see the fray."

Elder Barnes and Bro. Dunham did not like the course the meeting was taking. They said, "All the preaching is about the judgment; we want preaching to sinners. The object of the meeting was to convert sinners. None are converted." The opposition finally rose so high that the weak frame of Bro. Cook could not endure it. Elder Barnes would sit right in front of the pulpit and sigh as 'with the breaking of his loins' during the exercises." It was like the rasping of a saw on Bro. Cook's nerves, and so wore on him that on one evening he was unable to fill his appointment and Father Martin had to take his place, to the great disappointment of the people.

The next morning there was a conference meeting, and it was plainly declared to those who were standing up for the truth of God, that they were taking too much upon themselves—that the leaders and others of the congregation ought to have some voice as to whether or no. This new doctrine should be thus publicly and persistently proclaimed." One dear brother "threw his arms around the neck of Elder Barnes, and begged him not to be offended; that no one had meant him any harm." Then turning to the others he exhorted them in like manner. When he had finished the eyes of nearly every one present were bathed in tears. Auntie Willard stood up and said, "If we as a church reject the second coming of our Lord as now made plain to us from the Scriptures of truth, as God rejected Saul from being king over Israel, so will he reject us from being his people." So sure was she that the church would do this after all their pretence of searching the Scriptures, that she stopped and wrote "Ichabod" on the side post of the door as she passed out. 1 Sam. iv. 21.

In the evening Bro. Cook preached again to a densely crowded house, gallery and all. During the sermon Auntie Willard suddenly felt a trembling of spirit, as if unprepared for what was coming accompanied by the impression to go home and pray. We often have such feelings in a crowd where the opposition is strong against what is being said. It is a sort of telepathy that passes from mind to mind. But this message came from heaven—as an angelic telepathist.

A Report of Labor in Indiana.

My first visit was with the Brethren at South Bend on January 19. I found here Brother and Sister Richard Railsback, Brother and Sister Ezra Railsback, Sister Harsch and daughter Evelyn Harsch, Brother Dreiblebis, Sister Garwood and two daughters, and several other persons [illegible] ent and [illegible] once delivered to the saints. They gave me a very hearty welcome and have since done all in their power to make us feel at home amongst them. Mrs. Neill and the children arrived on Feb. 22 and our furniture a week or so later, and we became settled in comfort at 221 East Indiana Ave. We invited the brethren to hold their weekly cottage prayer meeting at our home on April 17th. They used it as an occasion to give us an informal reception, a housewarming, and at the close of the meeting after presenting me with a splendid Bible brethren and friends to the number of 55 proceeded to take possession of the house and we all had a very enjoyable time.

The brethren here are working hard to let their light shine, their attendance at the meetings being very faithful. They have succeeded in getting a few friends and acquaintances to come at different times. Several of these have become interested and are now looked upon as regular attendants. It is our hope and prayer that they may soon become obedient to the gospel summons from the love of it. The church here have realized that the only way to keep from doing evil is to be so very busy in the Master's vineyard that there is no room left for other things, and so in addition to their Sunday meetings, they have a growing Sunday School, a Wednesday evening prayer meeting, a Friday night singing class, a Sisters meeting, and hope in the near future to start a Young Peoples Society.

It will be a pleasure to those who are acquainted with them to learn that they have left the old dingy hall where they met for several years past and are now meeting in a nice well lighted and ventilated hall in the New Jefferson building corner Jefferson St. and South Main Street.

My second visit was to the church near Hillsburgh on January 20th. The weather was stormy and very cold, enabling us to hold only one meeting on Sunday morning and then only a few of the faithful who lived near the meeting house could attend. Our next effort on Feb. 3rd was blessed with much better weather and we all enjoyed a series of ten good meetings. Bro. Will Strawn met me at the depot and took me to his home where I enjoyed the hospitality of his good wife. Bro. Will Huffer drove me to the depot when I left. Both of these brothers and their wives have the cause of the Truth at heart and it it is a pleasure to meet with them and talk of the things pertaining to the gospel of the kingdom. The church here enjoy a good sized membership and their attendence at all the meetings is splendid. One very pleasing feature is that they are generally on hand a half hour or more before time to begin services, and feel sad when circumstances prevent their arriving on time. It was here I had the pleasure of twice meeting Brother Samuel Snodgrass, whom the Cleveland Brethren will remember attended their conference two years ago. On the first occasion he walked from Boylston, a village 3 miles from the meeting house, 76 years old and walked to meeting. An example that many of us can take a lesson from with profit. There is a good sized family of young people at this place and I hope that the Sunday School that they have recently reorganized, will be the means of instructing many more perfectly in the way of God. I need not speak of the hospitality and good cheer of the brethren here, those who attended the conference at this point three years ago, remember and still speak of it. We are looking forward to a series of a week's meetings in June. Mrs. Neill and children expect to be with me.

My next visit was with the church at Pleasant View on Feb. 14th. I was met at Stewart station by Bro. Geo. Himmelright who drove me to his home where Sister Himmelright had a substantial repast waiting for us. I enjoyed a nice visit with them Thursday afternoon and Friday. I stayed Friday night and Saturday with Brother and Sister Thompson. I must say I was pleased to find two such earnest believers as they are. Brother Thompson understands the truth perfectly and both he and Sister Thompson would fight to the last ditch to defend it. On Saturday night and Sunday I enjoyed the hospitality of Brother and Sister Armstrong Evans. They also take an active part in supporting the meetings and have been very kind in their efforts to make me feel at home. We held four very nice [illegible] and have had oth- [illegible] here in the near future. Through the efforts of Brother Armstrong Evans quite a few members of the Christian Church near this point have attended the meetings and have become very much interested. We trust that some good seed has been sown and that it may spring up and bear much fruit. The young people here have been very good in attending and in singing. At the last two meetings there were more singers than there were seats in the space reserved for them.

On March 24th I visited the Brethren at Roll. I was met at the Depot at Hartford City by Bro. Swindler and during the ten mile drive to his home, we compared notes and I found he talked the same language that I did, that of the Kingdom of God. After dinner his son showed me the workings of an oil-well which was situated at the rear of the house. In the evening we drove some two miles to the cozy little meeting house where I met others of like precious faith. The next day, Sunday we had two splendid meetings and when Monday morning came I regretted that I was compelled to leave them. I expect to be with them again June 29th.

On April 19th I visited the Church at Plymouth and renewed the acquaintance of many that I had met there at previous conferences. And this reminds me of our coming conference the second Sunday in June at Antioch. It is going to be a splendid meeting and I trust that all the Brethren everywhere will make an effort to be there.

I wish to thank the Brethren everywhere I have been for the kind treatment and Brotherly love exhibited toward me.

QUESTION BOX.

"GOOD BY."

A child looks at the midnight sky and thinks of the stars only as so many little points of light to beautify the heaven and give light to the world. The astronomer looking at the same tiny objects of light sees other worlds, other planets. As he knows so much more about them than the child does, he humbly confesses his ignorance, which the child will not do. A man's consciousness of his ignorance increases with his growth in the knowledge of God. Tell a savage of the capabilities of electricity, and he would refuse to believe you; but were you to speak to an expert electrician about some new discovery in relation to it, he would not turn from you in disdain because he was not acquainted with it, but would gladly welcome any new lights upon the subject. This illustrates a saint's attitude toward God's Word. Our humble reverance will always be in proportion to our progress in the knowledge of his revelation. A beloved brother who knew as much about God and his ways as any man who has ever lived, gave this decision as a result of life's experience: "His ways are past finding out," and this led him to ascribe to him "glory for ever." Rom. xi 33-36. All who have trodden the same path, either before or after him, have acquired the same humility. This spirit makes us willing and able to receive deeper understanding of God's Word. It is thus that we are made to realize that we have not already attained"—that there is no comparison between what we know and what we have yet to learn—our mind is always open to receive new impressions, and we welcome any means by which we can advance nearer that "light which no man can approach unto," and catch a fuller glimpse of him "whom no man hath seen or can see." 1 Tim. vi. 16.

The writer fervently prays that the readers of THE RESTITUTION to whom he now says "Good by," may ever be kept in this teachable, humble mood, that God may exalt them in due time. 1 Peter v. 6. God Almighty bless you, beloved. We acknowledge the imperfections of our work in the "Question Box." We are, to some extent, excusable for real or imaginary faults, on account of our youth. Though I may be as a correspondent styled me "a dangerous critic" when provoked, I assure you that I do not delight in a fight; that I love peace, love, prayer and holiness. May the Lord so fill us with love that it will come out at the point of our pen. And may he move some dear brother who has "by reason of use"-his "senses exercised to discern both good and evil" (Heb. v, 14) to go on with the "Question Box." as a department of taxydidoxy. I have received the following letter with questions since I [illegible] of this department. [illegible] with [illegible] some brother or sister may volunteer their service in answering the important questions propounded.

Brother Huggins:

I am glad we have some one to appeal to in order to have difficult Scripture problems solved. I have two questions to ask on 1 Cor. v, 5, which reads as follows: "Deliver such an one unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus." 1. Who is Satan to whom this man was to be delivered for the "destruction of the flesh"? II. And what is the spirit that is to be saved in the "day of the Lord Jesus"?—W. H. Wilson.

"Fare ye well." Acts xv. 29.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.

At the Breaking of Bread.

"Husbands love your wives and be not bitter against them." Col. iii. 19. We see by this that we are to love our wives, and to love them as intensely as it is within our power to do so, for as Paul says in his letter to the Ephesians v. 25, Husbands love your wives even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it. The church was the bride of Christ and he labored for it day and night, and did every thing in his power for it, even to the giving up of his life, and we are told by Paul that so ought men to love their wives as their own bodies. He that loveth his wife loveth himself. For no man hateth his own body, but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as the Lord the church.

In Gen. ii. 18 we find, And the Lord God said, It is not good that the man should be alone I will make him an help meet for him, and in Gen. ii. 24, we find, Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife; and they shall be one flesh.

Although we are told it is not good that man should be alone, we are also told in 2 Cor. vi. 14, Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers; for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? And what communion hath light with darkness? Being careful to follow the above instructions then we are more likely to be able to live in harmony, and follow those given in Eph. v. 33, Nevertheless let every one of you in particular so love his wife even as himself; and the wife see that she reverence her husband. Even as Sarah obeyed Abraham calling him lord; whose daughters ye are as long as ye do well and are not afraid with any amazement. Likewise, ye husbands, dwell with them according to knowledge giving honor unto the wife, as unto the weaker vessel, and as being heirs together of the grace of life; that your prayers be not hindered. This is a great mystery, but I speak concerning Christ and the church. Eph. v. 32, 33.

Obituary.

Clara J. Elton was born near Cleveland, O., Feb. 4, 1859. She was united in marriage with Frank Horsburgh, and to them were born four children, two sons and two daughters. She died at her home in Cleveland, O., May 3, 1907, aged 48 years, 3 months and 29 days. She suffered much during the two or three years past, and about two months before her death she suffered a stroke of paralysis from which she was unable to recover. She leaves of her immediate family her husband and four children, together with her father and mother, two sisters and a brother, with other more distant relatives to mourn her loss.

Sister Horsburgh was the daughter of our venerable Brother and Sister George Elton, whose name is familiar to the readers of THE RESTITUTION. She was in her life time, a very intelligent and devout member of the body of Christ, having learned the truths of the gospel as they were faithfully taught her from childhood by her devoted father and mother, and she accepted and embraced those truths early in her life, and worked devotedly in the light of the truth until she fell asleep in Jesus.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer at her late home, after which she was consigned to the silent chambers of the dead in Lake View cemetery which, although so beautiful without, yet is so cold and dark within.

May the "Sun of righteousness (soon) arise with healing in his beams" to light up the places of darkness, destroy the enemy from the land and set his captives free. Let us hope and trust in patience while we wait the glad day.

Married.

At the home of the bride's mother in Savanna, Illinois, May 16, 1907, Miss Elizabeth Eaton and Mr. David Crouse, also of Savanna.

The readers of THE RESTITUTION will remember seeing Sister Eaton's name frequently in connection with the Berean work of Illinois. She is one of our active workers among the young people and all who know her will rejoice with her in her new relationship in life. She has been following the vocation of teaching up to the present but will now go with her husband to the home prepared for her on the farm near Savanna. Mr. Crouse is a clean young man of sterling worth. His home has been near Savanna most of his life time. Both made good selection and we predict for them a happy married life. Their popularity was marked by the attendance and remembrances of a host of friends at the wedding. May God prosper them according to that which is for their best interests eternally.

The Existence of a God.

The Universe burns with Deity. All nature seems vocal to declare a Great First Cause. The mighty sun, as he pursues his never ending career, proclaims the greatness of an Invisible Being. The pale and silvery beams of the sister orb, as she scatters the gloom of night, seem to woo men to acknowledge this great truth. The countless hosts of stars, as they gem the heavens, like diamonds set in the coronet of darkness, all declare that their lamps were lit at the shrine of Divinity. The hoarse voices of the angry billows, in their ceaseless rise and fall, murmur that they evidence the fact. The bone and muscle of beasts of the field, the waving of the wing of every bird of the air, the beauty of the smallest insect which floats in the breeze, attest the solemn truth. Every tree, every plant, every flower, alike witness the same fact. Everything is indelibly stamped with the impress of Deity.—Hebrew Leader.

The Truest Touchstone.

The truest touchstone by which we can approve the things which are conducive to our happiness is to consider how they will operate upon our lives. For instance, you have an opportunity of getting some great advantage by doing some vile thing; while you look only at the advantage, and think over all the ways in which it may be serviceable to your pleasure or ambition, so long the temptation may be strong; but set it at a little distance from you, and the case will be altered. Suppose the thing done and the advantage gained, and then put yourself into the posture of looking back upon the whole transaction, and see what comfort will arise from the reflection. Can you rejoice in the sight of woods and parks, if every sight of them must call to your mind an innocent man whom you had ruined in order to obtain them? Such a thought must ever be attended with a secret abhorance of ourselves; and how happy the man is who lives under a continual displeasure with himself, let any one judge.—Hebrew Leader.

Love's Practicalness.

How little creed or sectarianism has to do with many of the practical affairs of life! How little it matters whether a man is Episcopalian or Presbyterian, when the integrity of his character is in question! How little the sufferer cares whether Methodist or Baptist "has just gone along" when someone has passed with a hand that eases pain, or a word that cheers the heart! To show the love that is Christlike touches far more deeply than that one has or has not subscribed to this or that form of belief. It is the spirit within, not the outward form, that acts upon heart and spirit.

In the effort to forget our disappointments, mistakes and troubles, we are apt to forget the lessons they are intended to teach us.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Nelson Morton	1.50

WHEN you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and send that.

BROTHER D. C. Robison has issued a small 16-page tract on the subject "Man is Mortal." It is of convenient size to enclose in an envelop, and can be had for 2 cents each, or 15 cents for 12, or $1.50 for 100 copies. Bro. Robison is so well known as a clear and lucid writer that no words that we can pen would commend his work, more than will the bare announcement of his name. If you are in the mood to do a little missionary work send to Brother Robison at 596 So. Limestone St. Springfield, O. and get a supply of these tracts.

Poetry.

Follow Thou Me.

Have ye looked for the sheep in the desert,
For those who have missed their way?
Have ye been in the wild waste places,
Where the lost are wandering astray?
Have ye trodden the lonely highway,
The foul and darksome street?
If mine be ye'd see in the gloaming
The print of my wounded feet.

Have ye turned home to my fold my sons
The troubling, neglected lamb?
And taught to the little feet one,
The sound of the Shepherd's name?
Have ye wept for the poor and the needy
Without clothing, no home, no bread?
The Sorrow Man was among them,
He has work for to lay to hand!

Have you carried the living water
To the people sad and thirsty ones?
Have you sent to the sick and wounded
"Christ Jesus makes thee whole?"
Have ye told my panting children,
Of the strength in the Father's hand?
Have ye guided the tottering footsteps
To the shores of the golden Land?

Have ye closed by the sad dead corpse
To smooth the pillow of death?
To comfort the sorrow stricken,
And strengthen the feeble faith?
And have ye told when the glory
Has streamed through the open door,
And filled me with the shadows,
That I had been there before?

Have you wept with the broken hearted,
In their agony of woe?
Ye might hear me beside you whisper,
"Then pathway I often go!
My friends, disciples, brethren,
Can ye dare to follow me!
Then where the Master dwelleth,
There shall the servant be.

Bible School Department.

Home Department.

Our motto, Work, Pray, Give.

Memory text, "Not slothful in business; fervent in spirit, serving the Lord." Rom. xii. 11.

Dear ones at the Home Circle:

Do you know why Paul said so much about the three words we have chosen for our motto? One reason was Paul was a great organizer, and having a great work before him, he was very much concerned about it. He started what we call the home department. Do you know how we came by a large portion of our New Testament? Paul wrote what we would call home circle letters and sent them by messengers who delivered them. These letters were sometimes to the home worker and sometimes to the organized body. The letters were circulated and read in the churches. I think if we study some of the conditions, surroundings and difficulties under which some of Paul's work was done we will become more fervent in spirit, careful to do each our part of labor in the home department, knowing that God can use us in small things to work out his great plan.

A GREAT OPPORTUNITY.

Now we will begin reading the book Exodus. Bro. Neill's BibleSchool lessons for class work now take up the most important of the lessons in Exodus. We have some special work for our home workers, and we would like each to remember our text for this special work. How many have made a special study of the chief character in the book of Exodus? August 4 closes the study of the book with a lesson on the tabernacle. This will be at the time of our Bible school session and we would like each of our home workers to have a part in this work. Each Sunday at our Bible School Association meeting at 9:30 A. M. the opportunity will be given to demonstrate what organized Bible School work means. A specimen Sunday school session will be held. The International lessons will be used, and a system for grading local Bible schools will be illustrated. Teachers will be appointed for this work and we all must get busy right away preparing for it. Saturday afternoon messengers will be sent out in the community and a practical training given our messenger boys. Come prepared to enter the service. We know what boys can do in the service of the Master and we want our boys to grow up trained leaders. Now in preparing for this work we will study the life of Moses. Moses, the inspired author of the Pentateuch, is the central figure in Jewish history, and our boys and girls need to know a great deal about this great man, for in the last few years a determined effort has been made to overthrow the faith of our boys and girls in the inspiration of the Scriptures, and in these true stories which Moses wrote. You have read in your French history how French infidels tried to overthrow the Bible by openly denying that there was a God, and reason was enthroned as a god to be worshiped.

Now over in Germany we have some men who have been called "critics." There was too much of the supernatural or what we call miracles in the stories of Moses to suit their rationalism, and so they began to reason on this matter and they made up their minds that it was not true as the great majority of devout scholars for 3000 years have maintained that Moses was the inspired and original writer of the five books, and many other things. Here in America we have some more men we call "critics." These are the mouth pieces of those men in Germany. They are saying the same things that German critics have said, and now in a great many writings on the Bible statements are made that favor their view, and if you are not careful, and unless you study the Bible for yourself you will be led into infidelity. Do not exalt human reason above the Creator of all things who said: "As the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts."

Outline for study of the life of Moses.

Divide the life of Moses into periods of 40 years each.

40 years Prince in Egypt.
40 years exile in Midian.
40 years leader in wilderness.

1. In Egypt. Educational period.
a Birth. Levite parentage.
b Adoption.
c Schooling.
d General in Egypt, or training for service.

2. In Midian. Preparation for service.
a Home in the deserts—an exile.
b His marriage.
c His occupation.
d His communion with God from the bush at Sinai.
e His commission.

3. In the wilderness. Period of action.
a Ten great miracles in delivering his people.
b The institution of the passover.
c Organizing a nation of 3,000,000 in the desert of Arabia.
d Laws.
e Leadership and triumph over rebellion, treason and assaults.
f Moses the inspired author.
g Moses' death and burial.

I would say to our young people, leave off for a while reading modern fiction and study the life and work of Moses. There is no romance more thrilling than this real life story of the Hebrew scholar, general, lawgiver, statesman, and prophet.

Book study of Exodus. The nation.

1. Name, Exodus, meaning "going forth."

2. Author, Moses.

3. When written: between B. C. 1491 and 1451.

4. Time covered 216 years from settlement in Egypt 1706 to Exodus and camp in Sinai (1490) Word Outline: Passover, law, tabernacle, i. e. redemption, obedience, worship or life, loyalty, love.

Purpose of the book, giving an account of the first stage in the fulfilment of God's promises to the patriarchs.

This book marks a great epoch in Old Testament history. The patriarchal age ends and the law age begins. The family becomes a nation set apart for a peculiar work. The characteristics of this book are very different from Genesis. We had in Genesis biographies, and family records and detailed accounts of individuals. In Exodus we have the story of a people collectively under a great oppression, their deliverance and separation to God. Divide the book into two parts and begin the study of God's Word, a book more wonderful in all its details than all books of modern thought.

Part 1. Israel in Egypt. Chapters 1-14.

Part 2. Israel in the wilderness. Chapters 15-40.

Attention

TORCH L. RE BIBLE SCHOOL.

Conditions have arisen which make it necessary to change the time and place of the meeting of the Bible school. It is now decided that the time will be from Thursday July 25 to Aug. 8. The place, the pretty summer resort at Lemon Park—Indian Lake. This pleasant resort is only 2½ miles north of Vicksburg, Mich. From Chicago take Grand Trunk R. R. direct to Lemon park. From South Bend the same. From Grand Rapids change at Vicksburg to Grand Trunk, or change at Kalamazoo to C. K. & S. R. R. for Pavilion. At Pavilion change to Grand Trunk R. R. for Lemon park only 2½ miles west. These resort grounds are 14 miles south of Kalamazoo, 46 miles north of South Bend, 100 east of Chicago. Cottages can be rented very reasonably. When several use one the expense is very light. Meals quite reasonable or board ourselves. If cottages are rented there are beds, pillows, gasoline stove, chairs, tables and dishes, everything for light house keeping. Visitors should bring 2 sheets, 2 pillowslips, a quilt, a tick, straw for ticks close by. There are two boats with each cottage, and splendid fishing.

Above and beyond all that will be the instructive Bible lessons by competent teachers with maps, charts and lesson outlines for every session. Lessons not only intensely interesting during the two weeks but good for all life time. Added to this the evening sermons by able speakers. Altogether will make a feast not to be forgotten. Compared with the educational value for eternal things, the expense will not be worth considering. The school of last year is still bearing good fruit. Let all come who can.

LESSON FOR SUNDAY JUNE 2.

MOSES CALLED TO DELIVER ISRAEL.
EXODUS iii. 1-4.

Golden Text,—"And he said, Certainly I will be with you." Ex. iii. 1-4.

In the last lesson we left Moses a child as the son of Pharoah's daughter. She named him Moses—Drawn out. When he grew up he refused to be called her son. Heb. xi. 24. When forty years old, Acts vii. 23, he went to Goshen to visit his brethren, the Hebrews. In taking their part he slew an Egyptian. For this Pharoah sought to kill him. He fled to Midian somewhere about 1500 miles east, northeast, and hired as a shepherd to the priest of Midian who gave him for a wife Zipporah his daughter. The king of Egypt died. All that sought the life of Moses were dead. Exo. iv. 19. The bondage of the Israelites was cruelly severe. They sighed, groaned, cried. God heard them and remembered his covenant with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. Gen. xv. 13-18. 21. The 400 years of affli[illegible] meaning an [illegible] time of deliverance was [illegible] God sent Moses.

Lesson text. 1. The mountain of God.—Sinia, Ps. lxviii. 8, of the Horeb range. Now called Serbal.

2. The Angel of the Lord—in the fourth verse called the Lord, and God. A flame of fire.—Who maketh his angels spirits, and his ministers—laborers, public workers—a flame of fire Reb. i. 7. The bush was like Daniel and his companions, Dan. iii. 27.

3. It was a great, a wonderful, an unusual sight.

4. The Lord saw—God called—the angel of the Lord sent in the name of Jehovah. Exo. xxiii 20, 21.

5. Shoes off.—The same instructions given to Joshua, v. 15. Holy ground—ground, or any person, place or thing set apart for God's use, or occupied for his purpose. Mount Sinai was holy—sanctified. Exo. xx. 12, 13.

6. The Lord Jesus used this verse to prove to the Sadducees that Abraham, Isaac and Jacob would be resurrected, and THE resurrection was certain. Matt. xxii. 29—32.

Moses did not hide his face when the glory of God was shown him. The Lord said, I will cover thee with my hand. Exo. xxxiii. 18-22. Afterwards the skin of his face shone. Exo. xxxiv. 30.

7. I have seen the affliction of my people. I have heard their cry. I know their sorrows.

8. I am come down to deliver them .....a good land—the land of Canaan, Gen. xii; Deut. viii. 7-9.

9. I have seen the oppression.

10. Therefore—I will send thee—So far as we have read in the lessons for this year, we must all concede that no one of God's people were as well fitted every way to lead the Israelites out of Egypt. He was raised in the court—palace of Pharoah, was familiar with royal life, manners and customs. He was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, Acts vii. 22. This made him the intellectual equal of any he might meet. He thoroughly understood the covenant with Abraham, and what was even far better, he had proved his faith in the covenant by his works, Heb. xi. 24-27. The whole interview from the fifth verse to Exo. iv. 17, in the most remarkable in the Bible and therefore the most remarkable to the history of the world. The angel giving instructions, assurance and encouragement. Moses modestly excusing on the ground of inability, questioning as if reluctant to undertake the great work, and finally almost refusing. The angel getting out of patience with him. Moses taking up the work of the deliverer, which he most faithfully performed, Heb. iii. 5. Briefly glancing at some of the expressions recorded. The Lord said, "I will send thee,"—Moses, Who am I?—The Lord, I will certainly be with thee. Moses. What shall I say unto them? The Lord. Say, I am hath sent me. Moses. They will not believe me. The Lord gave marvelous signs and said, If they will not believe you nor the signs, I will give another. Moses. I am not eloquent, The Lord. Who made man's mouth?.....Now therefore go, and I will be with thy mouth. Moses. (Evidently in deep humility) O my Lord, send I pray thee, etc, in modern phrase, Send some one more capable. The Lord. Aaron thy brother, will go with you, and Moses went.

Read the story, it is truly unique and wonderful. Comparing Scripture with Scripture we can say the Lord knew Moses as he knew Abraham. Gen. xviii. 19.

So far as known Moses never had a successor. It is a pleasure to know that there are men now who value the word of salvation and are willing to sacrifice, to leave all and go forth proclaiming the glad tidings. It is sad to hear many claim that God has called them. The Lord Jesus Christ came with a call to greater work and honors than that of Moses. Let us pray, with the spirit and understanding that the great deliverer may come soon. Rev. xxii. 20.

LESSON FOR SUNDAY JUNE 9.

THE PASSOVER. EXOD. XII. 21-30.

Golden Text. When I see the blood I will pass over you. Exod. xii. 13.

Very much took place between last lesson and this. Moses left Midian to go to Egypt. He met his brother Aaron, together they met the elders of Israel. They did the signs that God had shown Moses, and were believed. They went to Pharoah. He was angry and defiant. Said he did not know the Lord and would not let Israel go. He accused them of interfering and ordered the [illegible] appealed to the Lord. The Lord said, I will lay my hand on Egypt, and bring my people out by great judgments. Then followed signs and wonders. Pharoah had said he would not let them go, and he was stubborn. The Lord said to Moses, One more plague and Pharoah will let you go, tell Israel to get ready.

The story of the passover begins Exo. xii. 1. The name is found in verse 11. The reason of the name in verses 11, 23, 27. Moses and Aaron received full instructions about the passover, and were to inform the Israelites. From this on their year would begin with this month, Abib or Nisan—March or April. On the 10th take a lamb of the sheep, or a kid of the goats. A lamb for a family. If the family is small, two families unite. The lamb was to be kept alive and apart from the flock until the fourteenth and killed at sundown. To be roasted whole, to eat it at midnight with unleavened bread and bitter herbs. None of it to be left. What they did not or could not eat to be burned. Not to eat it in the usual way, sitting or reclining, but standing and ready to march at the word. For the Lord would pass through Egypt that night, and smite all the firstborn of man and beast. The passover was to be kept by the Israelites forever for the age.

Lesson Text. 21. Moses told the elders, they told the people to kill the passover. The word, or title, passover seems to cover the whole time of service, from the tenth to the 21st day. Verse 18, particularly the fifteenth, beginning on the fourteenth at sundown.

22. Hyssop—supposed to be any bush that would form a sort of broom brush. After sprinkling the blood no one should go out until the call to march.

23. The sprinkling of the blood would prove the faith, or show the faith of the Israelites, and save their firstborn.

24. The passover to be a family observance or feast forever. It was until the Lamb of God was slain. John i. 29.

25. When ye be come to the land,—God assures them that he will keep his promise, Gen. xv. 13-21.

26. Your children—children carried from Egypt, too young to remember, and "generations yet unborn."

27. They were to be told the story of the passover, and to keep it as truly and right as if they had been redeemed from Egypt. The people solemnly accepted the command as from God and worshipped.

28. And they did as the Lord commanded.

29. And the Lord did as he had said.

30. Pharaoh and all the Egyptians were terror stricken. It was for them an awful night. A night to be long remembered. Sadly by the Egyptians, joyfully by the Israelites. Not because of the death: but because it ended their long and bitter bondage. All this and more is supposed to have taken place 1500 years B. C. some say 1300, dates are very uncertain.

One year after they kept the passover in the wilderness of Sinai. Num. ix. 5.

Forty years after, in the land of Moab, east of the Dead sea, Moses rehearsed the story of the deliverance from Egypt, and of the passover. Deut. xvi. 1. At this time all those that came out of Egypt over twenty years old were dead. Num. xiv. 22, 23. Much, yes, very much could be written about the lamb being a type or figure of the Lord Jesus Christ and we read many, many such expressions as "The blood of Christ makes us safe." That depends on the FAITH of the PS. As teachers and scholars let us get the thought firmly in our mind and keep it there. That those who were saved by the blood of the passover lamb, were under covenant relation to God, through the covenant that God made with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. The Israelites were the descendants of these men. All knew the covenant—the promises—and had more or less faith in them.

If any of the Egyptians had learned from the Israelites the promises, and had had faith in the God of Abraham, they would have been instructed to keep the passover, to sprinkle the blood and their firstborn saved. The story of salvation in the Old Testament as the Covenant of Promise. In the New Testament as the Gospel of the Kingdom, The Gospel of Christ and other titles. Jesus came preaching the Covenant Promises under the name of the Gospel of the Kingdom of God. Mark i. 14, 15. Baptism in [illegible] the [illegible] the [illegible], Acts xxii. 16.—To those who have the faith of the gospel, Phil. i. 27. John writing to those who had the faith of the gospel, and had been baptized and their past sins washed away, tells them that if they now walk in the light,—light of the gospel—that the blood of Christ cleanseth from all sin. 1 John i. 7. And he calls THEM the US.

When the Lord himself descends from heaven, he will deliver all such from the power of death, 1 Thess. iv. 16-18.

May we so apply our hearts to wisdom that we may be of those redeemed with the precious blood of Christ. 1 Peter i. 18-19.

The lesson for June 16, "Israel's Escape from Egypt." Exo. xiv. 13-27.

Announcement.

A meeting of the Sisters Aid Society will be held, as usual, in connection with the Conference at Dutton. It will be called at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon, after the usual order of business. The President, Sister Woodward, desires every sister at roll call to respond with a Scripture text containing the word "work," and to give an exhortation along the line of the text if possible. A good way for us thus to strengthen and encourage each other.

We urge every sister to be present. There is much to be done, and let us not be slothful in the Lord's business that is entrusted to us.

"Let us not be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not.

Editor Restitution:

I will try to write you a few lines. If there is a time for our people to put on the whole armor of God it is now; for wolves in sheep's clothing are creeping in, seeking whom they may devour, denying the Son of the living God. May we be as wise as serpents and as harmless as doves; and let us not take from God's Holy Word to prove false doctrine and the law. The more often we meet and take the emblems of our dear Savior, the more closely we will keep to him. Suppose that we would read the Bible but once a year in his name?

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

MRS. AMY JOHNSON.

WHEN YOUR TIME IS OUT PLEASE RENEW.

Syriac New Testament.

A new edition of Murdock's Translation of the Syriac New Testament has just been issued by a Boston publishing house, and we have arranged to supply our readers with the work. The regular price is $2.50, and every Bible student should own this book. It is bound in half leather, and lies open in the hand when being used. The printing is clear and plain, and the paper excellent. We have so arranged with the publishers that we can supply this book for a limited time only at a reduced price, which will enable all who wish this valuable aid to the study of God's Word to possess it. We can offer it now at $2.00 post paid. All who wish to avail themselves of this low rate should do so at once.

We wish to avoid the labor and expense of mailing statements to our patrons. If each one who has not as yet paid for this year would send in his renewal at once, we will appreciate the favor.

Evangelizing on the Pacific Coast.

Sunday, the 7th of April, was occupied at 10:30, and 2:30, by the speaking; before noon on "The Reward to the overcomers;" and after noon on "The Nature and destiny of Man."

I felt that considering the hundreds of miles I had come and the numbers in the city that have professed to believe, that the attendance was small. This second Sunday's work was accomplished in the same hall that I engaged and spoke in one week before. The brethren announced a continuation of meetings in the same building, that is, in Hall No. 1, in the Mammoth Building on Broadway, between 5th and 6th Sts.

On Sunday afternoons Brother L. V. J. Kimball will establish his appointment on the 4th Sundays in the month; and probably devote his work principally to his views of the fulfillment of prophecy. He has a nicely executed chart of historic events, past and future, and of the ages. Brethren should encourage his study.

Brother Driggins has not yet selected a regular day, consequently it can not be stated; but I hope it will be frequent and regular. Other Brethren will either occupy hours as may be arranged or cultivate their talent by helping in social meetings.

If it was impossible to establish a series of meetings in this visit and gather a congregation of the public, I still feel that the effort for the cause was not in vain. If the brethren will keep up their zeal in meeting regular, future results are assured; but if they lag; or if they let doctrinal differences come between them, that have no bearing on their salvation, it will only be productive of an almost hopeless condition to the advancement of the cause in this city. Thirty or forty believers in eternal life through Christ, in the literal kingdom of God ought to be regular attendants of meetings in this city. Brethren! of Los Angeles, work for that result with a zeal as great as your daily occupation demands and you can and will succeed! About 200 or 250 miles on Street cars had been traveled over in the interest of the work; a sufficient number had resolved to meet regularly to keep up a good meeting, and our work in the city was finished. Shall it be permanent?

The writer and several of the congregation went to West Lake Park and had a picnic lunch at noon. I wish you could have been there with that little company; but as you could not you must paint in your imagination a bright Los Angeles sky and balmy air; a park several acres in extent and a lake several blocks in extent; a sail-boat, meek ducks and proud majestic swans, as the rivals of the boat; and then with me study the surroundings of this little lake. See the plats of flowers and carpets of grass and bunches of various shrubs. Look up to the tops of the predominating eucalyptus reaching heavenward, taller and slimmer than the numerous fellow-trees; and if you know how these different trees look and contrast in variety of appearance, you may put into the picture some needle-pines, and add other variety of pines, firs, cedars and evergreen trees, that would look more at home a thousand miles north; put in the weeping willow—rightly named, and more at home in a grave yard than a place where the gay gather. Then, there is a variety of palms, including the date palm. Here are redwood, sycamore, live oak, the camphor and the pepper tree, neither used for commerce; but both for beauty. You have heard of the beauty of the magnolia; it and the daphne, the acacia and the loquat are among our stranger beauties; and the lemon and orange among the useful of our newly formed shades. Now surround this pretty Eden by streets lined by costly dwellings and you have the ideal picnic ground, a good place to be happy if cares of the world dont drag you down.

On the 8th of April I went from Los Angeles to Pasadena, per invitation of Sister Huntoon, to visit her and family; but before going I purchased a ticket to Tipton, Cal., where I had appointment of a series of meetings to begin Friday night, the 12th of April. After a pleasant visit I started back to Los Angeles, via San Gabriel. This is one of the resorts, or visiting points of tourists. Here is the noted San Gabriel church, built by the Catholics 136 ago, of rocks and adobe bricks, which are large bricks dried in the sun. The walls are several feet thick. The images of Christ, the virgin and other saints are here. The images and pictures of the twelve apostles were made in Spain. When I see these old missions, with their small windows, their images, pictures and bells, I readily conclude that those savages were not impressed with light and reason but by the awe created by the ceremony and the surroundings. When we entered the building our guide had such reverence for the inside of the room and its contents, that we were required to uncover our heads; this we did, not in reverence to images but respect to his wish.

From the church we went a block to see the great grape vine. It is said to be the greatest in the world. It has to the owner, become a source of revenue at 5 cts admission fee. As we had paid 25 cts to see the church, we gave the additional small fee willingly. It was worth seeing too.

It will sound like exaggeration when I tell you that the circumference of the vine is over five feet. Its branches extend over a space of 5000 square feet; and its annual production of grapes is two tons. Now you will believe the stories of the spies when they came back from the land of promise I can.

When I got back to Los Angeles I got a letter from Arizona, stating that they want me to come on to that territory while on this trip. So I changed my ticket on the S. P. R. R, to go on instead of the return homeward journey.

I had never purchased a Pullman ticket in the eighteen years of evangelizing, because it seemed an unnecessary addition to cost on those that support the work, but on this occasion as I felt old and worn, I violated my custom and secured a berth in the tourist car; also an accident policy. Ticket $9.45, berth $1.50, policy 50 cents.

At 7:00 o'clock A. M. we reached the Salton Sea, in the southeast corner of California. We ran along its sandy beach for one hour and a half. Estimating 24 miles to the hour gives a length of 36 miles to this new born Sea. The width we could not correctly guess. At Imperial, the altitude is given as 130 feet below sea level. A strange measurement of altitude! Out in the depth of this sea it is over 200 feet below sea level; or the bottom over a hundred feet below this station. So Uncle Sam's new sea must be a hundred feet deep [illegible] here a year ago on the way to Phoenix, the R. R. Co., had moved the track from the sea three times, but the water splashed under the wheels in some places. As we returned from that trip we found that the track had been moved back the fourth time. It seemed to be from one-fourth to one-half mile away from the water. To-day we passed places where water is each side of the R. R. track.

The people a few years ago wanted water out of the Colorado River to irrigate and got too much. It filled into the bed of the once Salton Sea: and this generation has a Salton Sea as they had thousands of years ago. Of course nobody knows what those ancient inhabitants called their Sea; but people know by the deposits of salt and sea-shells and other proofs, that there was an extensive sea, more so than this has yet become. I have read different reports, about the recent struggles to subdue it. But it seems to be here to stay. Many thousands of acres could be made like the Los Angeles region, if they had the water, and not too much of it.

This turning of the volume of a great river into a desert basin and submerging other lands, and making good lands useless, is like other events in life that we may innocently do and overwhelm ourselves with a sea of sorrow which may become unmanageable. We look over the sweep of ruin, and say in the bitterness of heart "Oh if I could only have seen this!" But you are overwhelmed and ruined. Brother, if such should be your lot, be sure to stay on the innocent side, so you can conscientiously say, "My motives were good!"

After we had left the Salton Sea behind by a score of miles, I looked out of the car window at what appeared to be a vast extent of farm land covered by thousands of shocks of yellow wall cured grain or hay. I was sure we were passing out of the desert into a productive farming country. It was so agreeable to come among productive farms again, that I moved to another window so as to take it in. Close inspection proved it to be only vast stretches of yellow sand and covered by shocks of sand. We may find ourselves disposed to judge others in events in which they have been deceived, and perhaps wounded to death, and to say, after seeing results, "He ought to have known!" But while you might not bite at the same bait, you may be landed by the hook with some other bait!

Account Giving.

There is certainly a great day of accounts coming, when our Lord will reward every one according as her or his work has been.

The great concern of each one should be, What have I done upon which to expect reward? If you should judge yourself, what would your judgment be?

[illegible] Master, and each one will [illegible] the use of [illegible] whatever that may be. If you have only one, use that.

Some one says, what can I do? Why you can circulate literature teaching the truth if nothing else. There is no one but who can do that. Will that do any good? Oh, yes. Let me tell you something. Some people have bought several copies of "Pine Woods Bible Class" and lending them to their friends and neighbors. It being easy and attractive reading, most people will read it. It is bearing fruit already. I have just been told of a man who had become discouraged. He had listened to preachers of different denominations, and found they contradicted each other. He began to drift into infidelity, when a Brother put a copy of Pine Woods Bible Class into his hands. Now in place of infidelity, he is rejoicing in new found light. It would take too much space to tell of other cases. Try this work, and add some stars to your crown.

The Students Text Book is already an assured success, and will be printed after I get home from this present trip.

I desire that all who want it, to send in their names in advance, that I may know how many to print. All you order now, you will be sure to get when printed. The price will be fifty cents.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshal, co., Ind."

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Gargile, one of the oldest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Gargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. "I Shall Not Pass Again This Way."

The bread that giveth strength I want to give,
The water pure, that bids the thirsty live;
I want to help the fainting day by day,
"I'm sure I shall not pass again this way."

I want to give good measure, running over,
And into angry heart I want to pour
The answers soft that turneth wrath away,
"I'm sure I shall not pass again this way."

I want to give e'en as the Master gave Help to the erring, and I want to have Forgiveness in my heart from day to day,
"I'm sure I shall not pass again this way."

I want to give to others hope and faith;
I want to do all that the Master saith;
I want to live aright from day to day,
"I'm sure I shall not pass again this way."

Pine Woods Bible Class.

Teacher. Dear class, I have received a letter from a brother in Canada, asking for an investigation of the two following questions:

1. WHO WILL BE RAISED AT THE COMING OF JESUS?

2. WHO WILL BE JUDGED AT THE COMING OF THE SON OF MAN?

I apprehend that both the above questions could be easily answered to the satisfaction of any person who is able to lay aside all human opinions, when the Word of the Lord speaks clearly. The second question properly includes the first; therefore, we will investigate the second, Who will be judged at the coming of the Son of Man?

Q. Are there any who will not come into the judgment? I want the class to give plain, and pointed Scripture evidence that cannot honestly be controverted. Now who will give evidence of any one being exempt from the future judgment as far as the gift of eternal life is concerned?

Lud. We must distinguish between the judgment rendered as to who will be entitled to eternal life, and the judgment which will determine the amount of reward that those who are previously judged entitled to eternal life, will receive. The judgment as to who are entitled to eternal life, is determined before the resurrection, and will consist of those found "written in the Book of Life." To ascertain the amount of reward that those who are granted eternal life, will receive, they must all "appear before the judgment seat of Christ, that every one may receive the things done in body." The Scriptures draw a marked distinction between the judgment which settles the question as to who are entitled to eternal life, (which will be by a book account) while that of reward will be settled before the "judgment seat of Christ." If he has done poor or bad work, he will suffer loss, while he himself is saved.

For a Scripture proof as to who will not come into a future judgment on the question of life, see I John v 24: "Indeed I truly say to you, he who hears my Word, and believes him who sent me, has aionian life; and comes not into the judgment, but has passed out of death into life."—Diaglott.

Q. Who is it that comes not into (the future) judgment?

A. Believers, who "walk after the Spirit."

Q. Why not?

A Because as far as the judgment of life is concerned, they have "passed out of death into life."

Q If the judgment has settled the matter that they have "passed out of death into life," what would be the use of a future investigation on the life question?

A It would be altogether superfluous.

Q What have believers to do to maintain their standing of not being liable to the judgment of condemnation?

A See Rom viii 1, 2: "There is therefore now no condemnation (at the judgment) to them who are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit."

Q Have we other Scriptures which show that the question of life is settled prior to the first resurrection?

A Yes, sir; we have.

Q Please quote one.

A See I John v 9-12: "He who believes into the Son of God, has the testimony in himself; he who does not believe God, hath made him a liar; because he has not believed in the testimony which God hath testified concerning his Son. And this is the testimony that God hath given to us aionian life, and this life is in his Son. He who has the Son has the life; he who has not the Son has not the life."—Diaglott. The judgment is here rendered in the case of those who have, and also those who have not the Son, on the question of life.

Q Can those who teach that the question of life will remain an unsettled proposition until a judicial investigation shall be had after the resurrection, believe the testimony that God has given of his Son, in the above Scripture?

A They cannot. The above Scripture makes life a settled question with all who maintain their standing in Christ; while those who hold to post-resurrection judgment, do not know how it is going to fare with them, on the question of life, until after a future judicial investigation.

Q Can you give another Scripture?

A Why, yes; there are plenty of them. See John iii 36: "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life; he that believeth not the Son shall not see life." We see by this that the judgment is already given as to who shall, and shall not see life. Believers have "passed from death unto life," judicially, but not as a physical fact.

Q Where is the life which the Scriptures affirm that obedient believers now possess?

A "In his Son;" see Col iii 3, 4: "Your life (previous to the Lord's coming) is hid with Christ in God. When Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." They do not have to wait for a future judicial investigation.

Q In what sense do believers have eternal life now?

A As they do not have it in a physical sense, it must be in a judicial sense. It is now predetermined that those "In Christ," who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit, are exempt from the "condemnation," which will follow adverse judgment. If they are exempt from condemnation, they can never be condemned as long as they are exempt; and if not subject to condemnation, it must be because they have judicially passed out of death into life, hence, comes not into the judgment of condemnation. John v 24.

Teacher Now, when those in Christ, are sown, or enter into the state of death, do they emerge from the death state in corruption?

Ella Why no; of course not.

Q Why not?

A Because Paul says (I Cor xv 42): "It is sown (enters the death state) in corruption, it is raised in incorruption." Now, if a person in Christ, enters the state of death a corruptible being, and emerges from it an incorruptible being, he must have been at sometime prior to his being raised an incorruptible being, judged worthy of being so raised, would he not?

A Most certainly.

Q Do some people twist the word "sown," out of all legitimate use in order to sustain a man-made theory?

A They do.

Q How do they use it?

A They say the word "sown," means that the dead are cast out of the ground in the same incorruptible nature which they had before they entered the death state.

Q When the farmers sow seed, do they cast it "out of the ground," or cast it into the ground?

A Into the ground, of course, the seed would not germinate if it was "cast out of the ground," in place of being cast into the ground. That theory of sowing destroys the figure of seed sowing.

Q When seed is sown, or cast into the ground, what becomes of it?

A Before the germ comes forth in new life the seed dies or decays

Q Supposing we accept the man-made theory that the sowing of the dead as seed means their casting out of the ground alive in the same mortal nature, that it entered the death state with, what would become of it should we carry out the figure?

A Paul says: "Thou fool, that which thou sowest (cast out of the ground a mortal body) is not quickened (made alive) except it die." Then if the seed (dead body) is cast out of the ground, a living mortal body, and that is the sowing, then it must die again, before being quickened into immortal life, because Paul says, "Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened except it die."

Q What would that be?

A A "second death." Such a theory is completely out of harmony with nature, and with common sense.

Q Now, if an emergence from the death state in mortality, is the seed sowing Paul speaks of, is it not true that they can die again?

A Most assuredly they can.

Q Did Christ teach such a resurrection for those who die "in Christ," while they were walking after the Spirit?

A No, sir; he did not.

Q Please give the evidence?

A See Luke xx 35. But they which shall be accounted worthy (before emergence from the death state) to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry, nor are given in marriage: neither can they die any more; for they are equal unto the (Elohim) angels; and are children of God, being the children of the resurrection. [illegible] emergence for those [illegible] while walking after the Spirit, teach adversely to the general testimony of Holy Scriptures.

Q Can the Lord ascertain what is in man, independent of oral testimony?

A Surely he can.

Q Well, then, please give the evidence?

A We read: "The Lord knoweth them that are his."

Q What would be the use then, of trying to find out who are his by a judicial investigation?

A Why such a trial would be a judicial farce.

Q Can he read their thoughts, and the very intent of the heart?

A "He discerneth the thoughts and intents of the heart."

Q Then to exact an oral confession, would be of no practical value at all, would it?

A None, whatever.

Q Would it be necessary for him to take human testimony?

A No, sir; he "needeth not that any man should tell him what is in man."

Teacher. When the Lord comes again, a large number of his people will be in the death-state, and some will be found alive. Will the dead be judged before they are quickened, or made alive?

Albert Yes, sir; they will.

Q How do you know?

A All I know is, the Bible says so.

Q Well, that ought to be sufficient, where does it say so?

A See Acts x 42: "It is he which was ordained of God to be the Judge of the quick and the dead;" two opposite extremes.

Q Have you other testimony?

A I have.

Q Please quote another.

A See 2 Tim iv 1: "I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge (who) the quick and the dead (when) at his appearing and his kingdom."

Q Is there still other testimony showing that the dead are judged?

A Yes, sir.

Q Well, please let us have it.

A See Rev xi. 18, "And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead, that they (the dead ones) should be judged."

Q Then we must surely see that those people who affirm that the quick only are judged, do not speak in harmony with the divine Word, is not that correct?

A A candid, unbiased person must so judge.

Teacher Dear class, being acquainted with our Canadian brother, who propounded the question, and believing that he is honest-minded, he must yield previous opinions, when he finds that they do not harmonize with Holy Scripture. Twisting the Scriptures out of shape, such as is done with the word "sown," will not bolster up a weak man-made theory.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

"The Shield of Faith."

Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil * * * Eph. vi. 11.

Why is the shield of faith above all? because with it, all the fiery darts of the wicked may be quenched. The Grecian armor consisted of two parts, the defensive and offensive armor.

The apostle from these chooses the panoply or complete armor of God. The girdle or military belt used to brace the armor tight to the body, and cover the two parts of the breastplate where they joined. The greaves made of various metals, designed to protect the front of the legs and feet. The helmet also of various metals was to protect the head. The shield sometimes round, and sometimes square was made of strong thick leather or hides, sometimes of wood covered with brass or iron. The sword as an offensive weapon. He who had these was completely armed for the combat. [illegible] the apostle teach[illegible] die for our armor [illegible] plate is righteousness. Our [illegible] with the preparation of the gospel of peace. The helmet was for the defence of the head, in like manner our helmet is the hope of salvation built on faith in the promises of God. How minutely the apostle describes the armor and its use. He says, Put on the whole armor of God, and tells us why. That ye may be able to wrestle against the devil. The adversary means everything adverse to God and his teaching.

The apostle says in the eleventh verse, for we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against the rulers of darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places. What is spiritual wickedness in high places? It is not as is supposed evil, immaterial spirits or angels of a personal devil, floating in the air, snatching us up, and pushing us into evil. Neither is it wrestling against the ordinary evils of the flesh, but against spiritual wickedness in high places, certainly it is something that purports to be spiritual, yet is not spiritual, because it is of men. What can it be other than traditions of men? Israel of old profaned the name of the Lord when they said to them, "These are the people of the Lord." Ezek xxxvi. 20. Are we not doing the same thing when we take into fellowship those who do not know the covenants of promise, those who have never had the seal affixed to their faith. Col. ii. 11. It took courage for Israel to keep themselves separate from the nations and their worship. It takes courage and sometimes heartaches for us to draw the line.

The Apostle says, "Take heed to the doctrine (notice it is a definite doctrine, not just any doctrine). Continue in them. Why Paul? For in doing this thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee. 1 Tim iv 16. Well says one, if we do not recognize these good people we might give offence. Can you not see that when you do, you cannot save yourself and them which hear you? Doing what God forbade Israel to do, what Christ and the apostles forbade in the strongest terms. How the evangelist work is hindered by a few sentimental voices giving the trumpet an uncertain sound. What is the use of evangelist work, why leave home to proclaim a message, if there is a possibility of getting along without it? Why publish a paper at Plymouth advocating the covenants of promise, if strangers to these promises, aliens to the commonwealth of Israel do know Christ, and have a hope? We certainly are wasting our time. Let us take heed to the things we have heard, let us take heed to the doctrine. Listen to Paul, Gal i 6-9. Read it carefully. He is surprised that the Galatian brethren are so soon removed from the hope of the gospel. He is not satisfied with telling them that an angel from heaven would not dare to preach another gospel; he repeats it saying, "As we have said before so say I now again, if any man preach any other gospel unto you than that we have preached, let him be accursed." It matters not how sincere the one promulgating tradition. Paul lived in all good conscience before God, after the straitest sect of the Pharisees. All this counted for naught. Why? Because Christ said, In vain do they worship me teaching for doctrine the commandments of men."

Paul says preach the Word, be instant in season, out of season, reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long-suffering and doctrine. Why Paul? "For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine." When this time comes what will they do, Paul? "After their own lusts will they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears, and they shall turn their ears unto fables." What is this but spiritual wickedness [illegible] that never dies, called by the [illegible] sess, angel and spirit. They undoubtedly believed the spirit departed, and was an angel until the resurrection. They with all others having itching ears, are believing that beautiful and pleasing story told by the serpent in the garden of Eden: "Ye shall be as gods (angels) knowing good and evil, ye shall not surely die." When we think what this evil teaching has done, making God's great plan of no purpose. Teaching that the purpose in creating man and earth, was to produce people, and discipline them for heaven. What for? To sing—for no other purpose. This tradition has been woven into the most beautiful rythm. Having itching ears to hear such fables, the whole world is flooded with this spiritual wickedness. The pulpit, the hymn books, magazines, journals, all telling the one pleasing story. Paul from personal experience knew what the shield of the faith would do for us, "Above all take the shield of the faith."

In Gal ii 16, we learn it is by the faith of Christ we are justified. The faith of Christ is not tradition of men. It is that faith that takes hold of the promises of God in a way that it begets hope for our helmet. Our loins girt about with truth. Above all taking the shield of the faith. The babe in Christ who has the faith for a shield, can put to silence spiritual wickedness in high places. May we all take the shield of the faith, and when the race is run, be able with Paul to say, "I have kept the faith, henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also which love his appearing."

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Dear Restitution.

In issue of 22nd I notice question submitted by Bro. Wilson to Bro. Huggins, viz. 1 Cor. v 5, reading, "Deliver such an one unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus." 1st, Who is Satan to whom this man was to be delivered for the "destruction of the flesh? 2nd, And what is the spirit that is to be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus?" Bro. Huggins having concluded his work in question box department, says, he hopes some brother or sister will volunteer in answering the questions propounded herein. Therefore, with your permission, I will offer a few suggestions that I think will be helpful in solving the questions. First in importance is to determine to whom "the destruction of the flesh" and "the saving of the spirit" refers or pertains, i. e., Is it flesh and spirit of the body of the man to be thus delivered to Satan? or is it the body of Christ—the church, to whom the terms flesh and spirit refer? This man was to be "purged" out of the church "as old leaven" (7th verse) why? because "a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump" (verse 6). To purge is to cleanse or purify by separating and carrying off whatever is impure (Webster). It became necessary to separate this impure man, walking after the "lust of the flesh" from the body of Christ—those "walking after the spirit," lest the whole body become leavened, and thereby the spirit of the church would not be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus. This was he [illegible] separated—pur[illegible] the church, there[illegible] "let him be unto them as a heathen man and a publican" (Matt. xviii). With these suggestions in view, read the whole chapter in connection, and see if the questions propounded are not thereby clearly solved without further comment. But permit me to ask the reader to read the prayer of the apostle Paul as recorded in his first letter to the Thessalonians (v 23) (charging them by the Lord that the epistle be read unto all the holy brethren verse 27) viz: "I pray God that your whole spirit, soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ," understanding the spirit, body and soul (or life caused by the spirit) as referring to the body and spirit of believers—the church, then all is plain, and the supposed proof therefrom, that man is a threefold being, composed of spirit, soul and body vanishes at once.

"There is one body and one spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling." (Eph iv). "If any man have not the spirit of Christ he is none of his" (Rom viii). "The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith..... and they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the passions and lusts" (Gal v). This is the kind of spirit that will count in the day of the Lord Jesus. Of such is the one body composed. Let us each ask ourselves, Am I a component part of this "one body"?

When you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and send that.

There was no issue of this paper last week, so please do not ask for a paper dated May 29. May 22 and June 5, are consecutive issues.

We are very busy getting ready for the Antioch Meeting and Bible School, and with the closing exercises of the City Schools in which we are personally interested this year, as our young est son is a member of the graduating class.

On Sunday, May 26, the Church at Plymouth had a visit from Brother B. W. Woodward. Sister Woodward was in attendance at the meeting at Fonthill, Ont., and returned home tired, and as the Michigan meeting was to be at their home in Dutton over Sunday June 2, Brother Woodward came in place of Sister Woodward. He spoke both morning and evening, and though it rained nearly all day, and just at the assembling hours, very good audiences came to hear him. The friends at Plymouth are always glad to see Brother Woodward, and hope he can come again.

1 Peter v. 7.

"Casting all your care upon him; for he careth for you."

We are here invited to cast all our cares on our heavenly Father, the Creator of the universe and all that therein is. God not only created us, but he has sustained us, he has surrounded us with blessings, he has covered us with his all powerful arms of love, he has planted our feet on the foundation of hope, and in our text he invites us "to cast all our cares upon him," and he tells us why "for he careth for us."

In the 5th and 6th verses of the [illegible] Psalm [illegible] "Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in him; and he shall bring it to pass. And he shall bring forth thy righteousness as the light, and thy judgment as the noonday."

Away back in the days of the Psalmist, about three thousand years since, David in his sweet songs, sang the same thought that the Apostle Peter expresses in our text, "Casting all your cares upon him, for he cares for you." "Commit thy way unto the Lord, and he shall bring it to pass." "Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and he shall sustain thee" can we think of anything sweeter? Can we imagine anything more comforting? Can we say anything more strengthening? Here we have one whom we know is able to keep his promises, and he invites us to cast our cares—our worries—our troublesome things upon him. And "he shall sustain us" for "he careth for us." Oh, happy, comforting and strength giving message, God careth for me, he will sustain me in my undertakings and if my efforts are put forth to his glory and his honor he shall bring them to pass, most absolutely sure is my God a God of love.

When Christ sent out his apostles to preach, the message he gave them is recorded in Matthew vi, 24, 25, 26.

"No man can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other, ye cannot serve God and mammon.

Therefore I say unto thee, Take no thought of your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink; nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on. Is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment?

Behold the fowls of the air; for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns; yet your heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they?"

In these verses Christ has said the same thought that we have in our text. No, he does not use the identical words. Still we must all admit what he said was, "Cast all your care upon the Lord, for he careth for you." In the 24th verse he tells us (as well as the apostles) that we must love our God with a singleness of heart as well as a singleness of purpose. In the 25th verse he says, If we love our God with that singleness of heart, then we need have no fear regarding our temporal affairs—such as life, hunger, thirst, apparel nor any thing else. Why? (28th verse) for he careth for us, the words are, he careth for the birds of the air, and ends by saying we are worth many such. Oh! for a faith that will actually trust our heavenly Father, a faith that will make us look to our God for protection, a faith that will guide us to our Creator in all our trials and sorrows and tribulations.

Do you feel weary? Are you carrying a load too heavy for your shoulders? Do you desire rest? then come to God through his Son the Lord Christ, Let us read together the 28th, 29th and 30th verses of the xi. of Matthew, and see what is there promised to those who will but put their trust in him.

"Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.

Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest for your souls.

For my yoke is easy and my burden is light."

Do we need any further proof than this that "he careth for us" when Christ is willing to walk by our side, sharing our burdens, lessening our troubles, being yoked to us if we will but be yoked to him.

Have you tribulation? then come to God and see what his Son the Lord, will do for us in our trouble if we will but permit him by "casting all our care upon him."

"Blessed be God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies, and the God of all comfort.

Who comforteth us in all our tribulation, that we may be able to comfort which are in any trouble, by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God."

Here the apostle Paul in the 3rd and 4th verses of the 1st chapter of 2nd Corinthians calls the Eternal God "The Father of mercies" and "The God of all comfort," and he goes further and tells us if we are really under the influence of that blessed [illegible] have partaken of his mercies [illegible] works then are [illegible] ges of God's [illegible] Judgment? Then "cast all your care on God and see how Peter (in his first epistle, 1st chapter, 3, 4 and 5 verses) tells us and proves unto us that God does care for us and is willing to bestow his everlasting life upon us, if we have faith, at the appointed time.

"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead.

To an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you.

Who are kept by the power of God, through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time."

This promise is conditional on us having "faith" which is a necessary condition for us to be in before we can "cast all our care upon him," it is also, altogether through the mercy of God, "his abundant mercy" in the raising of the Lord Christ from the dead, but like all the other passages quoted it clearly and distinctly tells us to "Cast all our cares upon him, for he careth for us."

And in conclusion I will quote two passages—without comment—leaving you to see for yourselves the tender mercies of God, showered upon his children, through his Son, our Blessed Redeemer and Elder Brother, Jesus Christ, the Lord.

Hebrews xiii. 5, 6, "Let your conversation be without covetousness; and be content with such things as ye have; for he hath said, I will never leave thee nor forsake thee.

So that we may boldly say, the Lord is my helper, and I will not fear what man shall do unto me."

And Philippians iv. 5, 6, 7, "Let your moderation be known unto all men. The Lord is at hand.

Be careful for nothing, but in every thing by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God.

And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Jesus Christ."

"Casting all your care upon him: for he careth for you."

Evangelizing on the Pacific Coast.

April 4th I took the nicest trip of my life out from Los Angeles in an observation car loaded with sightseers. We went on the "Balloon Excursion Trip," but not in a balloon. We entered into the oil-fields, while yet in a populous part of the city. It looked singular to see derricks by oil wells, mixed among the edifices of a magnificent city, and oil tanks to contain this immense and inexhaustible product of nature of modern times. Oil wells by hundreds, producing oil by thousands of barrels in one of the greatest of cities, is this the greatest of all countries. Think of it and think what this nation and land has grown to! Compare it to the giants of the world, either present or past, and where are we? They tell me that they have a population in Los Angeles of 300,000; but on this very land, that is worth thousands of dollars per acre for building purposes, millions of dollars are springing out of the ground for fuel and light purposes. A product that nature manufactured for the use of man, ages before civilized man ever knew this land. We had hardly passed from among the derricks when we reached "The Soldiers Home." Again, we are impressed with not only the greatness of our country, but with the benevolence of our government, and the beauty of this part of our country.

Here the nation has made an earthly paradise for its defenders, and given thousands of them as beautiful a home as could be produced on this earth, in this age—this age of wonders! I am glad that I can live in this part of this age, and can see this part of earth, and have learned enough of the future age and future conditions of earth, to frequently make the comparison and see the contrast. Oh what a Soldiers home, such Soldiers as Paul will get, who "fought the good fight and finished his course!" A home and a crown!

On this day's excursion we went out from Los Angeles sixteen miles. We passed hundreds of mansions—many of them belonging to millionaires. One place we passed through a field [illegible] devoted to the raising [illegible] roses then are [illegible] by much [illegible] for the bay [illegible] of granite. ITEMS.

Have not the cloak to make when it begins to rain.

Expect nothing from him who promises a great deal.

"Nothing is ever better than the newest blessing God sends."

If a man could halve his wishes he would double his happiness.

The joys of faith are the best remedies against the griefs of sense.

They that will not make the Word of God their rest, will find it a heavy burden.

They that give good exhortations, should be careful to set good examples.

Cecil: The Christian will find his parentheses for prayer even in the busiest hours of life.

Four things come not back: the spoken word, the sped arrow, the past life and neglected opportunity.

Repentance without amendment is like continual pumping in a ship without stopping the leaks.

Seneca: There is nothing more disgraceful than that an old man should have nothing to produce as a proof that he has lived long except his years.

A weak mind sinks under prosperity as under adversity. A strong mind has two tides—when the moon is at the full and when there is no moon.

Fuller: Thou must content thyself to see the world as it is. Thou wilt never have any quiet if thou vexest thyself because thou canst not bring mankind to that exact notion of things, and rule of life, which thou hast formed in thy own mind.

It is not the form of prayer, but the spirit with which it is offered, that counts before God. It is dictated by a sense of need, and if presented with faith in the name of Christ and in harmony with God's will, is sure to be heard. It may be crude in man's sight, but if sincere and earnest, it is neither rejected nor despised. All can come before God with their burdens and petitions, for he turns no honest supplicant away empty-handed.

mated at 800,000 the additional population of the suburban towns make it immense in this part of California.

Reaching San Pedro we took another electric car to the beach and lighthouse. Judging from the building the lighthouse must fall below 1st class. It is called 1st class. Here is a stretch of prairie of undulating surface covered neither by orchards nor buildings consequently as nature made it. But Mr. Peck has engaged in selling it off for building purposes, and has almost completed a pavilion to accommodate resort lovers. I did not ask whether this Peck is the father of "Peck's bad boy," but presume if he is he needs a resort for a rest.

We went down the bluff by a long flight of winding steps and landed on a rather rough, rocky cove of the hill and floor of the beach, there we found a photograph gallery consisting of a man and his camera. The gallery seems to be stationary, from the number of fine photographs that were on exhibition. As these pictures were well executed and had a back ground of ocean or rocky cliff or both if chosen, thinking that ocean and rocks and cliffs might add to the beauty of the principal character I had myself photographed. You need not ask for a picture, I only got four and they will not supply my family.

After two hours spent in looking out on the placid ocean, the breakers, at the beach and ships at sea, I took a different car line into the city, and found that in this land of beauties there is a constantly changing, varying scene. Here we found vast fields of rolling prairie covered largely with deep green carpets of growing grain, with occasional groves or strips of eucalyptus trees reaching heavenward, very slim in form compared with our fine of Oregon or your oaks of the middle states. The orchards of oranges and lemons so prevalent in other parts being almost wholly missing here. When I think of the variety around Los Angeles, the region must appear longer than it really is. While at San Pedro I was impressed with the facts that instead of its being a bay with sufficient natural harbor, the harbor is increased by a breakwater extending three miles in [illegible] circle, built by a frame work [illegible] capable blocks. The city [illegible] by much [illegible] for the bay [illegible] of granite. It is erected [illegible] the south side of this man-made harbor.

Dear Brother Underwood:

The Brothers and Sisters will rejoice to learn of the obedience of faith by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, by Sisters Lewis and Maroney.

About two weeks ago I received a letter from Bro. D. Y. Davis, of Colfax, Ind., asking me to come and baptize his daughter, Alga Lewis. Accordingly on Friday, May 17th, I went to Colfax and was delighted to find Brother and Sister Davis with their faces set Zionward looking for the coming of the Lord. They had trained up their daughter Alga "in the way in which she should go" and after a half hour conversation I found her ready for baptism. We then drove to Sugar Creek, two miles south, where upon confession of her faith in the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, she was baptized in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ for the remission of her sins. Sister Lewis and Brother and Sister Davis would be glad to receive letters of encouragement from any who care to write. Address either at Colfax, Ind.

I arrived at Hillisburg, Ind., the next day and on Sunday morning before meeting I was informed that Miss Veda Maroney desired to be immersed. She resides with her parents at Kokomo, Ind., but frequently visits her relatives at Michigantown, some five miles from the church. She, too, had been brought up in the "nurture and admonition of the Lord," her grandparents, Brother and Sister Robert Henge being for years staunch supporters of the Truth in Clinton Co. Her mother also being careful to teach her the true way of life.

After a brief conversation with her on Sunday afternoon she declared she was ready to be immersed, and on Monday morning we repaired to a gravel pit a half mile south of the church, where in the presence of many witnesses she was baptized in the name of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ for the remission of her sins.

She too, will welcome a word of encouragement from any of the household who care to write. Address 468 South Main St. Kokomo, Ind.

May these "Babes in Christ" grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

Dear Restitution:

"Blessed is every one that feareth the Lord; that walketh in his ways; for thou shalt eat the labor of thine hands; happy shalt thou be and it shall be well with thee. Thy wife shall be as a fruitful vine by the sides of thine house, thy children like olive plants round about thy table. Behold that thus shall the man be blessed that feareth the Lord. The Lord shall bless thee out of Zion; and thou shalt see the good of Jerusalem all the days of thy life. Yea, thou shalt see thy children's children, and peace upon Israel." Psalm cxxviii.

Vital Fulness.

Mechanical fulness is one thing, vital fulness is another. Fill a pitcher with milk this evening, and tomorrow morning the pitcher will be full. Fill a babe quite full with milk this morning, and before tomorrow morning the babe will want more. All vital fulness demands a constant supply. The trees of the Lord are full of sap, —not only sap enough for the roots and the trunk, but for the bark, the twig, the branch, and the topmost limb or leaf. So with us. The trees of the Lord are full of sap, but to be full of sap they must draw every day from the heaven above and from the earth beneath, and they must never interrupt the drawing. There must be a dependence that is perpetual—never interrupted. The moment the cedar of Lebanon felt that it was so strong that it could do without the air, the rain, the sun, and the soil—that it could live upon its own power and glory—it would soon cease to be full of sap.—William Arthur.

The Righteous Flourish.

"The righteous shall flourish like the palm tree," says the Psalmist, indicating that the Christian life is fruitful, upright, and has a growth from within. The comparison derives further meaning from a saying among the Arabs that the palm tree stands with its feet in salt water and its head in the sun. Often the water in the oasis where the palm grows is brackish and unfit for drinking. But the traveler taps the tree and drinks the sweet palm sap. The tree, by the magic of its inner life, can change the elements found in the salty soil and make it minister to its own growth and the refreshing of the weary, thirsty traveler. So the Christian may have his feet in the mire as he mingles with the world, but the life within him preserves his own character sweet and fruitful and he becomes a blessing to others.—Christian Observer.

Give Your Name.

I have a question sent to me to answer signed "Student." I am perfectly willing to give any enquirer what light I may have; but I must insist on having the name of the person signed to their request. Brother D. C. Robison has issued a small 16-page tract on the subject "Man is Mortal." It is of convenient size to enclose in an envelop, and can be had for 2 cents each, or 15 cents for 12, or $1.50 for 100 copies. Bro. Robison is so well known as a clear and lucid writer that no words that we can pen would commend his work, more than will the bare announcement of his name. If you are in the mood to do a little missionary work send to Brother Robison at 596 So. Limestone St. Springfield, O. and get a supply of these tracts.

When you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "The Restitution," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and send that.

Poetry.

This Same Jesus.

"This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Acts i. 11.

This same Jesus! O, how sweetly
Fall those words upon the ear,
Like the swell of far-off music
In the night-watch still and drear.

He who healed the helpless leper,
He who dried the widow's tear,
He who changed to health and gladness
Helpless, suffering, trembling fear—

He who wandered poor and homeless
By the stormy Galilee;
He who on the night-veiled mountains
Bent in prayer the wearied knee—

He who gently smiled the weary,
"Come and I will give you rest!"
He who loved the little children,
Took them in his arms and blessed—

"This same Jesus!" When the vision
Of that last and awful day
Bursts upon the prostrate spirit,
Like a midnight lightning ray;

Then we lift our hearts adoring:
"This same Jesus," loved and known—
Him, our own most gracious Saviour—
Seated on the great white throne.

For this word, O Lord, we bless thee;
Bless our Master's changeless name;
Yesterday, to-day, forever,
Jesus Christ is still the same.

The Story of a Happy Christian Life.—No. 10.

Auntie Willard being near the door, slipped out unnoticed, ran home and prayed; then, "re-assured and calm," returned to the church just in time to hear "Elder Barnes, who that evening had taken his seat far back in the body pews," announce his decision.

Rising he said, "I have very carefully examined the beautiful theory which has been set before us for the two weeks past. I have wished to believe it if it be true. But last night as I lay pondering, the whole Bible from Genesis to Revelations was spread out as a map before me, and I saw nothing of this theory upon it. Therefore my mind is made up that it is false. I can neither receive it nor preach it nor countenance it in any shape."

Who was first to step out on the side of Truth do you think? It was the timid woman who in Cincinnati, shrank from praying, even before her husband's nephew! Auntie Willard did not fear even the Giant Goliath now. She knew his armor was so faulty that a stone from the sling of a child could pierce it. So beginning "in a calm firm voice" she said, "If this is Elder Barnes' decision and settled conviction of duty, I must beg to be excused from any longer sitting under his ministry. I believe what we have heard to be the truth of God, and if he cannot preach it, I must go where it is preached!"

Only to think, dear young people, what courage it must have taken for that timid woman to stand up before that indense crowd of people, and speak to her own pastor and friend in this decided way. It must have been almost like going to the martyr's stake.

Elder Barnes turned and looking her full in the face said "Sister Willard, you have set down a firm stake."

"Yes," she replied, "and may God make it to stand," and, writing of the incident afterward, she said, "And he has; for there it is onto this day!"

And so the meeting closed, no one having expressed a desire to withdraw from the Baptist Church, so far as I knew, excepting Auntie Willard.

A letter from Bro. Willard, dated Feb. 25, 1845, shows that it was the wish of the members at that time to continue working together as a united church, for he says,

Dear Bro. Chaplin:—Allow me to inform you that by a unanimous vote of the church at this place, you have been invited to continue your services as our Pastor one-half of the time indefinitely, inasmuch as a portion of the church are favorable to the doctrine of the Lord's speedy advent and feel that that doctrine alone can feed them. Bro. Barnes has also been called in the same way to labor indefinitely and expresses a satisfaction in laboring conjointly with yourself.

I am aware that it is hard for two to walk together unless they be agreed, but dear Bro. I have thought we could perhaps best do the will of God, by bearing each others infirmities and still trying to do our brethren good by laboring with them.

As to myself, I feel I trust, more and more confirmed in the Advent views and if we are to understand the truth from what they say there is at present a deep spirit of enquiry and searching of the Scriptures to see if these things be so, and although some are half-hearted, I trust that the large majority of the church, are beginning to appreciate the great Advent truths—hence is it not your duty to still labor with us in order that the truth may be made plain and be kept before their minds? If so please come up so as to be with us next Lord's day. as I have informed the people there will be a meeting on that day. Bro. John Spear has been licensed to preach and we expect he will wish to do mission work among the brethren abroad, and we will at times be destitute of preaching unless you feel willing to come.....I am disposed to keep the church together if we can walk in brotherly love, but if not, then a separation will be necessary, if time continues. If the last premises on time—namely, the coming of our Lord in April are correct our decision should be prompt—and dear Bro. pray that the dear brethren may be decided and hearty in the matter of deciding for Christ.

Yours truly,

ROWLAND WILLARD.

You see from this letter that Bro. Willard thought it best for the Advent believers to remain in the Baptist Church if it were possible; Auntie Willard thought otherwise, and was already seeking if it was not the duty of those who were looking for Jesus to dissolve their connection with the churches?" She "thought it a question that they should decide by fasting and prayer" and said "it was constantly on her mind during her waking hours, and though her husband thought such a step not called for, it did not set her mind at rest on the subject."

We shall see before long how it turned out. Father received Bro. Willard's letter the last of February, but it seems he had already made up his mind no longer to mind church or State if they rejected truth but to hear Jesus and obey him, as to the duty of crying "Behold he cometh!" I learn this from a letter of Bro. N. M. Catlin's, written the 24th of Feb. 1845, just one day before Bro. Willard's letter was written. Bro. Cook and Bro. Greenleaf had gone directly from Oswego to Kingsbury, and had reached there the 17th of Feb, and Bro. Greenleaf had taken a letter to Brother Catlin from Father.

Bro. Cook had baptized nine at Kingsbury before he left on Monday, but there was the same division of feeling there that there was in our part of the country.

The mass of men, both church and world, had shut their ears to the last message that God had sent for their salvation, in this closing dispensation, and thereafter it would be like the gleaning of grapes, in an already stripped vineyard. God's servants must now go to the highways and hedges, to find his jewels.

Table Talk.

"Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." Rom. v. 1.

The fourth chapter first establishes the fact that Abraham was justified by faith and yet that his faith had to be proved by works. Still the works of faith must not be understood as in any degree earning a justified standing with God. Abraham was accounted righteous, or counted as righteous on account of his faith, which faith was proven and tried by works.

By faith, or on account of faith Abraham received the promises, therefore Paul is moved by the spirit to quote of him the words of David, "Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered"—"Blessed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute sin." This describes the blessedness of the man Abraham. God mercifully accounted him righteous without works, that is to say, not on account of "works" was he called righteous; yet we want to be sure we know what "works" are referred to by the Apostle in this connection, or we are led into confusion and error.

In this same epistle to the Roman brethren Paul gives the key to his meaning where he speaks of God as "both just and the justifier of him which believeth on Jesus:" and adds, "where is boasting then?" It is excluded. By what law? Of works? Nay; but by the law of faith. Therefore we conclude, says he, that a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law. "For if Abraham were justified by works, he hath whereof to glory, (or boast) but not before God."

For the promise that he should be heir of the world, was not to Abraham "or to his seed, through the law," (that is the law of Moses which required works of a physical observance in ceremonials and rites and sacrifices), but through the righteousness of faith."

The law required perfect obedience to live by it, as we read, Eze. xx. 11, "I gave them my statutes, and showed them my judgments, which if a man do, he shall even live in them." But Paul in his Epistle to Galatians iii. 16, shows that none were able to keep the law perfectly; saying, "knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law, for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified." But concerning Abraham he says in the chapter read, Rom. iv, "He staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief; but was strong in faith, giving glory to God (not boasting of glory in himself, you see), being fully persuaded that what he had promised, he was able also to perform, and therefore it was imputed to him for righteousness.

We may well take a side glance right here and note that there are works of faith as well as works of the law. In the 6th of John we hear Jesus saying to the multitude who followed him "for the loaves and fishes," labor not for meat that perisheth, (the margin says, "Work not). But for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life." Then said they unto him "What shall we do that we might work the works of God? Here was a fine opportunity to have told them to keep the law of Moses that God had given them; but he knew that none had ever been able to keep it, and that he was mercifully sent of the Father to fulfil all the law for them in order that they might have life everlastingly through him. So he turned their minds to the truth in this way; "This is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath sent." showing them that he was the "Bread of Life" and that by hungering after that spiritual food they might be "filled" with everlasting life. This work of God to which [illegible] turned their attention [illegible] ing of [illegible] on which the[illegible] build for Eternity—"gold, silver, precious stones" were none too good or valuable to lay upon this foundation for good works—and every man's works will be tried or proven. "Other foundation can no man lay than is laid."

But returning to the Epistle to the Romans, we have seen that strong faith or confidence in God's promise was reason for Abraham having righteousness imputed to him. Now says Paul, it was "not written for his sake alone, that it was imputed to him; but for us also to whom it shall be imputed, if we believe on him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead, who was delivered for our offences and raised for our justification." There is a breadth of love a wealth of mercy contained in the words, "not for his sake alone, but for us also." God has been merciful and gracious in imputing righteousness to Abraham on account of his faith. And we are not losers by the lapse of time since the days of Abraham, if we closely follow in his faith. The blood that sealed the everlasting covenant was shed by Jesus on the Cross of Calvary. He was delivered for our offences as well as for those of Galatia and Rome. If we have faith in that sacrifice as holy and acceptable unto God and through him hope for justification, He is now acting as our Advocate and High Priest before God, from whence we may confidently look for him to return with power and great glory and to reign on earth as King of kings and Lord of lords. If we have such faith as this we have "peace with God." What can excell the spirit of peace and confidence in God which is enjoyed by those who know they have been justified through the loving kindness and tender mercy of God operating by the faith in his promises centered in Jesus, his Son?

But we must be watchful and prayerful lest we get self-confident instead of confident in God. If we are watchful we fall into habits which soon become strong as bands of iron and nothing but the grace and favor of God can deliver us from them. "Watch and pray, lest ye enter into temptation." Jesus knew we needed this, or he would not have given it to us. "Wherefore brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure."

CHAS. A. GOSS.

At The Breaking of Bread.

The lesson for exhortation and encouragement today is found in Zech. xiv. 9. And the Lord shall be King over all the earth, in that day shall there be one Lord and his Name one. What a glorious promise for this earth and its inhabitants. There is no denying that the promises are many which declare that Jesus shall come and rule on the earth, there are so many that in fact, no one will or can deny it who believe in the Scriptures at all. But not understanding that there is a time for him to come and take unto himself his great power and reign, it is generally understood and taught, that he is reigning now in the hearts of those who profess to love the Lord. Let us look at this verse again, it says he shall be King over all the earth, and Jer., says a King shall reign and prosper and execute justice and judgment in the earth, and Isa., says, the government shall be upon his shoulders, and Dan. says, all people and nations and languages shall serve him. If we compare the present condition of things with these prophecies, what a mistake it is to believe that Jesus is reigning now. If we look around us, we see the rich gathering more riches, and the poor suffering for want of necessaries, lawlessness and crime on every hand, injustice in the courts, falsehood and bribery a common thing and even suicide and murder a daily occurrence. And so we see how great a mistake is made by those believing that Jesus now reigns in the heart, in not understanding that God hath appointed a day in the which he will judge or govern the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained, and hath given assurance unto all in that he hath raised him from the dead. Just as sure then as God raised him from the dead, just so sure will he send him to reign according to his promise, and Paul says he was raised and was seen by many witnesses, over five hundred at one time.

When the Lord shall be King over all the earth, Isaiah says the spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, and council and might and knowledge, and he will not judge by seeing with [illegible] his eyes or hearing with [illegible] ness of our own h[illegible] road he will co[illegible] make her wilderness like E[illegible] desert like the garden of the Lord; also how beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace, that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation, that saith unto Zion thy God reigneth. And Ezekiel also says this land that was desolate is become like the garden of Eden, and moreover God will make a covenant of peace with them, it shall be an everlasting covenant, and the heathen shall know that I the Lord do sanctify Israel when my sanctuary is in the midst of them for evermore. Plainly this is all still in the future, and brothers and sisters we are still waiting for the Lord to take unto himself his great power and reign. Oh, how we should rejoice in the knowledge of the glorious gospel, and although we see through a glass darkly, yet these prophecies throw a flood of light on the future glorious reign of him who is to be King over all the earth, and he has invited us to sit with him on his throne, when he reigns over all the earth victoriously. Oh let us strive to make our calling and election sure, by giving all diligence to add to our faith all the Christian virtues of which Peter makes mention, and so an entrance shall be ministered unto us abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Seeing that we look for such things, let us be diligent that we may be found of him in peace without spot and blameless.

MATTIE NEILL.

Editor Restitution:

We wish to say to all those of like precious faith, that the Church of God at Antioch, Ill., was made to rejoice on May 27, 1907, in the fact that Sister Louise McRoberts put on Christ by baptism. Bro. R. G. Huggins assisting her to be buried in the likeness of Christ's death, burial and resurrection, that like as Christ rose from the dead, even so she arose to walk in newness of life, putting off the old man and putting on the new man Christ Jesus. Sister McRoberts was "Baptized in the faith that God is able to perform all that he has promised." May his words ever be a lamp to her feet, a bright and shining light to her path, as she continues to press on toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus, who will change our vile bodies and fashion them like unto his glorified body on the morning of the resurrection; if so be "That the Spirit of him that raised up Christ from the dead dwell in you, the same spirit that raised up Jesus from the dead, shall also quicken your mortal bodies." May the grace of God, and our Lord Jesus Christ ever be with her, is our prayer.

JOS. H. WILLIAMS.

Bro. Underwood:

Following please find notice for RESTITUTION. Bro. S. J. Lindsay of Oregon, Illinois, held meeting at Argos, Ind., Saturday evening May 18, and over Sunday May 19. Mrs. Cora Finney came forward for baptism, and put on Christ by baptism on Sunday afternoon at Huff's Lake near Argos. A sermon was also preached by Bro. Lindsay in afternoon of Sunday for the benefit of Sister Beaty at their home about 1½ miles northeast of Argos. About forty neighbors and friends attended this meeting. Sister Beaty has the misfortune to be blind, and has been confined to her bed for some months past.

We appreciate Bro. Lindsay's work here very much, he is doing good work, and we are thankful to have one so worthy among us.

The Image of Christ.

The image of Christ, drawn by the pencil of the Spirit, to which Scripture directs our aim, is painted in such colors that it is impossible often to contemplate it without it irresistibly affecting the heart. As the bodily eye that looked long at the sun retains a bright image of it, so the spiritual eye that gazes steadfastly on the face of Christ is filled with light. We carry this image with us wherever we go, and it blends with all our thoughts and actions. It never ceases to be a study to us, ever growing more bright and beautiful as we gaze upon it, revealing in contrast, more and [illegible] ness of our own h[illegible] our souls, and still [illegible] main in each heart heights and [illegible] where yet all is cold and hard. How much must be melted away, he is first aware who conscientiously yields himself up to the discipline of Scripture. The longer we contemplate Christ, the more do we discover how unlike him we are, how selfishness has penetrated our inmost nature, how poor we are in humanity, in love. When we enter this school of discipline, it does not seem so. This beholding ourselves in the image of Christ has the peculiarity, that whilst we more and more discover the darkness in us, upon us all the while unconscious it is pouring its light. Paul has expressed this in a particularly rich passage in his letter to the Corinthians. He says: "But we will all, with open face, beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same from glory to glory, even as the Spirit of the Lord." A wonderfully rich saying indeed. Just as when we behold ourselves in a metallic mirror, he would say, it spreads over us its own effulgence; so we Christians, looking with unveiled face at Christ, as into the mirror of humanity, are adorned with his light, made partakers of his Spirit, changed, as from glory to glory, into the same resplendent image.—Tholuck.

Love is Positive.

The indefinite, careless life is a loveless one. It may now and then achieve something that helps, but it is more likely to yield to evil influences and be pulled downward, than to be drawn upward. Its lack of love means lack of long outlook, of that purpose which jealously guards the life from evil. One who loves not, gives way to self-indulgence in some form. Is unwilling to antagonize wrong-doing, prefers being agreeable to being right. Love is a positive reality, has definite purposes, takes hold on God's power, looks ahead, recognizes law, searches for right ways, cannot be swayed by the allurements of evil.

Learn to keep a secret; and a good way to guard one is not to tell a friend, lest your enemy, if you have one, should learn of it.

Obituary.

Brother M. V. Cronbaugh died at his home near Koozta, Iowa County, Iowa, May 18th, 1907, aged 67 years, 7 months and 6 days. Brother Cronbaugh was born in Crawford Co., O., Oct. 12, 1839. At the age of five years he went with his parents to Michigan and remained there 12 years. In the spring of 1854 they moved to Iowa Co., Iowa. He was married to Susannah Coats Dec. 18, 1861, and five years later took up his residence on the farm where he spent the remainder of his life. In 1872 he was baptized by Elder Hason of Belle Plaine and united with the Advent Christian church. Some years later he came to understand more fully the truths concerning the kingdom of God and the faith once delivered to the saints as advocated by the Church of God.

Three years ago Bro. C. J. Allard was called upon to preach the funeral sermon of his wife, Sister Cronbaugh, by whose side he now lies awaiting the summons to life and immortality. Brother Cronbaugh leaves two sons, five daughters and five brothers to mourn his loss. Some three hundred friends and relatives assembled at his late home to pay their respect to the dead and to extend their sympathy to the living. The writer spoke words of comfort and hope founded on the statement of Jesus—"Thy brother shall rise again." John xi. 23. A choir rendered several beautiful songs expressing the faith of a coming Savior and a glorious resurrection, which was the faith in which our brother fell asleep.

G. ELDRED MANN.

Hiram S. Decker was born in Kane Co., Ill., May 22nd 1858; fell asleep April 20th, 1907, in Millbrook, Mich. He was married to Ellen Main in 1882, five children were born to them. His wife died in Oct. 1894. Two years later he was married to May Shirlow, and about a year after their marriage his youngest child Eva was laid beside its mother. The remaining four children and his wife survive him. His sickness was a peculiar one of the nervous system. He was taken to the [illegible] Hospital at Ele[illegible] and while [illegible] aged mother a[illegible] died. He leaves a wife, four children, his beloved mother, two brothers, three sisters, with many other relatives and friends who will miss him. Especially do we sympathize with his wife and children. O how cheerless and lonely is the home without him. The only comfort at such times is, the blessed resurrection, when we hope to meet them again. Bro. Decker was baptized into the Christ many years ago because of his very firm belief in the gospel of the kingdom. He was a very quiet, unassuming man, but every where noted for the sterling quality of honesty. Elder B. W. Woodward spoke at the funeral from Psa. cxvi. 15, we await the resurrection morning to greet him again.

M. A. WOODWARD.

Joseph Thurman was born in Clinton County, Indiana, Jan. 21, 1831; and died May 25, 1907; aged 76 years, 4 months and 4 days. He lived in Clinton County all his life, except 12 years he lived in Texas. His illness dated from June, 1906. In the year 1855, March 8th, he was married to Miss Eveline F. McCarty; to this union were born eleven children of which seven children and his widow survive, which are as follows: Mrs. Henry Graham of Canada; Attarah Hodgen, deceased; Rachel M. Whitcum, Clinton County, Ind.; Stephen A. Thurman, Colorado Springs; G. B. Thurman, Frankfort, Ind.; Elisa Wilson, Texas; Leonis Thurman, deceased; R. N. Thurman, Frankfort, Ind.; Miss Catharine Thurman, living at home, and Johnson and Josie who died in infancy. Brother Thurman united with the Church of God in 1852, of which he remained a consistent member. His funeral was preached by the writer at Cyclone in the Christian church, from one of his favorite texts, Job xiv. 14, If a man die shall he live again. He was buried in Green Town cemetery, near Frankfort, in which he must sleep until he comes who said, Because I live you shall live also. May that time soon come is the prayer of the writer.

O. J. Allard, Pres.
Eva L. Stearns, Sec.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Ohio will be held at Springfield beginning Wednesday evening August 7 and continue over the following Sunday. The coming meeting will be the fifth.

The four in the past were replete with all that goes to make a success. The speakers with one accord delivered the glad tidings of the Kingdom. Heartfelt prayers were offered. Inspiring songs were sung. Glad greetings and talks of the glories to come were heard from every side. Those who came hungry for the Word, went away full and overflowing. Let us make number five better if possible than the preceding ones. The brethren at Springfield have secured the Fair grounds and buildings for the occasion. The place could only be had for the dates given above.

Those who have met the Springfield brethren know the kindly effort they will make to have things comfortable.

For the reasons given it is needless to urge those who have attended. To those who have not we say "Come and see and hear." The presence of all is needed to plan the Evangelist work for the following year. The programme will be published in due time.

Torch Lake Bible School.

Conditions have arisen which make it necessary to change the time and place of the meeting of the Bible school. It is now decided that the time will be from Thursday July 25 to Aug. 8. The place, the pretty summer resort at Lemon Park—Indian Lake. This pleasant resort is only 2½ miles north of Vicksburg, Mich. From Chicago take Grand Trunk R. R. direct to Lemon park. From South Bend the same. From Grand Rapids change at Vicksburg to Grand Trunk, or change at Kalamazoo to C. K. & S. R. R. for Pavilion. At Pavilion change to Grand Trunk R. R. for Lemon park only 2½ miles west. These resort grounds are 14 miles south of Kalamazoo, 46 miles north of South Bend, 100 east of Chicago. Cottages can be rented very reasonably. When several use one the expense is very light. Meals quite reasonable or board ourselves. If cottages are rented there are beds, pillows, gasoline stove, chairs, tables and dishes, everything for light house keeping. Visitors should bring 2 sheets, 2 pillowslips, a quilt, a tick, straw for ticks close by. There are two boats with each cottage, and splendid fishing.

Above and beyond all that will be [illegible] Bible lessons by com[illegible] there with [illegible] of value for eternal things the expense will not be worth considering. The school of last year is still bearing good fruit. Let all come who can.

A New Tract.

The Great Divine Healer vs Latter Day Healers, by Uncle John Foors.

A Tract for the last days. Should be read by every thinking Christian.

Paul 2 Tim. iii. 13. "But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived."

Matt. vii. 21. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works. And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

Brethren, these tracts have gone into many families, both to brethren and people of other denominations, a few infidels, and one Christian Scientist, and all seem to be well pleased with it; but only a few of the brethren have sent to me any help in the way of paying for the tracts, and tracts are very expensive. We are anxious to have more published on different subjects. Please help to send these Pearls out among the people.

Send orders to John Foors, at 2012 W. Corning Ave. Parsons, Kan. The price is 10 cents each.

NOTICE.

Information wanted concerning an Evangelist known as Blind Haynes, who traveled some years ago in Kansas, selling a pamphlet written by himself, entitled "When will Christ come?" Is he living? If so, where? Who has a copy of his book to sell, or loan for a short time? What firm published his book? Information will be thankfully received, and it is of importance.

Address, E. P. Woodward, Westboro, Maine.

BIBLE SCHOOL ANNOUNCEMENT.

You will be well repaid for this week of Bible study. Brothers Lindsay and Wince will have charge of the work.

There will be no tuition fee. Those coming will please notify Mrs. J. H. Willey, Plymouth, in advance, and she will see that you have a place to stay.

Luther's Opinions.

In 1520, Luther published a defense of forty-one propositions which had been condemned by Leo X. In the twenty-seventh we find the following:—

"I permit the Pope to make articles of faith for himself and his faithful, such as.....the soul is the substantial form of the human body; the Pope is the emperor of the world, and the king of heaven and God upon earth; the soul is immortal, with all those monstrous opinions to be found in the Roman dunghill of decretals."—Historical view of the controversy concerning an intermediate state.—pp. 62, 63.

Mr. Blackburne says on page sixty-four of the same work, "Luther espoused the doctrine of the sleep of the soul, upon a Scriptural foundation, and he made use of it as a confutation of purgatory, and saint-worship, and continued in that belief to the last [illegible]." Ibid.

[illegible] differ, and each one will [illegible] accountable for the use of such talent, whatever that may be, if you have only one, use that.

Some one says, what can I do? Why you can circulate literature teaching the truth if nothing else. There is no one but who can do that. Will that do any good? Oh, yes. Let me tell you something. Some people have bought several copies of "Pine Woods Bible Class" and lending them to their friends and neighbors. It being easy and attractive reading, most people will read it. It is bearing fruit already. I have just been told of a man who had become discouraged. He had listened to preachers of different denominations, and found they contradicted each other. He began to drift into infidelity, when a Brother put a copy of Pine Woods Bible Class into his hands. Now in place of infidelity, he is rejoicing in new found light. It would take too much space to tell of other cases. Try this work, and add some stars to your crown.

The Students Text Book is already an assured success, and will be printed after I get home from this present trip.

I desire that all who want it, to send in their names in advance, that I may know how many to print. All you order now, you will be sure to get when printed. The price will be fifty cents.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Restitution."

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building, she took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Your loving brother.

The Bells of the Angels.

There comes to my mind a legend, a thing I had half forgot,
And whether I read it or dreamed it—ah, well, it matters not!
It is said that in heaven at twilight a great bell soft swings,
And men may listen and hearken to the wondrous music that rings.

If he puts it to his heart's inner chamber all the passion, pain and strife,
Heartache and weary longings, that flash in the pulses of life,
If he thrust from his soul all hatred, all thoughts of wicked things,
He can hear in the holy twilight how the bell of the angel rings;
And I think there lies in this legend, if we open our eyes to see,
Some what of an inner meaning, my friend, to you and me.

Let us look in our hearts and question: Can pure thoughts enter in
To a soul if it be already the dwelling of thoughts of sin?
So, then, let us ponder a little—let us look in our hearts and see
If the twilight bell of the angels could sing for us—you and me.

Notes by the Way.

Having bid good bye to the dear ones in Christ, at Alvin, Texas, I took the train for Nottawa, by way of Rosenberg. I left the train at East Bernard, and was met at that place by Mr. Shelton, and conveyed to his home at Nottawa. As soon as was convenient, meetings were arranged to take place at Lissie, Texas, about four miles from Nottawa. The meetings opened upon Saturday night, with fair attendance, but on Sunday morning and also Sunday night, we had full houses, and on Monday night a fair turn out. After this, heavy rains set in, and continued, so that it was impossible to hold any more public meetings, but I held some private meetings at the home of Bro. and Sister Arnold, where I was being entertained. I left several people at that place favorably inclined towards the truth.

Bro. and Sister Arnold are well known in the northwestern part of Illinois. They used to live at Lanark, Ill., and were well acquainted with most of the members living in Northwestern Illinois. I enjoyed my visit at their hospitable home. They are now getting well advanced in years. A married daughter and her husband live with them, and help them much. Bro. Arnold runs a store, and is also the postmaster at Lissie. I next visited Buffalo, Texas, where I baptised four last year. I was met by Bro. Watt, taken to his home. The attendance at this place was also fair, until continued rains again interferred with the meetings. At the conclusion of the Sunday morning meeting a gentleman came to me, and said, "You talk like a man of common sense, a man that knows what he is talking about." Bro. Watt invited him home to dinner with him. We had a very interesting conversation on Bible topics. Seeing a copy of Pine Woods Bible Class, he opened it, and looked it over, and was impressed with it, and at once ordered one. The book is doing a splendid work. A brother who became impressed with it ordered fourteen copies to circulate. At the close of the evening meeting, the gentleman came to me, and said that on my return trip he wanted me to preach in the town of Buffalo, and that he would secure the use of the Presbyterian church, and an audience also. The publisher of the town paper, and others also, expressed a wish to hear me.

I held two private meetings in the home of Bro. and Sister Watt when the rain hindered the public meetings. There are three grown up daughters in this family, who are very interesting young ladies, whom I have baptized. They have two younger children, Beulah and Frank, whom Sister Watt is teaching the truth. Beulah has passed her twelfth year, and is anxious to learn the truth.

From this place I started on my home trip, being absent four months, and eight days on the trip. Arriving at Palestine, at about seven o'clock P. M., here we had a tedious delay, there having been a wreck on ahead of us. We did not get away until about four o'clock in the morning. Arriving near Texarkana, we were delayed about eight hours, some sixteen freight cars being ditched. Such delays on account of being among strangers became very tedious to all the passengers.

I came across two Swiss missionaries who told me that they had started on a trip around the world. One of them asked me how I stood on the second coming of Christ? I told him that was just what I was preaching, and all my hope was centered in that. At that the missionary reached out his hand, and wanted me to shake hands on that. He handed me a paper, from which I cut the following:

"The age recedes, the evening shadows gather, and in these birth-throes of the Millennium Day we stand on tiptoe, our hands upon our thighs, looking for the things that are coming upon the earth."

Among the signs of Matt. xxiv. are enumerated "wars and rumors of wars," "earthquakes in diverse places," "distress upon all the earth," with "perplexity," but one sign comes to us with tremendous force: "This gospel of the kingdom" shall be preached in all the world as a witness upon all nations, and then shall the end come." Matt. xxxiv. 4.

While many are idly gazing into the clouds for his coming, they neglect to hear in tones of thunder this command: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." (Mark xvi. 15.) We venture the assertion that Christ will not come until this gospel shall be witnessed to in "all nations."

"Oh," says a churchist, "the gospel has been sent to all nations." Well, creeds of various churches and their narrow, contracted ideas of the gospel have been preached, but this gospel, the same that Jesus and the apostles preached, has been sorely neglected by these imitation missionaries.

"This gospel of the kingdom" is that of which Jude writes, "We should earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints," and of which Paul speaks in Heb. ii. 1, 4: "Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip.

"For if the word spoken by angels was steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompence of reward, how shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him?

"God also bearing them witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to his own will."

This is the gospel that modern Christianity has so sorely neglected."

Is it not a very hopeful sign indeed, when world wide missionaries are delivering a message like the above?

I also make another clipping from the same paper, with regard to the Jews.

Zionism is the result of individualistic effort; and a gigantic undertaking is summed up in the word Zionism. Were it not for the fact that all Scriptures agree that now is the time, we should faint by the way. There are 13,000,000 Jews scattered all over the world and intricately connected with its political and financial interests. Their extraction from all countries and re-establishment as a nation mean more than pen can now describe.

Palestine is now controlled by the Turk, a formidable barrier; but his consent, coupled with that of all nations except Russia to relinquish the same, gives us great encouragement.

Zionism was born as a result of fierce anti-Semitism and ridiculous prejudice against the Jew because he is a Jew. In August, 1897, two hundred delegates met in Basle, Switzerland, representing all classes of the Jewish race.

Dr. Theo. Herz was elected to preside, assisted by Dr. Max Nordau and Israel Zangwill, the London poet.

This congress discussed the Jews, their condition and remedies therefor, the sessions each year growing in interest. Each congress has convened either in Basle or London. The last congress, in August, contained five hundred ninety-two delegates. This last convention voted the establishment of the Jewish Colonial Trust Bank, capitalized at two million pounds sterling, the interest to be used, not only in the purchase but the improvement of Palestine. The predominant feature is to restore Palestine to Jews and eventually the Jewish nation entire. Says Dr. Friedenwald: "It is our aim to extend Zionism until it embraces all Jews, whether rich or poor, whether pious or rationalist."

The fact that Turkey is sorely pressed for funds lends a rainbow hue to Israel's clouds.

The Jewish race contains every element for the safe and equitable government. Among them are found the highest types of moral and intellectual life. From the mechanical and farming classes of Europe to the scholarly and business Jews of England and America, every characteristic of a powerful and staunch government are found, while under the general protectorate of civilized nations Jerusalem would grow and flourish fair—the hub of the world intellectually.

Religiously and politically, the Jews are already a nation with a representative form of government to secure their title to rightful inheritance.

As to the remedy for existing evils of anti-Semitism, we quote Herbert Bentwich: "We see before us but three alternatives—the maintenance of status quo with all our people; or voluntary amalgamation with other peoples, with its dull round of persecution and continual retrogression, involving the deepest disgrace and surrender of all that our fathers have toiled for and suffered during the ages; or an attempt to regenerate our country people in accordance with our historical consciousness."

This latter clause is in accord with Jewish prophecies. The horrible massacres in Russia, and prejudice in other countries, have increased until the Jews are suffering today almost equal to the days of the Inquisition. The Scriptures declare that the Jews will oppose in a measure the restoration, saying: "We will not return;" but God says, "I will put the sword behind and they shall go." I will bring them from the north country (Russia) first."

We see in the awful crimes in Russia the hand of Jehovah moving the Jewish clans to the lands of their fathers, and these conditions call the nation to remedial action, thus paving the way for a realization of Zionism's hope."

Take courage, beloved in the Lord; there are glorious things just ahead. Let us haste to make deposits in the Bank of Heaven. The day when we must render an account of our stewardship is near at hand.

In order to pass the time while waiting for the wreck to be cleared up one gentleman read an article from a paper, written by a man named Roberts. This article was semi-sceptical in nature. The gentleman who read the article seemed to be of the same way of thinking. He placed the Scriptures on a par with the Koran, the Vedas, etc. They all took as much comfort from them, as we did from ours; and why were they not as good? The passengers discussed the matters pro and con. After awhile, I put in a word. I said I will illustrate the matter by a story. A certain widow left with a family of small children, finally became desperately poor. A gentleman relieved her distress by giving her a ten dollar bill. She was overjoyed, and took pleasure in making her plans, as to how she should spend it. She went to the store and made her purchase, and gave to the merchant the ten dollar bill. The merchant said, madam, this is no good, it is not genuine. The woman then felt worse than if she had not received the gift. It is so with the Koran, and other so-called sacred writings; they enjoy them as long as they believe them to be genuine sacred Scriptures; but when the day of accounts come, and they find them bogus, there will be bitter weeping and wailing.

The gentleman asked another question, he said the matter which bothers me is, when the natural ends, and the spiritual begins. Various gentlemen tried to answer it, but failed. I then quoted to the gentleman Paul's words: "Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which was natural; and afterward that which was spiritual." I said the mistake was that most people thought that the natural and the spiritual were both co-existent, at the same time, which was a mistake. As to when the spiritual would begin. I said: "It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption." The natural ended when dead; and the spiritual began when raised. The gentleman said that is Paul's view, but Mr. Roberts thinks different, which is right? A gentleman who had so far remained silent, said, Let us change the ten dollar bill to silver; we can then know which is genuine by its ring. Paul's language had a genuine ring to it.

Finally the wreck was cleared, and we proceeded on our way. I arrived home, being on the way two days and three nights. Was glad to find my family as well as usual.

The next Sunday after my arrival I baptized a young man named Jefferies.

I immediately set about the printing of The Student's Text Book. Let those who want it say so. Price fifty cents. It is something different from anything yet issued. You will find it to be something you will value. It will give information, which the public in general has no access to.

Was pleased to get home after an absence of four months and eight days.

Yours in the Blessed Hope,
W. H. WESTON.

The Story of a Happy Christian Life.—No. 11.

You have learned from Bro. Willard's letter how matters stood at Oswego, in February, 1845, but you can see that he either did not know how father felt, or that, if he did, he was quite sure he would accept the invitation of the church, and continue preaching for them as a matter of duty, in connection with Mr. Barnes. He was mistaken.

Bro. N. M. Catlin's letter says, "I am heartily glad Bro. S. A. to hear your determination to no longer confer with flesh and blood as to the duty of crying, 'Behold he cometh!' Why don't mind church or state if they reject the truth. I want to obey Jesus. So do you. Let us then hear him."

Father must have gone up to Oswego to fill the appointment given out for him by Bro. Willard, for he either at that time, or shortly afterward preached his valedictory sermon to the Baptist Church.

Auntie Willard tells the story in her auto-biography but does not give the date, she says:—"Bro. S. A. Chaplin was now released from his irksome position so long and wisely endured for Jesus sake, and in preaching his valedictory sermon, took for his text these words,—'If thy brother, the son of thy mother, or thy son, or thy daughter, or the wife of thy bosom, or thy friend which is as thine own soul entice thee secretly, saying, Let us go and serve other gods, thou shalt not consent unto him nor hearken unto him,'" Deut. xiii. 6-8, and commenting on the sermon, she continues, "It was a masterpiece of faithfulness and decision in which Bro. S. A.—Samson like, broke the seven green withes wherewith the deceptive Delilah of Sectarianism had bound him to afflict him and went out, God's free man, no more to be bound."

This severing of himself from the Baptist Church must have been a very painful thing to do, but my father was a man, who sooner than give up or compromise, what God had solemnly affirmed in his word, would have been sewn asunder, thrown into boiling oil, or pitched over a precipice.

When he had once grasped truth, no vain speculations as to how we would rise from the dead, no amount of worry, no harrowing opposition, defection of brethren, or deriding fingers, could turn him from the narrow way into unsafe and doubtful paths. I never knew a man who had a more lofty reverence for God, and this reverence he showed by the way in which he treated the word of that high and holy Being.

"Poore," Auntie Willard says, "Were now opened to him throughout the whole region, and he went forth preaching the gospel of the kingdom nigh at hand to attentive listeners and God was with him giving efficacy to the word spoken and great grace was upon his people."

But what about Bro. Willard and the other believers, you will ask? Did they remain in the Baptist Church? Not at all. Their separation happened on this wise. Bro. Cook had written a twelve-leaved tract entitled "Man." This fell into Bro. Willard's hands, and he at once saw from the Scripture quotations given, that "Man is mortal and that God only hath immortality." "Never before had he been so blessed, it was to him a new conversion and so great was his zeal to have others see it with him, that in a spirited exhortation at the church, one evening [illegible] burst a button off [illegible] next morning in a lively conversation with Deacon French, he noticed the missing button and remarked upon its loss, whereupon the Deacon with his significant blink said—"I guess you burst that off last night. I thought something had broken loose?"

"The button was found in the pew, and its wearer found himself a free man, freely relinquishing his interest in church and house for which he had spared neither labor nor treasure, and with melting voice invited the homeless ones for truth's sake, to his own house saying—'It is large enough come there and be welcome, and the Lord be with us all.'" So Auntie Willard describes it. The church was now divided. The Advent people had become a body by themselves. And those who would not follow in the track of truth because their leaders were not going that way, were left to suffer the consequences of their rejection of God's loving message to them. "In a few years" Auntie Willard says in her auto-biography, "that once flourishing church was scattered—their pastor, in his grave, and their beautiful house with its steeple and bell, rented out to another denomination." Its glory had indeed departed. Deacon French and Elder Aaron French made a mighty effort to annihilate the little band of believers by enticing them to re-unite with the church. He attended all their meetings with this sole object in view. Auntie Willard on the other hand said away from the meeting-house, hoping her action in the matter would serve to keep the deacon from their meetings, thinking it not desirable to have him come under the circumstances. But as it turned out only one of the Advent friends, went all influenced by the deacon and his associates. This, was the Bro. John Spear, who had been licensed to preach by the Baptist church, but who on learning the truth, returned his license to the church, and "began with great liberty" to sound out the message of a coming King and kingdom near. But his Baptist brethren begged so persistently for his return to the fold that he finally did so, asked for the license that he had given up, and "through their ur-

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Hunnes, went to California to set himself up in business, where alone and unfriended in a fit of despondency, he shot himself." The following line was found by his side, "Life is more bitter than death." He had drawn back from the work whereunto the Lord had called him, and there was thenceforth nothing in his cup of life but haunting regret and remorse, coupled with the feeling that God had no more pleasure in him.

Woe always comes to those who deliberately give up truth. God is not to be trifled with. He does not even want us to give up the fellowship of the lovers of truth, for the sake of some elusive theory about matters that have no possible bearing on salvation. It is dangerous business, destructive of the love, life and power of those who do it. The devil loves to catch people in such snares, because then they can do little against him in winning men for God. Their voices are hushed, their hands are made idle.

The Twentieth Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus in Iowa, will be held at Waterloo, Ia, Aug. 17-25, inclusive. Programme will appear later.

O. J. ALLARD, Pres.
EVA L. STEARNS, Sec.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Ohio will be held at Springfield beginning Wednesday evening August 7 and continue over the following Sunday. The coming meeting will be the fifth.

The four in the past were replete with all that goes to make a success. The speakers with one accord delivered the glad tidings of the Kingdom. Hearts [illegible] were offered. Inspiring songs were sung. Glad greetings and talks of the glories to come were heard from every side. Those who came hungry for the Word, went away full and overflowing. Let us make number five better if possible than the preceding ones. The brethren at Springfield have secured the Fair grounds and buildings for the occasion. The place could only be had for the dates given above.

Those who have met the Springfield brethren know the kindly effort they will make to have things comfortable.

For the reasons given it is needless to urge those who have attended. To those who have not we say "Come and see and hear." The presence of all is needed to plan the Evangelist work for the following year. The programme will be published in due time.

P. NEFF, Pres.
J. S. THOMPSON, Sec.

The Annual Meeting of the Northwest Conference of the Church of God will meet with the Church at Corvallis, Benton Co., Ore., on June 28 to 30, 1907. Corvallis is on the S. P. R. R. and Willamette river, can be reached by rail or boat. Now brethren plan to come, here is a new church and a new place to hold our Annual Conference. Come one, come all, and leave your hobbies at home, and make this the best meeting ever held in the Northwest. You cannot afford to stay away.

E. W. KNAPP, Sec.

Let your anger set with the sun, but never rise with it.

When you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and send that.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA. JUNE 12, 1907.

WE trust our contributors will be patient, and all will have attention as fast as space will permit.

THE Antioch Conference for 1907 was well attended, and though rain hindered at the beginning, it was a success. The crowd on Sunday was up to the usual number at this gathering, and the preaching was listened to with good attention. The secretary will make report in due time.

AT this time the Bible School is in session at Plymouth, and the attendance is larger than was anticipated. There is an earnestness manifest that betokens good results, and this branch of the Lord's work should be pushed along and encouraged everywhere. The Bible is not studied enough these days; indeed it is much neglected, and we hope these Bible Schools will be established in every state, and helped along by all.

THE following letter was written by Brother Barnhill to the Antioch meeting, but others who were not there will want to hear from him, so we give it place. Bro. Barnhill is all crippled up with rheumatism, and can only get out occasionally by the use of a wheel chair. He gets no better, but rather the disease is intensified. Here is his letter:—

TO THE CHURCH OF GOD IN CONFERENCE ASSEMBLED AT ANTIOCH, JUNE 7-9, 1907.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

Through infirmities of the flesh it is not my privilege to meet with you on this occasion; but voicing the Apostle Paul in Colossians ii. 5, "Though I be absent in the flesh, yet am I with you in the spirit, joying and beholding your order, and the steadfastness of your faith in Christ." Yes, brothers and sisters, the steadfastness of our faith in Christ. First we must "believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him," and having thus found him, and become attached to him, through the plan he has laid down for us, viz: [illegible] name, [illegible] member of his family, "Heirs of God, and joint heirs with Jesus Christ our Lord." And by our steadfastness in him, we have the promise of a "crown of life."

In this 42nd annual gathering at Antioch, we are wont to go back in mind to the early days of our church history and call the roll of those noble soldiers of the cross, and bear testimony to the earnestness and zeal in which they defended the "gospel of Christ once delivered to the saints." In memory we hear them sing, "Am I a soldier of the cross," and "Come let us anew, our journey pursue," etc., and they sing with such "spirit and understanding," that it makes those good old songs, which are now called back numbers, sacred and sweet to those who heard them. We will not attempt to give the names of those noble pioneers, time will not admit as they are many, beside we might omit some worthy one; but most of them are "Asleep in Jesus." Their names are enrolled in the "Lamb's book of life," and when Jesus comes, as we believe he will soon, none of them will be missed by him. "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall arise first, then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the cloud, to meet the Lord in the air, so shall we be ever with the Lord." Glorious promise, and may we voice the Revelator, "Amen, even so come Lord Jesus."

VERSES SELECTED FOR EXHORTATION.

P. Neill—Happy is the man that findeth wisdom, and the man that getteth understanding. For the merchandise of it is better than the merchandise of silver, and the gain thereof than fine gold.

She is more precious than rubies; and all the things thou canst desire are not to be compared unto her. Prov iii 13, 14, 15.

Bro. Buckman—No man can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon.

Therefore I say unto you, take no thought of your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink; nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on. Is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment?

But seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you. Matt vi 24, 25, 33.

Sister Townsend—I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God to salvation to every one that believeth, to the Jew first and also to the Greek.

For therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith; as it is written, the just shall live by faith.

For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men who hold the truth in unrighteousness. Rom i 16, 17, 18.

Sister Middleton—Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death?

Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life.

For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection. Rom vi 3, 4, 5.

Sister Crawford—Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin.

For he that is dead is freed from sin.

Now if we be dead with Christ we believe that we also shall live with him.

Knowing that Christ being raised from the dead, dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over him.

For in that he died, he died unto sin once, but in that he liveth, he liveth unto God.

Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord. Rom vi 8-11.

Sister Annie Burton—He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things. Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth. Who is he that condemneth? It is [illegible] rather that is [illegible] even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us. Rom viii 32, 33, 34.

Sister Mary Knowles—He is not here; for he is risen, as he said, Come, see the place where the Lord lay. And go quickly, and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead; and, behold, he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him; lo, I have told you. And they departed quickly from the sepulchre with fear and great joy; and did run to bring his disciples word. Matt xxviii 6, 7, 8.

Sister Farmer—That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ. But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin.

If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. 1 John i 8, 7, 9.

Sister Buckman—Jesus answered and said unto him, Art thou a master of Israel, and knowest not these things?

Verily, verily, I say unto thee, We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen; and ye receive not our witness.

As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up;

That whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. John iii 10, 11, 14, 15.

Bro. Barber—Blessed are ye that hunger now; for ye shall be filled. Blessed are ye that weep now; for ye shall laugh.

Blessed are ye when men shall hate you, and when they shall separate you from their company, and shall reproach you, and cast out your name as evil, for the Son of Man's sake.

Rejoice ye in that day, and leap for joy; for behold your reward is great in heaven, for in like manner did their fathers unto the prophets. Luke vi 21, 22, 23.

Sister Moore—Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me.

In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you, I go to prepare a place for you.

And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also. John xiv 1, 2, 3.

Sister Burton—I will not leave you comfortless; I will come to you.

Yet a little while and the world seeth me no more; but ye see me; because I live, ye shall live also.

Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid. John xiv 18, 19, 27.

Bro. Morron—We know that all things work together for good to them who are called according to his purpose. Rom viii 28.

For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. John iii 16.

"Blessed are the pure in heart; for they shall see God.

Bro. Townsend—Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God; therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not.

Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is.

And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure. 1 John iii 1, 2, 3.

Sister Neill—Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril or sword?

I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come.

Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord. Rom viii 35, 38, 39.

Sister Ella Knowles—Who shall ascend unto the hill of the Lord? or who shall stand in his holy place? He that hath clean hands and a pure heart; who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully. He shall receive the blessing from the Lord, and righteousness from the God of his salvation. Psa xxiv 3, 4, 5.

Sister McClave—For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him.

For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first.

Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord. 1 Thess iv 14, 16, 17.

Sister Morron—And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away. Rev xxi 4.

And, behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be.

Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city. Rev xxii 12, 14.

Sister Baker—The Lord reigneth, he is clothed with majesty; the Lord is clothed with strength, wherewith he hath girded himself; the world also is established, that it cannot be moved. Thy throne is established of old; thou art from everlasting.

The floods have lifted up, O Lord, the floods have lifted up their voice; the floods lift up their waves. The Lord on high is mightier than the noise of many waters, yea, than the mighty waves of sea.

Thy testimonies are very sure; holiness becometh thine house, O Lord, for ever.

Conference Report.

The 40th annual conference of the Church of God in Michigan, has been, and is not. Another profitable gathering together of the heralders of the gospel. We were so glad at the very first meeting to greet Bro. and Sister George Neill and Sister Lydia Railsback from South Bend, Ind. Bro. O. R. L. Crozier and F. V. Binkely of Grand Rapids, and Sisters Decker and Mansfield from Millbrook. Meeting Wednesday evening was called to order by our Vice President Horace Hammond. A few words of welcome were given by Elder B. W. Woodward, reserving he said his real speech until more had arrived. Sister Woodward gave an address from 2 Cor. vi. 1. Workers together with God. The congregation was small the first eve., but every incoming train brought more, until a large and enthusiastic congregation gathered for each session. Brothers, sisters and friends came from the following places. Grand Rapids, Millbrook, Coats Grove, Brady, Bryon Center, Fisher, Lake Odessa, Whitball, Crosby, Vermontville, Chicago, South Bend, Jamestown, East Port, Caledonia and Moline. Thursday morning Elder Charles conducted the social meeting, and Bro. F. V. Binkley followed with an interesting sermon. Subject satan. Lunch was served at the church at noon. At 1:30 p. m. Sister Lydia Railsback took charge of the Bible study. The lesson chosen was Gen. from the 1st to the 14th chapters. Many instructive thoughts were brought out at this session. In the eve., Bro. Neill intensified the thought expressed at Wednesday evening's meeting of work, in his subject of Repentance. Friday morning the programme called for a short business meeting. But as few had gathered at the appointed time that the president called a social meeting which all enjoyed for a half hour then Bro. Winchester spoke earnestly of man's hope in Christ. After luncheon Sister Railsback again took charge of the Bible study using the instructive story of Joseph for the hour's lesson, about 40 joined the class and old and young, asked, answered and enjoyed the lesson. Sister Benson led the social meeting at 7:30 after which Bro. Neill gave a stirring sermon on gospel truths. Saturday morning was taken up with Conference business. The President, Bro. Decker called the house to order, and after the usual reports had been given by vote of the house the rules were suspended, and the following officers were elected by acclamation. Pres. Lorenzo Decker; Vice Pres. H. Hammond; 2nd Vice Pres. Wm. Moses; Treasurer A. K. Richardson; Evangelists Benj. W. and Mary A. Woodward. House called an adjournment until 1:00 p. m. Business again taken up and the question of a Sec., for the ensuing year was talked over. Sister E. Jackman has very faithfully held this office for twelve years, but felt she could not accept it this year at least, so Sister Woodward was finally elected. The Evangelist reported 108 sermons preached during the year, baptized 7 into the Christ; preached 14 funeral sermons. In order to preach even these Bro. and Sister Woodward traveled on the rail road 3018 miles to help the local churches. O how destitute the vineyard is of workers. If the churches were self-supporting how much more the Evangelists could do in new fields; pray beloved for more workers, and help answer your own prayers by devising proper ways and means to employ some of the men and women who are anxious to work in the field but cannot for the lack of sufficient financial aid.

Saturday P. M. the Bible study was again taken up, this time Sister Railsback suggested The Christ for the lesson. This was the last Bible lesson of the meeting and we regretted very much that the beautiful and instructive work could not have been carried on for another hour, but Bro. Crozier had some interesting history of our faithful dead to read, and we closed our Bibles to listen as he gave in brief some of the faithful work of Bro. Joseph Marsh. The sketch you can read in another column of this paper. Sister Crozier followed with a beautiful tribute to Bro. Joel A. Simonds, and his earnest life work. Dear faithful sleepers, God has promised you eternal life for your faithfulness, and he is not slack concerning his promise, the reward is sure.

At 7:30 another good social meeting was conducted by Bro. Woodward. Greetings were sent to the Conference by Bro. P. Neil of Ohio, Sister West of Raisin Center, Sister Hoyt of Grand Rapids, Sister Hartley of Bluefield, Sister Miller of Coats Grove, Sister Parkhurst of Nunica.

At 8 o'clock Bro. Neil gave an object lesson to the young people, subject, Work. All enjoyed it.

Sunday morning another good social meeting. Then Bro. Neill spoke for one half hour on the Lord's coming and Sister Woodward followed with an exhortation, Why tarriest thou? We had hoped to have Bro. James Wilson of Chicago with us, but he did not come. At 1:30 B. W. Woodward spoke on Love, following with the communion service. Another social meeting in the evening, and a strong sermon from Bro. Neill on the Kingdom, and our 40th Annual Conference closed, all feeling they had been benefitted by the gathering. Several young people attended from Millbrook and other places, who with us enjoyed the Bible study especially. We rejoiced in the afternoon to see two young sisters baptized into the Christ; and at Bro. Woodward's home a very impressive service was held as they partook of their first communion, and were welcomed into the Church of God. May they with us remain firm and true to the end, and receive the promised reward of eternal life.

JOHN L. WINCE.

Did you ever know that you are doing something all the time either to discourage or to encourage others? If you stay away from meeting because there will be only a few out, you are discouraging those who are there and those stay away for the same reason. If you have a careless life and indulge in doubtful things, your influence may discourage those who are very strict with themselves before God. If you are faithful all the time, you encourage the weak and feeble ones. If you testify definitely to what God has given you, without urging and coaxing, you encourage those who hang back and are timid.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trust worthy.

If We Faint Not—or the Reaping.

"We shall reap if".....If what? "If we faint not." Were a census of opinion taken from an unprejudiced body of men, in all walks and stations of life, as to the kind of person most needed today, we should not find that it was the most intellectual, the most brilliant, or, possibly, even the most enthusiastic (valuable asis enthusiasm), but the person who has the qualification of perseverance, the resolution to go on in the face of adverse circumstances, hardships and difficulties, and at all cost to obtain the end in view. Go to the merchant, and he would speak of the clerk or salesman who is persistent and untiring in pressing his employer's goods upon his customers, when others are indifferent or heedless. Go to the general on the battlefield and he will point to the soldiers who held the fort at great odds as their comrades fell on all sides, until the relief column hove into sight. Go to the officer on the bridge and he will point to the man who stood by the deck until the last wave had broken over the forecastle, and the ship was saved from the storm. It is the man and woman who are to be depended upon to stand at their posts until the victory comes, and even should it not come, to be found there in the hour of seeming defeat.

The great difficulty, however, with so many people, and many well disposed, earnest individuals, too, is that they want the good without the effort of the race, the garnering without the reaping. Some of what would have proved the greatest achievements and triumphs in life have fallen simply for want of holding on. In some cases it has been found afterwards that the display of a few day's courage, or the exercise of a few hours' faith was all that was needed to realize the fulfilment of the dream of many years, or the victory of the battle of a lifetime. In due season we shall reap if we faint not—that is, if we despair not, if we do not distrust and give up. The credit is to those who "faint not." How many excellent people there are who fail to wait for the reward of labors. They are their own deprivers and undoers. They will not wait! They want their Rome built in a day, and because it does not materialize they become dispirited, distrustful and disparaging.....

We trust that if this shall reach the eye of any who are failing in strength or courage or hopefulness, that they will take a new hold, and resolve that God shall give them the reaping through having given them the strength to "faint not."

The young people of the Church of God at South Bend, Ind., have formed themselves into a social Bible study class. On May 14th the first meeting was held at the home of Brother and Sister George Neill. The name, "the Berean Society of the Church of God at South Bend" was adopted, and the following officers were elected: President, Sister Evelyn K. Harsch; Vice President and Corresponding Secretary Mrs. A. D. Clem, 430 North Cushing Street; Recording Secretary and Treasurer, Sister George Neill. All Bible study to be under supervision of Bro. Neill. The officers were elected a committee to draft constitution and bylaws. Unlike the Church of God elsewhere, the Church of God at South Bend has practically no young people, and this society was formed for the purpose of getting interested in the Truth, the young friends and acquaintances of the brethren, and success has attended our efforts in this direction so far. The topic now under consideration is, The life of Christ. We invite correspondence.

ILLINOIS BIBLE SCHOOL.

The Annual Bible School for Illinois will convene at Oregon, Ill., August 12-21. Brother R. G. Huggins has been requested to prepare an outline of study on the nature, office, and work of the Holy Spirit, a task for which we deem him well qualified. The other work of the school will be about the same as in former years. Our services will be occupied in about the same manner as they were last year. Already many have signified their intention to be present. When you read this, please write me whether you will attend, and send me the names of others who may be induced to attend. Our school is no longer an experiment, but an established instrument for good. Come then with us and we will do thee good. Address me at Oregon, Ill.

The Burden Bearer.

I sat by the wayside, weeping,
When the Burden-Bearer came
And lifted the burden from me,
While he gently called my name.
I yielded the burden gladly,
For I could not bear the load,
And saw not a step before me,
For the darkness of the road.

He spoke, and his voice was tender,
When he smiled, his smile was love,
While his arms he spread beneath me,
And his wings he spread above.
So, sheltered and safe, I follow
The way he would have me go;
I'll ask him to keep me closest
O'er the ways I may not know.

I never can lose my bearings
While I follow such a guide,
While walking beneath his banner,
Which is love on every side.
And I'll take my dear one with me—
I could never go alone
I will bear them in my pleadings,
While I wait before his throne.

His mercy endureth ever,
And his promise cannot fail
To those who will wait before him
With a faith that must prevail.
Dear Savior, I'm weak, but waiting,
With my burden cast on thee;
I'm coming, I and the children—
The dear ones you gave me.

Evangelizing on the Pacific Coast.

I am working at, or near Phoenix Ariz. I reached Tempe April 10th, and after consultation with Bro C. A. Corbell, we came over to Phoenix, where through Bro. J. M. Fike, we arranged for me to preach in a hall in the city Sunday April 14th. The following week I established evening meetings, at the Isaac school house, about four miles from Phoenix. On Sunday, and Sunday night, spoke again in the city. On Monday a. m. was called across the Salt River, to Tempe, to give funeral discourse, at the burial of Ruby Cathrine Calhoun, aged 2 years, and 8 months, the child of Sr. Julia Calhoun and a grand child of Sister Nichols. I was glad that I could tell mother, grand mother, and other friends of that part, of the glad tidings that makes known the ransom for all, from the Adamic penalty, John i. 29; 1 Tim. i. 5, 6; 1 John i. 2; also by the lesson by reading Rom. v. And the text and proof established by comparing Jer. xxxi 15, 16, 17, with Matt. ii. 17, 18. Thus showing that the babies two years old and under, that were killed by the tyrant Herod that they shall come again from the land of the enemy; and shall come again to their own border.

Oh, what good news for weeping parents of the innocent.

I returned that evening to the Isaac school house, and spoke by request on the Jewish, or law Sabbath.

As the Seventh day Adventists had been here since I was here a little over a year ago, and had been vigorously urging professed Christians to keep the law, it had become a question with some, whether we are under the law. I think my argument convinced some or all, that we are no longer under the law, and made it clear, that the Sabbath was never commanded under the new covenant, that the sign of the old covenant, which was the Sabbath, Ex. xxxi. 16, 17, 18, could not continue after the covenant itself vanished away, Heb. viii. 13.

The sign of the new covenant, is the new commandment, John xiii. 34, 35, A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another, as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples if ye have love one to another. Love is the sign of the new covenant.

In a letter like this, I cannot rehearse my array of Scripture; by which I proved that the law—the entire code as well as the ceremonies of the law were national institutions, designed for the Jewish nation.

The Sabbath was given and observed to celebrate the deliverance of the nation from Egyptian bondage.

By resting they celebrated the national rest once a week, or on the Sabbath, Deut. v. 15. Americans celebrate their deliverance from England once a year, with noise and rejoicing.

The Jewish day had not been celebrated before the deliverance of the nation, Deut. v. 2, 3; Neh. ix. 13, 14.

Christians do not celebrate deliverance from Egyptian bondage under law; but we do, voluntarily, celebrate deliverance from sin and death; by the resurrection of Jesus. The glad words, He is risen! came early in the morning of the first day of the week. It was the beginning of new creation. A patriotic Christian does not need to be placed under law to celebrate our deliverance from sin and death no more than a patriotic American needs law, to cause him to celebrate on the fourth of July, or his deliverance from the English yoke.

I spend each one of these warm, bright and perfectly clear, moon light nights talking to the people, in the Isaac school house, about four miles from Phoenix. It was thought, that on account of the rush of hay harvest I could not get a congregation; but I said it is harder work for me to be idle than to work. I will talk to them if I get a congregation of a dozen. We have averaged twice that number and are encouraged.

On the evening of the 27th, I made a call to obedience in baptism. Sister Baker responded.

On Sunday 27th, I went to my appointment at the hall in Phoenix. I intended to speak in the city, at 11:00 a. m., and return to the school house at night. When I reached Phoenix I learned, from Bro. Corbell, that he had announced through the Tempe paper, that I would begin a series of meetings on the evening of Sunday 28th, at the Rural School house near Tempe. Thus I found that I had two meetings appointed on the same hour, eighteen miles apart. Bro. J. M. Fike agreed to go to Tempe, fill the evening hour, announce my work a week later; and leave me free to return to the Isaac School house.

May 1st. Today I immersed Sister Baker. The event caused my mind to wander over the years, and linger with the beautiful restful ones, that we find here and there, through the desert.

The brightest and most desirable incidents of my life are when some one heeds the call, and I am requested to bury them in baptism. During my years of evangelising, on this coast, the number has exceeded 200. Oh if we could be assured that they would all continue obedient; or that those that have wandered away would come back, what a happy little throng for the kingdom! I could see no difference in the seed sown. It was all the seed of the kingdom. But Jesus told us there would be a difference in the ground. Some stony, some the wayside, some growing thorns; but some good ground.

If the plow shear of contrition could be run a little deeper, more soil might prove productive.

I will risk interesting you with a sketch of some of these scenes.

About 35 years ago I was teaching school in Champaign Co. Ill., and teaching the gospel in a small way, as regular appointments could be established.

I held such appointment at Sadorus. At one of my meetings a man 6 feet and 2 or 3 inches tall, told me he wished to be immersed. I agreed to assist him, on my return. This candidate was not robust in health. On my return, I learned that he had dug a stock well, 8 or 10 feet deep. He had dug regular steps, to walk down into the water. It was a beautifully prepared pool. The congregation gathered at the grave. We got in! The grave was big enough perhaps, if his feet had not been long in proportion to his body. It was no predicament! I told him to kneel, near the wall of the well; and I buried him! It was a much better symbol of Christ's death and burial than sprinkling, or pouring would be. In fact it was complete. A number have been immersed in tanks, prepared for the occasion, here on the coast. This care taken on account of the ill health of the candidates. A score of years ago, I had a boy, a noble obedient son, that in youth was on his way to death, by the strong hand of the destroyer consumption. We could not release him, from the grip of the enemy; but could relieve him from his mental distress, through obedience. He was immersed in my home; and for a while improved in health; but after a year, and more, they gave him a resting place at San Diego, many hundreds of miles away from his Oregon home.

A number of years ago, I held a series of meetings at Scholls, Oregon. Among the number of candidates for obedience, was a lady past middle age; who told her sons that she was going to the creek to be baptized. She said she expected to be brought home a corpse! I said no, make a tank, warm water; prepare for it, we don't have to tempt nature. She had heart disease badly.

They did as I asked. When I helped her into the water, the strokes of her heart between her shoulders, reminded me of a sledge hammer. But no ill results followed. A dozen years ago, I was on Guemas Island, on Puget Sound. The wife and daughter of Bro. Perry called for baptism. The salt water of the Sound was like ice, and looked very treacherous. I saw a row boat lying on some logs, on the beach, and requested Bro Perry to dip some ocean water into the boat, and add warm water, on account of the delicate health of the women. I baptized them in the boat. I stood beside the boat, and they were buried in the boat full of water.

Today we went to Bro. Fikes' in Phoenix, and requested the use of their bath tub, to immerse Sister Baker. The object of the events of which I have told you, was to do as John the Baptist did, when he baptized in Aenon near to Salem, because there was much water there, that is, to get water enough to bury the person, who through repentance has died to sin. These instances all gave that opportunity. On a number of occasions, in a stream, that is to await for the subject to walk into, a sufficient depth. I have had them kneel in more shallow water, and without any inconvenience would turn them backward until they were buried. When we reason from our stand point, how strange that item, that went through the news, that They are bottling water from the Jordan, and shipping it all over the world for baptismal purposes. To sprinkle with of course!

I am glad that I held these meetings—away here in Arizona—that I closed this 2nd of May. As I have to begin a series, on the 14th, near Tempe, I needed one nights rest. The attendance went far beyond our expectation in numbers, and interest. Our hoped for dozen reached as high as 40 and beyond. Thirteen meetings during the hardest labor of the year gave encouragement to both speaker and congregation, that good can still be accomplished in this Territory. Brethren keep up courage.

W. L. Skeels.

Report of Labor.

The following is submitted as our third quarterly report. On March 2nd we started for Bro. B. F. Smith's to hold a meeting in his neighborhood. Bro. S. met us at Monroeville and after a ride of six miles we arrived at his home and was warmly greeted by Mrs. Smith and their children. We remained here and delivered five discourses to fair but appreciative audiences. The last evening we spoke to the young people. We received many words of commendation from those who attended especially the young people. We think some good was done for the truth. We were kindly provided for in the home of Bro. Smith. We embrace this opportunity of extending our thanks to the household for many pleasant hours spent with them. We had many invitations to return.

Our next meeting was held near Delta, O., in the neighborhood of Bro. and Sister Samuel Elton. We found here an ecclesia of earnest believers. We delivered six discourses here along the line of first principles. We had the pleasure of speaking to the young people here and had many requests to come again. While here we visited several of the household of faith and found them earnest in the truth. Mrs. Robison and I have visited the Brush Creek Church and spoke for them. Saturday April 27th, we arrived in Cleveland O., having been called there by the Conference Committee. Bro. Joblin has not been able to speak for some time owing to ill health. We delivered fourteen discourses while here and visited many of "like precious faith." During our stay we renewed many acquaintances and formed some new ones. Our visit with the ecclesia in Cleveland was a very pleasant one. We trust that we may visit them again. We spoke once to the "little flock" in Salem. We found here a very interesting and intelligent body of believers. Recently the membership has been increased through the efforts of Bro. and Sister Neill. With the help of the church Bro. and Sister Neill have been able to do splendid work. We attended their Bible Class and were very much pleased with the work done. These meetings are of an educational character. In our travels over the State we have not found a more earnest number of brothers and sisters than are in the Salem ecclesia. Bro. Neill has been their pastor for the last five years and has been very ably assisted by Sister Neill.

During the last quarter we have traveled many miles and delivered forty-four discourses. Since our Conference we have spoken one hundred and fifty-six times. We have not accomplished what we hoped for but we have in the name of the Lord made an effort which is our duty. While traveling from Cleveland to Salem it was our good fortune to spend a day with Bro. and Sister Juergensen of Barberton O. They are keeping their light burning. We found them earnest, intelligent believers "of the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ." They hold meetings twice a month at their home and embrace every opportunity to present the gospel of the kingdom of God to aliens. While visiting here we met Bro. Earl of Akron O., whom we found to be a very intelligent brother.

We spent the next evening with Bro. and Sister Hsacock, at Canton, O. We are pleased to report that they too are earnest and intelligent workers for the cause. During the evening with Bro. and Sister H., we met Mrs. Strauss a very talented lady who resides in Canton. She seems interested in the things related to the future life. It is our prayer that she may continue her study of the Word until she reaches the light of the gospel of the kingdom of God. Paul says: If our gospel be hid it is hid to them that are lost. In whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them. I Cor. iv. 3, 4. We submit the above in the interest of the truth.

D. C. Robison, State Evangelist.

The Bereans Column.

Dear Bereans:

In a recent Restitution, at the beginning of a short article were these lines—"What can we do? What are we doing? What have we done?" These are questions for the future, and for the present and for the past. We, if true Bereans are readers and searchers of God's Word, and we are to be also "doers" of the Word, then are not the above questions very appropriate ones for each one of us to think about? During our visit at one point, our first meeting was held a cold, dark, windy night. Present, was one who had come more than a mile, and during the meetings that followed her place was not vacant. We concluded she was one of the "doers," one of the faithful. "By their fruits ye shall know them." In our own little circle, is one who hears but very little that is said, yet for years and years, every Sunday she is in her place. What an inspiration to the leaders of the meetings, are these faithful ones, and though regular attendance at Sunday school, Berean meetings, etc., may seem to be among the little things, not necessary to our salvation, yet Jesus said, "He that is faithful in that which is least, is faithful also in much," and again, "He that shall endure (be faithful) unto the end, shall be saved." This is among the things we can do—make every effort to be present at all meetings, ready to take an active part, thus benefiting ourselves, giving encouragement to the leaders, and influencing for good, others present. We learn of some societies and some Sunday school which have been given up, because so few attend. Let us not be of that number who have helped to bring about such a condition. Don't let us be stumbling blocks in any work in the Master's cause.

Among our isolated members are some who have never failed at the appointed time, to send in the report of their Bible studies. We know what they have been doing, faithfully searching the Word, and this work has been a pleasure to them, and their desire is to still "grow in the grace and knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ."

Dear Bereans, let us put the above questions to ourselves, and if we have not done in the past, or are doing at the present, those things of which Jesus can say, "Well done," let us begin right now, and make our doings for the future such that we may receive the blessing promised him that looketh into the perfect law, and continueth, being not a hearer that forgetteth, but a doer that worketh.

With love to all Bereans,

Anna E. Drew.

Dear Bereans:

If we would follow Jesus we must try to make his attributes ours—He was obedient. "Though he was a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered." Heb. v. 8. Paul says, We ought to obey God rather than men. Acts v. 29. Christ was meek and lowly. "For I am meek and lowly in heart." Matt. xi. 29. Our adorning, let it be a meek and quiet spirit, which in the sight of God is of great price. 1 Pet. iii. 4. He was patient, longsuffering. "Not willing that any should perish." 2 Peter iii. 9. We are exhorted to be patient [R. V.] longsuffering to all men. 1 Thes. v. 14. He was faithful "as a son." Heb. iii. 6. We, if faithful will receive a crown of life. Rev. ii. 10. He was pure. 1 John iii. 3. Keep thyself pure. The pure in heart shall see God. He was perfect, Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect. Matt. v. 48

Ada A. Drew.

Christ's life on earth after his resurrection.

On the first day of the week, very early in the morning, Mary Magdalene went to the sepulchre, and finding it empty she became frightened, fearing that the body of Jesus had been stolen. Then she ran to Simon Peter and John, the disciple whom Jesus loved, and told them her fears. They went to the sepulchre and finding the stone rolled away from the door they went in. Finding the tomb empty they returned to their own home.

Mary left alone, was about to leave the place when she saw Jesus standing near, but did not know him, "Woman, why weepest thou?" he asked. She supposed him to be the gardner and said, "Sir, if thou hast borne him hence tell me where thou hast laid him and I will take him away. In answer to her plea Jesus spoke only one word—"Mary." She knew him. He warned her not to touch him but bade her go to his brethren and tell them he was risen.

The same day as two of his disciples were on their way to Emmaus he appeared to them but they, too, were blinded that they should not know him. He asked them of what they were speaking and why they were sad. They told him of the trial and crucifixion of Christ and how Mary had found the tomb empty. "O, fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken," he said. Then beginning with Moses' writings he explained all the prophecies concerning himself. When they came to the village they asked him to remain with them through the night. He did so, and as they ate supper he took bread and blessed it and gave it to them, and they knew him. He then disappeared, and they went immediately to the rest of his disciples and told them all that [illegible]ed.

As they were ta[illegible]m he appeared in the room and said, "Peace be unto you." And while they doubted showed them his hands and his side, telling them to handle him. Then he asked, "Have you any meat?" They gave him some broiled fish and honeycomb and he ate it.

Thomas was not present and when told that Jesus was alive he disbelieved. At the end of a week when Thomas was with the disciples Jesus appeared again. Then Thomas believed.

Jesus appeared again at the sea of Tiberias to a part of his disciples. They had been fishing all night and caught nothing, but at dawn they saw Jesus standing on the shore. Again they did not know him. Asking them if they had any meat he received a negative reply. "Cast the net on the right side of the ship and ye shall find," he said. They did as he told them. They were then unable to draw the net for the fishes. Then John knew that it was Jesus. They went to shore and dined.

It was on this occasion that Christ said to Peter, "Lovest thou me?" Peter assured him that he did and Christ said, "Feed my sheep." Then he added, "When thou wast young thou walkest whither thou wouldest; but when thou shalt be old, another shall carry thee whither thou wouldest not." He said this, signifying by what death Peter should glorify God. He then bade his disciples follow him. Peter saw John following and said, "Lord, what shall this man do?" Jesus answered. "If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee?"

Christ did not appear again until the day of his ascension. He then gathered his disciples together and commanded them to remain in Jerusalem until they should receive the Holy Ghost. And when he had told them for what purpose the Holy Ghost should come upon them he was taken up into heaven.

After Stephen had been stoned, Saul, breathing out threatenings against the followers of the Lord, obtained letters from the high priest that he might bring disciples from Damascus to Jerusalem. When he was near Damascus a great light shone around him and he heard a voice speaking to him from heaven. Saul asked, "What wilt thou have me to do, Lord?" Jesus answered, "Go into Damascus and there it shall be told thee what thou must do." And they led him by the hand to Damascus, for he was blind.

In Damascus, a disciple named Ananias heard the Lord speaking to him in a vision, telling him to go to Saul and lay hands on him that he might receive his sight. Ananias did as he was told and Saul was filled with the Holy Ghost.

Once more did Christ speak to men, this time to Peter, who was in Joppa. Peter saw, in a trance, heaven opened and a sheet let down to earth filled with all manner of beasts and fowls. And he heard a voice say, "Arise, Peter; kill and eat." But Peter said, "Not so, Lord, for I have never eaten anything that is common or unclean." But the voice said, "What God has cleansed call thou not common."

From a new Berean who is only nine years old.

Dear Bereans:

Here is a verse we should all obey. "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them; for this is the law and the prophets." Matt. vii. 12. I am just beginning in the Berean work; I find the more I study the Bible, the more interesting it becomes. May much good be done through the work of the Bereans.

Silas Claypool.

A Christian's Standard.

"Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." Gal. vi. 7. This is true pertaining to our spiritual welfare and the application will not be made in vain if we apply it to our present condition. Manners have much to do with our success. They throw true light upon our lives and help to make up our character. A man must be a "perfect gentleman" if he wishes to succeed. Fine clothes and highly polished boots help to make a good impression but in addition he must follow the instructions of the Bible namely, Be courteous, Be gentle unto all men. In honor preferring one another. He must, Honor all men, and in doing this he will sow the seed and in due time reap a harvest of respect. Thus the honor which he has bestowed upon others will reflect back upon himself.

Every body has more or less influence over his or her companions. Perhaps for a time we may succeed in misleading them. But sooner or later the veil will be withdrawn and our true disposition will shine forth. Let us then not have low ideals as to the responsibility we owe to our fellowmen. Can we afford to disgrace his name by lowering the standard of Christianity? Think what it means to be called a Christian! A follower of Christ! Some one has wisely said, Evil communications corrupt good manners; likewise the influence of a true and noble character must be an incentive for good. It is the duty of every Christian to form such a character and be ready to resist the temptations that surround them.

Too many of our people think that the essential part of a Christian's life is to know the Bible. This of course should not be neglected and we cannot know too much, but knowledge alone never saved any body. We must believe, then obey, and if we obey our lives will be filled with the spirit of peace and good will. Proverbs teach us, that, "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches and loving favor rather than silver or gold." Money, power and brains all have an influence for a time, but character is of far greater importance. It alone will stand the test of time. God looks upon the heart and with him men are what they are, and not what they seem to be. Let the standard then be a clear, clean conscience. Keeping ever in view the high calling of God in Jesus Christ, withstanding the corruptions and temptations of the world. And a crown of victory will be the reward.

Submitted in love.

The Awakening.

As the years roll round they find us
All with buried hopes behind us;
Hopes we somehow fondly cherish,
Tho' they never come to pass;
And while time so swiftly speeding,
Winter to life's spring succeeding,
Shows us view the coming future
Still but darkly thro' a glass.

In the days when happy hearted,
With the friends long since departed
To the shores of that far country,
Where partings are unknown;
Not a thought then of the morrow,
With its coming joy or sorrow;
We were kings and loyal subjects
Knelt before their monarch's throne.

But the veil before us lifted,
Showing that the scene had shifted—
Showing us that we were but units
In the great eternal plan:
Then we understood life's meaning,
And against the years are beating,
Which we day by day have carved
Since the race we here began.

No more monarchs, we, sovereigns,
But as penitents are praying,
Not for fame or worldly honors,
But for strength to bear the load;
Strength to keep the way that's leading
To green pastures, where, unheeding,
Pass the snares and all the foolfalls
That beset us on the road.

Keep thy faith, tho' wounded, dying
Think not of defeat with sighing,
Just a few more days at longest,
When at setting of the sun
There shall see a light so cheering,
And the clouds all disappearing,
We shall know God's plans were wisest,
At the final blest "Well done."

LESSON FOR SUNDAY JUNE 16.

ISRAEL'S ESCAPE FROM EGYPT. EXO. IV. 13-27.

Golden Text—Thus the Lord saved Israel that day out of the hand of the Egyptians, Exo. iv. 30.

At the close of the last lesson there was a great and agonized cry of grief in all Egypt, for in every home one lay dead. Pharoah called for Moses and ordered the Israelites to leave Egypt at once. The Egyptians urged the people to go, and gave them any thing they asked for. The angel of the Lord went before them as a cloud that rose high above them. As a pillar of fire by night. His led them correctly, and made easy their deliverance from Egypt, and their journey towards the promised land, Truly God was with them.

We will just here take time to object to the lesson title especially the word escape. Israel did not escape from Egypt, God delivered them by Moses. I am come down to deliver them. Exo. iii. 8. Blessed be the Lord who hath delivered you out of the hand of the Egyptians. Exo. xviii. 10.

About 400 years after Samuel the prophet reminded Israel of the great deliverance from Egypt, 1 Sam. x. 18. When Pharoah and his people realized their great loss, they deeply regretted that they had let Israel go, and at once prepared to follow them.

"The Lord hardened Pharoah's heart," Exo. xiv. 8. Much questioning and guessing has been done on this statement. With a little knowledge. A careful reading, and consideration of God's Word will make the matter clear. God from the beginning has pleaded with and entreated sinners to repent. With Cain Gen. iv. 6, 7. God sent Jesus saying, I will have mercy and not sacrifice: for I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance. Matt. ix. 13. Pharoah saw the great works of God, had time and great reason to repent. Five times when in great trouble he relented. When the trouble was past he was stubborn as ever. According to the whole Bible, God never forced a man to harden his heart. Nor ever forced one to soften his heart. Even if he did, no one has any right to object. For the earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof: the world and they that dwell therein, Psa. xxiv. 1. Pharoah and the Egyptians hardened their hearts, 1 Sam. vi. 6. And the Lord used them for his purpose. And they were just as willing. They did not want their hearts softened. When the Israelites saw the Egyptians they were very much afraid. And like the Egyptians they forgot all their former misery, and upbraided Moses with bringing them out of Egypt to die in the wilderness.

The situation was certainly alarming. Hills on each side, the Red Sea in front, the well armed Egyptian army behind. This should not have disturbed the Israelites. God's power had been displayed in their favor time after time. There was a mixed multitude—a crowd of camp followers—went out of Egypt with Israel, Exo. xii. 38. They started and led the grumbling and the most of the trouble, Num. xi. 4. There were also always some faithful in Israel, they kept the balance,—held others from complete rebellion.

Lesson Text. The story in the lesson is very simple, and needs no very extended remarks or comments. It is the story of the complete deliverance of Israel. Or the completion of the deliverance from the power of the Egyptians, verse 13. Moses said. Fear not, you will see that the Lord will save you. The Egyptians you see now. You will never see again,—They saw some of them dead on the shore, verse 30. To keep the Egyptians from making an attack the angel—the cloud turned and stood between the Egyptians and Israel. The side towards the Egyptians was dark, the side towards Israel was light, verses 19, 20. The passage of the Red Sea, verses 21-31, is one of the most remarkable things that ever happened in the history of Israel.

Moses refers to it time and again, Num. xxi. 14; Deut. xi. 4. Rahab made five comments upon it to the spies, Josh ii. 9-12. David's remarks are excellent, Psa. cvi. 7-11.

Paul says, By the crossing of the Red Sea the Israelites were baptized unto Moses, 1 Cor. x. 12.

By faith they passed through the Red Sea, Heb. xi. 29.

The Egyptians followed, not by faith, but for conquest. They found themselves in great straits, they tried to retreat, it was too late, the moment had come for their destruction. The Lord gave the order, the waters rolled over them, the Israelites saw them no more. Thus the Lord delivered them. They were now at liberty to worship the Lord their God, Exo. v. 1-3.

There will be a greater deliverance for Israel when the Lord Jesus Christ sits on David's throne on Mount Zion, Psa. xiv. 6; Joel iii. 18-21. May we be among and of the deliverers.

Lesson for June 23 Review, read Psa. cvi. 1-12.

Attention

TORCH LAKE BIBLE SCHOOL.

Conditions have arisen which make it necessary to change the time and place of the meeting of the Bible school. It is now decided that the [illegible] will [illegible]rsday July 25 to Aug. 8. [illegible] the pretty summer resort at Lemon Park—Indian Lake. This pleasant resort is only 2½ miles north of Vicksburg, Mich. From Chicago take Grand Trunk R. R. direct to Lemon park. From South Bend the same. From Grand Rapids change at Vicksburg to Grand Trunk, or change at Kalamazoo to C. K. & S. R. R. for Pavilion. At Pavilion change to Grand Trunk R. R. for Lemon park only 2½ miles west. These resort grounds are 14 miles south of Kalamazoo, 46 miles north of South Bend, 100 east of Chicago. Cottages can be rented very reasonably. When several use one the expense is very light. Meals quite reasonable or board ourselves. If cottages are rented there are beds, pillows, gasoline stove, chairs, tables and dishes, everything for light house keeping. Visitors should bring 2 sheets, 2 pillowslips, a quilt, a tick, straw for ticks close by. There are two boats with each cottage, and splendid fishing.

Above and beyond all that will be the instructive Bible lessons by competent teachers with maps, charts and lesson outlines for every session. Lessons not only intensely interesting during the two weeks but good for all life time. Added to this the evening sermons by able speakers. Altogether will make a feast not to be forgotten. Compared with the educational value for eternal things, the expense will not be worth considering. The school of last year is still bearing good fruit. Let all come who can.

It will cost but ten cents post paid. Send to the author L. S. Bronson, Niles, Mich.

Will all concerned take note, the address of Brother D. C. and Sister N. B. Robinson will in future be 606 South Limestone St. Springfield, O.

A New Tract.

The Great Divine Healer vs Latter-Day Healers, by Uncle John Foore.

A Tract for the last days. Should be read by every thinking Christian.

Paul 2 Tim. iii. 13. "But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived."

Matt. vii. 21. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works. And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

Brethren, these tracts have gone into many families, both to brethren and people of other denominations, a few infidels, and one Christian Scientist, and all seem to be well pleased with it; but only a few of the brethren have sent to me any help in the way of paying for the tracts, and tracts are very expensive. We are anxious to have more published on different subjects. Please help to send these Pearls out among the people.

Send orders to John Foore, R1 2012 W. Corning Ave. Pasadena, Kan. The price is 10 cents each.

Evangelizing Notice.

The printing is clear and plain, and the paper excellent. We have so arranged with the publishers that we can supply this book for a limited time only at a reduced price, which will enable all who wish this valuable aid to the study of God's Word to possess it. We can offer it now at $2,00 post paid. All who wish to avail themselves of this low rate should do so at once.

A four-page tract in the German language, by Brother M. Joblin of Cleveland, O. Subject, "What Must I do to be Saved?" After getting the opinion of one who understands this language, we have no hesitation in recommending it as simply all right. Get some for your German friends. Send to M. Joblin, 626 Woodland Ave., Cleveland, O. Price 40 cts per 100.

Brother D. C. Robison has issued a small 16-page tract on the subject "Man is Mortal." It is of convenient size to enclose in an envelop, and can be had for 2 cents each, or 15 cents for 12, or $1.50 for 100 copies. Bro. Robison is so well known as a clear and lucid writer that no words that we can pen would commend his work, more than will the bare announcement of his name. If you are in the mood to do a little missionary work send to Brother Robison at 606 So. Limestone St. Springfield, O. and get a supply of these tracts.

NOTICE.

Information wanted concerning an Evangelist known as Blind Beynes, who traveled some years ago in Kansas, selling a pamphlet written by himself, entitled "When will Christ come?" Is he living? Account Giving.

There is certainly a great day of accounts coming, when our Lord will reward every one according as her or his work has been.

The great concern of each one should be, What have I done upon which to expect reward? If you should judge yourself, what would your judgment be?

Our talents differ, and each one will be held accountable for the use of such talent, whatever that may be. If you have only one, use that.

Some one says, what can I do? Why you can circulate literature teaching the truth if nothing else. There is no one but who can do that. Will that do any good? Oh, yes. Let me tell you something. Some people have bought several copies of "Pine Woods Bible Class" and loaning them to their friends and neighbors. It being easy and attractive reading, most people will read it. It is bearing fruit already. I have just been told of a man who had become discouraged. He had listened to preachers of different denominations, and found they contradicted each other. He began to drift into infidelity, when a Brother put a copy of Pine Woods Bible Class into his hands. Now in place of infidelity, he is rejoicing in new found light. It would take too much space to tell of other cases. Try this work, and add some stars to your crown.

The Students Text Book is already an assured success, and will be printed after I get home from this present trip.

I desire that all who want it, to send in their names in advance, that I may know how many to print. All you order now, you will be sure to get when printed. The price will be fifty cents.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution, Plymouth, Marshall, co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Restitution."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When making a change of address, give both post-off and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Your loving brother.

The Gospel in Deeds.

There is often more religion
In our simple-hearted deeds,
Than we find by careful study
In our complicated creeds.

For our acts may hold the spirit
Of the Nazarene of old,
And all Bible truths are plainer
When by human action told.

Deeds that shine by his reflection,
Deep into another's need;
Bear upon their face a gospel,
Which the world will always read.

If our hearts gave truer utterance
Of the truths they claim to know,
Life would be a benediction,
Scattering heaven's peace below.

The Story of a Happy Christian Life.—No. 12.

I think it must have been after his return from Laporte County, that Bro. Cook came out to grand father Chaplin's, with his wife and daughter Susan—the daughter just my age, and held a meeting in the old log cabin. I remember the meeting.

Services were held there at regular intervals both before and after the split in the Baptist Church, Bro. and Sister Willard having come out from Oswego to attend divine worship there as early as 1842.

Bro. Cook also preached on Eel River near where Collmer now is and where father had first been licensed to preach by the Baptists. Father and mother Collins, Isaac Collins and wife and Edwin Rambo and wife who all lived there, had embraced the Advent doctrines including the mortality of man and the final destruction of the wicked. My mother had long before this, come to see from reading her Bible that man is a mortal being and that therefore the eternal torment theory is utterly false. No tongue can portray the relief it was to her when she found that the punishment of the wicked was to be destruction, instead of endless torture in a furnace of fire, and she had laughingly declared to father that "he would sometime preach that doctrine."

Bro. Rambo and wife, later on, moved to Oswego, Sister Rambo had been Margaret Collins before her marriage and was therefore of splendid lineage, and oh! What a singer she was! No orchestra could sound sweeter to the ears of a child than did her voice in the stirring notes of

"Come let us renew our journey pursue,
Roll round with the year,
And never stand still Till the Master appear."

Isaac Collins, with wife and children sometimes attended the meetings at Bro. Willard's in Oswego, but there seem to have been no more additions to the little Eel River Church, and as Father and Mother Collins and Sister Isaac Collins, died in a few years, it was entirely broken up. At Oswego, there were Bro. Wm. Beatty and wife, Bro. and Sister Fike, Sister Sooper, Sister Hewett and son, etc, Ezekiel French, Bro. Willard's partner in business, did not embrace the truth. Bro. Wm. Smith and wife living near us, and Bro. Ralph Smith's wife and daughter, living between us and Warsaw, united with the church sometime after 1844. Uncle Morse Chaplin and wife and grand father and grand mother Chaplin already held membership there. At Bone Prairie, there were father and mother Wade, and Jacob French and wife—all nice people and deeply imbued with love for the truth. Bro. French, sometimes preached the blessed news of a coming Savior. He was very emotional, and people loved to hear him though he was not an educated man. He belonged to a family of 24 children, his father being a resident of Miami county Ohio, in an early day. After leaving Bone Prairie he moved to McLeansboro, Hamilton county, Illinois, and was associated there with a Bro. Terhune, in preaching the truth. There was also a Bro. Calvin Beagle and wife, living near Oswego who were faithful friends of the cause.

They have but recently died, both being at least ninety years of age.

Later there was a Miss Sarah Stancliff, a teacher from Middlebury, who embraced the truth at Oswego, she was for a time an inmate of Sr. Willard's hospitable home. It was this Miss Stancliff, who married Bro. Joseph Furry of Plymouth and having moved with him to Iowa, became a regular contributor to THE RESTITUTION. Alice Johnson, Sister Willard's adopted daughter, also became a member of the church but not I think until after they moved to Warsaw.

Bro. Fike and family started on the overland trail for California, and Sister Fike died on the way. Father preached her funeral sermon here and it was published in THE RESTITUTION. A daughter of Bro. Fike's—Jerusha, I think her name was, was drowned in crossing a river after they reached California. She was a very lovable girl, and resembled her mother in beauty of face and form.

I do not know what became of the Soopers' and Hewitts'—they must have died. Bro. and Sister Beatty moved to Warsaw and died there. Their son William Beatty, married a Miss Grindell of Pierceton and lives in Andersonville Ind. I have lost track of the other children. Sister Beatty, was a dear friend of Sister Willard's, and she often alluded to her in her letters to my mother. Both herself and husband were devoted Christians and held out faithful to the end.

How eagerly myself, brothers and sisters, watched on the appointed Saturdays for the coming of Bro. and Sister Willard, the Beattys, the Wards, the Fikes, the Greenleafs, and the Rambos, and what a shout went up when the carriages hove in sight over the hill! We called them all "brothers" and "sisters" though we were sometimes laughed at by our schoolmates for doing it. And what good meetings we had! I can imagine I see Brother Jacob French now, standing by Grand mother's furnace in the double log-cabin, just as he stood sixty and more years ago; the tears running down his cheeks, as he recounted the story of Peter, when he said "Lord, thou shalt never wash my feet," and when the Savior replied, "If I wash thee not thou hast no part with me" how quickly he turned and said "Lord not my feet only but also my hands and my head." Bro. French must have been discoursing on "obedience," his idea being that we cannot be clean, unless we as servants obey our Lord, as he obeyed the Father. If we know the things that he taught, "happy are we if we do them." God's will is expressed in his commands, when we say, "Thy will not mine be done," we pray that his commands may be obeyed, not only by ourselves but others. Auntie Willard says in one of her letters to father—"I remember your sermon on the characteristics of a Christian, when I was last at your house, and you said that the disposition—"not my will but Thine be done" was a perfect counterfeit detector,"—those having the contrary spirit proving themselves to be but hypocrites.

Bro. Willard was a grave speaker, Auntie Willard warm, and enthusiastic. Bro. Wade and wife talked much like Bro. French, as did also grand father and grand mother. Grand father, would not only electrify a whole audience, but would also set them all to weeping.

There was no hanging back in those good, old days, almost every one taking part in the meetings, praying as well as speaking. The Advent believers were men and women of prayer. When they wanted anything from God—any special blessing or help, they asked him for it and were heard and answered. They not only prayed in meeting, but in private and in their families. It impresses me to this day as I see in imagination my father stealing away to the little pasture-field across the gully to pray. Mother often took me with her, when she went to talk to God. And Auntie Willard too—how often I have knelt with her!

But if we, as children, were pleased to have the friends from Orangeville to our meetings, we were still better pleased when we could go to theirs. Uncle Morse Chaplin would take us out in his great lumber wagon, to Auntie Willard's home.

ANNIE WISE.

The Blood Covenants.

The purpose of this article is to show God's purpose in the sacrifice of animals or in the shedding of blood. Paul in Heb xiii 20, says, "Now the God of peace that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great Shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is well pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ; to whom be glory for ever and ever. It is through the blood of the everlasting covenant that makes his called out ones perfect. In 1 John I 7, we read, If we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth from all sin. The blood of Christ as a cleansing power can affect only those who have put on Christ in baptism. Those only who have obeyed that form of doctrine from the heart can claim any change through this blood. Where there is a death there is the shedding of blood. When we submitted to the act of circumcision not made with hands (baptism), we were typically put to death. By this act can we claim the cleansing power of Christ's blood. Otherwise we still remain aliens to the commonwealth of Israel and strangers to the covenants of promise and therefore without Christ and God and hopeless in the world. To such there is no promise of eternal life.

We desire to call attention to the covenants that God has made and how each was ratified. When Adam was placed in the garden he was given a law which would bring everlasting life through obedience or death through disobedience. The penalty was, "the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." It is said by some writers that this day was one thousand years. Others say that at the time of disobedience Adam began to die. Is it not true that God made man "dust of the ground" and without some means would have died? To live forever was in "the tree of life" and not in Adam's nature. When the Lord God saw their condition he clothed them with coats made from the skins of animals. To do this blood must be shed. A covenant was here made by which their lives were extended that they might replenish the earth. Otherwise they would have been cut off and other provisions made to fill God's purpose in inhabiting the earth. This is the first covenant spoken of and was sealed with blood. Adam lost his right to life through disobedience and could have no right to a future life through the promise made to the seed of the woman. Gen iii 15. All that can be claimed for the first Adam is that he begot sons and daughters by which means the earth was peopled.

We see no second opportunity or chance for one who has neglected or rejected God's plan of salvation. The apostle says in Rom v 18. Therefore as by the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation. Again John iii 18, He that believeth on him is not condemned; but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he believeth not in the name of the only begotten Son of God. These two testimonies are sufficient to show that we can gain the future life only through faith in the Son of God. Our justification from the "law of sin and death," is through faith and the power given to the "law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus" (the gospel).

Again we call attention to the offering made by Cain and Abel. "In the process of time" (margin, at the end of days) it came to pass that Cain brought of the fruit of the ground an offering unto the Lord. Abel brought of the firstlings of his flock and the fat thereof. And the Lord had respect unto Abel and his offering, but unto Cain and to his offering he had no respect. Cain became very angry. And the Lord said unto Cain, Why art thou wroth? If thou doest well, shalt thou not be accepted? (margin, have the excellency?) May we not infer in this record that these two sons were put on trial for the excellency that is the privilege to rule? Evidently the Lord (Elohah) had instructed them what they should offer. Cain's failure to comply with the law of offering made him subject to his brother Abel. He lost "the excellency" or power to rule. He then slew his brother, no doubt hoping to still get the excellency. In this he failed and a just punishment was passed upon him. Gen iv 11, 12. Cain said unto the Lord, My punishment is greater than I can bear, (mar, mine iniquity is greater than it may be forgiven me). The one opportunity was given him for the excellency and he failed. Now we ask what will be the future of Cain? He had the promise through the seed of the woman but failed when put on trial. The second failure in the history of the race. In Gen viii 20-22. God made a covenant with Noah. I will not again curse the ground any more for man's sake * * neither will I again smite any more everything living as I have done. This covenant was sealed with the blood of animals. In Gen xvii the eternal One made a covenant with Abram. I am the Almighty God; (not the Elohah), walk before me and be thou perfect (upright or sincere). I will make my covenant between me and thee, and will multiply thee exceedingly. This is my covenant which ye shall keep between me and you and thy seed after thee. Every man child among you shall be circumcised. We read in the 14th verse that the man child that is not circumcised shall be cut off from among his people; he hath broken my covenant. In this we can see the importance of a blood covenant. It must be kept. Paul says in Rom iv 11, that the sign of circumcision was a seal of the righteousness of the faith which he had yet being uncircumcised. Through this covenant God enlarged the promise to Abram. Thy name shall be called Abrahham. A father of many nations have I made thee. I will make thee exceeding fruitful and I will make a nation of thee, and kings shall come out of thee. This is the first covenant made by the eternal One, and sealed by the shedding of human blood. This covenant is the one related by Paul in Gal iii 16. Not to or concerning his numerous seed but his seed who is Christ. The blood of this covenant can only effect those who come into it. God covenanted with Israel in Egypt that through the sprinkling of blood he would save all their first born. The blood was a token to them who sprinkled it that when the destroying angel should pass over the land he would spare them. Where the blood was not found death reigned. Not even the first born of the king's household was spared. If God was so exacting in bestowing temporal blessing will he be any less when he has made a promise of spiritual blessings? God's covenant with Israel as a nation was as found in Ex xix 5, 6, Now therefore if you will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure to me above all people, for all the earth is mine. And ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation. In this was the promise to Abraham regarding his unit seed. The covenant under the law related only to temporal blessing and assured them the possession of the land and prosperity as a nation. See Deut xxviii 1-14. When Israel failed to keep this covenant they were punished. Finally they were rooted out of the land which they might have possessed if they had been mindful of God's covenant. They were not permitted to mix or worship with other people; for they were God's peculiar treasure. See Ezek xxxvi 20, And when they entered unto the heathen whither they went, they profaned my holy name when they said to them, These are the people of the Lord. We are not only required to be in the faith, but we must as God's "peculiar treasure" stand aloof from those who know not "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus." This is life eternal to know that the only true God and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent. John xvii 3. Through ignorance the world is alienated from that life which is in God.

Referring again to the clothing of the sinful pair we find are in this the blood shed from the foundation of the world? The skins covered their physical nakedness and the blood of the animal covered their nakedness toward God for a period of years. They were both subject to a violent death within the day, but the Elohah granted an extension of life that God's plan could be carried out through the seed of the woman. If we believe as formerly taught that blood was shed to appease the wrath of God we fail to see God as a loving Father. In fact we can see no just purpose in the shedding of blood. There is to us a very comforting thought that in every covenant made with man the blood was a sign of the seal of his faith in blood. God did not in our opinion require the death of his Son. His blood was shed that the everlasting covenant might be confirmed. There would be no further need of blood letting as his blood was offered once for all. When Jesus instituted the memorial Supper he said, This is my blood of the new testament (covenant) which is shed for many for the remission of sins. In his blood is the life promised by God to obedient believers. Under the law they were not permitted to eat blood. They could eat flesh in which was mortal life. Under the new covenant we can eat of his flesh and drink of his blood. Jesus said, I am the bread of life. I am the living bread which came down from heaven; if any man eat of this bread, he shall live forever; and the bread that I will give is my flesh, which I will give for the life of the world. This bread is far superior to the manna which Israel ate in the wilderness. That supported the flesh, this supports the spirit. That was earthly, this is heavenly. Now as we are the numerous spiritual seed we must get our strength from the life giving spirit which is in Christ. To do this we must have the mind of Christ which was always to obey his heavenly Father. Jesus said, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. He commissioned his apostles to go everywhere and preach the gospel that men and women might become sons and daughters of the living God. We must first become obedient believers and then have a right to eat of that living bread and drink of that blood that was shed for the remission of sins. Peter says ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood (not that I will make ye) an holy nation a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out darkness into the marvelous light. I Pet ii 9. We must remember that the eternal One demanded Abraham to walk before him and to be perfect, that is upright or sincere, he will require no less of us. If Abraham had have violated the covenant God would have cut him off from his people. Beware, and provoke him (Christ) not, for he will not forgive your sins, for the name of the eternal One is in him.

Your brother trusting in the blood of the everlasting covenant.

Dwelling in God.

The apostle says whosoever dwells in love dwells in God. Long before John was born the Psalmist said, "Lord, thou hast been our dwelling-place in all generations." And yet again the Psalmist sings, "He that dwelleth in the secret place of the Most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty." The children of Jacob dwelt in tents for many generations, but even then they were not without a permanent dwelling place, for the Almighty was their refuge in the wilderness.

We sometimes sing, "Nearer, My God, to thee," but we may do better still. We may abide under the shadow of the Almighty. We may dwell in God. This is a safe dwelling-place. The world is full of dangers. There are temptations, afflictions and sorrows. The Psalmist speaks of "the strife of tongues." We know what it is. The tongue is sharper than the sword. It pierces the spirit. "A wounded spirit who can bear?" But in God the soul is safe. No temptation can surprise him; no sorrow can overwhelm him; no tongues of envy or slander can touch him. His outer life may be troubled. His reputation may suffer. But his life is hid with Christ in God, and nothing can by any means harm him.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

The Adoption.

"The redemption of the body," either by being "changed" or "raised from the dead," at the coming of the Lord, is "the adoption," or "waiting for which we wait. We "who have the first fruits of the Spirit, groan within ourselves, waiting for our adoption, the redemption of our body." But we must not forget that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain with us until now." Very naturally, as the time draws near to "be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the liberty of the glory of the sons of God," this groaning and travail, on the part of creation, will increase in frequency and severity, until the "liberty of the glory" is reached. The instructed scribe is not surprised at the earthquakes, the tidal waves, the steering currents in the ocean, and the climatic irregularities of our day—the day of deliverance is at hand.—The Watchword.

Seneca on Endurance.

There can be no easy form of virtue. Fortune lashes and mangles us. Well, let us endure it. It is not cruelty. It is a struggle, in which the oftener we engage the braver we shall become. The strongest part of the body is that which is exercised by the most frequent use. We must interest ourselves to fortune to be hardened by her against herself. By degrees she will make us a match for herself. Familiarity with danger leads us to despise it. Thus the bodies of sailors are hardened by endurance of the sea, and the hands of farmers by work; the arms of soldiers are powerful to hurl darts; the legs of runners are active. That part of each man which he exercises is the strongest. So by endurance the mind becomes able to despise the power of misfortunes.

His Mother's Boy.

The mother of John Quincy Adams said in a letter, written when he was twelve years old:

"I would rather see you laid in a grave than grow up a profane and graceless boy."

Not long before the death of Mr. Adams a gentleman said to him, "I have found out who made you."

"What do you mean?" asked Mr. Adams.

The gentleman replied, "I have been reading the published letters of your mother."

"If," this gentleman relates, "I had spoken that dear name to some little boy who had been for weeks away from his mother, his eyes could not have flashed more brightly than did the eyes of that venerable man when I pronounced the name of his mother. He stood up in his peculiar manner and said: "Yes, sir; all that is good of me I owe to my mother."—Our Dumb Animals.

"Ripe scholars and good men, orthodox fathers, eminent theologians, profound thinkers, holy and reverend inquirers, have come to the deliberate conclusion, that there is not a single text in all Scripture which necessitates a belief in endless torment."—Canon Farrar.

The man who is a little crooked in his dealings with his neighbor, is apt to have difficulty in getting through the "strait gate."—Chas. E. Bennett.

We trust our contributors will be patient, and all will have attention as fast as space will permit.

Brother Lindsay preached at Argos over last Sunday, and four were immersed. Bro. Neill immersed one more at Hillsburg. So the good work goes on, and a few more are gathered into the "little flock."

The Bible School last week was a success, as will be seen by the report given. It was decided that a State Berean Society be organized, and Bro. Geo. Neill was chosen President, and other officers to carry on the work. A course of study will be outlined, and a chance for all in the state to unite. As soon as the plans are made the matter will be explained.

Brother and Sister Neill stayed at our home during the Bible School, and on Friday the little girl was taken quite sick, which makes it necessary for them to change their plans, and to remain here for a time until she recovers sufficiently to be taken home safely. While the disease she has is serious, it is not necessarily dangerous, and we trust with proper care she will get along all right.

Conference Report.

As per announcement the Indiana Conference of the Church of God convened at Antioch near Argos, Friday morning June 7.

Owing to the inclemency of the weather only eight were present.

Our president, J. H. Willey, gave a talk on "Hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering." Following this was a sermon by Brother Wince on "Faithfulness."

At the close of the discourse about half a dozen spoke on pioneer times here and the influence that has gone out from "Old Antioch." In different parts of this great country of ours has sprung up churches whose founders came from this vicinity. Especially is this true along the Pacific coast. Brother and Sister Willey having been there and visited with leaders who came from here.

Although we had only the number that went into the Ark this first meeting was truly a feast for those present.

At 2:00 P. M., after opening in the usual manner Brother George Neill spoke on "Our High Priest." Owing to the inclemency of the weather it was thought best to dismiss the evening service.

Saturday at 10:30 the Social Meeting was led by Brother George Neill. Lesson Titus ii. This chapter contains both the practical and doctrinal, and a number of splendid talks were given at this meeting. At 11:00 by request of Brother Halstead, whose name appeared on the program for this time, Brother Wagoner took charge of the service and spoke on "A Model Government." During this sermon Brother Wagoner read a clipping from a Chicago Journal. A part of that clipping is as follows:—"Universal peace would unquestionably be a great benefit to the world, and if the Hague Conference or any other measure could establish it, Christian civilization would be advanced immeasurably; but there can never be universal peace until the earth has only one ruler, autocratic, absolute, able to impose his will on all nations."

At 1:30 P. M. the Song Service was led by Brother Willey. Letters were read from Brother E. K. Barnhill, and Sister S. Roxana Wince.

At 2:00 the Business Session was called to order by the president, J. H. Willey. Roll call of churches showed the following represented: viz., Argos, Antioch, Bracken, Plymouth, Rensselaer and South Bend. Minutes of last meeting and action of Board while conference was not in session read and approved.

Report of Bible School held at Plymouth in November 1906, read and approved.

Report of Brother Lindsay's work in Indiana read and accepted with a vote of thanks to Brother Lindsay for the good he has done by coming into our midst.

Report of committee on changing time and number of conferences, as follows:—

To the Indiana Conference of the Church of God in Christ Jesus, assembled at Antioch, June 8, 1907.

Your Committee, appointed at your last meeting to report a resolution regarding the proposed change in our Constitution concerning the number of Conference Meetings to be held in our State each year, desire to say that we have canvassed the matter placed in our hands, and it is our belief that the best interest of the cause of Christ in our State will be better served by reducing the number of annual meetings for Conference business to two in place of three. We think that the annual meeting at Old Antioch the 2nd Sunday in June should be retained as one of the fixed times for holding a meeting. Then the annual meeting when officers are chosen, and other business transacted be held at different points as may be arranged, and at a time in the fall that will best suit the brethren where it is held.

We favor this change for several reasons, one of the chief being the effort to establish an Annual Bible School in our State, a movement which we are thoroughly in sympathy with, and which we hope to see pushed to a successful issue.

We therefore offer to you this

Resolved:—That the Constitution of our Conference be changed so as to call for two in place of three annual meetings, in accordance with the above statement.

Signed,

A. R. Underwood,
J. A. Bersham,
Committee.

This report was adopted by the Conference.

The following resolution was read by Brother Underwood and unanimously adopted.

Whereas;—In the ordinary course of human events, since our last Conference, death has come to one who was for a term of years associated with us as a co-worker in the cause of our Lord Jesus Christ, and as an officer of our State Organization, I deem it fitting that this Conference here assembled take this opportunity to express our appreciation of his sterling worth, and our sympathy for the bereaved family. Therefore, be it

Resolved—That in the untimely death of our beloved Brother, Thomas O. Taber, this Conference has lost one of its members whose memory we now wish to honor.

Brother Taber was one whom we could always counsel with safely, as his judgment was ever good. He was earnest and sincere in all he said and did, open-hearted and free-handed; doing all he could to further the cause he had espoused.

With him the religious life was conducted as conscientiously as his business life, and it was a pleasure to be associated with him in the business affairs of the Conference work. He was to be depended on at all times to do his part, and to do it well. Now that he is no longer with us, let us emulate the example he has left us, let us cherish his memory as a pleasing recollection that shall inspire our hearts to new and better efforts as we realize more fully how frail we are, and how soon we may like him be called hence.

To his beloved and bereaved family we wish to say that words will not express to you the sympathy that is in our hearts. We feel the loss, not perhaps so keenly as you do, yet with us there is a void—a vacant place in our ranks, and we assure you that the remembrance of your husband and father will remain with us each as long as life shall last, and may you each, with us, so live that when the Life Giver shall appear we will with our departed Brother hear the glad call that shall waken us from sleep, and among the blessed company of the redeemed and blood-washed saints be re-united, never more to part. Be it further

Resolved—That a copy of this resolution be given the family of our beloved Brother, and also spread upon the records of this Conference.

A letter was read from Sister Boice on Bible School work. It was moved and carried that this Conference recommend to the various churches in the State that they each send a delegate to the Convention at Lemon Park, to be held beginning July 25.

Moved and carried that Brother Wince be a delegate from the Conference to this Convention and report at our next Annual Conference.

Adjourned to meet at the Annual Conference.

At 7:00 o'clock the Song Service was conducted by Sister Evelyn K. Harech. This service was designed for the selection of favorite songs. The lesson read was Ps. xxxiii. 1-5; xcii. 1-4; xcvi.

The first song selected was "Blessed be the Name," chosen by Sister Evelyn Harech.

Brother Wince chose No. 86, in the New Jubilee Harp, on the Coming of Christ, and said that "It calls up early times."

Brother Willey chose "I love to tell the Story." Brother Day of Chicago chose No. 28, in the Harp, and said it touched his heart when he was fifteen years old and set him to thinking. Sister Elizabeth Dickson selected "Jesus is Coming Again." Brother Al Cordill selected "Shall we Meet Beyond the River." Sister Julia Harech selected 494 in the Harp. Brother Neill's choice was one made up of the 122nd Psalm; but was not sung as no book was there that contained the music. Brother Lindsay selected "Nearer my God to Thee." Brother Wagoner "The Gleams of the Golden Morning." Auntie Wince, "Abide with Me." In the absence of Brother W. D. Thompson, Sister Willey mentioned the one he sang so much, "I will Sing You a Song." R. C. Ballsback chose "He's Coming." Brother Smith of Chicago, "The Life Boat," and at the close "I Need Thee Every Hour" was selected by the leader and sung by a trio of male voices. Very touching was this service as a number of the songs called up memories of dear ones who now sleep in Jesus.

At 8:30 o'clock Brother Lindsay spoke on "The Promised Seed."

On Sunday morning at 10:00 the Social Meeting was led by Brother George Neill. The lesson read was the 90th Psalm.

At 10:45 Brother Lindsay spoke from the text, "Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin." John viii. 34. At 1:30 Brother Wince conducted the Memorial service. He gave a discourse on the death and resurrection of Christ, after which he conducted the Communion service.

At 7:00 R. C. Ballsback led the Social meeting and at 7:30 Brother Geo. Neill spoke on "The Bible."

The weather was favorable Saturday and Sunday so the attendance came up to the standard on these days.

It was ascertained during the meeting that there were present about ten persons who attended the first meeting held at this place some forty-two or forty-three years ago.

All agree that the meeting at "Old Antioch" was one by which we got our spiritual strength renewed, and may we be permitted to attend many more such profitable meetings, or see the coming of our Blessed Redeemer in the near future.

Report of Indiana Bible School.

As per announcement the Indiana Bible School convened at Plymouth at 9:30 on Monday June 10. Three sessions were held daily, 9:30 A M, 2:30 P M, and 7:30 P M. Each session lasted one hour and a half.

Brother S. J. Lindsay of Oregon, Illinois, conducted the morning and evening sessions, and Brother J. L. Wince of Pierceton, Indiana, conducted the afternoon sessions. The morning sessions were devoted to Paul's journeys as found recorded in the Acts of the Apostles. The lessons being assigned and reported on the next day.

Monday afternoon's lesson was the "Temptation in the Garden;" Tuesday afternoon "Nature of Man" as recorded in Genesis; Wednesday, other texts on same subject; Thursday, "Conversions" as recorded in Acts ii.; Friday, "Mode of Baptism"; and Saturday, the names of the Apostles and something of their commission.

Monday evening the subject of "Living in Common" was discussed; Tuesday, "Gospel preached, Belief and Repentance and Baptism" was the subject. Wednesday evening the subject studied was the "Coming of Christ." Thursday was "Angels"; and Friday was "Type of Ishmael and Isaac, also Isaac a type of Christ.

The attendance this year almost doubled that of last year. This being only the second school that Indiana has held. All enjoyed the work and are looking forward to the session to be held next year.

To the brethren and sisters who have become united to the body of Christ by faith and obedience, greeting.

How my heart longs to be with you at the place of meeting at Dutton, but old age and poor health hinder me from walking in and taking a seat among you. I long to hear the voices of those who are striving to gain life and immortality in the good time coming. The Master will soon be here, and we all shall want to hear his voice saying to us. Come you blessed of my Father. Suffer a word of exhortation my brethren and sisters; let us strive to enter in at the straight gate, let us live holy, righteously and godly in this present evil world. Be strong in the Lord, then neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus, our Lord. David says, Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help, whose hope is in the Lord his God. Let us follow in the footsteps of Jesus who has been made for us, righteousness, wisdom, redemption, but it is not in our own righteousness that we shall stand, but in his, whom we have believed, and into whose name we have been baptized. I am a stranger to all of you, only Brother and Sister Woodward, (and I am glad I am not a stranger to them) but my heart goes out to all of you, and I hope to meet you all in the sweet by and by when the angels come to gather home all the faithful of all ages; what a glorious time that will be, may it soon come. The Lord hasten it in his own good time. Yet our hearts cry out, Come Lord Jesus and come quickly.

Dear Restitution:

The Church of God at Newark, N. J., desire to notify the brethren that they have removed their place of worship from the hall in West Park St. to the Hall 605 Broad St., where they will be pleased to welcome all brethren.

They also report the sad news of the death of Bro. Henry Brown, who died in a full assurance of a resurrection out from among the dead. Brother Brown was a quiet man of few words, but full of sympathy and love, about one year before his own death he buried his mother—also a member of the Newark church—his wife survived his mother but ten months. These deaths preyed so on his health that when his own illness came he was unable to recover from it, and though at no time did he look for or expect death, still he was always ready, for he had faith in him who said, "I am the resurrection and the life. His funeral services were conducted by Bro. James Brown, who took as his theme, "The faith of our brother," and showed to the family and friends what faith could do when that faith was based on the ever faithful love and promises of our God who so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him, might not perish but have everlasting life."

Dear Restitution:

While on my last visit to Hillsburg, Ind., Sunday, June 16, I had the pleasure of assisting Sister Samuel James, of Kempton, Ind., to put on Jesus Christ by Immersion into his name. Her mother, Sister McCrury, was baptized two years ago, and immediately set about to teach her daughter the Way to Life Eternal. Although Sister James had never heard a gospel sermon preached until Saturday June 15, I found her well informed in the Scriptures, which was a splendid testimonial to the faithful teaching of her mother. May she be preserved blameless unto the appearing of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

When you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "The Restitution," and that the right State is named. When an order indrawn on Plymouth, Pa., or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and send that.

Let our Lord's sweet hand square us, and hammer us, and strike off the knots of pride, self-love, and world worship, and infidelity, that he may make us stones and pillars in his Father's house.—Samuel Rutherford.

The surest way to gain the respect and honor of men, is to be in reality what we wish others to think we are.

The One Thing Plain.

At a recent conference of gentlemen who had come together to discuss the expediency of taking a certain course of action which might involve momentous results, after the talk had taken a wide range one gentleman summed up the whole matter by saying: "I have seen a good deal of life, I have heard a good deal about the value of experience, but, so far as I know, experience makes only one thing plain: that a man's only safety is in doing right. It was a plain truth familiarly uttered, and it was a truth that went home because it brought out clearly the fact that where different courses of action are opened, the only question is, What course is right? Policy is man's thought about the wisest thing to do.

Half the troubles in life come because men lack courage at the critical point: they believe thoroughly in doing right, but when they come to a place where the moral aspect is not the only aspect of a question, and where very grave results may follow action, they lack the courage to trust themselves entirely to principle; and endeavour to find a course which experience and policy will justify. It is safe to say that whenever trouble came to a man who always does the right thing fearlessly, at the right time, he is wholly spared the embarrassments and entanglements which beset the paths of those who try to follow principle with the aid of policy. Men have made footpaths through life in every direction, and he who attempts to follow them will find himself hourly and endlessly perplexed; God has struck a solid highway, more lasting than the old Roman roads, along which every man must travel, not without clouds and storm, but free from danger of losing his path, and sure to reach the end of his journey in safety.

The whole wisdom of life lies simply in doing the thing which is right, and letting God look after the consequences. The wisest man sees but a little distance, and sees that distance imperfectly; God sees the end from the beginning. The wisest man goes astray, with Solomon and Bacon, and falls into abysses from which the man of far less knowledge, but of simple rectitude, is preserved. In every perplexity, in every crisis, do the thing which is right, if you have to do it with your eyes blinded and with the consciousness that you are putting your whole fortune in the scale. You are not casting your destiny into a lottery, full of chance, as the future may seem to be, but you are putting your fate into the hands which sustain the universe.

Today's duty will not last long. Your day, my day, the world's day, the day of opportunity, the day of grace, the day of salvation—all days are swiftly passing away; and the great day, the last day, will surely and speedily come. So speaks a wise man. He speaks well. Time is short. Our waking hours are soon over. The cradle and death chair of Frederick the Great in the Hohenzollern museum are placed side by side. With all of us they stand near together. The time allotted us to do our work for God will soon have emptied itself into the ocean of eternity. We must seize the present opportunities. Their neglect can never be repaired. We have our work to do. We have our daily work. It is more important than we know. Let us be up and doing. Remember what Jesus said: "I must do the work of him who sent me while it is day; for, behold, the night cometh when no man can work." Only one conscious of this necessity will be able to say, when the sun is setting, "I have glorified thee on the earth: I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do."

ILLINOIS BIBLE SCHOOL.

The Annual Bible School for Illinois will convene at Oregon, Ill., August 19-21. Brother R. G. Huggins has been requested to prepare an outline of study on the nature, office, and work of the Holy Spirit, a task for which we deem him well qualified. The other work of the school will be about the same as in former years. Our evenings will be occupied in about the same manner as they were last year. Already many have signified their intention to be present. When you read this, please write me whether you will attend, and send me the names of others who may be induced to attend. Our school is no longer an experiment, but an established instrument for good. Come thou with us and we will do thee good. Address me at Oregon, Ill.

"Where are the Nine.

Many cleansed lepers forget to give thanks. It is easier to remember to pray than to remember to praise. The nine—the majority—had come to Christ, they had obeyed His command, they had received His blessing yet they were far off from him when praise ought to have been prominent. The Lord notices the absence of such, and He is grieved. Where are you, dear fellow Christian? Have you omitted to give thanks. Mercy has indeed abounded to us. Shall we not be full of gratitude?

The one who returned had a special word of encouragement. The Lord refers to him as saved by faith. The act of praise sprang from faith. We miss many blessings by forgetting to praise.

The fact that a Samaritan returned reminds us how many less favored are more grateful. Let us not be too proud to acknowledge we are the cleansed lepers. The journey to Christ is well repaid.—Thoughts from the Heart of God.

Quite a Difference.

"How dismal you look!" said one bucket to another as they were on the way to the well.

"Ah!" replied the other, "I was just thinking how useless it is to be coming here to be filled. If we go away empty full we always come back empty."

"Dear me," said his companion, "how strange it seems for you to look at it in that way. Do you know, I enjoy the thought, that however empty we come to the well, we always go away full. Only look at it in that light and you will be as cheerful as I am."

Obituary.

Died at his home near Scholls, Ore., May 29th, 1907, Samuel B. Lawrence, aged 67 years, 3 months and 22 days. Brother Lawrence became a believer in the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, and was baptized in 1874, and united with the Church of God. He came to Oregon in 1889 and united with the Church of God at Scholls, and continued a faithful member until he died. The Church has sustained a great loss. A gloom was cast over the entire community by the loss of so good a citizen. A great concourse of people assembled at the church at Scholls, where the funeral services were held, and at the conclusion, followed in procession to the Mountain Side Cemetery, where we laid our beloved brother to rest. His "works do follow him." The people covered his grave with beautiful flowers, showing in this manner their high esteem for the departed one. He leaves a loving wife, overwhelmed with grief, and six sorrowing children, all grown, five of them members of the Church. He was a kind, loving husband, and indulgent father. His children loved him with a great love, and so kind and good a father was worthy of all the love bestowed upon him. May they be an unbroken family in our Father's kingdom. The faithful and sorrowing wife will soon be reunited with her husband in "The Life Everlasting," and if the faithful father and mother shall be permitted to greet all of their dear children in the "better land" their cup of joy will be full indeed.

The writer endeavored to comfort the sorrowing ones by presenting to them the Bible hope of a future life through our Lord's Christ. The following words were used for a foundation for the discourse, "If a man die shall he live again?" Jesus says, "He that believeth in me, though he were dead yet shall he live." Those that shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world and a resurrection from the dead, are equal to the angels neither can they die any more. Thus Paul, The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, and the dead in Christ shall rise first. "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection, on such the second death hath no power."

May we be among the blessed and holy ones.

"What a beautiful silver lining that cloud has!" "I cannot see it," replied her companion. "Ah! but you are sitting in the shade of the tree; come out here." Dear friend, can you see no silver lining to your dark cloud? Go ahead a little, perhaps just a few steps, and you will see the Sun of Righteousness shining on the gloom, and transforming it into light and beauty.—B. M. S.

The way through the Red Sea was safe enough for Israel, but not for Pharoah; he had no business to go that way; it was a private road that God had opened up for his own family.—Davies.

Poetry.

How Many Sheep are Straying!

How many sheep are straying,
Lost from the Savior's fold!
Upon the lonely mountain
They shiver with the cold;
Within the tangled thickets
Where poison vines do creep,
And lower rocky ledges
Wander the poor, lost sheep.

Oh, who will go to find them?
Who, for the Savior's sake,
Will search, with tireless patience,
Through briar and through brake?
Unheeding thirst or hunger,
Who still, from day to day,
Will seek, as for a treasure,
The sheep that go astray?

Say, will you seek to find them
From pleasant bowers of ease
Will you go forth determined
To find the "least of these"?
For still the Savior calls them,
And looks across the world,
And still he holds wide open
The door into his fold.

How sweet 'twould be at evening,
If you and I could say,
"Good Shepherd, we've been seeking
The sheep that went astray.
Heart-sore and faint with hunger
We heard them making moan,
And lo! we come at nightfall
And bear them safely home."

LESSON FOR SUNDAY JUNE 23.

REVIEW.

Golden Text. When thou passest through the waters I will be with thee; and through the rivers they shall not overflow thee. Isa. xliii 2.

The lessons for the past quarter cover a period of between 250 and 300 years. The principal characters were Jacob, Joseph and Moses.

To get a better beginning than Jacob's vision, let us glance at lesson 8, Feb. 24. God's covenant with Abram. Gen xv 18. And the gospel that was preached to him. Gen xxii 18; Gal iii 8. Abraham believed God, for his belief he was counted righteous. Rom iv 3. And received the promise that he should be the heir of the world. Rom iv 13. And the Father of all who would have faith in the covenant. Rom iv 16. This covenant made with Abraham, and the good news preached to him were fully believed by Jacob, Joseph and Moses, and accounts for all that happened to them. Their minds were religiously absorbed in the contemplation of the grand promises God had made. 2 Peter i 4.

Lesson 1. Jacob's vision and God's promise. Gen xxviii 1, 5, 10-22. It may be said that Jacob sacrificed all he had because of his faith in the covenant with Abraham.

Lesson 2. God gave Jacob a new name. Gen xxxii 9-12; xxii 30. As God gave Abraham a new name—Abraham—father of a multitude—a name to suit the far reaching promises he made him. So Jacob's name was changed to Israel—a prince. Gen xxxii 28. The name will be especially suitable in the age to come.

Lesson 3. Joseph sold by his brothers. Gen xxxvii 5-28. Joseph was the only one of his father's big family that had faith in the covenants. This made his father love him most and his brothers to hate him.

Lesson 4. Joseph faithful in prison. Gen xxxix 20-23; xl 1-8. Yea, all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution. 2 Tim iii 12. Those who lived godly with full faith in the covenant suffered persecution—had trials of their faith. 1 Peter i 7. They were blessed when they endured. James i 12. Joseph was one of them.

Lesson 5. Joseph the wise ruler in Egypt. Gen xli 38-49. Joseph's faith in God made him faithful to men. Under all circumstances he did the best he could, and with good will. For this the Lord made him ruler in Egypt. Gen xlv 8.

Lesson 6. Joseph forgives his brothers. Gen xlv 1-15; l 15-21. Joseph himself had been forgiven and justified by faith. Rom v 1. He knew the value of the law of forgiveness. Matt xviii 35. And could and did do good to them that hated him. Matt v 44.

Lesson 7. Israel enslaved in Egypt. Ex. i 1-14. Beyond living in Goshen, Gen xlvi 7, the Israelites had no part nor lot in Egypt. After Joseph and all that came out of Canaan died, a new king Pharaoh was over the land. He made Israel slaves. Ex i 8-11.

Lesson 8. Childhood and education of Moses. Ex ii 1-15. By faith—In the covenant—the parents of Moses hid him; Pharaoh's daughter adopted him, called him Moses. He was raised as her son, and educated in all the wisdom of the Egyptians. Acts vii 22.

Lesson 9. Moses called to deliver Israel. Ex i-14. Moses had learned of the covenant—the wisdom of God. That made the wisdom of the Egyptians foolishness. 1 Cor i 20. He left the splendor of Pharaoh's court, and hired as a shepherd in Midian. God recognized his faith and works, and sent him to deliver Israel. Ex iii 10. The time had come. Gen xv 13, 14.

Lesson 10. The Passover. Ex xii 21-30. Pharaoh despised the request of God. Ex v 2. The great wonders only moved him until passed. God gave instructions to kill a lamb or kid, sprinkle the blood on the lintel and door posts, and the destroyer would passover that house. Ex xii 23. Those who now have faith in the covenant, need not kill the Passover. Christ is the passover to all such. 1 Cor v 7.

Lesson 11. Israel's escape from Egypt. Ex xiv 13-27. The word "escaped" is not correct. It should be Israel delivered from Egypt. Ex iii 8. Pharaoh and the Egyptians almost pushed Israel out of Egypt. Ex xii 31-33. Pharaoh quickly recovered from the shock of the passover and the destroyer, gathering his army he pursued the Israelites to the Red Sea where they were drowned. Israel passing through in safety was delivered, verse 30, and saw the Egyptians no more.

The review can be made more interesting in several ways. One suggestion, Let the teachers give their class from one to three questions on each lesson—given on a slip of paper—a week before review. The same questions given to the superintendent or reviewer, who will call for the answer, the class or one of the class will stand up and respond. The questions and answers must be somewhat brief. A full review would require far more than the usual Sunday school time. Remember the wonderful events recorded in these lessons took place because of faith in the covenant God made with Abraham. Gen xv. Those who have the same faith will be blessed with him. Gal iii 9. When the Lord Jesus Christ comes again. John xiv 3.

Lesson for Sunday June 30, Temperance 1 Cor x 23-33.

P. Neill.

LESSON FOR SUNDAY JUNE 30TH.

TEMPERANCE. 1 COR. X. 23-33.

Golden Text. It is good neither to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor any thing whereby thy brother stumbleth. Rom xiv 21.

Temperance as set forth in the Bible is of great importance. Temperance, self-restraint, self denial. Temperance is one the qualities that a man may exercise to his own good, and the good of others. The ignorant or mistaken man when asked to live temperately, says that his liberty is being interfered with. Temperance is an snobbing virtue, and when properly used makes a man a manly man. Temperance is usually associated with abstaining from the use of strong drink, brandy, whiskey, wine and beer. Abstaining is not temperance. A man might abstain from whiskey. He might even dislike the taste and smell of all fermented liquors, and thoroughly detest their effect, and yet in other things be intemperate. But if a man very much likes the taste and smell of strong drink, restrains himself, using it only as he would a strong medicine, he is then, so far as drink is concerned, temperate. If he so constrains himself in his various likes and dislikes he is a true expression and example of temperance. The burden or theme of this lesson is more of self-denial than temperance.

It may be well to know and remember, that while the Bible is An open book, it is an address to those who have ears to hear, and a heart and mind to do. James i 25. For instance the golden text is only a few words quoted from Paul's letter—the Lord's letter—to the saints in Rome, beloved of God. Rom i 7. The word brother in the golden text is a brother man, not all men.

Lesson text 23, All things are lawful. All things allowed by the law of God, or man. There are things lawful that are nearly awful. It is lawful among men—for a man with a family to drink, to make himself a disgrace toe very temperate man and heap misery, suffering and poverty on his family. That is the abuse of personal liberty. There is no written law of man against such. But such conduct is an open shame, a blot on, and crime against common humanity. Paul and all saints are called for that which is profitable and instructive to salvation.

24. Let no man—no obedient believer, Mark xvi 16, seek his own good only, but every saint—another's good—not wealth—good to salvation.

25 Buy in the open market—store—what you desire, do not ask where it came from, who killed it, how killed, was it sacrificed to idols, etc., ask no questions, and you will not be troubled. Eat and give God thanks. 1 Tim iv 4.

26 All belongs to God. The earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof. Psa xxiv 1.

27 Explains itself.

28 If any man—at the least—say, This was sacrificed to idols—killed in honor of a god—do not eat Deny yourself for the sake of him that told you, and you will have peace of mind. This does not apply now in Autorica. It did then in Corinth, capital of Achaia. Also in Lystra in Asia Minor where the priest of Jupiter wanted to sacrifice to Paul and Barnabas, calling them the gods of Jupiter and Mercurius, because Paul—by the power of the Holy Spirit—had healed a cripple. Acts xiv 8-13. We may here ponder if the informer had any hesitation on his own account, or if he knew that he was talking to a believer—a saint? In either case, the refusal of the believer to eat would show that he revered the Word of God, and might make a good and right impression on the other.

29 The obedience of the believer would be carrying out verse 24. Not seeking his own good only, but also that of others. But why is the liberty of a believer judged by another man's conscience?

30 Why? If he be favored with a portion—from God—and give thanks. Why is he evil spoken of?

31 Simply this. God gives favor to the humble, and will in due time exalt them. 1 Peter v 5, 6. By being temperate in all things, in thought, word and deed, the believer strives to walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God. Col i 10. Thus eating or drinking or whatsoever he does, is done to the glory of God.

32. This manner of life gives no offence—no cause of offence—to any. Unbelievers may take offence, that is their fault.

33 Though I be free from all, yet have I made myself servant to all, that I might gain the more. 1 Cor ix 19. Even Christ pleased not himself. Rom xv 1-3. Let us take up our cross and follow him. Matt xvi 24. It may be well to note. That meats offered to idols—false gods, was polluted. Acts xv 20, polluted in the sight of God. And that any sacrifice of the wicked was no abomination to the Lord. Prov xv 8. The sacrifice acceptable to God now, is the sacrifice of praise continually. Heb xiii 15. And ourselves a living sacrifice. To such the reward is great.

Bible school workers! Attention! Those who will work for the success of the second annual convention of the Church of God to be held at Lemon Park, Indian Lake, Michigan, July 25 to August 8, 1907. Send to Harriet E. Boice, 1009 South Wright St., Champaign, Illinois, one dollar, I will send you instructions and material to work with.

Workers: "Convert the dollar and you will evangelize the world."

A dialogue: Work for the dollar.

Quoth the dollar to the cent. Look at me, how big I am, and how shining is my face, and pious, too, with this profession of faith printed plainly over my forehead, 'In God we trust!' I am worth a hundred miserable little coppers like you."

"That may all be true," replied the cent, "but for all that, although you are so broad and bright and pious, you are nevertheless a hypocrite. Where you go to church once, I go a thousand times; and, moreover, you hardly ever get to Bible school, while I am a regular attendant. You are a slanderer too. You have called me a 'dark faced barbarian, a native, with feathers in my hair.' I must confess I once was a heathen, a barbarian and an outcast, but a thousand of my converted sisters came the gospel to be preached to me as well as you. If you were not blinded by pride and love of self, you would follow the noble example of my sisters, and send a thousand workers in the field too."

The dollar, "Woe is me, I am undone, I am of unclean lips."

The cent, "For though I preach the gospel, I have nothing to glory of; for necessity is laid upon me, if I preach not the gospel! For if I do this thing willingly, I have a reward; but if against my will, a dispensation of the gospel is committed unto me."

"What is my reward then? Verily that when I preach the gospel I may make the gospel without charge, that I abuse not my power in the gospel."

The dollar, This I will do for the gospel's sake, that I may become partaker thereof with you.

Moral, "Pray for the conversion of the backsliding dollar, that it may come to good and regular standing."

HOME DEPARTMENT.

Our motto, Work, Pray, Give.

Our golden text, "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

Worker's text, "Not slothful in business; fervent in spirit, serving the Lord."

Our commission, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature."

Dear Restitution:

Enclosed find postal order for renewal of RESTITUTION. The extra fifty cents is for the "Helping Fund." I am enjoying THE RESTITUTION, as that and the Pine Woods Bible Class are all the preaching I have in this prosperous city of nearly 40,000 inhabitants. Many churches with their beautiful architecture and spires pointing heavenward, their interiors rich and comfortable and most modern are scattered over the city, and yet not one is there that rings out the glad tidings from those upholstered pulpits; not one that sets forth the "Bread of Life," but instead we are given a stone. I am much interested in the "History" of the old Advent church in Laporte County, Ind., by Auntie Wince. Although many of them were gone before I was born I knew some of the Catlins and Aunt Sarah Clark, but all of the names are very familiar for they were often on the lips of dear old father and mother, who lie sleeping side by side in the Kingsbury church yard, waiting for their summons. May God speed the day.

Yours in hope of eternal life,

LAURA SHAW LOVELACE.

The Power of Silent Testimony.

In these times, when so much stress, and rightly so, is laid upon the necessity of individual and public testimony for Christ, it is important that we bear in remembrance above all that there is a testimony which is even more impressive and abiding than that which is heard, and that is the testimony which is seen. This is the constant, daily witnessing for God in the manner, spirit, and life of the Christian,—the silent testimony. Whatever is, and can be said concerning the power and results of audible witnessing by the Christian such as that in prayer or song, or address, none can deny that that evidence which is seen by the eye of the world is the most incontestable and abiding. As Matthie Babcock said, "We do not read 'let your lips so speak,' but 'let your light so shine!' The living epistle must not only be known and heard, but also known and read of all men."

Furthermore, the Spirit of God not only seeks to do work through us in the souls of others by our verbal testimony of him, but also a work in others by what they see of the power of his control and grace and leadership in us ourselves. "He that ruleth his spirit is greater than he that taketh a city." When the world sees an uncontrolled temper, quick to speak or to fly into a passion for the smallest cause, or a disposition to take offense at the slightest misunderstanding, or a spirit that is ever rushing thoughtlessly into worldly scenes and gains upon the slightest temptation, it at once discounts the testimony of the lips. But that consistency of spirit which reveals patience under difficulty, humility in triumph, fortitude in danger, and love in the face of anger, and forgiveness for the deed of injury, is a form of witnessing which none can gainsay.

It is the silent testimony that changes men's skeptical views and wins their unbelieving hearts when all the logic and rhetoric of the lips may fail. The silent testimony will overrule all feelings and emotions that exist in the enemies of Christ. Let us, in our race of Christian experience, resolve that men shall not only hear, but shall also see a testimony of this character, and our mission shall prove a truer, stronger and more abiding one.—Volunteers' Gazette.

The Written Word.

The higher critics of today have questioned the inspiration and consequently the infallibility of the Holy Scriptures, but it would seem that a little reasoning on the right lines would settle the question forever.

First, when we consider that man is sinful by nature and that the whole race is in a sinful, corrupt condition, the necessity of an infallible standard of right is at once apparent.

This very condition has called forth just such a standard. In the beginning, God conversed with man face to face. Gen i:28. But the man sinned, and while God has remained the same, sin has come between man and his Maker (Isa lix: 1, 2; Gen iii: 10), so that man cannot stand in the presence of a holy God and live. So God, in love and mercy, has chosen to speak by his Spirit to his servants who have written the communications, and they have been collected and preserved for man's guidance and help. Could not an all-wise God give an infallible guide? Could he not see its necessity?

Among all the great religions of the world, and among all the warring sects of the Christian religion, each declaring to the world that their own set of doctrines is the true and sufficient guide to faith and morals, the mind becomes bewildered and the honest heart cries to God for a sure foundation and a safe guide to life eternal. If God our Savior would have men come to him, he must show them the safe and sure way. This he has done in his inspired and infallible word. Inspired if infallible, and infallible if inspired. In this alone can we place our trust.—E. V. Shackelford.

Cultivate Sympathy.

Let us never restrain our sympathies or dam them back. Pity and compassion for the woes of the world clarify the human heart, and take off the sharp edges of our disposition, and make us grateful in the contrast. The unfortunate were born of the same eternal father, rocked in the same cradle of the world, and at the same moment, on the same morning, will hear the same resurrectionary blast that wakes the dead.

Cultivate your sympathies. The sixteen hundred millions of the race are all united by chords of kinship, and those chords, after fastening us all together, reach up to the heart of God, so that we are all bound together, all on earth one, God and the human family one.

When a workman, with a loaded hod on his shoulder, slips from the ladder and falls to the basement, bend over him, lift him very tenderly; he is your brother.

When in the midnight tempest the sailor slips from the ratlines, and has his life dashed out on the deck, listen to that awful thud; it is your brother.

When you hear a demented woman from the corridors of Bloomingdale Asylum, remember, it is your sister. When her ruin is worse than that, and body, mind and soul have been turned off the declivities of a decent life, and she hangs, with mangled fingers, over the howling billows of hell, do not laugh, do not caricature, do not make heartless remarks; that is your sister.

"Oh, no, no," you say, "that is impossible. You compromise my dignity by saying she is my sister." Yes, she is. You belong to the Lord's family and she belongs to it, and God is her Father, and he is your Father, and does not that make her your sister? God is not ashamed to acknowledge this, and you are not better than God. Yes, if you scoff at her, you are worse than she, for God has a heaven all ready for her as soon as she repents; but for one who has no compassion for lost manhood or lost womanhood, from Bible lid to Bible lid there is no promise. Feeling as you now do, hard and uncommiserate, you will not come within 500,000 miles of the kingdom.

May the blessing of those who are ready to perish come upon us. In this day of accidents we are not only to sympathize with the victims, but to do it wisely for our own safety. Let us not make ourselves ridiculous by wandering about timid and nervous, expecting every minute that something will happen, but let us take every reasonable precaution.

On a railroad trip I was very tired, and I got on the locomotive with the engineer on the the Illinois Central, and if there is anything that will wake a man up, that is it. The fireman and the engineer were very communicative, and I asked all about the machinery, and after a while I said:

"What is that bright, shining instrument?"

"That is a Westinghouse air brake."

"What is the use of it?"

"Well," he said, "when I see an obstacle on the track, or I see that a bridge has fallen, or I see the headlight of a locomotive coming around the curve on the same track, I touch that, and as by an almost omnipotent reverse the train halts, the brakes falling on the wheels of all the cars all the way back."

"What a splendid arrangement."

Then I thought, we are all on an express train. We are going at sixty miles an hour, one hundred miles an hour, five hundred miles an hour. Ever and anon there are perils across the track. Shall we wildly crash into them and perish? No, there is an overmastering power willing to take charge of the long train of life's events, and with instantaneous spring holds us back from destruction. What we want is not only a power stop when it is safest to stop; a thousand times between now and when we reach our destination, we will want an instantaneous and omnipotent brake.—The Christian Herald.

The Contented Pansy.

There is a story told of a certain king who had a large garden, and one day heard all the plants and trees talking together. They were all sad. The oak murmured because it could not bear sweet flowers, the rose lamented because she did not bear luscious fruit like the vine, and the vine was sad because it had to cling to a wall, and could cast no shadow of its own.

"I am no use since I cannot add sweetness to life," said the oak.

"And I might as well die, as I cannot bear luscious fruit," sighed the rose.

And the vine more despondent than all, groaned wearily: "What possible good can I do in the world?"

Then the king looked round and saw a gay little pansy, which looked up and smiled, while all the other plants and trees were sad.

"What makes you so cheerful when all the rest are so gloomy?" he asked.

"I thought," said the pansy, "that you wanted me here, for you planted me here; and because you planted me, I thought you loved me, so I just made up my mind to try to be the best little pansy that could be."—Selected.

Positive in Character.

One of our first duties is to find the conditions under which we grow and can help others to grow and be happy. It is very simple to lay down arbitrary laws and try to keep within their bounds; easier than to grow to serve these laws by development from within. It is easy to criticise other people who step aside from these bounds, easy to pick flaws; but it takes genius to be appreciative. Goodness does not mean obeying these laws. Health is not an absence of disease, it is abounding life. Goodness is not a negative concept. A man who does nothing bad may still not be good; for he may be utterly useless to himself and to society.

Goodness is not mere absence of evil. That was the idea of the Middle Ages—the idea of hiding away from the world and avoiding its stain. But our aim must be higher than this negative quality. The people who believe themselves good because they do nothing bad, belong to that class Dante placed outside of hell and heaven, for they work neither for God nor Satan, but for themselves.—*E. H. Harmfulness of Savorless Salt.

"Ye are the salt of the earth..... trodden under foot of men." The city of Hutchinson, Kansas, is the center of the salt industry of the country. Years ago when the facilities for curing and preserving the salt were not what they are now, a great quantity was exposed to the weather, to the wind and the rain, the frost and the heat, and was consequently rendered useless. It "lost its savor." It was used by the city authorities for road-making, and a fine avenue was covered a foot deep in the "savorless" salt, and for months it was trodden under foot of men and beasts. Robbed of its proper preservative properties, however, it also failed as a roadbed, and soon that highway was one of the worst in the town. Nor was this all. The salt thrown upon the road so saturated the soil that the fine trees which graced each side of the street suddenly dropped their foliage and died, and there today we have a treeless avenue and a bad road. A character stripped of its helpful influence becomes not merely negative as to good but positive as to evil.

ILLINOIS BIBLE SCHOOL.

The Annual Bible School for Illinois will convene at Oregon, Ill., August 12-21. Brother R. G. Huggins has been requested to prepare an outline of study on the nature, office, and work of the Holy Spirit, a task for which we deem him well qualified. The other work of the school will be about the same as in former years. Our evenings will be occupied in about the same manner as they were last year. Already many have signified their intention to be present. When you read this, please write me whether you will attend, and send me the names of others who may be induced to attend. Our school is no longer an experiment, but an established instrument for good. Come thou with us and we will do thee good. Address me at Oregon, Ill.

S. J. LINDSAY.

Whoever has a good temper will be sure to have many other good things.

Announcement.

The Twentieth Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus in Iowa, will be held at Waterloo, Ia. Aug. 17-25, inclusive. Programme will appear later.

O. J ALLARD, Pres.
EVA L. STEARNS, Sec.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Ohio will be held at Springfield beginning Wednesday evening August 7 and continue over the following Sunday. The coming meeting will be the fifth.

The four in the past were replete with all that goes to make a success. The speakers with one accord delivered the glad tidings of the Kingdom. Heartfelt prayers were offered. Inspiring songs were sung. Glad greetings and talks of the glories to come were heard from every side. Those who came hungry for the Word, went away full and overflowing. Let us make number five better if possible than the preceding ones. The brethren at Springfield have secured the Fair grounds and buildings for the occasion. The place could only be had for the dates given above.

Those who have met the Springfield brethren know the kindly effort they will make to have things comfortable.

For the reasons given it is needless to urge those who have attended. To those who have not we say "Come and see and hear." The presence of all is needed to plan the Evangelist work for the following year. The programme will be published in due time.

P. NEILL, Pres
J. S. THOMPSON, Sec.

The Annual Meeting of the Northwest Conference of the Church of God will meet with the Church at Corvallis, Benton Co., Ore., on June 28 to 30, 1907. Corvallis is on the S. P. R. R. and Willamette river, can be reached by rail or boat. Now brethren plan to come, here is a new church and a new place to hold our Annual Conference. Come one, come all, and leave your hobbies at home, and make this the best meeting ever held in the Northwest. You cannot afford to stay away.

TOKER LAKE BIBLE SCHOOL.

Conditions have arisen which make it necessary to change the time and place of the meeting of the Bible school. It is now decided that the time will be from Thursday July 25 to Aug. 8. The place, the pretty summer resort at Lemon Park—Indian Lake. This pleasant resort is only 2½ miles north of Vicksburg, Mich. From Chicago take Grand Trunk R. R. direct to Lemon park. From South Bend the same. From Grand Rapids change at Vicksburg to Grand Trunk, or change at Kalamazoo to C. K. & S. R. R. for Pavilion. At Pavilion change to Grand Trunk R. R. for Lemon park only 2½ miles west. These resort grounds are 14 miles south of Kalamazoo, 46 miles north of South Bend, 100 east of Chicago. Cottages can be rented very reasonably. When several use one the expense is very light. Meals quite reasonable or board ourselves. If cottages are rented there are beds, pillows, gasoline stove, chairs, tables and dishes, everything for light house keeping. Visitors should bring 2 sheets, 2 pillowslips, a quilt, a tick, straw for ticks close by. There are two boats with each cottage, and splendid fishing.

Above and beyond all that will be the instructive Bible lessons by competent teachers with maps, charts and lesson outlines for every session. Lessons not only intensely interesting during the two weeks but good for all life time. Added to this the evening sermons by able speakers. Altogether will make a feast not to be forgotten. Compared with the educational value for eternal things, the expense will not be worth considering. The school of last year is still bearing good fruit. Let all come who can.

WHEN YOUR TIME IS OUT PLEASE RENEW.

A New Tract.

The Great Divine Healer vs Latter-Day Healers, by Uncle John Foore.

A Tract for the last days. Should be read by every thinking Christian.

Paul 2 Tim. iii. 13. "But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived."

Matt. vii. 21. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works. And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

Brethren, these tracts have gone into many families, both to brethren and people of other denominations, a few infidels, and one Christian Scientist, and all seem to be well pleased with it; but only a few of the brethren have sent to me any help in the way of paying for the tracts, and tracts are very expensive. We are anxious to have more published on different subjects. Please help to send these Pearls out among the people.

Send orders to John Foore, at 2012 W. Corning Ave. Parsons, Kan. The price is 10 cents each.

The printing is clear and plain, and the paper excellent. We have so arranged with the publishers that we can supply this book for a limited time only at a reduced price, which will enable all who wish this valuable aid to the study of God's Word to possess it. We can offer it now at $2.00 post paid. All who wish to avail themselves of this low rate should do so at once.

A four-page tract in the German language, by Brother M. Joblin of Cleveland, O. Subject, "What Must I do to be Saved?" After getting the opinion of one who understands this language, we have no hesitation in recommending it as simply all right. Get some for your German friends. Send to M. Joblin, 620 Woodland Ave., Cleveland, O. Price 40 cts per 100.

BROTHER D. C. Robison has issued a small 16-page tract on the subject "Man is Mortal." It is of convenient size to enclose in an envelop, and can be had for 2 cents each, or 15 cents for 12, or $1.50 for 100 copies. Bro. Robison is so well known as a clear and lucid writer that no words that we can pen would commend his work, more than will the bare announcement of his name. If you are in the mood to do a little missionary work send to Brother Robison at 596 So. Limestone St. Springfield, O. and get a supply of these tracts.

NOTICE.

Information wanted concerning an Evangelist known as Blind Haynes, who traveled some years ago in Kansas, selling a pamphlet written by himself, entitled "When will Christ come?" Is he living? If so, where? Who has a copy of his book to sell, or loan for a short time? What firm published his book? Information will be thankfully received, and it is of importance.

Account Giving.

There is certainly a great day of accounts coming, when our Lord will reward every one according as her or his work has been.

The great concern of each one should be, What have I done upon which to expect reward? If you should judge yourself, what would your judgment be?

Our talents differ, and each one will be held accountable for the use of such talent, whatever that may be. If you have only one, use that.

Some one says, what can I do? Why you can circulate literature teaching the truth if nothing else. There is no one but who can do that. Will that do any good? Oh, yes. Let me tell you something. Some people have bought several copies of "Pine Woods Bible Class" and lending them to their friends and neighbors. It being easy and attractive reading, most people will read it. It is bearing fruit already. I have just been told of a man who had become discouraged. He had listened to preachers of different denominations, and found they contradicted each other. He began to drift into infidelity, when a Brother put a copy of Pine Woods Bible Class into his hands. Now in place of infidelity, he is rejoicing in new found light. It would take too much space to tell of other cases. Try this work, and add some stars to your crown.

The Students Text Book is already an assured success, and will be printed after I get home from this present trip.

I desire that all who want it, to send in their names in advance, that I may know how many to print. All you order now, you will be sure to get when printed. The price will be fifty cents.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Your loving brother.

Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? That Beautiful Tomorrow.

Oh! that beautiful tomorrow,
So free from care and sorrow,
That hath no more temptation, grief or sin,
Where the weary ones are blest
In the land of perfect rest,
And naught that can molest shall enter in.

Oh! that glorious tomorrow,
What joy our hearts do borrow,
From the thought, that 'tis swiftly drawing near.
Then, the toils of life all done,
We shall reach our happy home,
And God's kind hand shall wipe away each tear.

Oh! that morrow bright and golden,
When the story sweet and olden
Our tongues and hearts forever shall employ;
And the glorious glad refrain
To the Lamb that once was slain,
The universe shall fill with shouts of joy.

Haste Lord, that glad tomorrow,
That shall banish all our sorrow,
And bring our blessed Lord forth again.
Oh! let soon its glorious light
Chase away earth's dreary night.
Take to thyself thy power, dear Lord, and reign.

The Story of a Happy Christian Life.—No. 13.

Father, in his "Reminiscences," speaking of the passing of the autumn of 1844, without a realization of cherished hopes, says, "It only remained for the disappointed, scattered believers to organize themselves, and enter upon the more thorough study of the Scriptures and watch the signs of the times, and the progress and changes of human history, and while the course of the present age should continue, hold forth the words of life and salvation to a lost world." He "entered anew upon the work of his ministry; organized churches on Bible principles, and these churches soon made it the general practice to hold quarterly and annual Conferences, "And in this way a distinct people took their place in the world to herald neglected truths, especially those that pertain to the closing up of Gentile times, and the introduction into this world of a new and divine order of things; especially as it relates to the government of the nations of the earth.

But, "Some might question," Auntie Willard said, "the propriety of the use of means that would bring about division; that it were better to remain together in error than to separate upon the truth." "But where," she asked should we draw the line? Division followed upon apostolic preaching of Luther, and has followed upon the footsteps of reformers in every age of the world. The great Reformer of the world said, concerning his mission, "Think not that I am come to send peace on earth; I came not to send peace but a sword. For I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother And a man's foes shall be they of his own household.' Matt x 3, 4, 5. Division marked the footsteps of Jesus, and it marks the footsteps of his faithful followers to this day.

It was the mission of the apostles to introduce and unfold to the world, a new dispensation, a new order of things altogether. The brethren of Jesus would not accept the new order but clung tenaciously to Moses and his teachings. The Galileans or Benjamites believed; hence the camp was divided. Upon whom rested the responsibility?

Again when Luther came out with the question, "If the Christian really finds all his salvation in a renewal through faith, what need has he of the proscriptions of Rome? Did the responsibility rest upon Luther, that division followed? Could he hold his peace and let the blessed truth still be hid from the eyes of the people, that 'the just shall live by faith,' instead of by penance and absolution by the priest? So now in the case before us, God sent his servants to proclaim his long hidden truth to this people. Some of them believed and confessed it, while others believed not. Who is to blame for the separation that has ensued? Certainly not those who preached, nor those who believed the truth of God.

As there was a necessity at the first Advent that the new wine be put into new bottles by the constitution of a new order of things—a new church, formed of a new element, the Benjamites, the one tribe of the ten, left with Judah for a light—so when the time of the kingdom nigh at hand was proclaimed, there must be a new vessel to contain it. A faithful trial was made as at the first Advent, to introduce this new wine into old bottles—the churches; but they could not contain it; they burst asunder, therefore new church filled with this new wine—the wine of the coming kingdom must of necessity be found.

The fulness of time had now come for the development of just such a body; and we look upon it as a dispensational movement, having the same relation to the second Advent, that the preaching of John had to the first. It is a preparatory movement—a getting ready for the second Advent of our Lord from heaven, earth's King about to return, and should he not have a people to welcome and escort him to the place of coronation? Yea, to 'crown him Lord of all.'

As it is written—'Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins which took their lamps and went forth to meet the bridegroom.' Then when? When all the lines of prophecy converge to show the kingdom of God nigh at hand. Not surer does the budding fig tree betoken the summer nigh, than do all the converging rays make plain to us that we are in the closing scenes of the gospel dispensation, even now are they blending with those of the dispensation of the fulness of times in the closing up of the prophetic periods. The four great kingdoms of the earth portrayed in prophecy have been retraced by the faithful historian. These kingdoms with their great changes, are now in the past. Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece and Rome have for many centuries furnished the history that thrilled and inspired the youth in the schools of the world. The predicted revolutions in the fourth empire, symbolized by the legs of iron, and feet part of iron and part of clay, and even the ten kingdoms symbolized by the ten toes, are long since named on history's page. The prophetic declaration concerning these ten toe-kingdoms, reads thus, 'In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed. Dan ii 44. Have we not reason then to look now in the days of these kings for the fulfilment of this which God has spoken by the mouth of his prophets?

Again, note the series of signs given by our Lord himself in these and similar words, 'There shall be signs in the sun (sun spots?), and in the moon, and in the stars, and upon the earth distress of nations with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing for fear, and for looking after the things that are coming upon the earth; for the powers of heaven shall be shaken. And then shall they see the Son of Man coming in a cloud with power and great glory. And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh.' Luke xxi 25, 28. Nearly all these are fulfilled and recorded in history, where they may be found by any one sufficiently interested to search for them. Hence we are justified in believing that it is near, even at the door.

The great apostasy and the revelation of the Man of Sin—the son of perdition, which at the first advent was in the future and must become history before 'the great and notable day of the Lord' is now in the past. That wicked person has been revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming. 2 Thes ii 8. This therefore, no longer stands in the way of that day at hand, but is rather a beacon of its proximity.

Then the rushing to and fro, and the increase of knowledge characterizes this as the time of the end. Dan xii 4. This finds its fulfilment in the chariots with flaming torches that rage in our streets and jostle one against another in our broad ways, that seem like torches and run like the lightning. Nahum ii 4.

The control of the electric fluid, and the multitude of inventions all contribute to stamp this as the day of God's preparation, the time of the end. Physically, morally and religiously this age stands out in the light of revelation and history as the time of the end.

LESSON FOR SUNDAY, JULY 7.

GOD FEEDS ISRAEL IN THE WILDERNESS.
EXOD. XVI. 1-15.

Golden Text. "I am the living Bread which came down from heaven." John vi. 51.

In the lesson for June xvi. Israel saw the great work of the Lord upon the Egyptians, then they feared the Lord and Moses. Exod. xiv. 31.

In chapter xv, read the grand anthem of victory and prophecy by Moses and Israel, Miriam and the women. It is interesting to think that Miriam was over ninety years old at this time.

From the shore of the Red Sea they went three days journey, finding only bitter water they complained to Moses. The Lord made—by Moses—the water good for use, and said if they would hearken to him, and do what was right in his sight, he would take good care of them. They came to Elim [illegible]

Lesson Text: The progress of such a multitude of people, men, women and children, must necessarily have been slow. A month after leaving Egypt they came into the wilderness of Sin, a tract of land between Elim and Mt. Sinai.

2. Some people inclined to be content, wonder why the Israelites could so soon forget or lose faith in God. It is likely that there were many of good intentions among the Israelites who would not—of their own accord—have complained, who would have even suffered and waited patiently. But there was a mixed multitude went with them. Exod. xii. 38. Doubtless for just what they could get. When they did not get all they wanted—and more than they needed—they were loud in their complaints which were taken up by Israel. Those who did not murmur did not object to the grumbling, and therefore were counted in among them, and so we have the statement that, All Israel or the whole congregation murmured.

3. Wishing they had died on the night of the passover, Exod. xii. 28. It is safe to say they did not mean anything of the kind. While slaves in Egypt they were well fed. However, it is very doubtful if those who worked under the abuse and the lash of the taskmasters—slave-drivers—in Egypt joined in the uncalled-for complaints, but they evidently said nothing against the agitators, and were to blame with the rest.

4. The Lord did certainly try to suit them. He had promised Abraham his friend, Isa. xli. 8, that he would bring his seed to Canaan again, Gen. xv. 16. Forever, Gen. xiii. 15, and they will, Ezek. xxxvi. 28, when the Lord Jesus Christ, their King is reigning. These few passages of Scripture—and there are many more—account for God's dealing with Israel. The Bread—Manna—from heaven was a most wonderful provision.

5. It would not keep over night. Exod. xvi. 20. It did keep over the Sabbath, from the sixth to the first day. From Friday to Sunday. None fell on the Sabbath—now Saturday—Exod. xxvi. 22-26.

At the request of his disciples Jesus taught them to pray, among other things, Give us this day our daily bread. Luke xi. 1-3.

6. At even—evening—see verses 12, 13.

7. See the glory—verse 10.

They complained to and of Moses and Aaron. If Moses and Aaron had depended on Israel for encouragement or reward, they would soon have abandoned them. The reward then—as now, is yet future, and the Lord will bring it. Rev. xxii. 12.

8. Moses told them who they were blaming. Their grumbling—this time was without cause. Let them be rebuked that transgress without cause. Psa. xxv. 3.

9. Aaron called the murmurers before the Lord.

10. They saw who they had to deal with—and not only with Moses and Aaron.

11, 12. They complained because there was nothing but this manna. Num. xi. 6. Better than anything that earth could produce. David referring to it said, Man did eat angel's food. Psa. lxxxiii. 25. They wanted flesh.

13. They had it in abundance, and ate quail; it produced a loathsome disease from which many died. Num. xi. 20. A plague from the Lord. Num. xi. 31-34.

14. They also had the bread from heaven, the manna, like coriander seed, Num. xi. 7. It was the bread of this life to those who did not eat quails.

15. Of the small round thing they said Manna—meaning—What is it? they knew not. Moses said, This is what the Lord has given you to eat. It was both food and medicine for them. It refreshed, restored, strengthened and kept them. It was given to humble and prove to them that God might after do them good. Deut. viii. 16. The manna ceased when [illegible] Josh. v. 10-12.

Read at Michigan Conference.

Under Divine Providence, the Advent cause in America owes very much to Elder Joseph Marsh, the founder of THE RESTITUTION—first at Rochester, N. Y. The Voice of Truth, changed to the Advent Harbinger, and, later, moved to various places in the west, and, finally, to Plymouth, Indiana; its name having been changed to THE RESTITUTION.

The general policy of the paper, from its inception, in 1843 or 1843, at Rochester, New York, has been unchanged, viz., the free study of the Bible, untrammeled by Sectism, with special reference to the soon Second Coming of our Lord. In this sense, The Voice of Truth, The Advent Harbinger, and THE RESTITUTION, have been the western organ of the Advent Church; and Joseph Marsh, more than any other one man, pitched the key when he objected to the Boston effort to tie up the Advent movement into a new sect on Wm. Miller's views.

Mr. Miller was a good Baptist deacon, Joshua V. Himes was pastor of Chardon St. Church, of the old "Christian Connection", and Joseph Marsh was Editor of the Christian Palladium, of Union Mills, New York, the organ of the "Christian Connection".

Mr. Himes heard Mr. Miller's course of lectures on the Prophecies, in New Hampshire, and invited him to give it in his Church. He did so, and Mr. Himes became a powerful champion of Mr. Miller's views. He got up a big tent and started west, visiting, from 38 to 44, many of the larger cities in the eastern, middle and western states, with large attendance, many believing the message. Forty-five and forty-six were trying years.

Elder Himes was with Mr. Miller in his last sickness till his death, at his home at Low Hampton, New York, and promised to advocate his views as long as he lived.

The Advent people generally were not disposed to endorse that pledge. They loved Bro. Miller and adhered to his general views on the Prophecies; but, in a free study of the Bible, they had found it necessary to give up some of the old opinions, which Elder Himes and Mr. Miller had retained. Hence when the suggestion came to organize a general Advent Church on Mr. Miller's views, the west, through the Harbinger, said, "No!", and the East, chiefly through their organs, also said, "No!"

Sectarianism was universally rebuked, and a free Bible vindicated.

I was with Elder Marsh in the Harbinger from '40 to '53. He was a good student of the Bible, strong in his opinions and in their defense. Kind in his relations to others—a good man.

He was an Eastern man, born at St Albans, Vermont. He died in Michigan, and sleeps in the cemetery at Tecumseh.

Brother Levi G. Chase found his grave, and had it put into good condition. The Elder Levi Chase used to come frequently to Rochester. He was a terrible battle axe against sin and error.

The Christian Connection was on better Bible ground than any other denomination, and took more readily to Brother Miller's message.

In a letter May 20 from Escondido, California, Mrs. Jenny Marsh Parker says her father was born, at St. Albans, Vermont, 1802, and died in Michigan, 1863. That he held true to his Advent faith to the last. On his monument is inscribed: "Waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ."

About 1860, The Harbinger dragged heavily, and did not pay expenses. Brother Marsh sold the paper to Thomas Newman, an Englishman, whom I knew at Rochester. He was a good Adventist but too full of English conceit to be an American citizen. When the slave-holders Rebellion broke out, Newman, through the Harbinger, defended the South. I and continued a frequent correspondent of the paper, and had a good hold upon its subscribers.

I was provoked by the disloyal attitude Newman gave the paper and determined to make it loyal to the United States government. Newman would not dare refuse anything I wrote for the paper. He partied, and I pushed him and spiked his guns, and published in The Harbinger, the true attitude of Christians toward civil governments in this age.

Brother L. G. Chase (now deceased) was in attendance at a burial in the Tecumseh Cemetery, and noticed a grave with the name of Joseph Marsh engraved on a stone which had fallen. Startled and almost overcome to find his name there, he made inquiries and was told he had no relations near by. So he paid a man to repair the grave which was badly sunken, and covered with weeds, also to cement the stone to its former place, so great was the loving respect for the man who had fought for truth amid its pioneer difficulties and died faithful unto death.

Conference Report.

On Saturday and Sunday, June 8-9, the last quarterly Conference was held at Adeline, Ill.

All officers were present, and every member of the Executive board, with the exception of Brother S. D. Fahrney, who because of illness was unable to be with us. The general attendance and interest seemed better than ever before at these meetings.

The ministers present were our President Brother James Wilson, and our assistant Evangelist Brother R. G. Huggins. Our state Evangelist S. J. Lindsay not being present on account of attendance at the Indiana Conference where he was assisting by preaching and Bible School work.

The business was held on Saturday evening at the beautiful country home of Brother Earnest Geslo.

The reports of our Evangelists for the past three months showed activity and zeal on their part, as well as good results. Brother S. J. Lindsay had traversed 1,475 miles, visited nine different places, preached thirty-nine sermons and baptized four persons.

The Restitution.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LVI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JUNE 26, 1907. NUMBER 24.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other Bible truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Brother R. G. Huggins reported thirty sermons preached, fourteen Bible classes, and four baptisms.

Following the business session, a social meeting in charge of Brother Huggins was much enjoyed by all present, the subject being, "Individual responsibility to the work of the Lord," financial and otherwise; that the Christian should "seek first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness," trusting God to fulfil his part in the "added" things.

On the following morning we gathered at the public hall at Adeline. At 10:30 Brother James Wilson preached upon the subject of steadfastness in faith and practice. This was followed by the Lord's supper.

For convenience, and that all might remain together, the sisters of Adeline served lunch at the hall at noon in all the excellence and abundance which these sisters know so well how to prepare. The local attendance being very good, and so many present from other churches, it was indeed a feast of fellowship as well as of the "inner man". In the royal hearted manner peculiar to "our people" and as in all our gatherings, every member realized the strength and blessedness of the "tie that binds".

At 1:30 Brother Huggins preached a very interesting sermon, and then it was time to say "Goodbye", and as we turned homeward it was with the hope that we might meet with these friends again on another like occasion.

EMMA L. SMITH, Sec.

Mrs. Lawrence, dear sister and family:

I reached Oleander yesterday. Since my arrival here I have heard, from two sources, of the sad bereavement that has come to you, as a family. I feel that it has come to me as well; for I feel that I have lost, one of the best friends that I had on earth. The one to whom I went so often for sympathy and counsel in my struggle with the things of this world. But I realize that I cannot feel the pangs of sorrow that touches, yes, crushes, the hearts of wife and children. But I believe that there are things in this life, that are worse than death. The suffering that he endured while the cancer tortured him to death, was worse than death! To have a loved one live a criminal life of sin; the character eaten and destroyed as by cancer would be worse than death! I am so glad that in this case, while the flesh was being consumed, and the life eaten out, the character continued healthy, and without spot or stain. Oh, it seems cruel, that if death must be with us, it would not destroy the evil, and leave the good with us! But the second death will gather out the tares, and leave the wheat for the garner. I am so glad, that with your consecrations help Bro. Lawrence was able to rear and direct five boys and a daughter in such manner that as they reached years of accountability they obeyed the gospel. While no one can take his place they can, and I hope will, severally, fill their places in proving that Christ still has honest, earnest, faithful followers!

We will not sorrow as those that have no hope, "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the arch-angel and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first."

If I had dates I would write an obituary to THE RESTITUTION, but as I have not I hope another will.

Yours, in the One Hope.

W. L. BREELS.

Do you wish to live without a trial. Then you wish to die but half a man—at the best but half a man. Without trial you cannot guess at your own strength. Men do not learn to swim on a table. They must go into the water and buffet the waves.

The point of aim for our vigilance to hold in view, is to dwell upon the brightest parts in every prospect, to call off the thoughts when running upon disagreeable objects, and strive to be pleased with the present circumstances surrounding us.—Tucker.

SOUTH, INDIANA, JUNE 20, 1907.

The Dull Season.

At this time of the year there is a shortage of money at this office, and yet the expenses keep right on. It is quite expensive to make out and mail statements to each one, and besides it is unnecessary nearly always, for most of our patrons know whether they are paid up or not. If you have paid this does not apply to you, but if not we ask you kindly to consider our needs right away, and do for us as you would like to be done by, were positions changed. To multiply words is useless, and we simply trust you to do what is right.

WE are trying to do our best with articles on hand, and hope correspondents will exercise patience.

SISTER Bolce has sent us an article that we hope to have up for our next issue, in which she is asking for one dollar from each one interested in her Bible School work, the purpose being to maintain one worker in the field next year. It is only four weeks till the convention meets, and she wants to have the means in hand by then. The treasurer is Mrs. M. A. Woodward Dutton, Mich.

BESIDES the excursion rates in the advertisement of the Pennsylvania R. R. in another part of this paper, the Vandalia Line will sell excursion tickets to Camp Perry, O. Aug 1 to 31. To Dayton, O, Aug 18 & 19. Boston, Mass, July 25 to 28. South Bend, Ind. on July 14, 18, Aug 11, 25, Sept 8, 22, at round trip rate of 60c. F. J. Bussard, Plymouth, Ind, Agent.

A WORD to our Canada subscribers. A month ago we were notified of a change in the postal relations between Canada and the United States. This necessitates our attaching stamps to each package of papers sent to Canada, at a rate of one cent each week for each paper. This will make it necessary for us to ask our subscribers in Canada to send $2.00 instead of $1.50 for a year's subscription. We shall not compel this for present subscriptions, but will send for the time paid for to each. However if any one in Canada feels that it will be right for him to send us the excess this year, we will take it kindly and thank them. It will ease the burden somewhat, and we will surely appreciate the favor.

A Lay Sermon.

Bro. Underwood:

Enclosed I send you a clipping taken from one of our Springfield papers, the Evening Gazette, published by T. J. Kirkpatrick. He does not publish a Sunday paper but instead a Sunday page with the Saturday issue. In each Sunday page there is a Lay-sermon. It reaches about 6000 readers in the city. It is so unusual to see such in our city paper that I clip it and write you these few lines. Your Bro. in the faith.

D. C. ROBINSON.

"And if there is not a resurrection of dead ones, neither has Christ been raised; and if the anointed has not been raised, void then is our preaching and void also is your trust." 1 Cor. xv: 13-14.

That men are actually dead and buried in one world, and really and essentially alive and active in another world, at the same time, is a startling absurdity. To say that dead men are living men, is to destroy the meaning of language. To claim that men when dead have more knowledge, more power and more enjoyment than they had or were capable of having when alive, involves an inconceivable spiritualism. To hold that the "essential man" is living and happy at the time when all that was ever seen and heard of him, all that ever came or could come within the range of human perception and recognition, is known and admitted to be dead is an absolutely incomprehensible proposition.

To declare that a human being is conscious, active and vigorous in another world, while all the organs, faculties and forces which constitute activity and vigor are known to be locked up in the silence and palsying grasp of death, is too much for logic; quite too much for common sense. Moreover, if a saint may be both dead and alive at the same time, and much wiser and happier in that state, during vast ages, than he was when wholly alive, why should he not forever remain so? If the soul has far greater scope of knowledge and heights of bliss out of the body than in the body, why should it be doomed, after ages of this blessedness, to resume its "tenement of clay" at the general resurrection?

But if it be insisted that only the body dies, that the soul, being "the essential man", escapes at death into a world of conscious happiness, then the death penalty becomes a trivial matter indeed, because it utterly fails to touch the "real man," only demolishing his frail earthly tenement.

And, if the "real man" is alive and blissful in a "brighter and better world" for thousands of years, while the earthly man lies dissevered and dishonored in an earthly grave, then the resurrection body cannot be necessary to immortal blessedness. And Paul and all the inspired writers were quite premature in so constantly and earnestly urging the necessity and grandeur of bodily resurrection as the only way to eternal life. For if conscious and adequate happiness is possible to disembodied spirits for any period it must be possible and sufficient forever.

Again, if the soul without the body finds, at death, a sphere whose conditions are adapted to its conscious and active enjoyment, and then after a time comes back and reinhabits its physical house, it must find another heaven; for the conditions adapted to the delight of a naked mental entity could hardly be suited to the joys of a material being. So in such a case, there must be two heavens for saints; one for saints without bodies, from death to resurrection; and another for saints with bodies, after the resurrection. This may do for the vain vaporings of teachers of anti-Biblical cults, but not for those who derive their views from the Word of God. The scriptures reveal but one New Jerusalem; but one "entrance through the gates into the city," to go no more out. No succession of heavens, only one "rest" remaining for the people of God. No vestible to "the house not made with hands," half way between mortality and eternal life.

The saint's title to and surety of eternal life are in the Anointed alone. He "brought life and immortality to light." 1 Timothy i: 10: "Which, according to His abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a living hope —or hope of living—by the resurrection of Jesus Anointed from among the dead ones." The only hope of any future life rests in Christ's resurrection from the dead. And the saint's type and measure of life cannot exceed that of his Lord. Was Jesus alive while He was in the grave of Joseph of Aramathea? Was He "on the right hand of the Majesty on high" during the three days of His entombment? Did He enjoy during that period of silence and utter repose an "intermediate" glory of His kingdom? Did He not declare to Mary of Magdala on the morning of the resurrection that He had "not yet ascended to the Father?" Where was He during those hours of death's victory and reign over His slain body? Where, but in the grave, hallowing the tomb in which all His own must sleep till the hour of their awakening, as He, their Lord, slept until the appointed time for His triumphal awakening.

Does immortality come in installments? First to the soul at death, and a thousand or more years afterward to the body, at the resurrection? Was it Elijah's immortal spirit that went up in a chariot of fire? When he ascended, did he leave anything behind but his mantle? When God took Enoch, did he leave anything? Did not all there was of Enoch go to be with God? When Jesus ascended to the right hand of power He went as an entirety, body and all. And there is no warrant for supposing that He has since left His body.

Why, then, are we asked to believe that saints in some mystic, ethereal, disembodied sense, fly away at death to some place of happiness? And at some time they will be re-united with their bodies. This view we deem as inharmonious with the plan of redemption as it is contrary to nature and reason. And it is, therefore, perfectly consistent in modern orthodoxy to deny outright the resurrection of the body, and maintain, as it does, that at death man drops his materialism altogether and is therefore only a mental entity. For if dead saints are capable of conscious happy existence out of the body, why need they ever resume material forms?

But God's Word teaches nothing of the kind. Note that in Eden the death penalty was total, not partial. Its terms were not "Thou shalt die physically" but survive mentally; not thy body shall die, but thy soul shall not die. But "Thou shalt die."

The penalty covered the whole man, laid hold of the entire person of the offender. And the penalty was death. Not death of some parts of the man, while other parts escape, but death. Death of man, the sinner. Surely, the higher, mental faculties must not be exempt, for in the full possession of all the powers of his being man did the sin; and therefore on the higher faculties rested the greater death. Consequently sentence was not "Thy soul" or "Thy spirit" or "Thy body" —but "Thou shalt die"—all there was of them.

Truly there was another voice that spake to them in seductive tones. It said "Thou shalt not surely (really) die." But was not the voice of God. It was the voice of the adversary. And from believing that lie has arisen more false doctrine than from any other single sentence, pronounced in heaven or earth.

The penalty was death. Not separation of soul and body, but death, positive, complete, of every faculty and force. So inspiration declares, Eccle. ix: 10 "There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest." "For in death there is no remembrance of thee, in the grave who shall give thanks?" Psalms vi: 5. "The living know that they shall die; but the dead know not anything." Eccle. ix: 5.

If man left the garden an immortal being, and is, therefore, still immortal, in whole or in part, then the death penalty was thwarted, and became wholly or in part null and void. To claim that the race is innately or inherently immortal; that the soul—held to be the essential of man—is indestructible and cannot die, is to assert in fact that God's action in excluding Adam and Eve from "the tree of life" that he should not live for [redacted] despite the death penalty and the banishment from the garden and the tree of life, mankind has lived from that moment to this, for a time in the world, and then in an unseen world; and that, being indestructible, he will live forever; in fact he can no more die than God himself can die. This is precisely the point which the adversary so successfully urged in the seduction of the woman—the mother of us all. Which should we believe, God's plan "Thou shalt die," or the adversary's statement "Ye shall not really die?"

But "The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down in silence." Psalms cxv: 17. "So man lieth down and riseth not, till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep." Job xiv: 12. Peter in his pentecostal sermon says: "For David is not ascended into heaven." Acts ii: 34. And in 1 Corinthians xv Paul expressly teaches that the grave holds its victims in its relentless grasp until the moment of resurrection. And the same author writing to the church in Thessalonica says: "For the Lord Himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first." 1 Thess. iv: 16.

Now if the dead in Christ are not in their graves, how can they rest? And if "they" are alive and happy in an intermediate state, why should there be a "shout," the archangel utter His voice and the trump of God sound? If it be argued that these things were necessary to awake their bodies, why then did not the careful Paul say "bodies?"

How can we have immortality then? By the special gift and bestowment of God. To the Romans vi: 23 Paul says: "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Anointed our Master." If eternal life is a gift, we do not have it innately, we cannot naturally possess it. If it comes through Jesus Anointed our Master then it must come only as a consequence of His redemptive work. And so Paul says that God will "render" eternal life to those who "seek" for it. Romans ii: 6-7.

Resurrection is the chief and momentous result of Christ's redemptive work. So important that had God let him in death, the whole superstructure of redemption and restitution would have fallen to pieces. So He said: "I am the resurrection and the life." That is, the resurrection and eternal life by resurrection, comes in consequence of Christ's resurrection to eternal life. "Because He lives we shall live also."

And all men will be made alive from the dead. "There will be a resurrection both of the just and the unjust. But only believers in Christ will be raised to "die no more."

The true Bible doctrine we believe to be: "Future life through Christ alone; and "eternal life", the "gift of God," to believers only; and that through the Anointed, by means of a resurrection out from the dead.

Eternal life is within the reach of every living, but mortal, human being. Glorious truth!—Layman.

Practical Thoughts.

An average smoker will smoke four cigars per day. Assuming they cost ten cents each, he would burn up forty cents per day. Some people may have money to burn but generally speaking not the people of God. Most of them are "the poor of this world." James ii 5. And besides how ridiculously absurd and outrageously unseemly for a man who has named the name of Christ, and who is duty bound to "depart from iniquity" (2 Timothy ii: 19)—how unthinkably foolish to see such a one drawing smoke into his mouth and then blowing it out! My brother! Your mouth is to glorify God. (Col. iii: 8, 17). The redolence of God's praise, should fill your mouth—not tobacco smoke. If you could see yourself as others see you, as God sees you, you would—quit the unclean habit.

Roughly considered or approximately estimated, a tobacco-chewer will masticate and spit upon the earth, street, or parlor floor of his or some friend's home, twenty-five cents worth of the "weed" per week. One week, 25 cents; one month, $1.00; one year, $12.00! The writer knows brethren who are so poor they do but little if anything to support the cause of Christ, and yet they spend $12.00 a year for tobacco! Let me remind them in an brotherly and kindly manner as I can that they are spending [redacted] used the money, which was not theirs, but another's, Luke xvi: 1-9. "If ye have not been faithful in that which is another man's, who shall give you that which is your own?" (v: 12)

The Apostle Paul was afraid that when he visited the church at Corinth he would find "debates, envyings, wraths, strifes, back-bitings, whisperings, swelling and tumults," (2 Cor. xii: 20) among the brethren. There has always been an element in the church who "fast for strife and debate, and to smite with the fist of wickedness" (Isiah lviii: 4) every brother whom they envied. "Puffed up" with knowledge 1 Cor. viii: 1, but destitute of love (xiii: 4), they are filled with all unrighteousness .... debate ... unmerciful: they which commit such things are worthy of death." Romans i: 29-32. Some of our brethren "fast for strife and debate;" they are in glory when they can stir up a debate, and thus get a chance to "smite with the fist of wickedness" some brother who differs from them in some point of doctrine which is of little interest and of less use. These men are "puffed up" with "swellings;" they feel and look mighty big; but the fact is they are "filled" with—I was going to say air, but no—"filled with all unrighteousness" the apostle says they are "worthy of death." Little do such men think or believe or realize that they are under the death sentence, and that they are "worthy" of the penalty. Neglecting and rejecting God's positive Commandments (1 Timothy i: 4; iv: 7; vi: 20; 2 Timothy ii: 16; Titus i: 14) they give us "Supplement" after Supplement in which they "bite and devour one another" (Galatians v: 15), and sow discord among the brethren (Proverbs vi: 19), which sin the Lord hates, and says it is an abomination to him, (v: 16). If it were not for these brethren the Church of God would have more quiet, peace, prayer and holiness. They are always "investigating" the truth, and continually finding something "new". "Ever learning they never come to the knowledge of the truth." The "newest" discoveries recently made and announced by them, is that the Sabbath is binding on all Gentile believers; and that Jesus was the son of Joseph! These old threadbare theories, musty with age, and abandoned by our brethren years ago, and tossed into the back yard, these "investigators" have dug up, and musty and rusty as they are, have labeled them "new"! These are the tempestuous winds of doctrines now blowing from the different points of the compass, filling the eyes of our brethren with "straws". Let the storm pass, and the sun shine.

Selections.

Zion, at Thy Shining Gates.

Zion, at thy shining gates,
Lo, the King in glory waits!
Haste, thy Monarch's pomp to greet,
Strew thy palms before his feet.

Christ, for thee their triple light,
Faith, and Hope, and Love unite;
Thus the heaven we display
To proclaim thine Advent day.

Come, and give us peace within;
Loose us from the bands of sin;
Take away the galling weight
Laid on us by Satan's hate.

Give us grace thy yoke to wear;
Give us strength thy cross to bear;
Make us thine in deed and word,
Thine in heart and life, O Lord!

Kill in us the carnal root,
That the Spirit may bear fruit;
Plant in us thy lowly mind;
Keep us faithful, loving, kind.

So, when thou shalt come again,
Judge of angels and of men,
We, with all thy saints, shall sing
Hallelujahs to our King.

—S. K. Kennedy.

In our day, as in the past, there is an urgent call for steadfastness in religious devotions. The temptation is to grow remiss in their performance, or to neglect them altogether; but the necessity for constancy becomes more imperative as the years come and go. We cannot dispense with them, either with safety to ourselves or with credit to our Christian profession. Our Lord tells us: "Men ought always to pray." Paul declares: "In everything give thanks." Prayer and praise are ever becoming and necessary. They are to be engaged in with fervor, frequency, delight, intelligence and persistence and persistence. Faint-heartedness is pitiable an any time, but at the mercy seat it is contemptible. Negligence and instability deserve condemnation in temporal affairs, but in religious matters they are reprehensible. It is a blessed and honorable thing to be a frequent, regular, and devout suppliant and worshipper. Our communion with God should be tender, sweet, confiding, uplifting, and helpful day by day and hour by hour.

Our surest prospect in life is death. Man's riches are to be estimated rather by the fewness of his wants, than the greatness of his possessions. When you fret and fume at the petty ills of life, remember that the wheels which go round without creaking last the longest. Friendship improves happiness and abatest misery, by the doubling of our joy and dividing of our grief. No great characters are formed in this world without suffering and self-denial. We attract hearts by the qualities we display; we retain them by the qualities we possess. Kind words are the brightest flowers of earth's existence; they make a very paradise of the humblest home that the world can show. He that cannot forgive others breaks the bridge over which he must pass himself; for every man has need to be forgiven. The thought of a possible helpless old age gives us all moments of anxiety. The world's marching orders are: "On to the grave," but watch your track and dodge the stumps. The last day lies hid: therefore watch every day.

The conditions of conquest are always easy. We have but to toil awhile, endure a while, believe always and never turn back.

WILL all concerned take note, the address of Brother D. C. and Sister N. B. Robinson will in future be 506 South Limestone St. Springfield, O.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. Discoveries and Inventions.

Some discoveries are accidental, or providential. Some are the result of hard study and long searching. Others seem simply an inspiration or suggestion, flashing in an instant upon the mind. Some such suggestions may come directly from God, others bear marks of being born of that wisdom from beneath, which is "earthly, sensual, demoniacal."

It is interesting to trace the history and progress of inventions in earlier ages. It is related by Pliny, the historian, that some storm driven mariners at the mouth of the river Belus, in Syria, in making a fire to cook their food, burned some of the herb kali, which grew there in profusion, and its ashes, mingling with the glittering sand beneath, formed, to their delight and surprise, that useful product, glass. This story may be true, but there are specimens of glass in existence dating from very remote periods, though these sailors may never have seen them.

Some five hundred years ago, it is said that a German monk was mixing some medicine containing brimstone, charcoal, and saltpeter, when a spark happening to fall into it, a terrific explosion followed. A repetition of the experiment resulted in the discovery of gunpowder, which has been the instrument of some good, and no little evil in the world.

About the same time it was discovered that a piece of steel rubbed against the iron-ore called loadstone would, if suspended, always point to the north; and now, having the compass, ships fearlessly cross the pathless ocean which before hardly dared, when the stars were invisible, to venture out of sight of land. Were it not for this simple discovery this great continent of America might yet be unknown to civilized nations.

Some children while playing with some spectacle-glasses found that by holding them a little distance apart objects appeared much nearer. Investigation led to the invention of the telescope, by which are calculated the size, and distance, and motion of the heavenly bodies.

A man was once cutting away at letters on wood, when suddenly the thought came to him that, if he could cut them into separate pieces, they could be combined into words, which resulted in the discovery of that which now gives books and papers at such a trifling cost—the art of printing.

ITEMS.

As we go from day to day receiving a thousand and one blessings from God in the spiritual order, we forget very often to thank him.

You can not buy goodness, sweetness or purity at the bargain counter. There are some things for which you must pay full market price, or go without.

Eternal life is the result of immortality, and man is dependent upon it for a future eternal existence. Man does not naturally possess it. It is to be sought for, according to the Book inspired of God.

"Whenever we receive a blessing gratefully, bear a trial patiently, or encounter peril or scorn with moral courage; whenever we perform a disinterested deed; whenever we lift up the heart in true adoration to God, or war against a habit which is strengthening itself against our higher principles—then we are ascending toward our Author."

What the world needs is men of strong convictions, of a "rock-firm" faith in the truth of the gospel—faith, not the head merely, arising from intellectual persuasion of the truth, which is often accompanied with indifference to its claims—but the faith of the heart, arising from a personal experience of the saving power of the gospel.

The lives that lift are those from which shine out warmth, peace and love to those about them. Those that quietly labor on forgetting self, sacrificing, remembering and caring for others with whom they mingle. The life that lifted to a better condition is shown in the story of the good Samaritan. It was not found either in the priest or Levite that passed by on the opposite side from the suffering and needy. But the life that lifted was the poor, despised Samaritan that forgot self and the danger of robbers that yet might be near them, got down from his beast, caring for the suffering one, binding up his wounds, pouring in oil and wine, and raising him to a seat on his beast himself walking by his side and guiding him on to a place of rest.

Poetry.

Past Fouracore Years.

The following poem was sent to the Michigan Conference by Sister Hoyt, who is 89 years old, and could not attend the meeting.

"On the shady side of eighty,
So the thoughtless world might say;
But the path is shining brighter,
Leading unto perfect day.

'Tis the eastward side grows shady,
And the heavenward side grows bright,
As we near the unseen city,
Where God's glory is the light.

Though the steps grow weak and weary
Down the steeps of quite fouracore,
Still the soul grows strong and buoyant,
In the light from yonder shore.

On the heavenward side of eighty,
True, the eyes are growing dim,
But the spirit vision clearer
Sees the guiding hand of him,

Who so tenderly hath led us
Through the wilderness of years;
Sees the pierced hand draw nearer,
Soon to wipe away our tears.

As I read the precious Bible—
Read and love it more and more,
'Till I seem to grow acquainted
With the saintly souls of yore—

How I long for that blest greeting
When the trump of God shall call;
In the air my Savior meeting
To welcome him as Lord of all.

But can I, so sin polluted
Ever hope such joy to gain?
Only by the cleansing virtue,
Of the Lamb for sinners slain.

Years of toil and pain and sorrow,
These are almost over now;
But the endless life that's coming
Writes no wrinkles on the brow.

Earth grows small, and dim, and distant,
Slipping from my weary feet;
New Jerusalem is coming,
Gleams the golden glory street.

Breezes sweet from life's pure river
Float through pearly gates ajar,
Trees of life—I almost see them,
Waving o'er the wall afar.

Harps of gold—I almost hear them,
Where the songs of victory are,
Youth immortall forms of beauty
Then the noonday sun more bright.

These have come through tribulations,
Washed their robes and made them white
In the flowing blood of Jesus,
Who is the city's light.

There's no sickness, there's no sighing,
There's no parting, there's no dying,
Weary age nor shades of night."

The Bereans Column.

Dear Bereans:

For without faith it is impossible to please God, for those who come to him must believe that he is a rewarder of those who diligently seek him. First, faith in what? In God, to believe what God has promised he is sure to perform. God promised to give Abraham the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession. Please observe it is the land God has promised, not sky or heaven, but it is to be earth, we have the promise of. Hence our Savior said, "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth." Here is the place where we will receive our reward, for behold the upright shall be rewarded in the earth. Much more the wicked and the sinners, one class is to inherit the earth forever and one to be cut off forever. We as a people are looking forward to the great day when God shall fulfil all the promises he has promised to his children, and inasmuch as we are to inherit the earth forever we must live forever. Dear ones, we have the blessed promise that Jesus will give us eternal life. Then let us hold fast to the blessed promises which God and his Son have given us, and be faithful to the end, so when he comes to reward his servants we will be found ready, having on the wedding garment when we will hear those welcome words, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared from the foundation of the world." We will have the immortal nature. No more pain, no more sorrow, sickness or death, for God shall wipe away all tears from our eyes. Dear ones, in view of these grand and precious promises let us hold fast until he comes, to reward his servants, is my prayer in Jesus' name.

Z. E. BRANT.

In God's great plan of salvation he has given us a work to do, and if we discharge our duties according to the rule laid down we receive a great reward. "If any man's work abide which he hath built thereupon, he shall receive a reward." 1 Cor iii 14. We need not be led astray on this journey, for our pathway is plainly laid out in the Scriptures. Turn to Gal 22-23, and read, "But the fruit of the spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance; against such there is no law." Again we read in 1 Cor iii 13, "Every man's work shall be made manifest, for the day shall declare, because it shall be revealed by fire and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is." Let us endeavor to stand ready to receive our reward, "And behold I come quickly and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." Rev xxii 12.

ALMEDA C. N. WERTZ.

FAITHFULNESS.

We read in Prov. xxviii. 20, that "A faithful man shall abound with blessings. Faithful in what? The Master said, "He that is faithful in that which is least, is faithful also in much." We should be faithful in all things. Could one be faithless to any trust, or, faithless and untrue to any one who had trusted them, and yet be true to God? We think not. In being faithful to all things committed to our keeping, it will be easier for us to be faithful to God and his Son, Jesus. We are impressed with Joseph's life as one of faithfulness. Beginning at the early age of seventeen years, he was faithful to his Father, in that he brought to him a report of the evil did by them. He was faithful when sent to seek his lost brethren, faithful to Potiphar, faithful in prison, faithful to Pharaoh. Then faithful again to all his kindred, by preserving their lives, and above all, he was faithful to God. How long should we be faithful? We read in the Word, that "he that endureth to the end, the same shall be saved." May we expect a reward if faithful? Paul says; "But Christ is a Son over his own house, whose house are we, if,—we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end."

Also, that we are made partakers with him. Again, in Rev. ii. 10 we read; "Fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer.....be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." Dear ones in the faith, let us take the Holy men of old, the apostles and the Master himself who was faithful even unto death, for our examples, and, let us strive to be faithful in the things intrusted to us. God grant that we may.

Dear Restitution.

The Church of God at Brooklyn, New York, met in union with the Newark, New Jersey. Church at the meeting hall of the Newark brethren in West Park St. on Sunday, June 2ad inst. The morning meeting was for the purpose of Breaking Bread, and was presided over by Brother John D. Hodge, who opened the service by reading Psalms c. n. and cxxxiii., and in place of the usual address before the breaking of Bread, read the following portions of Scripture with just a word or two between each to give them graceful connection. 1 Cor. xi. 23-26; Gal. i. 11; 1 Thess. iv. 13-18; 1 Cor. xv. 47-57; John xvii. 1-24; 1 John iii. 1-3.

After the breaking of Bread a letter was read from our dear and venerable Brother John O. Woodruff, who, owing to his advanced age (92) was unable to be present. Brother Woodruff admonished all to stand fast and fight the good fight, so that in the end all would get the crown that is laid up for those who look for the coming and appearing of our Lord.

A bountiful lunch was provided by the Sisters and at 1:30 P. M. the afternoon meeting was opened by Chairman Daniel Dietz, who read Malachi iii. also Heb. x. 22-25 and Matt. xviii. 20. No given subject had been announced, but each speaker spoke on "Faith" and we spent an extra enjoyable afternoon.

The first speaker was Brother John D. Hodge, who read the opening verses of the 11th of Hebrews, and in his remarks showed the blessed difference between the "works of the law," and "grace through faith."

The next speaker was Brother Wm. G. Rothe, who took as his text Gal. iii. 26, and spoke regarding the blessedness of being in the "family" of God. "God our Father, and we his children."

The next speaker was Brother Wm. H. Donaldson, who took as a foundation for his remarks Romans viii. who in the course of his remarks said, We always hear a great deal about it being our duty to love the brethren; but brethren, does it not sometimes occur to you that it is equally our duty to so conduct our selves that our brethren will love us." This is a thought well worthy of consideration.

Brother James Evans the next speaker went back to the chapter in Malachi (3) and pointed out the differences in the promises as made by God to the Jews and to the Church or Body of Christ.

Brother James Brown the last speaker took the Apostle Paul as an example of faith and showed how Paul exercised zeal and vim in the founding and building up of churches the same as he had formerly used in their destruction, both because he had faith in the work he had at hand.

The meeting closed at 4:45 by the singing of the hymn, "God be With You 'Till we Meet Again."

Owing to the cold and wet weather the attendance was somewhat smaller than usual, but the Spirit of God was manifested and all present acknowledged the meeting to be the best ever held, and all had received benefit and God had been glorified.

At the annual business meeting of the Brooklyn church quite a change took place in the officers, not through any discontent, but simply for the sake of change. At times changes are beneficial, let us hope that this one will be. Our new Secretary is Brother George Zell, of 970 St. Marks Ave.

Sincerely, your Brother, awaiting with patience the return of our Lord.

A Few Thoughts on Hell.

Since it is claimed and taught by current theology that there is a hell of fire now in existence into which sinners are cast as fast as they die, that probably it would not be improper for us to inquire into its location. If there is such a great hell of fire now in existence large enough to hold all of the sinners of all ages of the world it must have a longitudinal, latitudinal or altitudinal location, it is somewhere, can its advocates locate it? Is it in the subterranean regions? if so, where is the great channel through which the sinners enter? or is it down beneath the earth? If so, does the sinner go through the earth, or go around it to get to hell? If it is in the aerial regions, would the saints go through it or go around it to get to heaven? Furthermore, if there is such a hell that has been burning for the last six thousand years and will continue to burn through all eternity would it not need a fresh supply of fuel occasionally? On what kind of fuel does it feed? Is it wood, coal or brimstone? If so, would it not take a crew of fireman to shovel it in to keep the fire going?

[redacted] boldly come to the front and demand attention. Sanity admits a punishment for sinners in some way, some where, or at some time; but instead of it being something that is going on now in a hell of fire that cannot be located, it is a future act, at the end of the world, after the judgment. Peter tells us, "The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished." Here we learn that they are reserved unto the judgment to be punished. They are not in punishment now, and if not in punishment now, they are not in a hell of fire, and if not in a hell of fire what need of a hell of fire before the judgment arrives? Paul in 2 Tim iv 1 tells us that Christ "shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing." Here we learn that the judgment is in the future, and if in the future the sinner is unjudged until that day arrives, and if unjudged they are unrewarded, for reward is the result of judgment, and if unrewarded they are unpunished, and if unpunished they are not in a hell of fire!! This brings us to a vacant hell of fire again, that is if there is one now in existence!! The truth is, there is no such a place now in existence. Peter tells us very plain when, and where it will be. "But the heavens and the earth, which are now, by the same words are kept in store. Reserved unto fire against the day of judgment, and perdition of ungodly men." 2 Peter iii 7. This brings us down to the great hell day, it is after the resurrection; after the judgment, and there will be plenty of fire too! it will be world wide. The whole earth will be flooded with fire and it will be just as the antediluvian world was flooded with water. "The fountains of the great deep broken up, and the windows of heaven opened, the water came from below and above. It will rain fire from above just as it did on Sodom. We will let Luke xvii 29, 30, explain this, "The same day that Lot went out of Sodom it rained fire and brimstone from heaven and destroyed them all. Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of Man is revealed." Here we learn that hell and damnation is not going on now, but is in the future after the Son of Man is revealed, when the books are opened, after the judgment. There are many texts that we would like to quote, but for want of space we leave them off.

Editor Restitution:

Say to the brethren, for me, that I am at home, and am not very well, neither am I sick; but I am very tired. One of my friends and myself have painted three houses the last two weeks. Paul was a tent-maker and Uncle John is a painter. With all our opposition we have had with our colony I am still holding the fort. Our little church at Rollin has a very nice Sunday School with Brother Delos Johnson as its Superintendent. I preach at Rollin once a month, and work with both hands to make ends meet and keep up expenses. I wish to say to the many brethren who are writing to me and asking me many questions, seldom send a stamp for an answer until now I am thirty letters behind in answering on account of time and stamps. All who want speedy answers please enclose stamps.

I have on hand a number of tracts on Divine Healers, and am now working on a tract, The Full Stature of Christ, and will print it if I can raise the means. When I have time I will write out a lesson for the Bible Class, on the first principles or oracles of God. The first will be, The Things Concerning the Kingdom of God. The Gospel preached by Jesus when here on earth had reference to the Kingdom of God. Second, The Gospel preached by the Apostles in reference to the same thing, that is, The Kingdom of God. Third, What is this Kingdom? This purpose of Jehovah to establish a universal Kingdom, and so on.

When you want a question answered please enclose a stamp.

Yours, in hope of eternal life when Jesus comes.

Obituary.

June 15th, 1907, our aged and highly esteemed Brother George Pyper, of Leaf River, Ill., fell asleep in Jesus, aged 78 years, 11 months, and 21 days.

Our lamented brother was born in Hetter-Cairn, Scotland, June 24, 1828. He was married December 11, 1853 to Miss Jane Emsley. To this union was born nine children; seven sons and [illegible] from life to death, and the wife and mother and five sons: Chester G., John S., Philip A., Ernest S., and Oscar H., remain to mourn his death; also nineteen grand-children, and three great-grandchildren.

Our brother with his wife immigrated to America in July, 1854, and settled in Ogle County, Ill., in 1858. It was about this date when he heard the "joyful sound" of the truth. It was like music in his ears, and the year following—1859—he was baptized into the cleansing and saving name of the Lord's Anointed by Bro. Dr. Jacobs. Beginning then the new life of Christ, for 48 years our dear brother fought the good fight of faith, and has been one of the "pillars" in the Church of God in Northern Illinois. The loss of such noble brethren is always keenly felt by the living; and while we all shall miss Brother Pyper, his dear Sister-wife will suffer the most direct loss. God bless her and keep her and may the Lord remember the boys!

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.

Dear Restitution:

At Philadelphia, Pa., on May 30th, '07, our beloved Sister Johannah S. Farley, fell on sleep awaiting the coming of him who said, "I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also."

Sister Farley, who was about 70 years of age, was born in Glasgow, Scotland. At the age of 16 she came to this country and shortly after showed her faith in her Lord by being baptized in his name. She has ever since been faithful to her trust, being a regular attendant at all meetings, doing whatsoever was in her power to advance the knowledge of the love of God as shown in the person of his dear Son. She was ever ready and attentive on those in sorrow and distress and never tired of pointing out the only true road to comfort and consolation which way led by and through the Lord Jesus Christ to the Father, the Father of all mercies and the God of all comfort and grace.

Her sufferings have been long and severe, still she never complained "knowing in whom she believed" and having a faith that the sufferings of this present world are not to be compared to the joys that the saints shall inherit when Jesus comes again to renew all things and remove sin, sorrow, pain, sickness, trouble and death.

Her disposition was cheerful and hopeful and she ever lived in an ever ready frame of mind to do whatsoever the Lord would have her do, loving and being loved. Her circle of friends was large, each of whom shall miss her presence and ever ready help.

The study of "The Book of Books" was her special delight and she took great comfort in the singing of hymns her favorite being Sleep on, beloved sleep, and take thy rest.

Lay down thy head upon thy Savior's breast,
We loved thee well; but Jesus loved thee best.
Good Night!

Until we meet again around his throne,
Clothed in the spotless robe he gives his own,
Until we know, even as we are known,
Good Night!

The funeral services were conducted by Pastor Ramsey, who took as his text a part of the 4th chapter of Job. The hymn (partly quoted above) was read, then Brother Bogart closed the services with prayer.

We laid our beloved Sister to rest with her late husband. Prisoners of hope, awaiting the Lord's coming to raise his sleeping saints and change the living ones to his glorious image, when there will be no more separation and sorrow and crying shall be no more.

"Life's race well run,
Life's work well done,
Life's crown well won."

May ours be the same.

ILLINOIS BIBLE SCHOOL.

The Annual Bible School for Illinois will convene at Oregon, Ill., August 12-21. Brother R. G. Huggins has been requested to prepare an outline of study on the nature, office, and work of the Holy Spirit, a task for which we deem him well qualified. The other work of the school will be about the same as in former years. Our evenings will be occupied in about the same manner as they were last year. Already many have signified their intention to be present. When you read this, please write me whether you will attend, and send me the names of others who may be induced to attend. Our school is no longer an experiment, but an established instrument for good. Come thou with us and we will do thee good. Address me at Oregon, Ill.

S. J. LINDSAY.

WHEN you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and send that.

WE wish to avoid the labor and expense of mailing statements to our patrons. If each one who has not as yet paid for this year would send in his renewal at once, we will appreciate the favor.

Selected.

A Dozen Men Who Can Be Spared.

When work is slack, and business dull, and the working force in an establishment must be reduced, the question arises, "Who can be spared?" And the answer is likely to include some of the following characters:

1. The man who occasionally gets drunk, unfits himself for labor, and is missing when he is wanted. 2. The man who is afraid he shall do more work than he gets paid for, and who shirks, and idles, and loiters, and watches the clock, and always gets ready to quit before the hour appointed. 3. The man who is backbiting and slandering his employer, trying to stir up strife, and make others as dissatisfied as he is. 4. The man who lies, deceives, and has two faces. 5. The man who quarrels with his fellow workers, and abuses and torments the weak and the young. 6. The man who is more careful for his own interests than he is for his employer's. 7. The man who swears, and smokes, and defiles the whole establishment with tobacco smoke and tobacco juice. 8. The man who "don't care." 9. The man who is particular never to do any work which doesn't belong to him. 10. The man who will not lend a hand in an emergency to accommodate others. 11. The man who is so tied by oaths and promises to some secret clan, that he is afraid to do right when he knows what right is. 12. The man who is cross and crusty, and neither fears God nor regards man.

When these men are gotten rid of, business is likely to run more satisfactorily. But the men themselves wonder why they are discharged, and try to raise a tumult, start a strike, or in some way revenge themselves.

It is a good deal easier to keep clear of such men than it is to get clear of them. If men instead of rushing and straining every nerve to get wealth, and calling in every kind of ungodly and undesirable help to spread mischief through their establishments, would do less business and be more careful whom they employed, and decide with the Psalmist, "Mine eyes shall be upon the faithful of the Lord, he shall serve me," they will save themselves much trouble as they go on and much loss at the end.—Safeguard.

Mixing Paint.

"I have always found that pure white paint must be handled with much care, so as to not let any dirt or any dark paints get in it, for it is so white that it is easily spotted. From white other colors can be made by mixing black, green, yellow, red, etc., with it. But when some other color has once been mixed with the white it is impossible to turn it to pure white again. Many who do not know much about paint will try to turn dark paints into the pure white once more, but the experiment is always a failure," says a writer in the Burning Bush.

"Is it not so with the soul? God has created men with holy desires and pure motives, in his own image, but men are not careful with their souls, so they let sin come in, and of course it darkens the heart, just as darkness fills a room when the light is shut out. And as people try to get white out of black paint, they try to cover their sins by joining a church or signing a card, or joining secret societies, etc."

But there is a way to whiten paint just as there is a way to cleanse a sinner, and this is by taking out the impurities. The paint cannot be made white while the dirt remains in it, nor can the sinner be cleansed while he continues in his sins. Therefore, cease to do evil; learn to do well." .....and "though your sins be as scarlet they shall be as white as snow." —Christian.

A step toward Christ is a step away from the world.

Notice.

All who are interested in the dance question, and wish to know the workings of the ball room and dance house will get a full understanding of the matter by getting and reading carefully the little tract on the "Evils of the Ball room Unveiled." It will cost but ten cents post paid. Send to the author L. S. Bronson, Niles, Mich.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Neb., will be held in St. Paul Sept. 14th to 20th inclusive.

Evangelizing on the Pacific Coast.

May 4th, I began my meetings at the Rural School House, three miles from Tempe, Arizona. Congregation small and late. Would be discouraged if years had not convinced me that an evangelist has his "ups and downs"—more "downs" than "ups!"

May 7th, my 5th discourse, in series of unknown number, in which I showed the method of the adoption of sons and daughters, by "believing into," and "being baptized into" "the only begotten Son"—that he might be just, and justify; "that he might be just, and the justifier of him that believeth in Jesus." He does not go back on his just condemnation. "For the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the Sons of God." After the close of the meeting, Jennie, the daughter of Sister Nichols, and Fay daughter of Brother and Sister Miller came to me and expressed a desire to be immersed.

May 8th, I ran at Brother C. A. Saylors this morning. I took a shady walk of a mile extending along the west side of his farm. Don't you wish you could have been with me? You could have had an everlasting impression of this part of Arizona. An irrigation ditch on each side of the road made pleasant, cool and shady by from two to four rows of large thrifty cottonwood trees which are kept booming in growth by the water and almost constantly producing summer climate. We look through the trees out into the level, broad fields, until the vision is obstructed by other trees following other ditches which carry strength and prolific production to the plain that was once a desert waste; and we are filled with astonishment to see the stacks of hundreds of tons of hay that were cut and stacked in April; and the more so because this is the first and poorest of a succession of harvests for the year. We get an estimate of the prospective crops of the fields of oats, barley and wheat, as they tell it in tons, and every other place we have talked in bushels, we use a little mathematics, and learn that good farming may give 40 to 60 bushels of oats; 30 to 40 of wheat; and 40 to 60 of barley.

Now don't get Arizona fever and say you will sell at a sacrifice and come to this Territory! If you should you may expect to pay from $40.00 to $75.00 an acre for wild land near a market, and for improved lands with water privileges from $100.00 to $200.00, or even $300.00 an acre, near the city of Phoenix. You must have money to get a footing. You may get land low if you go back to the deserts, and risk the uncertain prospect of irrigation. How can you live in a desert where you can not produce a white bean until the government puts in permanent dams and ditches? There is danger of the breaking of dams and the washing out of ditches.

Would you like to be burnt brown for four months in the year?

Would you like drinking water that tastes like medicine?

Would you like to hear that the water is coming into your ditch and have to stay up all night and irrigate, or worse, learn that the dam has gone out, or the ditch given out and realize that your beautiful fields might be transformed into a desert before the damage would be repaired?

We have the bitter with the sweet every place on this sin-cursed earth! It will be so until "the Sun of Righteousness arise, with healing in his wings."

May 18th. Dark clouds over which we have no control may shut out the happiness of passing days, and obscure the longed-for pleasures of coming years as we see event after event like threatening mist gather in the horizon and roll over the zenith and in darkening shadows almost threaten to break "the covenant of day and night."

There came a rift in the clouds today; an hour of sweet happiness in the good accomplished, a ray like the light when "the Sun of Righteousness shall arise with healing in his wings."

The brethren assembled on the bank of an irrigation canal, a few steps from Brother Saylor's house. After a talk at the house, on the things believed and things to do, six willing believers entered into the new covenant by being "baptized into Christ," and secured the hope of all that was gained by his sacrifice by being "baptized into his death, therefore they were buried with him by baptism into death." "The Sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God" had done its work. All honor and glory to the Master, who placed the Sword in the hand of his servant, and taught him how to use it! The following obeyed: Jennie Nichols; Faye Miller; Mary Corbell; Adam Fike and Parley Blake, all young women and men between 15 and 20 years old; and Brother Blake of middle age, the head of a family of obedient believers.

Announcement.

The Twentieth Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus in Iowa, will be held at Waterloo, Ia. Aug. 17-25, inclusive. Programme will appear later.

O. J. ALLARD, Pres.
EVA L. STEARNS, Sec.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Ohio will be held at Springfield beginning Wednesday evening August 7 and continue over the following Sunday. The coming meeting will be the fifth.

The four in the past were replete with all that went to make a success. The speakers with one accord delivered the glad tidings of the Kingdom. Heartfelt prayers were offered. Inspiring songs were sung. Glad greetings and talks of the glories to come were heard from every side. Those who came hungry for the Word, went away full and overflowing. Let us make number five better if possible than the preceding ones. The brethren at Springfield have secured the Fair grounds and buildings for the occasion. The place could only be had for the dates given above.

Those who have met the Springfield brethren know the kindly effort they will make to have things comfortable.

For the reasons given it is needless to urge those who have attended. To those who have not we say "Come and see and hear." The presence of all is needed to plan the Evangelist work for the following year. The programme will be published in due time.

TORCH LAKE BIBLE SCHOOL.

Conditions have arisen which make it necessary to change the time and place of the meeting of the Bible school. It is now decided that the time will be from Thursday July 25 to Aug. 8. The place, the pretty summer resort at Lemon Park—Indian Lake. This pleasant resort is only 2½ miles north of Vicksburg, Mich. From Chicago take Grand Trunk R. R. direct to Lemon park. From South Bend the same. From Grand Rapids change at Vicksburg to Grand Trunk, or change at Kalamazoo to C. K. & S. R. R. for Pavilion. At Pavilion change to Grand Trunk R. R. for Lemon park only 2½ miles west. These resort grounds are 14 miles south of Kalamazoo, 46 miles north of South Bend, 100 east of Chicago. Cottages can be rented very reasonably. When several use one the expense is very light. Meals quite reasonable or board ourselves. If cottages are rented there are beds, pillows, gasoline stove, chairs, tables and dishes, everything for light house keeping. Visitors should bring 2 sheets, 2 pillowslips, a quilt, a tick, straw for ticks close by. There are two boats with each cottage, and splendid fishing.

Above and beyond all that will be the instructive Bible lessons by competent teachers with maps, charts and lesson outlines for every session. Lessons not only intensely interesting during the two weeks but good for all life time. Added to this the evening sermons by able speakers. Altogether will make a feast not to be forgotten. Compared with the educational value for eternal things, the expense will not be worth considering. The school of last year is still bearing good fruit. Let all come who can.

WHEN YOUR TIME IS OUT PLEASE RENEW.

A New Tract.

The Great Divine Healer vs Latter-Day Healers, by Uncle John Foors.

A Tract for the last days. Should be read by every thinking Christian.

Paul 2 Tim. iii. 13. "But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived."

Matt. vii. 21. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works. And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

Brethren, these tracts have gone into many families, both to brethren and people of other denominations, to law infidels, and one Christian Scientist, and all seem to be well pleased with it; but only a few of the brethren have sent to me any help in the way of paying for the tracts, and tracts are very expensive. We are anxious to have more published on different subjects. Please help to send these Pearls out among the people.

Send orders to John Foors, at 2012 W. Cowley Ave. Parsons, Kan. The price is 10 cents each.

Evangelizing Notice.

The N. W. Conference has selected me again as Evangelist. The Brethren have added Arizona, and California to my field of labor. Any church or isolated brethren that want meetings during the Conference year should correspond with me at an early date so I can plan my year's work for this extensive territory which now includes Western Oregon, Washington, California and Arizona.

Hereafter my home will be Scholls, Oregon, and Address, W. L. Skeels, R. D. 1, Laurel, Oregon.

Will all persons interested in the truth, and all isolated brethren within the State with whom we are not acquainted, please write to us? Beloved, we are anxious to locate and correspond with you, that we may impart unto you some spiritual gift.

Syriac New Testament.

[illegible] lation of the Syriac New Testament has just been issued by a Boston publishing house, and we have arranged to supply our readers with the work. The regular price is $2.50, and every Bible student should own this book. It is bound in half leather, and lies open in the hand when being used. The printing is clear and plain, and the paper excellent. We have so arranged with the publishers that we can supply this book for a limited time only at a reduced price, which will enable all who wish this valuable aid to the study of God's Word to possess it. We can offer it now at $2.00 post paid. All who wish to avail themselves of this low rate should do so at once.

A four-page tract in the German language, by Brother M. Joblin of Cleveland, O. Subject, "What Must I do to be Saved?" After getting the opinion of one who understands this language, we have no hesitation in recommending it as simply all right. Get some for your German friends. Send to M. Joblin, 626 Woodland Ave., Cleveland, O. Price 40 cts per 100.

Brethren D. C. Robison has issued a small 16-page tract on the subject "Man is Mortal." It is of convenient size to enclose in an envelop, and can be had for 2 cents each, or 15 cents for 12, or $1.50 for 100 copies. Bro. Robison is so well known as a clear and lucid writer that no words that we can pen would commend his work, more than will the bare announcement of his name. If you are in the mood to do a little missionary work send to Brother Robison at 506 No. Limestone St. Springfield, O. and get a supply of these tracts.

NOTICE.

Information wanted concerning an Evangelist known as Elliud Haynes, who traveled some years ago in Kansas, selling a pamphlet written by himself, entitled "When will Christ come?" Is he living? If so, where? Who has a copy of his book to sell, or loan for a short time? What firm published his book? Information will be thankfully received, and it is of importance.

Account Giving.

There is certainly a great day of accounts coming, when our Lord will reward every one according as her or his work has been.

The great concern of each one should be, What have I done upon which to expect reward? If you should judge yourself, what would your judgment be?

Our talents differ, and each one will be held accountable for the use of such talent, whatever that may be. If you have only one, use that.

[illegible] do? There is no one but who can do that. Will that do any good? Oh, yes. Let me tell you something. Some people have bought several copies of "Pine Woods Bible Class" and loaned them to their friends and neighbors. It being easy and attractive reading, most people will read it. It is bearing fruit already. I have just been told of a man who had become discouraged. He had listened to preachers of different denominations, and found they contradicted each other. He began to drift into infidelity, when a Brother put a copy of Pine Woods Bible Class into his hands. Now in place of infidelity, he is rejoicing in new found light. It would take too much space to tell of other cases. Try this work, and add some stars to your crown.

The Students Text Book is already an assured success, and will be printed after I get home from this present trip.

I desire that all who want it, to send in their names in advance, that I may know how many to print. All you order now, you will be sure to get when printed. The price will be fifty cents.

Yours in the Blessed Hope,
W. H. WILSON.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and our orders will be much more promptly attended.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Gargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restitution of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Gargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Augusta, Ark. Your loving brother.

The Touch of the Unseen.

As feels the flower the sun in heaven,
But sun and radiance never see;
So feel I thee, O God, my God,
Thy faultless noontide hid from me.

As touch the buds the blessed rain,
But rain and rainbow never see;
So touch I thee in bliss or pain,
Thy far vast rainbow veiled from me.

In low estate, I, as the flower,
Have nerves to feel, not eyes to see,
The subtlest in the consciences
Myself and that which toucheth thee.

But naming heart to rain and ray
Turn I in meekest loyalty;
I breathe and move and live in thee,
And drink the ray I cannot see.

The Story of a Happy Christian Life.—No. 15.

And so, Auntie Willard thought the mission of the "Separated" Church was to "watch" and "wait," while making the vision "plain upon tables" to others that they too might see and believe. Have our preachers been doing enough of this "Making of the vision plain upon tables" of late years? Have you young people ever heard a sermon upon the subject? I am afraid not. Yet Habbakuk says "the just shall live by faith." Faith in what? That the fulfillment of the vision will surely come. Then we ought to know more about it. Was not Auntie Willard's life indeed a happy Christian one? Even in her bitter disappointment she found sweetest comfort.

She looked upon the "little flock" of God as separated to obey, and that she and they had naught to live for, but for him who had died for them and had risen again, and whom they were expecting soon to see "coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory." Her faith was her very life. She lived, moved and had her being in God. She walked and talked with him every day; every hour of her life. She was waiting for "The Sweet By and By" to come, to give her beautiful things in a "city which hath foundations, whose Builder and Maker is God." The reproach of Christ was to her greater riches than the treasures of Egypt. To be laughed at was nothing, for Jesus has said "Blessed are ye when men revile you and persecute you and cast out your names as evil." Her daily prayer was for help to live so as not to merit rebuke in this "crooked and perverse generation" among whom it is our blessed privilege to "shine as lights" though we pay full price for the privilege. The words of Jesus were most precious to her as the little flock met from time to time in his name, at her house, with Jesus, the Good Shepherd in their midst.

The first time they commemorated the Lord's Supper there, after their separation from the Baptist Church, the contrast with former occasions was so striking that she almost felt as if she had never communed before; it was like a transfer to the upper room.....She realized the Savior dead and laid upon the table before her: it truly seemed the preparation in the house for burial. But when the dear saints drew around the table and entered into the service their eyes were turned from the sad scene of death to behold their risen Lord, who made himself known to them in the breaking of bread, and their hearts burned within them as they anticipated its speedy fulfillment in the kingdom of God.

Father—whom neither heat, nor cold, nor wet, nor dry, nor weariness, nor rest, could keep from his post at the appointed time,—they considered "their greatest earthly boon," and the Lord forsook them not amid their frequent mistakes, short-coming and sins, but taught them something of what it is to love as brethren; to be pitiful; to be courteous, while patiently waiting for Christ.

My grandfather—James Chaplin, sometimes went in father's place to lead in the meetings at Oswego, and Auntie Willard in an undated letter, apparently written in 1845, speaks of one of these meetings and says, "Truly we were refreshed in the Lord, praise his name! for the Lord did put words of comfort and quickening to us ward into his mouth."

Another letter dated Feb. 23, 1846, describes that year as one of great blessing in which the sweetness of receiving the kingdom of God as a little child was being fully tested. Never before had she felt her utter nothingness before God, and that the Lord alone was to be exalted; he alone being worthy. March, 1848 the question of re-immersion was being discussed by the brethren in Oswego. Brother Greenleaf had preached on the subject but had not handled it skillfully enough to make much impression. It had been spoken of before this, at our house, for I remember Brother Willard coming in from out of doors while the rest were talking about it, and that—catching the word re-immersion, he said, "Re-immersion? re-immersion? no call for it, no call for it." And yet, he was afterwards re-immersed, as were the most if not all of the brethren and sisters;—their former baptism being found on due investigation, not to be valid. In this 1848 letter, Brother Ephraim Miller's name is first mentioned. He was coming to Oswego on business and was expecting to spend a few days in Middlebury.

The meetings at Oswego were still precious ones, in the strength of which Auntie Willard expressed herself as able to go many days. There was no barrier between her and her God through Jesus Christ her Lord, when she went to him with all her heart.

This letter also mentions that some of the Advent brethren in other parts were looking for the coming of the Lord in April 1848. I do not know why they fixed on April. There is nothing in the tyyes that point to the Spring as the time for the Advent; but the prophetic period of 1260 years, during which papal Rome was to persecute the Church of God, if commenced when Phocas, the Emperor of Constantinople decreed in 607! that Pope Boniface III. of Rome should have the headship over all the churches of Christendom, if reckoned on Calendar time would terminate in 1848, the year when Louis Philippe fell, and the year when the Pope had to fly from the Vatican and take refuge in another country. The date was not that on which the Lord was to come, but only one which marked an important stage in the downfall of the Papal power, but doubtless the brethren thought it marked the time of the Savior's appearing.

Somewhere about 1847 or '48, father made a visit to Laporte County, to preach to the brethren in that locality and the meetings were pleasant and profitable ones, both to preacher and hearers. Brother Willard accompanied father to these meetings.

In 1846—the same year in which Brother E. Miller is first mentioned, he came to Kosciusko County in company with E. Hoyt, and held meetings at Oswego, and at grandfather Chaplin's in Washington Township. The charts which they hung up over the great cabin-fireplace were a great curiosity to me. I had never seen anything of the kind before.

I can recall but one of the sermons. It was delivered by Brother Miller from the fourth chapter of Galatians. The part which impressed me most was the contrast he drew between the Jerusalem which now is and which is in bondage with her children, and the Jerusalem which is above, and free and mother of us all.

From Kosciusko County these two evangelists went into Marshall Co., and delivered a series of lectures at the Pisgah Church where a majority of the large congregation of Disciples who met there, accepted the new doctrines set forth, and thus was formed the first Church holding pre-millennial views in Marshall County.

A Report From Workers.

"When thou vowest a vow unto God, defer not to pay it;" "Suffer not thy mouth to cause thy flesh to sin;" "When thou seest the oppression of the poor, and violent perverting of judgment and justice in a province, marvel not at the matter, for he that is higher than the highest regardeth;" "Cast thy bread upon the waters; for thou shalt find it after many days." Let us hear a conclusion of the whole matter, "Fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man." "I saw seven golden candlesticks." Seven candlesticks are the seven churches. Who walketh in the midst of the candlesticks? One clothed with judicial garments. "Out of his mouth went a sharp two-edged sword;" "My words shall judge you in the last day." "Judgment first begin at the house of God, what shall be the end of them that obey not the gospel? The time has come that judgment must begin at the house of God." Punished with everlasting destruction. "As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten; be zealous therefore, Behold I stand at the door and knock." "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne." "Philadelphia, I have set before thee an open door.....Thou hast a little strength, Behold I come quickly. Laodicea, I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot; thou art lukewarm; I will spew thee out.

If any question the fact that we are in the last period of church history as given by our Lord, let the following report that was promised to the readers of THE RESTITUTION be both a warning and a reason why the workers should come together at the time appointed July 25, become hot, touched as it were with coals from off the altar of God, and burning with the fire that burned in Jeremiah's bones, and would not let him stay. Go forth with renewed zeal to awaken a sleeping virgin church that has left her first love, and preach the gospel to every creature.

With nearly two hundred letters before me I am sitting this beautiful first day of the week, at my desk that was purchased and dedicated to the Lord's work.

HOME DEPARTMENT, BIBLE SCHOOL WORK.

From these letters received since our Torch Lake meeting of last year, I give you that which will be of greatest value to all interested.

The Home Department work was started as an experiment to see what work our isolated ones could do that would be of the greatest value to the church and to the cause. I give my report now, as I have promised, and request that all those that have enrolled in this sixty Home Department to report. Let all be present if possible, Home Department Day, Aug 3, 1907, at the appointed place, Indian Lake. Each one should bring or send a report of his study for the year, and also a report of the work he has been able to do in his own Home Class, or with individuals, sending in such amounts as he has in his home, and such other amounts as you may be able to raise for the specific purpose of putting one worker into the field of Bible School work. The amounts that were sent in to Sister Woodward marked Home Department were to be given for this specific purpose, namely, to provide for a fund to place one or more workers in the field of Bible School work the coming year. All that was not marked Home Department was to go into the general Bible School fund for general expenses. Such as have been named or will be decided upon at our Bible School Association meeting. The plan adopted for this year, by the associated workers last August at Torch Lake, was the plan that made that meeting possible, with small funds to begin the work, that work needs thousands of United States dollars, and several thousand of the back sliding dollars of the Church of God to do the work in this department of church work. The plans have all been published. How much do I know of the plans outlined for the coming session? The plan of work was given very soon after the Torch Lake meeting. All necessary instructions to carry out this plan, were given through the paper very early, so that there would be no delay at the end of the season, when work comes thick and fast.

To provide for the attendance of Evangelists, pastors, and such as are able to take an active part in the work, each State was requested to appoint one delegate to represent the state; and it was recommended that each separate church appoint a delegate to attend the meeting and to plan the work for the coming year. As soon as such appointments were made to report to the secretary or general superintendent so that the work might not be delayed and each would have sufficient time to prepare. Each person to bear his own expenses unless sent as a delegate, in such case, the church or Conference to provide for their own delegate.

Every member of the church was to have the privilege of active service in this department of the church work. The work of preparing the program for this meeting was given to the general superintendent. The work of preparing Bible School lessons for the year was given to the secretary, Bro. Neill, and he has faithfully performed the work given him. The officers of the association have gladly given all their services thus far to promote Bible school work, but there is a limit to human endurance. Sister Woodward writes, "I am nearly crazy with all this work on my hands and so little to do with in the treasury." Bro. Neill writes, "I am doing what I can, and about all I can; I never yet saw the man or woman that filled all, and no one else could." I will add to this, and do the work, that should be done with good financial assistance. For myself, the work has become such that I sit night and day at the desk with pen in hand and my eyes nearly blind from constant writing to do the work that has come, because the requests made through the paper were not given attention.

How much do I know of your school plans, etc. Can I consistently boom it? All plans have been given in THE RESTITUTION. This is not my school. This work is not Michigan, Illinois or Ohio work, but a united work for all the members of the Church of God of all the states.

One suggestion given to me in the past week through correspondence will give an idea of how little the plans were understood. Please take notice of the above statement in regard to the coming Institute and convention of Bible School workers.

The plans for the coming year will be decided upon by those in attendance at this conference of workers. One brother writes, "Pick out those whom you know will boom it." I cannot do this. Each member of the church is personally responsible for the work as outlined for this year. All are invited and none excluded. The program has been prepared so that each member can share in the work of both teaching and preaching, and in giving outlined plans for Bible School work for the coming year. Take notice of previous instructions in regard to this matter. Plans for the coming year will be presented and discussed Saturday July 27, 1907. The program for the full session will not be printed but once in the paper on account of space. Two thousand programs are now being printed. No names appear on this program for the reason that I have been trying and have failed, tried again, and failed. Why? Because the workers have said, I will try and be present and have given no positive, I will be present. Do and begin doing. I am trusting the Lord and working.

The program is now being printed and will be ready for those who will assist in advertising, and in teaching the gospel.

A Home Department lesson and Bible School exercise in four parts, one part for each quarter has been prepared to illustrate a simple graded lesson for Home Department work. This booklet has been prepared since I last wrote you, so that the children may have a part in the work of the messenger service of the Lord.

Send one dollar and I will send you programs to send to your friends, and booklets to sell to every one, the net proceeds to go to this work. There are many of our own people who do not take THE RESTITUTION. Send for programs of the convention and send them one, and invite them to come and bring one with them.

Sunday July 28th is Church and Bible School Rally Day. Our motto is, "I invite one, bring one, win one." Do it now. Stop trying! Trying to bring things to pass is poor business. The man who is content with only aspirations to do some thing is a failure. "I'll try," said one, in answer to suggestions that are being urged. No, don't try, do it, do it now. It is not our trying that counts in real results. It is our doing. Success in the Bible School work consists in just two things: character and service—being and doing what we ought. What ever becomes by God's grace, what he ought in character, and does, by God's loving help, what he ought in service, has made a complete success of life. The consciousness of having tried once and failed may be a barrier to our success, but we are liable to settle down on the record of our attempts as evidence of duty done. Jesus says, "He that overcometh shall inherit." The reward to the overcomer in this life is a hundred fold, and in the world to come, life everlasting.

To substitute doing for trying will make our new year's work rich with results. The old proverb has been valuable to me in the work for this year, "Do it now. One thing done is worth a hundred tries."

Sister Read is now preparing two lectures for our work. These worthy workers in the Home Department will make the Bible School work a success, for they have given character to the work and service which God will reward.

Our individuality produces what may be called a reaction on lives, and is that which thrills and enlivens life, that sets up currents through which God works. Men and women delight to behold new faces, to listen to new voices, and to hear the old story in new songs of praise. This individuality is what makes our old Bible ever new, never man spake as Jesus, but every follower of Jesus had the power, when connected with the source of power, to move men to say, How came this man by this wisdom and works, are not these poor, uneducated people? Yet they speak words of truth and their lives prove their faith in God. "Faith without works is dead." My report is this, taken from many sources: A few workers in the church, Bible School, Berean Society and Home Department are doing all they can to spread the glad tidings. The rest are looking for results, and waiting for some one else to do what they ought to be doing. Every man shall receive his own reward for his own labor. God has blessed my labor because I have trusted in him, have been doing the little I could do, trusting each day for strength, just for today.

I will give a few quotations from letters from evangelists and pastors which express the desire of all to be present in Conference, "I would gladly be present and do all I can to aid in the work;" "Am handicapped for lack of funds;" "I cannot afford to pay my own expenses, am dependent on the brethren;" "I cannot beg for myself." For the pastors of churches I would say, give your pastor a chance to meet in Conference with workers from other state with those of like faith, let him have a vacation, and full pay, and he will come back to you with renewed strength, and you will be rewarded because you have made his burden lighter, for the pastor's life is one of continual sacrifice for his people. And after the many calls of the year are met, his family must be remembered, and pinch to make ends meet, and then you wonder why the sermon was not up to your expectations.

I can tell you in two words how to kill a church and hurry it out of sight, because I have the evidence. The same thing will kill the Bible School or Berean Society—"empty seats." Empty seats can never kill the Home Department work. All we need is "Do it now." Work, Pray, Give.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

Dear boys and girls, readers of THE RESTITUTION, and others not yet readers: Here is your chance to show the older ones, that God uses small things to carry forward his great work of saving boys and girls, men and women. He saves you now from temptation, because he has work for you and he can keep your feet and hands busy in the messenger service and helping hands service of the Lord. Your feet will be beautiful in his sight, because he says, "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace and bring glad tidings of good things." Did you ever hear of anything so strange as preaching with your feet? Well, here is the promise to them that wait on the Lord, they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall walk and not be weary, they shall run and not faint, don't you want to wait on the Lord? Be his messengers now, and he will keep you from temptation, and you can do his work now, and in the glad time to come, you will mount up as eagles to meet the Savior when he comes. Every boy and girl can work now for the Bible School and when you come to Indian Lake you will have a part in the program just the same as the older ones and have a service all your own and you can make it as big as the tent will hold and all out doors too. The older ones will have their part too. Come every one.

HARRIET E. HOICE.

The lives of most men are puny and narrow, but it is their own fault. "Be ye also enlarged," says the apostle. Men are willing enough to enlarge their possessions, but do not seem so eager to enlarge themselves. If any one shall open the door to the Lord of glory, who stands all day long knocking, he will come in and enlarge his wisdom, his charity, and his goodness. He shall no longer be a pigmy, but a giant refreshed with new wine. It is life we need, richer, broader, fuller and nobler life. For a long time men and women have been asking, "Is life worth living?" Many lives are not worth living. But the Christian's life is of infinite value to himself and to the world. Behold the lives of God's saints. The life of Moses was not a narrow life. It was a mighty flood, broad and deep, flowing on from generation to generation. The Life of Joseph was not narrow, although he lived in Egypt, a country where the atmosphere was unfavorable to the best life. Daniel lived in Babylon, but he lived a grand life, so pure that even the lions felt that it was too sacred for them to touch. A little thing will make a life small and mean. A little covetousness, a little selfishness, a little sin make a little soul. One may have a big balance in bank and a very little soul. But one who is like Christ will have a big heart. It will be large enough for his kindred, his friends, his neighbors, and strangers. He will have room for those who belong to the same church with him and those who belong to other churches and to no church. He will have room for those who think as he thinks and those who think otherwise; room for those who love him and for those who hate him. He will be large enough to offer a sincere prayer every day for his enemies. A big heart is better than a big bank account or a great name. O for a heart both large and pure, like the heart of our Lord!

Patterson: We seldom, in our moments of questioning try to strike a balance between the good and evil of life. We remember the sorrows: we forget the joys. We blame God when misfortune comes: we forget to praise him for the days of peace and happiness.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a sincere belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Dear Bereans:

Your very welcome letters were received while at Pomona, Cal., and I was very glad indeed, to hear from you, and to know that you are all still able to help in the blessed work for the Master. Although we are isolated from all members of like precious faith, we have our little Sunday School class at home every Sunday morning, but I do miss our meetings. As I do not know your topic for this Sunday, I will write a few words on watchfulness. Matt xxvi 41, Watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation; the spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak. Often we are tempted to do things that we know are wrong, but the Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations, and we must put our trust in him and pray for strength to keep ourselves from the temptations of this life. 1 Cor x 13. There hath no temptation taken you, but such as is common to man; but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it. The Lord has commanded us to take heed to ourselves, that we may not be overcome with the cares of this life, so that day may not come upon us unawares. Watch ye, therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man. 2 Tim iv 5. But watch thou in all things, endure afflictions, do the work of an evangelist, make full proof of thy ministry. We are to be made perfect by suffering, our faith is to be tried, and our patience put to the test; and if we are found faithful unto death, we will receive a crown of life. Watch, therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of Man cometh. We must be on our guard with our lamps all trimmed and burning till we hear the Bridegroom's voice. Are we ready and waiting to go out to meet the Bridegroom when he comes that he may say to us, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Oh, how sad it will be if we are found unprepared; let us strive more earnestly, dear Bereans, to walk in the paths of righteousness, that we may be found among the chosen ones when Jesus comes to receive his own.

So may we all watch and pray,
And the great commands obey,
That the Lord when he shall come,
Will to us proclaim "Well done."

Yours in the blessed hope.
Myrtle Myers.

JESUS AS THE CHRIST.

All the gospels lay great stress on the fact that Jesus was the Christ.

In the first line of the gospel of Mark is, "The beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God. The first verse in Matthew is, "The book of the generation of Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham." Luke says, "Unto you is born this day in the city of David, a Savior which is Christ the Lord." John says, "These things are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Son of God, and that believing ye might have life in his name." And again, the burden of the message in the first sermon on the day of Pentecost was, that "God hath made this same Jesus whom ye have crucified both Lord and Christ."

Many persons have been perplexed in their minds concerning the conception of Jesus as the Christ, and have found it difficult to have much interest in the idea. The Christ, or Messiah, is a Jewish conception, and people are very impatient of having their religion explained in language that properly speaking might seem to be intelligible only to Jews. But Jesus himself thought of himself in this way, and that is why it is of so much importance to us. At first, indeed he did not speak of himself as the Christ. He did not go about pompously proclaiming, "I am the Christ, I am he that is come to fulfill all the promises of God." The greatest character the world has ever known, was most modest, and unassuming. Up to a certain stage of his ministry he had not told even his disciples who he was, it was God who disclosed it. Matt xvi 17. He had lived in their presence, he had spoken the words God had given him to speak, and had done the works given him to do, and thus by close association in the relation of Master and disciple they had revealed to them his wonderful identity by the Spirit of God that was in him.

When the fulness of time for this purpose had come, he said to his disciples one day, "Whom do men say that I am?" They told him the various reports current about him among the people, who felt that he was a man come from God, a great person, and yet in the minds of the masses, Elijah, or John the Baptist risen from the dead, or Jeremiah or one of the old prophets. They could name other people side by side with Jesus, just as many who claim to be "thinkers" do today. One of the great studies of the past years has been what scientific people call, "The study of comparative religions," and in some of our theological schools and colleges of America and other countries, the widest possible scope has been given to the idea that Christ is only one of many of great characters who have had an uplifting influence upon mankind, and as our dear young Bereans go out into life, and the many false teachings and theories of men meet them at every turn, they will find none more insidious than the horde of lions which seem to increase in number with the years, which have a tendency to belittle the Christ. Now these guesses of the people did not satisfy Jesus, and he pointedly said to the twelve, "But whom say ye that I am?" Simon Peter, who was nearly always spokesman for the company, answered, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." And this is the fundamental truth of the Christian religion, that Jesus is not one of a class, he is not to be compared with any other man who has ever come to earth—with John the Baptist, or with Elijah, or with other founders of religions. He is a solitary One, an incomparable One, the King, the Son of God.

When Peter made this statement the mind and heart of Jesus were moved to their depths. He had now, in the minds of these men the foundation for the new people of God; not like the old Israel which could fail; "my church" means "my Israel" which is to be built upon the fact just now declared by Peter, that Jesus is indeed the Christ, the Son of God, and the church built upon that foundation will be able to overcome the gates of death and hell.

The Jews were quite willing to believe in the Christ, but they filled the term the Christ with meaning out of their own selfish imagination and national pride. But in his teaching one point was made very clear, and that was that the path to his kingship was one of cruel suffering, and even death; and this was what the Jews, and even the twelve, as yet, could not understand. While the Jews put into the name Christ and Messiah, their own meaning, taking bits from the second Psalm, about breaking the nations in pieces like a potter's vessel; passages from the ninth of Isaiah, or the eighty-ninth Psalm, they passed over entirely the forty-second and fifty-third of Isaiah, which tell of his meekness in suffering. But Jesus kept all these prophecies in mind; he saw that the will and purpose of God for him was in all these, and he was obedient unto death. Nothing less and else was to be the Lord's Christ. And according to our measure, is the cup of suffering, and of future glory. The disciple is not above his Lord. As his followers, without the testing and the pain we cannot be proved worthy of an inheritance with our King. But it is so hard for human hearts to understand sometimes; we some how cannot associate trials, heart-breaks and disappointments with kingship and glory. If God were to always give us our own way, and make everything full of sunshine at all times, instead of now and then a disappointment and days of sorrow and suffering, we could see God's love, and while we are young in the race it all seems such a mystery. But as life unfolds, we see more clearly God's wise purpose in sending suffering as well as joy. For if we suffer, we shall also reign with him, if our suffering is the result of loyalty to God or patience in affliction, and we learn in time as Paul writes, to joy in tribulation, knowing that it works out in our character those qualities that will fit us for entrance into his kingdom and glory.

Now you will sometimes find in books the assertion that Jesus did not claim to be the Christ, that only the disciples believed this, that Jesus himself disclaimed all such fantastical ideas. But that this is not true is made certain by three facts recorded in Scripture. One is the triumphal entry into Jerusalem a thing arranged by Jesus himself, and who rode into Jerusalem on the ass's colt that he might fulfill the prophecy, Behold, thy King cometh unto thee meek and victorious. Zech ix 9.

The second fact is the answer of Jesus to the high priest when he asked him, "Art thou King of the Jews?" He said, "I am;" and ye shall see the Son of Man seated on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven.

The third, is his accusation on the cross, "This is the King of the Jews." These facts taken alone would show that Jesus loyally claimed his right to Kingship when time and place called for such confession, and that God's promises are all fulfilled in him.

There is a beautiful expression of Paul's which gives us a true conception of what Jesus the Christ really is. He said, How many things so ever are the promises of God, in him is the yea. 2 Cor i 20.

God has given us many promises. He gave many promises in the Old Testament; many promises through the prophets and the institutions of Israel. He has given us promises in the very constitution of our nature, and all these, every inspiration of the heart implanted in it by God; everything that God has bidden man hope for, all the longing of the human soul after a perfect life—a divine life, all these are "yea" in Christ, it means all this to the Christian heart. To the world the final triumph of Christ is the triumph of humanity. It is through this Person that all the countless blessings are to be bestowed on the race at his appearing when his kingdom is established on the earth.

He came to "seek and to save that which was lost;" to forgive sin; to relieve the distress of peoples and to remove the curse from a groaning creation; to put an end to all that is vile and cruel and unjust. Then will be given to all hearts rest and peace, after the turmoil of ages. The misery and maladjustment of our social, industrial and national life will be brought to order and harmony. There will be no more pain, disease nor death—neither sorrow nor crying, and this weary old earth will at last rejoice in a full knowledge and realization of the true meaning of that Sovereign name, Jesus the Christ.

Emma L. Smith.

Dear Bereans:

As I have been asked to write an article for our column, I will use Love as a subject, as I think there is nothing more important than love in a Christian life, for without love we would have been lost. For we read in John iii 16, "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

Again in Rom v 8, "But God commendeth his love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." For as God so loved us that he gave his Son for us, and Christ suffered so in redeeming us, shouldn't we in return love them? And if we love them we should show our love in obeying God. Jesus said in John xiv 21, "He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me; and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him." After he has manifested himself to us in the 23rd verse, "If a man love me, he will keep my words; and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him." With such companions abiding with us, and manifested in us, with such love about us we are ready to fight life's battles. Now if we keep God's commandments we love one another. Christ showed this love when he gave himself a ransom for us. And we find this love in a true Christian home, especially in a mother. God surely blesses a home with a mother for that is the nearest type of love to Christ that we have. For God is a forgiving one, and a loving mother will always forgive.

Yours striving to keep the love of God.

George Clayton.

From the Salem Church unto the Church of God in Cleveland, Ohio:

Unto you that have obtained like precious faith with us, grace and peace be multiplied through the knowledge of God and of Jesus our Lord. To you whom we love in the truth, we extend Christian greeting. We believe it a source of pleasure to each of us to hear that we are still striving to keep the commandments of God, and walk in his statutes praying that we may love him more and serve him better. We are striving to continue steadfast in the faith, grounded and settled, rooted and built up in him, walking worthy of the Lord, being fruitful in every good work and increasing in the knowledge of God who hath delivered us from the power of darkness and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son, in whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins. Oh, what a blessed privilege it is to know God and his Son Christ Jesus, by having become enlightened by the gospel, and having put on the all-saving name, we become children of God and of the household of faith. No wonder John says, Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we should be called sons of God. How exalted the position to which we are called, and how earnestly we should endeavor to give the best there is in us in his service, and even then we are unprofitable servants, for we have done only that which was our duty to do. How often we do the things we ought not, and leave undone the things we ought to do. Truly our heavenly Father is a God of love, and full of tender mercy toward us, and if we would always keep in memory that we are a peculiar people that should show forth the praises of him who called us out of darkness into his marvelous light, it would help us to walk more worthy of him who has called us to glory and virtue. Dearly beloved, we are nearer home than when we first believed, and soon Jesus will come and take unto himself his bride, and she will be forever with him, and will sit with him on his throne, and be given power and honor and glory, and reign victoriously with him over all the earth. How could we help cry with John, Come Lord Jesus, and come quickly. May we take to ourselves the council of Jude, who says, Beloved, building yourselves up in your most holy faith, keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life. May this be our exhortation to each other until finally we are found of him in peace without spot and blameless. Unto him who is able to keep us from falling, be glory and majesty for evermore.

Bro. Underwood:

The fifth Annual Conference of the Church of God of Ohio, will be held in Springfield, Ohio, beginning on Wednesday, Aug. 7, and will continue over the following Sunday. The meetings will be held at the fair grounds, and the meals will be served on the ground at fifteen cents each, and sleeping quarters will also be found on the grounds, as the church of Springfield will provide cots for the visitors, and would like the brethren and sisters to bring their own towels and such toilet articles as they need, as it will be more convenient. Hoping this will bring out many of the brethren and sisters from every church as we want this to be a real good Conference. Please let me know how many will come and the time and one road you expect to come on and there will be some one at the depot to meet you as we want every one that can possibly come to be here.

To Overcome.

What are we to overcome? All things that pertain to the flesh. Our blessed Savior said, "He that overcometh, to him will I grant to sit down on my Father's throne, as I have overcome and am set down on my Father's throne." Cheering thought! Precious promise! If, then, we are persecuted and scoffed at because of the belief of the glorious gospel of the kingdom, let us bear it with patience, showing that by the love of God shed abroad in our hearts we may overcome, through trust in him.

Brethren, avenge not yourselves, for "Vengeance is mine, I will repay, saith the Lord."

But is there anything greater to overcome than ourselves? Surely not. Each day, each hour, each moment, we have to keep watch over our thoughts, our words, our actions, for when we would do good, evil is present with us but if we walk in the straight and narrow way, neither turning to the right nor the left, pressing forward to the mark of the prize of our high calling which is in Christ Jesus, we shall be more than conquerors, and shall have overcome, having a right to an entrance into the kingdom of God, being an heir, with his Son, of the promised possession. To this end may we all look forward, that we may see the King in his beauty, and enjoy his presence forevermore.—M. E. Steele.

Love the Bible.

When you open the Bible, never forget that it is the Word of God. That he is as really speaking to you there, as he spoke with Moses on the Mount. As you read, let Scripture explain Scripture; and use the more easy portions to shed light upon the more deep and difficult. Never be satisfied with merely skimming the surface of the Bible. You are to search the Scriptures. "Plough into the Bible," was the saying of a wise and good man.

David often tells how he stood in awe of God's Word; and so of many other of the saints and holy men of old.

It is said of King Edward VI. of England, that once, when quite young, he could not reach to some book, and an attendant put down a large Bible that he might stand on it to reach up. But the king refused reverently, and rebuked him for the careless disrespect shown to the Word of God. There may sometimes be outward respect without inward piety; but in his case we know it arose from real love of the truth, and honor to the Author of the book.

In Midst of Changing Scenes.

How many, many things there are to engross one's time, thought, attention and energy just now.

Things social, political, church-wise—business interests, home affairs—matters local, and those of world-wide interest. How they press themselves upon us like succeeding billows—wave upon wave—often threatening to overwhelm

It requires sturdy nerve and fibre to stand amid the wild commotion; it needs superhuman strength.

Nothing short of Divine help—imparted strength from on high—will enable us to stand amid these last day perils.

How trivial—as we look back upon past experience—do many things now seem which once agitated and filled the minds of the people for a time to the exclusion of everything else as the great all in all.

Just as trivial and empty will many other things soon appear which rivet the attention of multitudes today as matters of transcendent interest.—C. C. Barker.

Do Not Wait to be Twice Asked.

One great secret of success lies in a willingness to do the work before one when duty demands that it be performed. When to-morrow becomes an argument, it leads to shirking, and, at length, to evasion. The individual who makes to-day equal to the duties it brings, and earnestly, cheerfully takes up the work before him, is on the way to zealous activity and a life of usefulness.

The grandest and noblest things lie along the pathway in life bounded by purity and truth and earnest devotion to the right. In this way of beauty and peace there can be no failure, if only we determine to act at the dictation of duty.

Do not wait to be asked twice, but go forward to the work that appears. In that is usefulness; in that is success.

Obituary.

Died at Gladbrook, Ia., Mrs. Ida May Baker, June 22, 1907, aged 37 years, 14 days. Brother Mark Baker and family had recently returned from Kansas. Sister Baker's health had been poor for some time, and having taken the measles the disease proved too much for her in her weakened condition. She was baptized about 15 years ago by the writer and was a member of the congregation at Park Hill. Her life work is done. She was a faithful wife and a devoted mother. She sleeps in the Rodger Hill Cemetery, near Gladbrook.

By request Gal ii 20 and Phil iii 20, 21, were used in the funeral discourse, and the following points briefly presented to the living: 1 Christ living in us; 2 The present life a life of faith; 3 He loved me; 4 He gave himself for me; 5 The effect this had on Paul and should have upon us; 6, The heavenly conversation—what it is, and the character necessary to become a member of that commonwealth; 7 We look for the Savior (Life Giver); 8 The great and final change (when the Life Giver returns) of both living and dead.

A. J. Eychaner.

North Salem, Indiana.

Spoke twice at North Salem yesterday, June 7th. Two came forward for baptism: Flossie Logan, daughter of Leonard Logan, and Lottie, daughter of Gideon Logan. The former is in a poor state of health, but hopeful of recovery. She obeyed under difficulties, being weak from disease and from an operation performed at the hospital in South Bend, Ind., a few months ago. She had been anxious concerning this duty for several months, but was too weak to attend to it earlier. May these two sisters starting so young in life prove faithful to their Christian profession to the end, and be saved in God's everlasting kingdom is the prayer of the household of faith.

Live Your Religion.

A doctrine lived is more beautiful than a doctrine preached, says a writer in the Moravian. Jesus taught his disciples to forgive men their trespasses, and that was beautiful; but when upon the cross he prayed, "Father forgive them for they know not what they do," that was sublime. If we are not all called to preach, we are at least called to adorn the doctrine of God our Savior in all things, and that is better than mere preaching.

God helps us in our prayers, but he does so in proportion as we admit his aid in the rest of our life. We cannot pray as we ought, unless we live as we ought. Our prayers will partake of our other infirmities. We cannot at once collect ourselves and become other men in the presence of God from what we were just before.—Dr. Pusey.

Our Helping Fund

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

When you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "The Restitution," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and send that.

Poetry.

My Mother.

She gave the best years of her life
With joy for me,
And robbed herself with loving heart
Unstintingly.

For me with willing hands she toiled
From day to day.
For me she prayed when headstrong youth
Would have its way.

Her gentle arms, my cradle once,
Are weary now;
And time has set the seal of care
Upon her brow.

And, though no other eyes than mine
Their morning trace,
I read my history in the lines
Of her dear face.

And mid his gems, who showers gifts
As shining sand,
I count her days as pearls that fall
From his kind hands.

In and Out of the Depths.

A TRUE STORY.

He was only a poor, thinly clad little lad, not more than seven or eight years old, a hungry, tired, discouraged little lad, weary, wet and footsore. He had a bundle of five or six papers under his ragged sleeve which he in a timid way was trying to sell, but nobody would buy. The snow with a drizzling rain, came down in big flakes upon the dirty streets, and men and women hurried by, with collars turned up and hats pulled down and skirts held unblushingly high, to get in from the slush, the snow and the rain. But the little boy stood out in it all, vainly crying his papers until his poor little heart went lower and slower, and he still with his bundle under his arm. Even had he sold the lot he would have only made two or three cents profit; yet, to him, those two or three cents were bigger than a hundred thousand dollars to a Rockefeller or a Carnagie. Still he heroically yet despairingly paced up and down the nasty sidewalks, soliciting every passerby but his piping voice was unheeded and his heart went lower. He stopped occasionly as he passed the big houses to look into their brilliantly lighted windows, at the happy faces of men, women and children, seemingly so comfortable, so happy, and withal, so well fed, and he so desperately hungry. And his poor little heart went further down. He thought as only a child thinks, and the tears ran down his wan cheeks in view of a hard bed, cross words, and nothing to eat but a crust of bread and a cup of water since morning. And the time passed weary and dreary and slow, until at last the lights in the big houses went out one by one, only to add to the dismal gloom of the streets, and the misty rain and the snow kept coming down. The papers under his arm grew damper and harder to sell, possible purchasers vanished, and the thin legs grew tired. The light went out of his eyes, the lids grew heavy and his heart beat a rythm so slow as to almost stop. Utterly exhausted, wet, cold, so discouraged, and oh! so ravenously hungry that his little stomach ached, he put the precious but worthless bundle of papers under his jacket and laid down in the shadow of the marble steps of one of the fine houses he had seen and fell asleep.

Eleven o'clock had passed and yet the weary boy slept on. He dreamed of something good to eat; of fine clothes, of comfort, happiness and dear warm friends; that he was no longer a ragged urchin selling papers and out in the storm, but was loved and petted; and the future looked bright and glorious to him, (Do dreams sometimes fortell?) while the boy in his dreams was in elysium, a large, portly, well dressed man came along with hat well pulled down and hands thrust deeply into his fur-lined overcoat pockets, softly whistling a snatch of "Lead, Kindly Light". He stopped at the big marble steps and began to ascend, when his eye fell upon the curious bundle lying in the shadow below. He halted and looked sharply to make sure he was not mistaken. Convinced he was not, he went down and with a gentle touch of his foot, aroused the sleeper.

"Why what on earth are you doing here, my lad?" said he. The boy so suddenly awakened sat up and rubbing his eyes in the belief that he had fallen into the hands of a "cop", replied:—

"Nuthin!"

"Well, it seems to me," replied the gentleman, "that you were doing something, if nothing more than sleeping out here in the cold and rain! Get up and tell me who you are and why you are here! Its time kids like you were at home and abed hours ago!"

"Please, Sir, I was trying to sell my papers, but I was so tired and hungry that I laid down, and afore I knowed it I went to sleep! I begs pardon, Sir, if I've done wrong, I didn't mean to do wrong!"

"You come along with me!" replied the gentleman, as he began to remount the steps, "I want to see you!"

The boy hesitated. He was frightened, "Come on!" repeated the gentleman half commandingly, yet kindly, "Come up here with me! Don't be afraid!"

The little fellow followed as a beggar would royalty, or a prisoner to receive sentence, for he truly believed he had committed a heinous offense by sleeping under the steps and was about to be punished! But he clambered up and stood behind the gentleman. The latter took out his latch-key and opened the door. Although the blinds were closed so that no light shown through; the brilliancy which shot forth through the open door, nearly paralyzed the boy, and he cried out:

"Please, mister! I ain't fit to go in there! It's not for the likes o' me to go inside a gentleman's house like this. So please let me run along and forget what I've seen."

"Now, Sonny, do'nt you be silly! I know what I am about, so you come right in here with me! I'm the master of this house and you are to be my guest tonight, and maybe my friend," and he held out his broad palm and took the little waif's hand in his own. Together, they entered a back parlor elegantly furnished and brilliantly lighted. A sumptuous repast was spread, awaiting the coming of the master, and a butler stood ready to obey orders. A large bedroom equally well furnished opened off the back parlor and off of this was a luxurious bath-room. The gentleman took his easy chair and said to the lad:—

"Now come here, sonny, and let me see what you look like, and find out who you are."

The boy came toward with his heart beating like a snare drum, but with his hungry eyes on the tempting lunch, for a bit of which he felt that he could undergo almost any punishment. He was wet, dirty and unkempt, and his bundle of papers were still under his jacket, with his bright blue eyes, and well cut features, he modestly stood—as he supposed—in the presence of his judge.

The gentleman looked him over a few moments and a flood of memories seemed to rush over him. He covered his face with his hand as if to collect himself, and, glancing at the boy to re-assure himself, he said to the servant:

"John, take this little friend of mine into the bathroom and see that he has a good wash! And John, go look in the upper left hand drawer of my bureau and you will find one or more little shirts and boy's underwear. Take a set of these to the boy. Then John, look in the lower right hand drawer and you will find some stockings and shoes, and a lot of boys' trousers, a jacket or two, and such other things as boys wear. Tog the little fellow up and bring him to me. Meanwhile tell the cook to prepare something for a half starved boy, and bring it up so he can have it when he comes in from his bath. Be lively now!"

John took the lad, who thought he was going to execution or imprisonment for life, and obeyed the master's orders absolutely. When, later on, he returned with the lad, his own mother would not have known him! He was dressed, his hair neatly combed, and his general appearance that of the son of a gentleman. As he entered the presence of the master of the house, the latter looked him over a few moments, and his face grew white, for before him stood almost the living image of his own lost boy of years ago.

"My boy! My child!" cried he, "Come to me! Come and tell me who you are and who your people are!"

"Why I'm only 'Johnny the Slim,'" answered the lad as he timidly approached the speaker.

"And why do they call you Johnny the Slim?"

"Because sir, you see I am such a thin little feller. They calls me 'Slimmy', for short!"

"Yes, but what is your real, your true name? Tell me that!"

"Why, my mamma, when I see her she says my true, honest name is Charles Woolford, and she calls me Charley. And she says my papa was a gentleman, and was an officer of some kind under the government, and that he has a monument somewhere. He's dead now you know!',

"Well, what was or is your mother's name now?" asked the master eagerly. "What was her name before she knew your father,—before she was married, you know?"

"I dunno!" replied the kid, and then he thought a moment and said:—"Yes! Maybe I do! I almost forgot! A lady came up to buy a paper of me the other day—My! My! but she was swell!—and she sot me if I was "Slimmy," and I said, "Yessum!" Then she looked at me a minit and said:—"I think I know your mother, Sonny, before she was married. Isn't your right name Charley?" she said, and I said, 'Yessum, it was.' Then she said 'Your mamma's name was Georgie Courtland, and she married a man—and a gentleman he was—by the name of Woolford,—Major General Woolford of the United States Army.' Thats about all I know!"

"Georgie Courtland! Georgie Courtland!" exclaimed the gentleman half aloud, and half to himself. "Georgie Courtland! Oh! how well I remember her, would to God I might see her again!" And for a moment he was silent. Then he asked in a voice full of tenderness:—

"Is your mamma still alive my boy?"

"Yes indeedy!" replied he, "An' it was to get something nice for her that I was tryin' to sell my papers. You see mister, she's ailin' and alone, though some swell people calls on her off and on, but she don't say nuthin' and they don't know how hard up she is sometimes for money since papa died."

"Well, why ain't you with her?"

"Because, when my papa died just before I was born, some relations of some kind came in and said as how they would take me, cause they thought she was going to die, and I guess she thought so too, for she gave me to them, and I'm with them yet. I'd rather go back to her, if I could but they won't let me!"

At this juncture the butler came in with everything a boy could eat. He placed it on the table and the master said: "Fall to, Sonny!" and "Sonny" fell to with an appetite no rich man ever knew. He ate, until at last he leaned back in a perfect elysium of comfort and satisfaction. The host touched his own lunch lightly, for he was thinking and watching the boy, and as he watched, his heart grew strangely soft and tender. He fancied he could see his own lost boy before him, and the revived love of the father went out to the little waif at the table, and he cried out:

"My boy, my child, come to me! Come and sit upon my knee for I wish to talk with you and know you better."

The boy obeyed, yet hesitatingly. The thing was all so new, so strange and so beyond anything he had ever dared to dream of, except, perhaps in his dream under the big steps. As the gentleman placed his arm gently around the lad, he said:—

"My boy, do you know anything about God?"

"Yessir! Some but not much. I've heard my mamma speak about him once or twice when I've run in on the sly to see her. But I have never seen Him myself!"

"No doubt about that!" replied the gentleman. "But maybe you will see Him some day!" Then he added, "Do you know anything about Jesus, the Christ, His Son, who came into the world to save you and me?"

"Yessir! I've heard about Him, too, but not very much," replied the boy.

"Do you know the Lord's prayer, the prayer that Jesus taught us to say?"

"I don't know as I does, sir, because you see, Mister, the folks I live with don't care much about them things. Anyway they never told me about them."

"Well, my boy—for you are mine from now on—I'll teach you that beautiful prayer, and I want you to say it every night before you go to sleep. Will you do it?"

"I'll try, Sir, if I can remember it, and don't forget it," replied the lad earnestly.

"Very well! You will not forget it I know. Now say after me, and remember every word!

"'Our Father, who art in Heaven,'

"Your Father—"

"No! No! my boy! say 'Our Father', not your Father," corrected the gentleman.

"But you see, mister, He isn't my father! My father is dead and got a monument, and I don't see how I can have two fathers?" reasoned the boy.

"Yes, I know my son, that you have no earthly father, but you and I have a Father in heaven,—don't you remember I said 'Our Father who art in heaven?" The idea was a little too deep for him, and he puckered his lips for a low whistle, but refrained and sat quietly upon the knee of his benefactor. He was perplexed. He couldn't understand it. It was an unheard of thing to him, a question he could not solve, and he sat with his eyes on the carpet and thought. Lifting his blue eyes shyly to those of his friend and placing a hand lovingly on his cheek in childlike confidence and in a newborn love "which casteth out all fear," he said:—"Why, Mister, if God is your Father and mine too, we are brothers! Ain't we?"

The tenderness of the caress, and the logical solution of their relationship so surprised the man that for a few moment he could make no reply. Hugging the little fellow still closer to his breast, he chokingly said:

"Yes, my boy, Yes! we are brothers! I am your big brother and you are my little brother. And it is the big brother's duty to look after his little brother, and this I shall do as long as we two live. So you must come to me with all your little troubles. Tell me everything! Be manly, be true and never tell an untruth. Remember always that you are the son of a gentleman, and be a gentleman always yourself. Do you understand me?"

"Yes, sir, I think I do, and I will try to do as you tell me!"

"And now my boy you are no longer "Johnny, the Slim", but Charles,—you will be "Charley" to me, for the name is very dear to me!" and his eyes moistened. "But, Mister!" broke in the lad. "I've told you my name. Now what is yours, so that I may know what to call you when I see you?"

"Quite right, Charley! My name is Charles Howard," replied the gentleman, "And Charles was the name of my boy who would have been just about your age had he lived. But he is gone now, and I believe that 'our Father' has graciously sent you to me in his stead. I shall therefore be not only your big brother, but your father as also."

"Oh! I'm so glad, I'm so glad!" cried the boy with tears of blessed joy in his blue eyes, "Oh! I'm so glad!" Then, throwing his arms about Mr. Howard's neck, he asked:

"And may I call you papa,—father?"

The big tears started in Howard's eyes as he tenderly replied:

"You may my boy—my son, for I shall be a father to you as long as I live, for "The "Light" has led me kindly!" " and placing his right hand upon the boy's head, he reverently said, "God bless you my son!—my new son!"

The clock had passed the hour of midnight and was close to one, and the two sat in a silence too sweet to be broken. Both were happy,—one in the recovery of a lost love, the other in the discovery of a new love never known. At last, the blue eyes closed so wearily, yet so happily, and in perfect peace, and he slept on the breast of his new found father.

The butler came in on his last round through the house, and thus he found the two, but the master was not asleep, but wondering and dreaming.

"John!" said he softly, "take my son and lay him on my bed and I will lie on the lounge."

Nearly speechless with surprise at the command, and at the new relationship made known, the servant obeyed. And the boy's transfer from his bed under the big marble steps in the snow and the rain, to the downy couch he rested upon, was as from earth to paradise.

* * * *

The years went by as they always do, and when at last Charles Howard, banker, philantrophist and Christian gentleman was laid to rest, the sincerest mourners at his bier were his sweet wife, Georgie Woolford—that was—and his adopted son, the Hon. Charles Howard Woolford then a Senator of the United States.

LESSON FOR SUNDAY JULY 14.

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS,—DUTIES TOWARD MAN. EX. XX. 12-17.

Golden Text. Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. Lev xix 18.

This is a continuation of the last lesson. Observe the golden text. Can any one love to order? Can any one love because commanded to do so? No, not even if God gave the command. No one can love by law. But when any one learns the way of life, "The things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ," Acts viii 12. And above—from the heart—that form of doctrine. Rom vi 16. When they realize that they are "Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ, Titus ii 13, they are than anxious—very anxious that their neighbor—any one is their neighbor—should know this great salvation, they endeavor, with what ability they have, to tell the good news. Thus, they from the heart, by the love of God shed there, Rom v 5, love their neighbor as themselves, and not because it is one of the ten commandments. The promise is—from Jesus, through the gospel, He that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved. Mark xvi 16. Blessed promise.

By reading over the lesson text—without stopping to think—we might wonder why God thought it necessary to give such commandments. Any self respecting man, or woman, with a good moral basis, would know, and would do the things commanded in these verses, without being commanded.

In Israel then—as in America now, and elsewhere there were thousands who had little or no moral basis. Their motto was—unwritten perhaps—but none the less their motto and mistake, "The world owes me a living." Instead of the motto, The world expects, and has a right to expect, from me honest and square dealing. These thousands, wilfully ignorant, were ever ready, at every opportunity to do all that is forbidden in this lesson. The law placed them under direct responsibility to God. By their disobedience he could judge, and dispose of them. Heb ii 2. This class did not die out with the advance and spread of civilization. Just now they spring up and flourish as the grass. Psa xlii 7. We have them on every hand as foretold by Paul. 2 Tim iii 1-5.

Lesson text 12. This is equally binding on the parents and children. The father and mother should be worthy of honor. The children are specially commanded to honor their parents. In doing this they honor themselves, and become honorable among men, and have God's promise of reward. This commandment was made useless by the Scribes and Pharisees. Matt xv 3-6. There are none more worthy of contempt than those who disregard this command.

13 This command has long been broken, and each year adds to the reckless—and in many cases causeless taking of life—killing.

14 This was the crowning sin of Sodom. Gen xix. God has spoken against it by nearly every one of his servants, also by his Son. Such cannot inherit the kingdom of God. 1 Cor vi 9, 10.

15 There never was, and never will be a place for a thief. He cannot have a place in the kingdom of God, and will not be allowed to live after the kingdom is established. Zech v 3.

16 False witness is only offered by the meanest, and the cowardly. God has declared they shall perish. Pro. xxi 28. Many such testified against the Lord Jesus. Matt xxvi 10. They are like rank weeds in a garden.

17 The Lord abhors the covetous. Psa x 3. Jesus warned his disciples to beware of it. Luke xii 15. Covetousness is idolatry, of the earth earthy, and an object of God's wrath. Col iii 5, 6. The victims of covetousness—a covetous man or woman has no abiding place. He that hateth covetousness shall prolong his days. Pro xxviii 16.

Next lesson—the golden calf. Ex xxxii 1-8; xxx 35.

O. J. ALLARD, Pres.
EVA L. STEARNS, Sec.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Ohio will be held at Springfield beginning Wednesday evening August 7 and continue over the following Sunday. The coming meeting will be the fifth.

The four in the past were replete with all that goes to make a success. The speakers with one accord delivered the glad tidings of the Kingdom. Heartfelt prayers were offered. Inspiring songs were sung. Glad greetings and talks of the glories to come were heard from every side. Those who came hungry for the Word, went away full and overflowing. Let us make number five better if possible than the preceding ones. The brethren at Springfield have secured the Fair grounds and buildings for the occasion. The place could only be had for the dates given above.

Those who have met the Springfield brethren know the kindly effort they will make to have things comfortable.

For the reasons given it is needless to urge those who have attended. To those who have not we say "Come and see and hear." The presence of all is needed to plan the Evangelist work for the following year. The programme will be published in due time.

Conditions have arisen which make it necessary to change the time and place of the meeting of the Bible school. It is now decided that the time will be from Thursday July 25 to Aug. 8. The place, the pretty summer resort at Lemon Park—Indian Lake. This pleasant resort is only 2½ miles north of Vicksburg, Mich. From Chicago take Grand Trunk R. R. direct to Lemon park. From South Bend the same. From Grand Rapids change at Vicksburg to Grand Trunk, or change at Kalamazoo to C. K. & S. R. R. for Pavilion. At Pavilion change to Grand Trunk R. R. for Lemon park only 2½ miles west. These resort grounds are 14 miles south of Kalamazoo, 46 miles north of South Bend, 100 east of Chicago. Cottages can be rented very reasonably. When several use one the expense is very light. Meals quite reasonable or board ourselves. If cottages are rented there are beds, pillows, gasoline stove, chairs, tables and dishes, everything for light house keeping. Visitors should bring 2 sheets, 2 pillowslips, a quilt, a tick, straw for ticks close by. There are two boats with each cottage, and splendid fishing.

Above and beyond all that will be the instructive Bible lessons by competent teachers with maps, charts and lesson outlines for every session. Lessons not only intensely interesting during the two weeks but good for all life time. Added to this the evening sermons by able speakers. Altogether will make a feast not to be forgotten. Compared with the educational value for eternal things, the expense will not be worth considering. The school of last year is still bearing good fruit. Let all come who can.

A New Tract.

The Great Divine Healer vs Latter-Day Healers, by Uncle John Foore.

A Tract for the last days. Should be read by every thinking Christian.

Paul 2 Tim. iii. 13. "But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived."

Matt. vii. 21. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works. And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

Brethren, these tracts have gone into many families, both to brethren and people of other denominations, a few infidels, and one Christian Scientist, and all seem to be well pleased with it; but only a few of the brethren have sent to me any help in the way of paying for the tracts, and tracts are very expensive. We are anxious to have more published on different subjects. Please help to send these Pearls out among the people.

Send orders to John Foore, 21 2012 W. Corning Ave, Parsons, Kan. The price is 10 cents each.

Evangelizing Notice.

The N. W. Conference has selected me again as Evangelist. The Brethren have added Arizona, and California to my field of labor. Any church or isolated brethren that want meetings during the Conference year should correspond with me at an early date as I can plan my year's work for this extensive territory which now includes western Oregon, Washington, California and Arizona.

Hereafter my home will be Scholls, Oregon, and Address, W. L. Rhoda, R. D. 1, Laurel, Oregon.

Will all persons interested in the truth, and all isolated brethren within the State with whom we are not acquainted, please write to us? Beloved, we are anxious to locate and correspond with you, that we may impart unto you some spiritual gift.

Address S. J. Lindsay, State Evangelist, or Robt. G. Rogers, Box G, Oregon, Ill.

ILLINOIS BIBLE SCHOOL.

The Annual Bible School for Illinois will convene at Oregon, Ill., August 12-21. Brother R. G. Huggins has been requested to prepare an outline of study on the nature, office, and work of the Holy Spirit, a task for which we deem him well qualified. The other work of the school will be about the same as in former years. Our evenings will be occupied in about the same manner as they were last year. Already many have signified their intention to be present. When you read this, please write me whether you will attend, and send me the names of others who may be induced to attend. Our school is no longer an experiment, but an established instrument for good. Come thou with us and we will do thee good. Address me at Oregon, Ill.

Syriac New Testament.

A new edition of Murdock's Translation of the Syriac New Testament has just been issued by a Boston publishing house, and we have arranged to supply our readers with the work. The regular price is $2.50, and every Bible student should own this book. It is bound in half leather, and lies open in the hand when being used. The printing is clear and plain, and the paper excellent. We have so arranged with the publishers that we can supply this book for a limited time only at a reduced price, which will enable all who wish this valuable aid to the study of God's Word to possess it. We can offer it now at $2.00 post paid. All who wish to avail themselves of this low rate should do so at once.

NOTICE.

Information wanted concerning an Evangelist known as Blind Haynes, who traveled some years ago in Kansas, selling a pamphlet written by himself, entitled "When will Christ come?" Is he living? If so, where? Who has a copy of his book to sell, or loan for a short time? What firm published his book? Information will be thankfully received, and it is of importance.

Account Giving.

There is certainly a great day of accounts coming, when our Lord will reward every one according as her or his work has been.

The great concern of each one should be, What have I done upon which to expect reward? If you should judge yourself, what would your judgment be?

Our talents differ, and each one will be held accountable for the use of such talent, whatever that may be. If you have only one, use that.

Some one says, what can I do? Why you can circulate literature teaching the truth if nothing else. There is no one but who can do that. Will that do any good? Oh, yes. Let me tell you something. Some people have bought several copies of "Pine Woods Bible Class" and lended them to their friends and neighbors. It being easy and attractive reading, most people will read it. It is bearing fruit already. I have just been told of a man who had become discouraged. He had listened to preachers of different denominations, and found they contradicted each other. He began to drift into infidelity, when a Brother put a copy of Pine Woods Bible Class into his hands. Now in place of infidelity, he is rejoicing in new found light. It would take too much space to tell of other cases. Try this work, and add some stars to your crown.

The Students Text Book is already an assured success, and will be printed after I get home from this present trip.

I desire that all who want it, to send in their names in advance, that I may know how many to print. All you order now, you will be sure to get when printed. The price will be fifty cents.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold our selves responsible for the return of manuscript. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the oldest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Br. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief in the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus [illegible] for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

[Selected by Mary A. Woodward.]

Worth While.

It is easy enough to be pleasant
When life flows by like a song;
But the man worth while is the one who will smile
When everything goes dead wrong.

For the test of the heart is trouble,
And it always comes with the years.
And the smile that is worth the praises of earth
Is the smile that shines through tears.

It is easy enough to be prudent
When nothing tempts you to stray,
When without or within no voice of sin
Is luring your soul away.

But it's only a negative virtue
Until it is tried by fire;
And the life that is worth the honor of earth
Is the one that resists desire.

By the cynic, the sad, the fallen,
Who had no strength for the strife,
The world's highway is cumbered today—
They jostle up the hills of life.

But the virtue that conquers passion,
And the sorrow that hides in a smile—
It is these that are worth the homage of earth,
For we find them but once in a while.

The Doctrine of a Future Life, By James Strong, S. T. D, L. L. D., Reviewed. No. 11.

Dr. Strong says (page 105): "Annihilation will not come at our bidding, nor may Gehenna be voted out of existence."

It is strictly true that annihilation will not come at the sinner's or our bidding; but it will, nevertheless, come because God has unequivocally declared that the wicked shall be annihilated, as we shall prove by the pure Word of God. And, it is also true that Gehenna, the valley of Hinnom cannot be voted out of existence; neither can the gehenna—hell of endless misery, for the simple fact that such a hell never was in existence!

Dr. Strong knows with every intelligent person, that no souls are being punished in Gehenna south of Jerusalem, for he has stated contrary to the belief of the popular churches, that they are elsewhere in the regions of infinite space in gloom and with hardly self-consciousness of existence! And so the question arises—where are those immaterial, immortal souls, if not in Gehenna? And we answer nowhere, for such souls do not exist, as we shall prove by the unerring Word of God in due time. But is not Gehenna a symbol of a hell elsewhere? And we answer no, emphatically; for, Gehenna is the imaginary hell. But, it is true that this term is a symbol of the punishment of the wicked; for it is the emblem of death and destruction. It was in Gehenna that the Canaanites offered their children in sacrifice by fire to the idol Moloch. It was there where Senackaribs army of 185,000 men was slain in one night by the angel of the Lord. It was there the inhabitants of Jerusalem cast the offal, carcasses of animals, and malefactors after execution to be consumed by the fire there kept burning, and by the worms that preyed upon the carcasses that the fire did not consume. The prophet Isaiah refers to Gehenna (lxvi 24) as follows: "And ye shall go forth, and look upon the carcasses of them that have transgressed against me; for their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched; and they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh."

It is to the above that Christ refers, Mark ix 42, where he says, "And whosoever shall ensnare one of these little ones that believe in me, it is better, etc. And if thy hand, foot, eye ensnare thee, it is better to cut off, pluck out, and enter into life, or the kingdom of God thus "maimed than to be cast into Gehenna where the worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched." It is certain that if the worms should die, and the fire be quenched, the carcasses would not be consumed and thus destroyed.

Again in conclusion, the doctrine of future life, as given in the Bible, is that the wicked shall be destroyed, and the righteous shall live forever. Dr. Strong says (page 107), Those who refuse to accept the Bible doctrine of everlasting punishment for the wicked have therefore logically to fall back upon the old fashioned assertion of universal salvation at death.

Dr. Strong uses the expression everlasting punishment, which he takes from Matt xxv 46, in the sense of everlasting misery. But this assumption is in plain contradiction of the numerous passages that explicitly declare that the wicked shall perish and be destroyed. And aside from this, the word punishment does not necessarily mean the infliction of suffering, for Noah Webster defines it—The infliction of pain or suffering; the loss or deprivation of liberty by imprisonment for the violation of law. And, so in all human laws, when a person has committed a capital crime and the penalty is death, the great punishment devised is not suffering, but the deprivation of life. So we shall find on investigation that the penalty of the divine law is the loss of life, the second death. For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life [eternal living] through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Then these notable words of Christ, These shall go away into everlasting punishment, simply mean as they stand, an everlasting loss of life; or, as apostle says, Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power. But it is asserted that everlasting destruction means always being destroyed, and this passage is quoted in this sense as a proof text for endless misery in a large volume giving the arguments pro and con of noted men on this subject. But these words of St. Paul are not only thus perverted, but are rejected; for his inspired declaration is absolute destruction for the wicked. Destruction is not preservation in hell. The apostle in speaking of the enemies of the cross of Christ, says Phil iii 18, Whose end is destruction, whose god is their belly. According to this declaration, and contrary to the teaching of the popular churches, the wicked will have an end to their existence, and, as the psalmist also says (xxxix 9, 20): In a little while and the wicked shall not be—shall not exist. The wicked shall perish; and the enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of lambs [an Jewish sitting], they shall consume; into smoke shall they consume away." This is surely a fearful end to the enemies of the Lord.

But we remark further on this noted and important passage, which is the strongest and most relied upon of any to prove endless misery, that Dr. Strong with other theologians and ministers, seeing there is no antithesis between the word punishment and the word life, and knowing there ought to be in such a momentous declaration of Christ, has manufactured one out of whole cloth, and thinks it helps his Master out of his ambiguous language! And so, he substitutes happiness for life, and lo, he has an antithesis that suits his, and the orthodox creed, but we shall show does not correspond with the text in the original.

The Greek word kolagin here rendered punishment is from kolazon, the definition of which is to cut off, as the lopping off of branches, to prune, to restrain, to punish. If the translators had used the first, instead of the last definition as here given, as they should have done, there would have been no occasion for the culpable substitution of such words to make what is deemed so necessary—an antithesis; for the words cut off furnish one, as they are used many times in the Old Testament to mean cut off from life; and that is evidently the true meaning in this passage. So the Diaglott New Testament has it—And these shall go forth to the aionian cutting off; but the righteous to aionian life.

But again, if Christ had really said—and these shall go away into everlasting torment, the torment would cease when the wicked are burned up and destroyed. For the definition of [illegible] everlasting, as given, the [illegible] and Sister Sarah Clark Greek lexicon settles the ques[illegible] and is as follows: Aionic, duration [illegible] finite and infinite, i. e. limited and unlimited] unlimited duration, eternity, age, lifetime, the world, universe. From this definition it is easy to see that the duration depends entirely on to what it is applied; if it be applied to anything that will cease to be, or come to an end as the wicked will, it is limited to that only; but if applied to anything which has no end, as the future life of the righteous, the duration is unlimited and endless. This statement must absolutely apply to what Greenfield says of aionios, the adjective (for any derivative word cannot signify more than its root) which he says:

"Whence aionios, unlimited as to duration; eternal, everlasting."

The common argument adduced from the definition thus given of aionios is on the basis of the substituted antithesis, and not on the true one we have shown to be in the original. So it is asserted that the everlasting misery of the wicked is as long as the everlasting happiness of the righteous, and that therefore the wicked will live forever in misery.

The fallacy of this assertion and argument will be clearly seen by every intelligent unbiased minded person, in the fact that the expression "everlasting happiness" of itself, does not prove that the righteous will live forever. It only proves that they will be happy as long as they live. So "everlasting misery" if applied to the wicked would only show that the misery would last during life. The great difference between these two characters in this connection is that the righteous are promised everlasting life, which Christ says [illegible] passage, and inasmuch as we have shown that the wicked will cease to exist as conscious beings, and that therefore the doctrine of the immortality of the soul is an assumption devoid of truth, we will further show it by putting the common illogical argument on this passage in the syllogistic form, and thus demonstrate its absolute fallacy.

Assumption—the soul is immortal.

Inference—therefore the wicked will have endless misery.

Inference—the wicked will have endless misery, therefore the soul is immortal.

The inference is here founded upon the assumption; then it is attempted to prove the assumption by the inference. This as any logical minded person can see, is reasoning in a circle, and is a begging of the question.

To Be Continued.

The Story of a Happy Christian Life.—No. 16.

"Brother N. M. Catlin of LaPorte County succeeded Brother Miller, as preacher to the brethren in Marshall County and being a strong reasoner and a fluent speaker the members who had embraced the doctrines set forth, became established in the truth," I quote from father's "Reminiscences and Episodes."

Sister A. S. Miller, Brother Ephraim Miller's wife says the first Conference she knows anything about was held in Middlebury she thinks in 1849. It was soon after she and her people became settled in the truth of the unconscious state of the dead and knew none of that faith. She did not attend the Conference herself, but her brother did and was much interested. There was a large gathering of the friends from many points, and "good instructive preaching."

There was also another Conference held at Middlebury in 1850. Sister Miller knows this date to be correct, for she and Brother Miller were married in the winter of 1850, settled in Middlebury in the spring, and the Conference began the last of May and took in the first of June. A large crowd of the friends from various parts of [illegible] became interested [illegible] speaks of this meeting and of being prevented by sickness from attending it. She had hoped to meet mother there.

She also alludes to the recent death of the beloved Sister Dixon of Marshall County, and expresses herself as greatly pained at the sad news. But, "Glory to God," she continues, "the enemy cannot always hold her, for when the Stranger than he comes, he will burst the bonds of death and I trust Sister Dixon, with all the children of God will come forth never to die any more. How animating the thought that if we are the Children of God, we shall then have no sickness, sorrow, pain, nor death and we shall be free from sin, when I contemplate the subject I can cry with John, the Revelator, "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly!"

"Brother Furry of Plymouth had just married Sarah Stanclift, and Brother Higgins, the father of Bro. W. H. Mansfield's first wife, had been holding meetings for a week after [illegible] in the Logan settlement in Marshall County.

I wonder if there had been a Conference there? Sister Catlin does not say, but represents Brother and Sister Higgins as wholly devoted to the service of God, though they had two children and a grand-child at home who had no hope in Christ. Brother and Sister Mansfield, were then living about 13 miles from Kingsbury among some of the brethren. The seventh day, shut-door folks, had just made another visit to Laporte County at the time Sister Catlin wrote, and had "stirred up strife and contention", she "could not think it was of God because of the harsh and denunciatory spirit they manifested, so unlike our Savior in all his teachings." Brother Higgins had taken [illegible] Stronghold—the 14th chapter of Revelations and had proved conclusively that it was still in the future and to be fulfilled when the lamb stands on Mount Zion and "the law shall go forth from Zion and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem."

What a pleasure it is to look over these old letters, written by pioneers in the Advent cause! It makes our hope in the Savior's coming so fresh and new again.

LESSON FOR SUNDAY JULY 28.

THE GOLDEN CALF. EXO. XXXII. 1-8; 30-35.

Golden Text. "Little children keep yourselves from idols." John v. 21.

The last lesson was the last part of the Ten Commandments. Many other commandments were added. The whole together were called "The Law." Deut. iv. 44. God put his name in an angel, gave him great power and sent him to go before Israel. Exo. xxiii. 20-23. The Israelites promised perfect obedience to ALL the Lord said. Moses by the sprinkling of blood confirmed—sealed—this covenant. Exo. xxiv. 5-8; Heb. ix. 18-20.

Chapters 25-31 are instructions to make and furnish the tabernacle, consecrate—anoint—Aaron high priest, and the Levites priests. Moses was forty days on the Mount. Exo. xxiv. 18.

Lesson Text. 1. Aaron and Hur were left in charge by Moses. Exo. xxiv. 14.

Up. The Israelites ordered Aaron. It is not the least likely they would have come to Moses demanding and commanding him to make them gods. They were evidently not very particular what kind or shape of a god, so long as it was something they could see. If they had not been blind with superstition they would have known that any god that Aaron could make would be more trouble than a help. It could not take care of them, they would have to take care of it. It could not go before them, would have to be carried, would be utterly helpless and useless. Superstition does [illegible] the mind [illegible] ple, who are more or less ruled by superstitious fear. They would not begin an undertaking of any importance on Friday, nor sit at table with 13.

To serious-minded people it does seem strange that in a few weeks from the making of a solemn contract in which was an agreement that they would "have no other gods," Exo. xx. 3, and with the awe-inspiring manifestation from God, on the mountain before them, that they would command Aaron to make them gods. It would seem that the great sight had become familiar to them, and as they could not see Moses they had lost interest in him. Some one said, "Man is a worshipper, he will worship something." NATURALLY he will not worship God, "The things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" are foolishness to him. 1 Cor. ii. 14; Acts viii. 12. "Therefore, they say unto God, Depart from us; for we desire not the knowledge of thy ways." Job xxi. 14, 15.

2. It is not quite clear what Aaron's idea was in asking for gold, Verse 24. We may conclude he was afraid, verse 23.

3. They were willing to sacrifice for what they wanted.

4. The work may have been done by Bezaleel, Exo. xxxi. 1-4. All were equally guilty, verse 35. A molten calf. It is nowhere in Scripture called the Golden Calf. It is last referred to by Stephen, Acts vii. 41. Of all domestic animals there are none that look more stupid and act more foolish than a calf. From that fact we might well think that Israel, who had such magnificent and powerful exhibitions in their favor, from the one living and true God, would be thoroughly ashamed to worship—or even tolerate—as a god, such a thing as the image of a calf. Truly, those who make and worship idols, are like them. Psa. cxv. 4-8. It is safe to believe that in according to all history, there never was a time that the Golden Calf was more generally and sincerely worshipped than at the present day. The dollar—money—is not only eagerly sought for by many, but every dishonest scheme is used to acquire and increase wealth. Verily "The honest man, is the beggar's brother."

5. An altar—a place of sacrifice. Aaron seems to have tried to modify the evil by saying that the feast was to the Lord.

6. In modern phraseology they were having "A good time." People generally have when they do as they like, and self denial is not considered.

7. Corrupted themselves—they could not corrupt God. He was keeping his part of the covenant. They spoke wickedly, Psa. xxxvii. 8. After about seven hundred years of the best instruction, Rom. ix. 4, and sometimes severe correction they were not improved. They were still corruptors, Isa. i. 4. They were worse than their forefathers.

8. Those who have no moral rule, or stability within themselves, are easily turned aside from anything that is really good.

30. Some sins are greater than others, but there are no small ones, nor any white lies; for any sin, any lie will debar from the Kingdom of God. Idolatry is a great sin. It is classed with murders and such, Gal. v. 20, 21. Moses could not assure them that they would be forgiven.

31. Moses was Mediator for Israel. Gal. iii. 19. He acknowledged their great sin.

32. His heart was in his work, God had entrusted him with it, that was enough. He would die with his people, or like Paul, for them. Rom. ix. 3; Deut. xviii. 19.

33 Only those who sin shall suffer—be blotted out of the Book of Life.

34, 35. And they were plagued—blotted out, Psa. lxix. 28.

These things are all written that we might learn to do well. Isa. i. 16, 17.

Worth While.

It is easy enough to be pleasant
When life flows by like a song;
But the man worth while is the one who will smile
When everything goes dead wrong.

For the test of the heart is trouble,
And it always comes with the years,
And the smile that is worth the praises of earth
Is the smile that shines through tears.

It is easy enough to be pleasant
When nothing ruffles you fearfully,
When without or within no wave of sin
Is lurking your soul to warp.

But it's only a negative virtue
Until it is tried by fire
And the life that is worth the honor of earth
Is the one that resists desire.

By the cynic, the sad, the fallen,
Who had no strength for the strife,
The world's highway is cumbered today—
They make up the item of life.

But the virtue that conquers passion,
And the sorrow that hides in a smile—
It is these that are worth the homage of earth,
For we find them but once in a while.

The Doctrine of a Future Life, By James Strong, S. T. D, L. L. D., Reviewed. No. 11.

Dr. Strong says (page 105): "Annihilation will not come at our bidding, nor may Gehenna be voted out of existence."

It is strictly true that annihilation will not come at the sinner's or our bidding; but it will, nevertheless, come because God has unequivocally declared that the wicked shall be annihilated, as we shall prove by the pure Word of God. And, it is also true that Gehenna, the valley of Hinnom cannot be voted out of existence; neither can the gehenna—hell of endless misery, for the simple fact that such a hell never was in existence!

Dr. Strong knows with every intelligent person, that no souls are being punished in Gehenna south of Jerusalem, for he has stated contrary to the belief of the popular churches, that they are elsewhere in the regions of infinite space in gloom and with hardly self-consciousness of existence! And so the question arises—where are those immaterial, immortal souls, if not in Gehenna? And we answer nowhere, for such souls do not exist, as we shall prove by the unerring Word of God in due time. But is not Gehenna a symbol of a hell elsewhere? And we answer no, emphatically; for, Gehenna is the imaginary hell. But, it is true that this term is a symbol of the punishment of the wicked; for it is the emblem of death and destruction. It was in Gehenna that the Canaanites offered their children in sacrifice by fire to the idol Moloch. It was there where Sanackaribs army of 185,000 men was slain in one night by the angel of the Lord. It was there the inhabitants of Jerusalem cast the offal, carcasses of animals, and malefactors after execution to be consumed by the fire there kept burning, and by the worms that preyed upon the carcasses that the fire did not consume. The prophet Isaiah refers to Gehenna (lxvi 24) as follows: "And ye shall go forth, and look upon the carcasses of them that have transgressed against me; for their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched; and they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh."

It is to the above that Christ refers, Mark ix 42, where hesays, "And whosoever shall ensnare one of these little ones that believe in me, it is better, etc. And if thy hand, foot, eye ensnare thee, it is better to cut off, pluck out, and enter into life, or the kingdom of God than "maimed than to be cast into Gehenna where the worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched." It is certain that if the worms should die, and the fire be quenched, the carcasses would not be consumed and thus destroyed.

Again, in conclusion, the doctor says (page 107), Those who refuse to accept the Bible doctrine of everlasting punishment for the wicked have therefore logically to fall back upon the old fashioned assertion of universal salvation at death.

Dr. Strong uses the expression everlasting punishment, which he takes from Matt xxv 46, in the sense of everlasting misery. But this assumption is in plain contradiction of the numerous passages that explicitly declare that the wicked shall perish and be destroyed. And aside from this, the word punishment does not necessarily mean the infliction of suffering, for Noah Webster defines it—The infliction of pain or suffering; the loss or deprivation of liberty by imprisonment for the violation of law. And, so in all human laws, when a person has committed a capital crime and the penalty is death, the great punishment devised is not suffering, but the deprivation of life. So we shall find on investigation that the penalty of the divine law is the loss of life, the second death. For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life [eternal living] through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Then these notable words of Christ, These shall go away into everlasting punishment, simply mean as they stand, an everlasting loss of life; or, as apostle says, Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power. But it is asserted that everlasting destruction means always being destroyed, and this passage is quoted in this sense as a proof text for endless misery in a large volume giving the arguments pro and con of noted men on this subject. But these words of St. Paul are not only thus perverted, but are rejected; for his inspired declaration is [illegible] into destruction for the wicked. [illegible] destruction is not preservation in hell. The apostle in speaking of the enemies of the cross of Christ, says Phil iii 18, Whose end is destruction, whose god is their belly. According to this declaration, and contrary to the teaching of the popular churches, the wicked will have an end to their existence, and, as the psalmist also says (xxxix 9, 20): In a little while and the wicked shall not be—shall not exist. The wicked shall perish; and the enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of lambs [on Jewish altars]; they shall consume; into smoke shall they consume away." This is surely a fearful end to the enemies of the Lord.

But we remark further on this noted and important passage, which is the strongest and most relied upon of any to prove endless misery, that Dr. Strong with other theologians and ministers, seeing there is no antithesis between the word punishment and the word life, and knowing there ought to be in such a momentous declaration of Christ, has manufactured one out of whole cloth, and thinks it helps his Master out of his ambiguous language! And so, he substitutes happiness for life, and lo, he has an antithesis that suits his, and the orthodox creed, but we shall show does not correspond with the text in the original.

The Greek word kolazo here rendered punishment is from kolazoo, the definition of which is to cut off, as the lopping off of branches, to prune, to restrain, to punish. If the translators had used the first, instead of the last definition as here given, as they should have done, there would have been no occasion for the culpable substitution of such words to make what is deemed so necessary—an antithesis; for the words cut off furnish one, as they are used many times in the Old Testament to mean cut off from life; and that is evidently the true meaning in this passage. So the Diaglott New Testament has it—And these shall go forth to the aionian cutting off; but the righteous to aionian life.

But again, if Christ had really said—and these shall go away into everlasting torment, the torment would cease when the wicked are burned up and destroyed. For the definition of aioni, the root of aionios here rendered eternal, as given in Green[illegible] Greek lexicon settles the ques[illegible] and is as follows: Mode, duration [illegible] finite and infinite, [i. e. limited and unlimited] unlimited duration, eternity, age, lifetime, the world, universe. From this definition it is easy to see that the duration depends entirely on to what it is applied; if it be applied to anything that will cease to be, or come to an end as the wicked will, it is limited to that end; but if applied to anything which has no end, as the future life of the righteous, the duration is unlimited and endless. This statement must absolutely apply to what Greenfield says of aionios, the adjective (for any derivative word cannot signify more than its root) when he says:

"Whence aionios, continued as to duration: eternal, everlasting."

The common argument adduced from the definition thus given of aionios is on the basis of the substituted antithesis, and not on the true one we have shown to be in the original. So it is asserted that the everlasting misery of the wicked is as long as the everlasting happiness of the righteous, and that therefore the wicked will live forever in misery.

The fallacy of this assertion and argument will be clearly seen by every intelligent unbiased minded person, in the fact that the expression "everlasting happiness" of itself, does not prove that the righteous will live forever. It only proves that they will be happy as long as they live. So "everlasting misery" if applied to the wicked would only show that the misery would last during life. The great difference between these two characters in this connection is that the righteous are promised everlasting life, which Christ says [illegible] passage, and inasmuch as we have shown that the wicked will cease to exist as conscious beings, and that therefore the doctrine of the immortality of the soul is an assumption devoid of truth, we will further show it by putting the common illogical argument on this passage in the syllogistic form, and thus demonstrate its absolute fallacy.

Assumption—the soul is immortal.

Inference—therefore the wicked will have endless misery.

Inference—the wicked will have endless misery, therefore the soul is immortal.

The inference is here founded upon the assumption; then it is attempted to prove the assumption by the inference. This to any logical minded person can see, is reasoning in a circle, and is a begging of the question.

The Story of a Happy Christian Life.—No. 16.

"Brother N. M. Cutlip of LaPorte County succeeded Brother Miller, as preacher to the brethren in Marshall County and being a strong reasoner and a fluent speaker the members who had embraced the doctrines set forth, became established in the truth," I quote from father's "Reminiscences and Episodes."

Sister A. S. Miller, Brother Ephraim Miller's wife says the first Conference she knows anything about was held in Middlebury she thinks in 1849. It was soon after she and her people became settled in the truth of the unconscious state of the dead and knew none of that faith. She did not attend the Conference herself, but her brother did and was much interested. There was a large gathering of the friends from many points, and "good instructive preaching."

There was also another Conference held at Middlebury in 1850. Sister Miller knows this date to be correct, for she and Brother Miller were married in the winter of 1850, settled in Middlebury in the spring, and the Conference began the last of May and took in the first of June. A large crowd of the friends from various parts of Indiana attended this meeting, among them some of the Cutlin [illegible] and Sister Sarah Clark. [illegible] was good preaching and it was [illegible] of great rejoicing. Feb. 23rd, 1851, Brother A. S. Cutlip, wrote to Brother Miller from Kingsbury. The letter was forwarded to my father and is still in my possession. It asked that Brother Miller make arrangements to have another conference held at Middlebury, which Bro. Joseph Marsh, of Rochester, New York, Editor of "The Millenial Harbinger and Prophetic Advocate," was to be invited to attend. From this Conference the Ministers—my father and Brother Miller were to go on directly to Stillwell in company with Brother Marsh and others, and hold a meeting there. The object of having a meeting at Stillwell, being to get the truth before the disciples of that place, some interest having already awakened among them: Mr. Brink, their minister, being interested in the question of life and death, so much so that he was not only reading on the subject, but had united the Disciple and Advent Congregations, and was preaching turn about to them in connection with Brother Joseph Cutlip.

It was Brother Sprague Cutlip, I suppose, who was writing the letter. He thought the Disciples at Stillwell would all come into the truth as they had in Marshall County, if the proper effort was made.

Brother Marsh did come and the meeting was held, as was also the proposed one at Stillwell. Sister Miller, in her recent letter to me, from which I have quoted in this article, says, "this large gathering at Middlebury in 1851, was convened for the purpose of having Brother Marsh preach on the 'Age to Come' [illegible] well and brought Brother and Sister Marsh back to Middlebury with them. My mother attended the Middlebury Conference as did also Auntie Willard but the latter was very much depressed for once, because she had to be snatched away from the meeting before its close, and before the work that she felt she ought to do was done. She had had opportunity to do it but had neglected to seize the golden moments and use them for God and now they were gone beyond recall, with the certainty that it was a final farewell to some of the dear friends till the day of final meeting. I do not know where Brother and Sister Cook were living at this time but Auntie Willard sent messages to them from Middlebury. She was "greatly blessed in the meeting and unexpectedly pleased with Brother and Sister Marsh," of Brother Marsh she says, "He took the lowest seat. The Lord give him the grace he needs, also to all his ministering servants." She was "thrilled" with father's sermon, and commenting on it in a letter dated July 13, 1851, says, "How glorious is the Bible! Oh who would not be an heir of such promises as it contains and sets before the willing and obedient."

Brother and Sister Willard had to leave the meeting to go to Climax, for a sweet orphan girl of 15 years, whom they were to adopt as their own child. Her name was Alice Johnson, I have spoken of her before. Bro. and Sister Greenleaf now lived at Climax, as did also Brother Hall, whose daughter Mary, Brother and Sister Willard took after the death of Sister [illegible] They found a bad state of [illegible] Climax, which I think was [illegible]h County. No meetings [illegible]said, the brethren not be[illegible]pathy with Brother Hall, [illegible]was a good man and a fine [illegible]s infidels were D. P., Bro. [illegible]k thought very highly of Brother Hall. Brother and Sister Willard held a meeting while at Climax and left, hoping for the best.

Another Conference was convened at Middlebury in the fall of 1851, with Brother George Storrs, for the speaker. It had a very large attendance. Sister Matilda Cutlip, writing to her mother, December 7, 1851, [illegible] speaks of this meeting and of being prevented by sickness from attending it. She had hoped to meet mother there.

She also alludes to the recent death of the so loved Sister Dixon of Marshall County, and expresses herself as greatly pained at the sad news. But, "Glory to God," she continues, "the enemy cannot always hold her, for when the Stronger than he comes, he will loose the bands of death and I trust Sister Dixon, with all the children of God will come forth never to die any more. How animating the thought that if we are the Children of God, we shall then have no sickness, sorrow, pain, nor death and we shall be free from sin, when I contemplate the subject I can say with John, the Revelator, 'Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly!'"

"Brother Povey of Plymouth had just married Sarah Stanclift, and Brother Higgins, the father of Bro. D. R. Mansfield's first wife, had been holding meetings for a week after Auntie left, in the Logan settlement in Marshall County.

I wonder if there had been a Conference there? Sister Cutlip does not say, but represents Brother and Sister Higgins as wholly devoted to the service of God, though they had two children and a grandchild at home who had no hope in Christ. Brother and Sister Mansfield, were then living about 18 miles from Kingsbury among some of the brethren. The seventh day, shut-door folks, had just made another visit to Laporte County at the time Sister Cutlip wrote, and had "stirred up strife and contention", she "could not think it was of God because of the harsh and denunciatory spirit they manifested, so unlike our Savior in all his reach[illegible] Brother Higgins had taken [illegible]stronghold—the 14th chapter of Revelations and had proved conclusively that it was still in the future and to be fulfilled when the Lamb stands on Mount Zion and "the law shall go forth from Zion and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem."

What a pleasure it is to look over these old letters, written by pioneers in the Advent cause! It makes our hope in the Savior's coming so fresh and new again.

LESSON FOR SUNDAY JULY 28.

THE GOLDEN CALF. EXO. XXXII. 1-8; 30-35.

Golden Text. "Little children keep yourselves from idols." John v. 21.

The last lesson was the last part of the Ten Commandments. Many other commandments were added. The whole together were called "The Law." Deut. iv. 44. God put his name in an angel, gave him great power and sent him to go before Israel. Exo. xxiii. 20-23. The Israelites promised perfect obedience to ALL the Lord said. Moses by the sprinkling of blood confirmed—sealed—this covenant. Exo. xxiv. 3-8; Heb. ix. 18-20.

Chapters 25-31 are instructions to make and furnish the tabernacle, consecrate—anoint—Aaron high priest, and the Levites priests. Moses was forty days on the Mount. Exo. xxiv. 18.

Lesson Text. 1. Aaron and Hur were left in charge by Moses. Exo. xxiv. 14.

Up. The Israelites ordered Aaron. It is not the least likely they would have come to Moses demanding and commanding him to make them gods. They were evidently not very particular what kind or shape of a god, so long as it was something they could see. If they had not been blind with superstition they would have known that any god that Aaron could make would be more trouble than a help. It could not take care of them, they would have to take care of it. It could not go before them, would have to be carried, would be utterly helpless and useless. Superstition does not die out by education. There are people, well educated Americans people, who are more of less ruled by superstitious fear. They would not begin an undertaking of any importance on Friday, nor sit at table with 13.

To serious-minded people it does seem strange that in a few weeks from the making of a solemn contract in which was an agreement that they would "have no other gods," Exo. xx. 3, and with the awe-inspiring manifestation from God, on the mountain before them, that they would command Aaron to make them gods. It would seem that the great sight had become familiar to them, and as they could not see Moses they had lost interest in him. Some one said, "Man is a worshipper, he will worship something." SATURDAY he will not worship God, "The things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" are foolishness to him. 1 Cor. ii. 14; Acts viii. 12. "Therefore, they say unto God depart from us; for we desire not the knowledge of thy ways." Job xxi. 14, 15.

2. It is not quite clear what Aaron's idea was in asking for gold, Verse 24. We may conclude he was afraid, verse 22.

3. They were willing to sacrifice for what they wanted.

4. The work may have been done by Bezaleel. Exo. xxxi. 1-4. All were equally guilty, verse 35. A molten calf. It is nowhere in Scripture called the Golden Calf. It is just referred to by Stephen, Acts vii. 41. Of all domestic animals there are none that look more stupid and act more foolish than a calf. From that fact we might well think that Israel, who had such magnificent and powerful exhibitions in their favor, from the one living and true God, would be thoroughly ashamed to worship—or even tolerate—as a god, such a thing as the image of a calf. Truly, those who make and worship idols, are like them, Psa. cxv. 4-8. It is safe to believe that in according to all history, there never was a time that the Golden Calf was more generally and sincerely worshipped than at the present day. The dollar—money—is not only eagerly sought for by many, but every dishonest scheme is used to acquire and increase wealth. Verily "The honest man, is the beggar's brother."

5. An altar—a place of sacrifice. Aaron seems to have tried to modify the evil by saying that the feast was to the Lord.

6. In modern phraseology they were having "A good time." People generally have when they do as they like, and self denial is not considered.

7. Corrupted themselves—they could not corrupt God. He was keeping his part of the covenant. They spoke wickedly, Psa. xxxvii. 8. After about seven hundred years of the best instruction, Rom. ix. 4, and sometimes severe correction they were not improved. They were still corruptors, Isa. i. 4. They were worse than their forefathers.

8. Those who have no moral rule, or stability within themselves, are easily turned aside from anything that is really good.

30. Some sins are greater than others, but there are no small ones, nor any white lies; for any sin, any lie will debar from the Kingdom of God. Idolatry is a great sin. It is classed with murders and such, Gal. v. 20, 21. Moses could not secure them that they would be forgiven.

31. Moses was Mediator for Israel, Gal. iii. 19. He acknowledged their great sin.

32. His heart was in his work. God had entrusted him with it, that was enough. He would die with his people, or like Paul, for them. Rom. ix. 3; Deut. xviii. 19.

33. Only those who sin shall suffer—be blotted out of the Book of Life.

34, 35. And they were plagued—blotted out, Psa. lxix. 28.

These things are all written that we might learn to do well. Isa. i. 16, 17.

Next lesson, The Tabernacle. Exo. xl. 1-13, 34-38.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief in the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Revelation.

Dear Restitution:

I will pen a few thoughts on the Book of Revelation. He says: "Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written therein; for the time is at hand."

John begins with the seven churches, and the warnings and comforts to them, and says in the 10th verse of the 1st chapter, "I was in the Spirit on the Lord's day, and heard behind me a great voice as of a trumpet." Then he goes on to tell what he saw and heard. And as he was caught away in Spirit on the Lord's day, and as the Lord's day is yet future it follows of a necessity that what he saw and heard is yet to be fulfilled in the future. Unless the Lord's day has commenced, and I don't know of any Bible students that claim that it has, whatever John saw and heard takes place in that day.

After his message to the seven churches he says: "After this he saw a door opened in heaven; and heard as it were a trumpet talking with me which said, Come up hither, and I will shew thee things which must be hereafter." Consequently they did not take place hundreds nor thousands of years before. He saw four beasts and four and twenty elders before the throne. I am not going to say what they represent, but it is something very important; but I do not think they represent the saints, unless it is those that were resurrected when our Lord was crucified. It says there were some of the saints raised then, and God had a purpose in raising them. As we don't find another sign that will fit a resurrection until after the opening of the seventh seal, it could not include them.

John saw a throne, and before the throne there were four beasts and four and twenty elders, and among the elders was as it were a lamb as it had been slain, and he took the book out of the hand of him that sat on the throne and opened the seals thereof; and when he had taken the book the beasts and elders fell down before the lamb with their golden vials of odors which are the prayers of saints, and they sing a new song because they had been redeemed by his blood and made kings and priests to reign on the earth.

He describes what he saw as the lamb opened the first, second, third, fourth and fifth seals, and he saw when the fifth seal was opened under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the Word of God, and for the testimony which they held; and they cried with a loud voice, How long dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth. They were probably slain during the papal persecutions, and perhaps some before, and their blood cried from the ground as Abel's blood cried from the ground. And they were told they must wait a little season, until their fellow-servants should be killed as they were.

So it seems there must be a persecution yet to come, and it will come during the reign of the seven headed and ten horned beast.

Under the sixth seal the first thing is a great earthquake, and the sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood, and the stars fell unto the earth, and the heaven departed as a scroll when it is rolled together, and the mountains and islands were moved out of their places. No wonder the kings and great men, the rich and the mighty hid themselves and were afraid, and called to the rocks and mountains to hide them from him that sitteth on the throne and from the wrath of the Lamb.

Then John says after this he saw four angels holding the four winds, and another angel having the seal of the living God, and the servants of God were sealed in their foreheads, and 144,000 of all the tribes of the children of Israel were sealed, 12,000 of each tribe. After this he sees a great multitude of all nations which no man could number and they stood before the Lamb, clothed with white robes and palms in their hands. These had washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. These follow the Lamb, and the Lamb leads them and leads them to fountains of living water and God wipes away all their tears. This must be a scene of the resurrected saints.

You will notice that the seventh seal had not been opened yet. In the 8th chapter we have an account of the opening of the seventh seal. John saw seven angels and to them were given seven trumpets. I will pass over the first four and notice the fifth. Under the sounding of the fifth trumpet John saw a star fall from heaven unto the earth, and to him was given the key of the bottomless pit. And he opened the pit and out of it came what he calls locusts, and in describing these we find he likens them to an army of horsemen prepared to battle. And they had a king over them, and this king plays a prominent part until the close of the Gentile times.

In chapter xxii. 8, he is called a beast, and says that he is the beast that was, and is not, and yet is, and goes into perdition. There is a description of these in the 13th chapter. He had seven heads and ten horns, and ten crowns, and on his heads the names of blasphemy. John calls him a leopard beast, with feet of a bear, and mouth of a lion. John says he is the beast that was. Now where did he exist? We go back to Daniel's prophecy and he describes a leopard beast, and we find he was a Grecian beast, Dan. vii. 6. He had his day and went out of existence, so the beast that was and is not, and comes into existence again as the beast with seven heads and ten horns. He was given power to continue forty-two months, which is three and one-half years, and blaspheme God and his tabernacle and them that dwell therein. And he made war with the saints, and all that dwell on the earth had to worship him or die.

John also beheld another beast that had two horns like a lamb. He does great wonders and makes fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men, and deceives them that dwell on the earth. He causes them to make an image to the beast, and he had power to give life to the image and cause it to speak, and cause all to worship the beast and receive the mark of the beast. It seems that these that are killed by the beast are the ones that John referred to in the 6th chapter and 10th verse. In the 17th chapter John sees the harlot woman seated on the beast with seven heads and ten horns. This harlot woman, all admit to be the Roman Catholic Church, and as the beast represents the Greek Church, they must have a mutual agreement and patch up their differences; but we find that if the ten horns are parties to the agreement they soon turn and hate the whore, 17th chapter and 16th verse, and they make her desolate and destroy her. So you see she is destroyed by the ten horns; and when she is destroyed there is a great wailing amongst the great men, because their traffic is destroyed. They cannot sell any more indulgences etc. Then we find that the beast and the kings gather together to make war with the one seated on the white horse and his army, and they are overcome and cast into the lake of fire and that is the last of them. This beast seems to be the same power that Ezekiel speaks of in the 38th and 39th chapters, the Gog of the North. Some seem to think that because the Gog of the North, or Russia has been so crippled of late that he can't be the power referred to, but God knew what he was telling his servants to write, and it will all come about in his own good time.

Let us wait on the Lord and trust his Word, and we will be rewarded if we faint not. Amen.

J. B. Leat.

At the Breaking of Bread.

"Beloved, follow not that which is evil, but that which is good. He that doeth good is of God; but he that doeth evil hath not seen God." 3rd Jno. 11.

"Follow not that which is evil; for he that will love life and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile." This is the example that Jesus left for us: "Because Christ suffered for us, leaving us an example that ye should follow his steps: who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth." 1 Peter ii. 21, 22. And the prophet David says, He that hath clean hands and a pure heart shall receive the blessing from the Lord; but the face of the Lord is against them that do evil; to cut off the remembrance of them from the earth; for there shall be no reward to the evil man; no promises to the evil doer. Then let us earnestly pray deliver us from evil and hide not thy face from us; for he that doeth evil hath not seen God. Follow that which is good, what good thing can I do that I may have eternal life. This is the question that the rich young man asked of Jesus. The answer was Sell all that thou hast, and come and follow me; and every one that hath forsaken all for the sake of Jesus and obeyed the gospel shall inherit everlasting life. We cannot find a promise to those that follow after evil; but how great and precious are the promises to those that seek for glory, honor, and eternal life. Seek ye first the kingdom and all things shall be added.

With a few words we can find the doom of the evil doers. They shall be cut off; but words can hardly express what is promised to the saints, the children of God. If any man serve me let him follow me, and where I am there shall my servant be. If any man serve me him will my Father honor; for the Lord God is a sun and a shield, and the Lord will give grace and glory. No good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly. It would be impossible to mention in one lesson the promises to those that follow after Jesus; for from the promises to faithful Abraham down to the last one of God's children, the Bible overflows with the glories of [illegible] overcome [illegible] is good.

Beloved, in the Lord:

I write a few words of exhortation to you that you may know I think of you often, although absent in person. The season seems short to me; but the last time I heard the truth seems a long time. I often think of your feast of good thoughts on God's Word, at Bible study and the Sunday services; but I hope to be with you soon, but the date I cannot say.

"Blessed are they that keep his testimonies, and that seek him with the whole heart." Psa. cxix. 2.

The Bible is the Book that testifies of God's love and mercy to man. In the beginning we have the garden of Eden for the abiding place of the first man, and nothing exceeds in beauty this place as described in the Bible; for Jerusalem restored will blossom as this garden. It was not only beautiful; but plants were provided for food; so the whole creation showed his bountiful provision for us. We are commanded to keep God's precepts diligently; to hunger and thirst after righteousness. We read how Abraham was blessed of the Lord, because God knew he would direct his household aright, and keep his testimonies. David was a man after God's own heart. Why? Because of his obedience to God's laws, to fulfill all his will. Blessed are they who know God, and his Son Jesus Christ; blessed are they who know God's testimonies, and have tasted of the many blessings enjoyed in this present life, and look for the endless blessings that will be given to the children of God, the gift of eternal life, that we [illegible] herit. If faithful to his [illegible] We are to seek God with [illegible] heart, and we shall find [illegible] of living water, always ready [illegible] us the water of life freely, [illegible] out price. Jesus Christ is [illegible] friend of the poor. I am sure [illegible] poor in this world's goods are friends of Jesus than of the rich; for as Solomon says, Riches are bother and vexation; but the poor man has not this to occupy his mind, and can turn to higher and better things, seeking for the riches of the promises made to faithful Abraham and his seed, seeking for glory, honor, immortality, eternal life. When we seek the Lord with our whole heart, and cast our burden on him that careth for us. We find the yoke easy, and the burden light; for the commandments of God are not grievous, not more than we can bear. Psa. xxv. 10. All the paths of the Lord are mercy and truth, unto such as keep his covenant and his testimonies.

When we seek anything with our whole heart, we give it the first and most attention. So it may [illegible] all the children of God, and [illegible] pleasing in his sight, and [illegible] be accepted in his glorious [illegible] as a reward for seeking him [illegible]tly. Psa. xciii. 5. Thy testimonies are very sure. Holiness becometh thine house, O Lord forever.

Trusting this finds you still rejoicing in the knowledge of the Truth, I am your Sister in Christ Jesus.

Dear Restitution:

I am glad to report the obedience of faith on the part of two more. I was with the Church of God at Warren County during the week of July 1st, and the brethren arranged to have an all day meeting on Sunday the 7th. At the afternoon services Ruby Day, daughter of Brother and Sister Chas. Day of West Lebanon, Ind., came forward and asked to be immersed. She understands the gospel of the kingdom which Jesus preached, having been brought up by believing parents, and I believe that she is thoroughly in earnest in the step she has taken. Accordingly on Monday morning we proceeded to Rock Creek 2 miles from West Lebanon when she was buried with Christ by baptism.

Upon arriving home I found Grace Cardill, granddaughter of Bro. H. P. Cardill, desirous of baptism. She too had been brought up surrounded by those who believe the glad tidings of the kingdom, accordingly on Sunday afternoon the 14th, we went to the St. Joe river, where she was baptized into the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of her sins.

Through an unexpected turn of circumstances the Church at South Bend had the pleasure of the presence of my mother, Sister Mattie Neill of Salem, Ohio. She gave us a splendid lesson in the evening and we all enjoyed her visit. Your Brother,

[redacted]

I have a question or two I would like some of the readers of The Restitution to answer. Is the preaching of the gospel in all the world a sign or indication that the coming of the Savior is near at hand? If so, why look for him before that is done? If we could figure out when this will be done would we not know about when he will come? Is it consistent for us to look for him before the sign is fulfilled?

Yours in hope,
Samuel McClothlan.

Tools for Workmen.

Good workmen need good tools. A finished workman needs more tools than a blunderer or a bungler. And he knows what tools he needs, and he knows how to use them and care for them.

The tools of a minister of the gospel are books. He is to "give attendance to reading, to exhortation, to teaching." "The books," and "especially the parchments," were an important part of an apostle's outfit (2 Tim iv 13); and the Scriptures is the foundation of all preparation for the ministry of the Word of God.

But to read the Scriptures understandingly, they must be translated into our own tongues, and to understand a translation made from any foreign language, we need books which inform us concerning the usages, manners, customs, allusions, idioms, and a thousand things which are peculiar to each separate language. Consequently dictionaries, lexicons, works of travels, antiquities, and similar books become necessary to the reading, the study, and the understanding of the Scripture.

Every minister should be equipped with some such books. A few books studied and mastered are worth more than many books which stand unused upon the shelves. The man who has eyes and ears and memory, will, in the course of a lifetime, read, gather up and remember many facts, illustrations and confirmations of biblical statements and teachings, and so will himself become to some extent a walking library, and a means of instruction to many others.

It requires brains to use books. There are many persons who could make little or no use of the largest library. They have not learned how to use tools, or how to find what they want, and they would wander aimlessly in the greatest libraries of the world, because they would not know where to look for what they need; but every man should have a few choice books; and if men will save, economize, and plan, they will be able to secure them.

One wise old farmer used to say to his son, "Do not get in debt, but if you ever do get in debt, let it be for manure." This was an investment which he thought was a safe one for a farmer. Our counsel to ministers would be not to get in debt; but if you do get in debt, books are to the minister what manure is to the farmer. Many a man's brain is unfruitful from lack of the mental stimulus which would come to him from reading an instructive, suggestive and inspiring book. He needs facts to think upon, and then he needs to be led in ways of thoughtfulness by other thinkers. We should be glad to see thousands of good books scattered among all the ministers in the land; not books of dry dissertations and long sermons, for these are often wordy and wearisome, but books filled with important facts, Scriptural knowledge, and suggestions which draw lessons from those facts, and stimulate intelligent thought. "Give attendance to reading;" but let the reading be good reading. Put away fiction, trash and foolishness, study only the things which will instruct and benefit, that thy profiting may appear to all.—Armory.

It may seem strange, but it is nevertheless true, that alcohol regularly applied to the thrifty farmer's stomach will remove the boards from the fence, let the cattle into his crops, kill his fruit trees, mortgage his farm and sow his field with wild oats and thistles. It will take the gloss from his clothes and the polish from his manner, subdue his reason, arouse his passions, bring sorrow and disgrace upon his family and topple him into a drunkard's grave.

The happiness of life consists, like the day, not in single flashes of light, but in one continued mild serenity. The most beautiful period of the heart's existence is in this calm, equable light, even though it be only moonshine or twilight. Now the mind alone can obtain for us this heavenly cheerfulness and peace.

Whiskey from Rags.

The New York Observer thinks there is nothing remarkable about the statement that the whiskey is now manufactured out of old rags when everyone knows that nearly all the old rags in the country are manufactured out of whiskey, and there is no apparent reason why the process of conversion may not work as well one way as another; from whiskey to rags, and from rags to whiskey. What a beautiful business it is!

We have received a new edition of the tract A Letter to a Friend, from Brother Woodruff, and we can supply them at five cents each postpaid. No tract ever issued by our people has done the good this has, and the pleasing and convincing style in which it is written makes it worth much as a medium for advancing the truth of the gospel. Get a number of them and give to friends. You never can tell how much good a few nickels will do used in this manner. Try it.

Poetry.

[Selected by Mrs. Gabriel Hohrbach.]

Where is Our Home?

O where is our home, the saints promised rest?
Where is the kingdom, the land of the blest?
Is it in heaven, where together we'll come?
Tell me, O tell us, where is our home?

Preachers oft tell us our friends when they die,
Go direct to heaven, to mansions on high;
But by careful searching no proof can be found,
That they are not sleeping now low in the ground.

Then why tell the story that to heaven they go
With not in the Scripture a sentence to show;
But we do find surely a promise there made
To Abraham truly, and to his true seed.

But not in the heavens, where God has his throne;
For no one has gone there save Jesus alone;
Hint's not the land promised to Abraham's heirs;
For Jesus said plainly no man has gone there.

Where then are God's people, the prophets of old,
Who died many centuries before this was told.
'Tis not up in heaven, where Jesus has said
Must silence forever the home of the dead.

Death, the grim monster is still in the land,
No one can sweathe his cruel, cold hand;
He steals away loved ones, our friends he have low,
Filling each bosom with sadness and woe.

The morning is breaking, 'tis beginning to dawn,
The clouds o'er our pathway are being with drawn;
The time is recorded—is now nearly due,
When the sign of Christ's coming will burst into view.

Our friends who are sleeping within the cold tomb,
Shall hear the glad summons, and forth they will come;
Shall come forth in beauty—immortal and fair,
The new earth and glory with them we will share.

We read that the earth, once designed for man
Will again be restored to its original plan,
When rays of bright splendor and beauty shall bleed,
And the God of our fathers shall dwell here with men.

Here then is our home upon the new earth,
The Paradise promised, the land of our birth;
When Christ in his glory shall sit on his throne
In Eden's new garden, and Adam's first home.

Words.

Proverbs xxx. 5, 6: "Every word of God is pure,—Add thou not unto His words, lest He reprove thee, and thou be found a liar."

One who reads assiduously is amazed at the extent Truth in all ages is obscured by language. It may be said, without fear of mistake, that no language ever issued by man is intrinsically intelligible. This may seem a startling assertion. But, we have the commonplace witness everyday, that words eternally trip and involve each other. Lexicons are ever in trouble over them, among themselves. Secondary meanings, and more distant "shades," are as a rule mere apologies for paucity of and ill-will towards the primaries of all the important words. The present keen agitation over spelling-reform demonstrates the fear the great mass of scholars have that their peculiar ideas and institutions may be rudely and unexpectedly shaken, and the ground of "tradition" molested. This argus-eyed watchfulness of words is not so much a fear that the English tongue may be harmed, as a tacit protection of the tight-rope performances words play in human assumption. Said a prominent speaker, recently, against spelling reform: "Let us band ourselves together to a million of persons to stay this outrage upon our traditions."

"This outrage upon our traditions!" This is a very flexible word, and comprehends in the scholarly mind much more than the purging of words false to their alphabet. For, as words go, men fall to pierce one another's comprehension with them. Said Abraham Lincoln, when arguing with Stephen Douglass, who perpetually insisted that he was not understood by his formidable antagonist: "I now rise to explain some explanations explanatory of explanations explained."

The very ancient languages had very few of the learned shifts of scholars. It is very probable they were given tongues, not made; and, in this aspect were miraculous, at least in their rudiments. There was, I think, no effort at learned pretense. This followed on, when man, setting up the Serpent's theory, began to plume himself upon "knowledge"—"knowing." "Ye shall be as God—knowing," etc. (Not "gods," for there were none of these myths yet.) God was infinite because He was the all-knowing,—the all-wise.

Then man began to coin and herd words. The simple words were expanded (conflated) and labelled, as we may say. Simple terms could not express complex and ambiguous ideas—and man revealed at once that he was a born imaginer—a guesser. Satan had given him a start that way, and his mental bent was hopelessly alter the mysterious and unreal. In a short space came the scholarship and autocracy of the time! It has never ceased to this day, and never will 'till Another Hand takes hold.

God was watching this devilish spring of error, and this insidious prostitution of words, from the first day of the new creature. He forbore with it until Babel, when he cut down the force of the iniquity by summarily confusing the speech of man, the chief engine (in its vicious construction) of every kind of spiritual fallacy. Without words, skillfully framed, no error could exist. The dispersion, however, was only a check. In a very little while the "wise" man was at his trick, coining and shading words, and sorcery, soothsaying, etc. were soon rampant. Every whit of these and all mystical systems were the outgrowth of wrested words in common use. "The powers of darkness," as such, could not have allured men. It is the assumption of the divine which deluded and drew men, and there was no shorter cut to this than through the abuse of pure words. Please remember that this was at a very early period of the race. That while it never was excusable, yet it had its palliation. Man was destitute of many helpful accessories. He was not only fresh from the hand of God, but fresh from the hand of Satan, and a nomad. Not so the ages later on. Not so today. Mankind does not change normally, but its circumstances have. It is utterly without apology. It is the great discredit of modern scholarship that its prodigious advantages have assuaged nothing of its determination to continue the worst features of the olden times of "this ignorance" of sublime matters which God can no longer "wink at". It was always a dangerous experiment to tamper with words. Man has a right to varied notion of subjects, but not to vary the meaning of words to conform to them. There is no doubt in my mind that this necessitated Ha[illegible] —that speech might not too soon and too utterly confuse the things of God. The Bible has thus clearly made this the supreme confusion. It is one of the incidents of Holy Writ that does not sit well in the human reason. Reason prefers to find most glorious and beneficial spiritual lies in the Sacred pages. Matthew Arnold, deceased, the English custodian of miracles, is at pains to show the world how a Book of falsehoods, can yet be a Book we cannot do without. So was his peer, Satan. The Book knows these men perfectly, Jude 16: "Their mouth, speaking great swelling words." And 2 Peter ii. 18: "They speak great swelling words of vanity." Man loves to use words that "swell", that distinguish self. As Jesus put it: "receive honor one of another."

Perhaps nothing can better illustrate the Divine cognizance of the prostration of language than the fact that among all the names applied to Christ the most significant is "The Word of God." Revelations xix. 13. It is referred to as if it was a new name. The passage declares: "He had a Name written that no man knew but He himself," "and His Name is the Word of God." Assuredly this will not be a title new or unknown to man when the date of Rev. xix shall have arrived. They will hear this name among men in that dread Day of God, but the word will have become a misnomer and snare. I have no doubt we may find this Day in its inception in Isa. xxix. 9, and Amos viii. 11. The "doctors" will have had enough of words by that time, it seems. And it is right here in this very interim that Zeph. iii. 9 arrives: "For then will I turn to the people a pure language, that they may all call upon the Name of the Lord, to serve Him with one consent. "At 2 Thess. ii. 11 we read of a Day preceding this one of "pure" words: "For this cause God shall send them strong delusion that they should believe a lie—who believed not the truth." "The mystery of iniquity," alluded to so clearly and strongly in these verses of Paul, was industriously at work making words for the believer. We have these words always with us, and cannot blame the old "Mystery" for mothering them so jealously. "Very God and very man," etc., may account why "no man" shall know that "Name," in its purity and power, till a great shaking of words takes place. While languages remain impure and while man persists in "senses" and "shades", and spectral parts of speech, he must possess ghostly and unholy and unreal views.

Let us glance here at a helpful remark of the Lord's. At John viii. 43, he says to the Jews: "Why do you not understand my speech? For this cause you are not able to hear my word." This is the pure Greek. By no stretch can we make the passage, aver that the reason they could not understand His speech was because they did not hear his words, for they heard them, but they had lost their old tongue. There was a Hebrew tongue, but it was then but a mere skeleton of the divine original. Time and apostacy had sifted it and them among the dialects of the heathen nations, and its mission and office for divine (theological) purposes was over. In its simplicity and beauty; its lofty and intense realism, it was the par-excellent medium of Jehovah for all sacred Truth, and never offered the slightest difficulty to those old saints, who spoke it in its purity. Jesus so used it, but its form seemed to them as a rank heathen fable. "How can this man give us his flesh to eat?" Hear the instant answer: "The flesh profiteth nothing. The words I speak to you are spirit and are life." "It is the Spirit that quickeneth." Not devitalized, ghostly words, but "the Spirit" of God. "What and if ye shall see the Son of Man ascend up where he was before?" It is the Spirit (of God) that quickeneth." John vi. He showed them that he could "ascend up where he was before" he was crucified, by raising from the dead and standing among them as he "was before" he died. It was quite impossible for Him to get his resurrection from the dead at all into their minds. They could not believe, And when it happened at last "the words" (of the women) seemed to his disciples "as idle tales. And they believed them not." Luke xxiv.

But nothing can more directly suggest this failure of the Jews to understand their national tongue in its purity than the pathetic incident at [illegible] sus cried with a loud [illegible] lama sabachthani?" that is to say, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me." And some of them standing there, having heard, said: "He cries for Elias! Mark repeats this sommeo. That such words as "My God," should have utterly faded from the Jewish mind in their native vernacular is beyond conception, except in this view I am pressing. There is no doubt the great mass of the people had no recollection of the old tongue of better days, or a very meagre one. Their thinking at least was in the corrupted "yiddish" or what not of the commercial circles. It was much on the order, probably, of the dialect known as "Pennsylvania Dutch." No contention that those who thus misconstrued Jesus, were not Jews, will do. The words stand uncorrected.

Thus it may be plainly seen that while Jesus used the Hebrew tongue figuratively as to his sentences and parables, He did not mystify words. "Bread" is as truly bread, or food, in a mental aspect as in the physical. There is a vast difference between presenting subjects in an attractive and striking form, and in falsifying essential words. The Jews' stumblings were not over Jesus' sentences (which were Scriptural) but over the abortive definitions which had crept into the basic words he used. These were all the definitions of men. "Life" and "Death", the two great foundational theological words of God, upon which all Jesus had to say depended and rested, as to the eternal verities, had been divested of every atom of Truth, and Jesus plain intimations and plainer assertions that, without some Outside Help for the corporeal, man was utterly extinguished by death, forevermore, was utterly incomprehensible as that word (death) passed in those times.

"I will raise it up at the last Day. This is reiterated in John vi (1) three times, verses, 40, 44, 54. The latter place is substantial witness that Jesus gave no place for any present immortality in man, in anywise. Whatever was to be and have "life" must be raised corporeally from the dead "at the last Day," yet to be. We may say boldly, in the name of the Lord, that not a scintilla of error or spook could have been imported into such words as soul, spirit, heaven, hell, life, death, mind, etc., etc., had the first words "Thou shalt surely (really) die," been let alone. The mental and dispositional (or "spiritual") part of man is astonishingly retrograde. It delights instinctively in inversions. This trend is what the Scriptures denominate "perverse-[illegible] is not only set forth a de-[illegible] also native. Jesus [illegible] evil and an adulter-[illegible]" that is, one that [illegible] perverts everything [illegible]ersions of the Book [illegible]ing: "There is none [illegible]: no not one!" Ps. [illegible] is not so much that man [illegible]adly, as that he reverses good. David did "evil in the sight of God," but he never did evil to or opposed the things of God. Morally he sinned most greviously; but the purposes, the ordinances, the "church" of God, suffered at the hands of men who were not immoral. The question for philosophy is: Which is the most vital in vital matters? As the old farmer said: "Since it can't be both, which shall it be, dogs or sheep?"

I repeat: man is not happy unless he is opposite. Look at our food products, our beverages, our clothing, our habits, etc. Flour he has turned into starch, and his drinks are invariably intoxicants—and he makes them so. He can do that to perfection—invert, reverse, oppose. Israel and the "manna" incident is a remarkable lesson. "Leeks and onions," dangerous absorbents and discussers, not God's food. A little later he carries out the rule to its sequence, when Jesus, the "bread" of life is rejected, and requested to "depart out of their coasts."

The student may now be prepared to reflect that the primary terms for "soul" always referred to the "animal" (Latin, anima) or carnal part of the physical structure, in all the old vocabularies. "Spirit" (of man) was generally the "breath", or atmosphere when used in supporting the soul in existence. To withdraw this meant certain, positive death of the soul and body, and the cessation of thought or mind, 'till the former, or larger, physical conditions were restored. But "spirit" (of man) also meant primarily the indubitable effect [illegible] dispose of environments. The fool sayeth in his heart, 'There is no God.'" That is the "spirit" (of man) disposing of a matter before the comprehension. "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God," is another, but very different, disposition or "Spirit". It is not natural in man, as the former "spirit" is, which is totally and willingly evil and against God. No part of man is of God except what God puts in him. Adam was a sinner "spiritually", or dispositionally, before he sinned, or he never would have sinned. Jesus never sinned because the "Spirit of God" was in Him. There was no disposition to sin, and no temptation or fleshly demand ever had the faintest show of success in Him. He was human, altogether, and felt the force of every earthly fleshly power in his members "like as we," exactly. But these had come up against the divine possibility of something stronger—the power and mind (Spirit) of God! Bless we the Lord!

For, there is a momentous fact in the gateway of this great matter, men are not apt to perceive quickly, viz: that while "secondary" meanings serve a parabolic, illustrative purpose among men, no secondary meaning can stand in fact! They cannot loosen a literal term. Such a use of secondaries is lying—because the inversion of Truth. The Scriptures and all literature must have a flat philological stand to be useful. Satan caught at the weakness of man against divine facts, it stuntly. He was no poor "professor". No academician could have "went at" the unsophisticated individuals of the new race in a [illegible]ly manner than questraight use God was [illegible]ds. Here was [illegible] THE BEGINNING [illegible] method of "spiritualization" [illegible]d. It disposed of (spirit[illegible]) the Real. And it suited [illegible] better than the Truth.

Because, the Truth, as God spoke it, was not comforting to man's pride. It brings the words of Eccle. iii. 18 too agonizingly near the facts as we all see them. No learned twist can disturb these words of the Preacher, whoever he was. He was a "learned" man, too, with vast experiences, both out in nature and alone with Truth and God. He was no fanatic or "too-good" man, or pious dreamer. He was bound by no university or school. He looked squarely at the visible, and thence upward to God and the To-be. He never varies. Almost his last words are: "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit (ruach) to God who gave it." Let us ask here: How "was" the "dust"? "God formed man of the dust of the ground." This existed before man. But did the "deathless spirit"? Who will say (but? Yet it must, if it was (is) "deathless"; if God gave it! The words of Eccle. xii. 7 are: "And the spirit to God who gave it." Let us ask again: Did God "give" man that which must effectually damn him: a "spirit", ever of "disobedience"—incoherent, deathless? Or did He "give" man "breath", to cause life in the body He had made, and that only? Genesis i. 7, concludes: "And breathed into his nose the breath of life, and man became a living soul." Breath breathed in at the nose produced a living animal. Taken away it left a dead corpse and a dead soul. There is no idea of any life but animal life. For man has not thought one thought, spoke one word, or acted one act, as yet. The physical only can perform these functions. Should "fathers," as they are called, fumbled over this phase of Holy Writ interminably, but got no farther than Augustine and Origen; who got no further than Satan. Both men were wrong and opposed violently to each other, but both had the same captain and believed with him that man should not and could not "surely" die. You will "die", said the Serpent, that is evident; but not really, not "surely"—that is, if you eat of this tree, as I tell you. This tree is called by God, "the tree of Knowledge." That cannot die. God knows that will make you like Him, "as gods", hence deathless. God's existence is not in personality, but in "knowledge." This, Satan, and probably much more to the same end.

It is not improbable that Satan anticipated the words of Jesus, by some snakeish reasoning, such as he assailed the Lord with at the beginning of His ministry. He (Satan) may have suggested the idea that: "The flesh profiteth nothing—it is the spirit [illegible] that quickeneth." The [illegible]nd, the knowing pow-[illegible]. For has not this been the false reasoning of man ever since, and is it not the theology of Christendom today? Has not the poet said "death is but seeming," and a "transition", and "Dust thou art, to dust returnest, was not written of the soul," the "living soul" God had "made"? and which He declared should "die"? Is it not passing strange able men cannot see that Jesus and Satan never could have reasoned alike! Which, pray, are Satan's words most like, the Bible or Dante? Satan is known in the Word as the great "evil spirit," demons, likewise. Are they, then, in consequence, immortal? "Ye shall be as gods." Two gods. From that hour "gods" began to multiply among men, until their names were written over the whole visible heavens. These "gods" were all men! "Immortal souls!" Until the day of Paul, at least, that great man of God knew of but One man of all human kind who had immortality.

It will be interesting to ask here: "What is mind?" We ought to know, for we each possess one. Perhaps a hard knock on the head has stunned or stopped it once or twice. The writer has been knocked senseless, and knows something about "mind" in that emergency. He "knew" nothing, and yet he was far from dead. In the desperate effort of man to light on a passable definition of "soul", and "spirit" he has adopted "mind", as Satan did. There was no "ghost" of a chance in any other term. Well, then, What is mind? Thought? But, surely, thought is not a thing. Like a noise, or wish, or hope, or love, it is in evidence, but can we say it lives? Yet without mind, thought, love, etc neither man, beast, devil or the Infinite would be anything! Satan knew this. It was his vast field of essay. Designing men knew it and scholars have connived at it in every age. There was no other hope of a false system, which would afford the pride and avarice of evil men fat cures and offices and an ascendancy over mankind equaled by nothing in life. Witness the Romish church, or Mahommed. Run back over those twelve centuries of black darkness and bloodshed. Where would they have been had man known rightly that at death he would "surely die" and his "life is hid with Christ in God, and when Christ, who is our Life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with Him in glory?" "I will raise it up at the last Day." Where would have been the craft of the witch, the sorcerer, the diviner the "spiritualist" spirit-rapper, purgatory, deceased visions of the dying from pernicious teachings, and the host of voudoos and fooleries, and that dreadful chasm of lies, an eternal "hell" of conscious woe and tyranny; if mankind had believed "death" to be "death", and not "seeming" and snookery? So much for the word "soul".

The word "spirit" is even more unfortunate. Its history is one of constant difficulty. Firstly, it is not identical with the word "soul", but another matter entirely. This has been a bitter bolus for commentators. For, if the spirit of man is deathless, then man must be possessed of two deathless natures! If the soul may be "killed", as in Matthew x. 28, he has yet (if the common view is right) an "undying spirit". The doctors are not happy over this, and would see God out of the dilemma, if possible, or if He would kindly permit them. But not yet. "Thou (living soul) shall surely die!" The earth is one vast graveyard. Time is one long, endless procession of funerals—of souls which have died. We look down into the grave, O, with fearful eyes. We hear the sound of the falling sod. It has no pleasant echo, no music, no victorious paean. Nothing but the cold, just words: "Thou shalt surely die!" And we see it is true, as God said. We ask the question, with the Godly Job; "If a man die, shall he live again?" and we may hear the answer, like Job's, but higher, grander: "I am He that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive forevermore, and have the keys of death and the grave." And, it is enough. Job accents the salient features: "All the days of my appointed time will I wait 'till my change come. Thou shalt call, and I will answer thee. Thou wilt have a desire for the work of thy hands."

Bro. Underwood:

The fifth Annual Conference of the Church of God of Ohio, will be held in Springfield, Ohio, beginning on Wednesday, Aug. 7, and will continue over the following Sunday. The meetings will be held at the fair grounds, and the meals will be served on the ground at fifteen cents each, and sleeping quarters will also be found on the grounds, as the church of Springfield will provide cots for the visitors, and would like the brethren and sisters to bring their own towels and such toilet articles as they need, as it will be more convenient. Hoping this will bring out many of the brethren and sisters from every church as we want this to be a real good Conference. Please let me know how many will come and the time and the road you expect to come on and there will be some one at the depot to meet you as we want every one that can possibly come to be here.

ANNA B. BECK, Sec.

Springfield, Ohio.

Benevolence is not merely a feeling, but a principle; not a dream of rapture to indulge in, but a business for the hand to execute.

When you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and send that.

Our Helping Fund

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Announcement.

The Twentieth Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus in Iowa, will be held at Waterloo, Ia. Aug. 17-25, inclusive. Programme will appear later.

O. J. ALLARD, Pres.
EVA L. STEARNS, Sec.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Ohio will be held at Springfield beginning Wednesday evening August 7 and continue over the following Sunday. The coming meeting will be the fifth.

The four in the past were replete with all that goes to make a success. The speakers with one accord delivered the glad tidings of the Kingdom. Heartfelt prayers were offered. Inspiring songs were sung. Glad greetings and talks of the glories to come were heard from every side. Those who came hungry for the Word, went away full and overflowing. Let us make number five better if possible than the preceding ones. The brethren at Springfield have secured the Fair grounds and buildings for the occasion. The place could only be had for the dates given above.

Those who have met the Springfield brethren know the kindly effort they will make to have things comfortable.

For the reasons given it is needless to urge those who have attended. To those who have not we say "Come and see and hear." The presence of all is needed to plan the Evangelist work for the following year. The programme will be published in due time.

P. NEILL, Pres.
J. S. THOMPSON, Sec.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Neb., will be held in St. Paul Sept. 14th to 20th inclusive.

MINNIE ROGERS, Sec.

Attention

TORCH LAKE BIBLE SCHOOL.

Conditions have arisen which make it necessary to change the time and place of the meeting of the Bible school. It is now decided that the time will be from Thursday July 25 to Aug. 8. The place, the pretty summer resort at Lemon Park—Indian Lake. This pleasant resort is only 2½ miles north of Vicksburg, Mich. From Chicago take Grand Trunk R. R. direct to Lemon park. From South Bend the same. From Grand Rapids change at Vicksburg to Grand Trunk, or change at Kalamazoo C. K. & S. R. R. for Pavilion change to Grand Trunk R. R. for Lemon park only 2½ miles west. These resort grounds are 14 miles south of Kalamazoo, 46 miles north of South Bend, 100 east of Chicago. Cottages can be rented very reasonably. When several use one the expense is very light. Meals quite reasonable or board ourselves. If cottages are rented there are beds, pillows, gasoline stove, chairs, tables and dishes, everything for light house keeping. Visitors should bring 2 sheets, 2 pillowslips, a quilt, a tick, straw for ticks close by. There are two boats with each cottage, and splendid fishing.

Above and beyond all that will be the instructive Bible lessons by competent teachers with maps, charts and lesson outlines for every session. Lessons not only intensely interesting during the two weeks but good for all life time. Added to this the evening sermons by able speakers. Altogether will make a feast not to be forgotten. Compared with the educational value for eternal things, the expense will not be worth considering. The school of last year is still bearing good fruit. Let all come who can.

MRS. H. E. BONE,
MRS. M. A. WOODWARD,
P. NEILL.

ATTENTION PLEASE.

Will all who anticipate attending the Bible School at Lemon Park, Indian Lake, from July 25 to August 8 please notify me as soon as possible, so that I can make arrangements for cottage room, as nearly all are taken now, and when they are gone, we will have to resort to tents.

Come one and all, and enjoy studying God's Word, with the woods, and birds, the beautiful lake and cool breeze to rest you while you study. Address me at Dutton, Michigan.

M. A. WOODWARD.

Notice.

All who are interested in the dance question, and wish to know the workings of the ball room and dance house will get a full understanding of the matter by getting and reading carefully the little tract on the "Evils of the Ball room Unveiled." It will cost but ten cents post paid. Send to the author L. S. Bronson, Niles, Mich.

A New Tract.

The Great Divine Healer vs Latter-Day Healers, by Uncle John Foore.

A Tract for the last days. Should be read by every thinking Christian.

Paul 2 Tim. iii. 13. "But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived."

Matt. vii. 21. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils, and in thy name done many wonderful works. And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

Brethren, these tracts have gone into many families, both to brethren and people of other denominations, a few infidels, and one Christian Scientist, and all seem to be well pleased with it; but only a few of the brethren have sent to me any help in the way of paying for the tracts, and tracts are very expensive. We are anxious to have more published on different subjects. Please help to send these Pearls out among the people.

Send orders to John Foore, at 2012 W. Corning Ave. Parsons, Kan. The price is 10 cents each.

Evangelizing Notice.

The N. W. Conference has selected me again as Evangelist. The Brethren have added Arizona, and California to my field of labor. Any church or isolated brethren that want meetings during the Conference year should correspond with me at an early date so I can plan my year's work for this extensive territory which now includes western Oregon, Washington, California and Arizona.

Hereafter my home will be Scholls, Oregon, and Address, W. L. Skeels, R. D. 1, Laurel, Oregon.

Will all persons interested in the truth, and all isolated brethren within the State with whom we are not acquainted, please write to us? Beloved, we are anxious to locate and correspond with you, that we may impart unto you some spiritual gift.

Address S. J. Lindsay, State Evangelist, or Robt. G. Huggins, Box G. [illegible]

The Southern Bible School for Illinois will convene at Oregon, Ill., August 12-21. Brother R. G. Huggins has been requested to prepare an outline of study on the nature, office, and work of the Holy Spirit, a task for which we deem him well qualified. The other work of the school will be about the same as in former years. Our evenings will be occupied in about the same manner as they were last year. Already many have signified their intention to be present. When you read this, please write me whether you will attend, and send me the names of others who may be induced to attend. Our school is no longer an experiment, but an established instrument for good. Come then with us and we will do thee good. Address me at Oregon, Ill.

Account Giving.

There is certainly a great day of accounts coming, when our Lord will reward every one according as her or his work has been.

The great concern of each one should be, What have I done upon which to expect reward? If you should judge yourself, what would your judgment be?

Our talents differ, and each one will be held accountable for the use of such talent, whatever that may be. If you have only one, use that.

So [illegible] what can I do?

There is [illegible] but who can do that. Will that do any good? Oh, yes. Let me tell you something. Some people have bought several copies of "Pine Woods Bible Class" and lending them to their friends and neighbors. It being easy and attractive reading, most people will read it. It is bearing fruit already. I have just been told of a man who had become discouraged. He had listened to preachers of different denominations, and found they contradicted each other. He began to drift into infidelity, when a Brother put a copy of Pine Woods Bible Class into his hands. Now in place of infidelity, he is rejoicing in new found light. It would take too much space to tell of other cases. Try this work, and add some stars to your crown.

The Students Text Book is already an assured success, and will be printed after I get home from this present trip.

I desire that all who want it, to send in their names in advance, that I may know how many to print. All you order now, you will be sure to get when printed. The price will be fifty cents.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Your loving brother.

Past—Present—Future.

Sweet childhood hours—life's opening scenes—
How fondly memory backward leans
Toward its first dreams, and ardent prays
Let me re-live those blissful days.
How gay was spring, enrobed in bloom,
And dewy pearls, when morn's perfume,
And bright Aurora's crimson flush,
Were sweet as bridal beauty's blush.
'Neath summer's sun, in sportive rave,
I watched the light the shadows chase—
Looked up to heaven's majestic blue,
That worlds of light were moving through—
Then in the streamlet's mirror glow
Looked down on heavens that shone below.
Bow oft before sin's shadow black
Had yet eclipsed life's shining track,
On mountain heights I wondering stood
In nature's awful solitude,
Before the painted foliage fell
O'er rising peak or sinking dell—
E'er withering flowers were laid in death,
Cut down by winter's killing breath,
And heard prophetic whispers say—
Youth's transient visions fleet away.

* * * * * *

Those years are passed,—upon my brow
The scours of time are falling now.
The school-house troops with whom I played
Are slumbering 'neath the yew-tree's shade;
Parents that saw my life-dawn day
Are coffined yonder in the clay;
Green mounds are heaved above the breast
Of sisters in their dreamless rest;
And graven marbles give the date
When children passed the stream of fate;
And she—I name my youthful bride—
Is sleeping by those children's side;
The grass has often grown above
The saints who taught me God to love;
And while I wait the grave for me
Is ready as once, Job, for thee;
For as I list with bated breath
I hear thy steps, O coming death!

* * * * * *

But Judah's Seers foretell an hour
When death shall lose his cruel power;
That One shall come with might to save,
And break the bolts that bar the grave;
When that dear dust o'er which we tread
In deathless shapes shall leave that bed;
They say upon fate's farther shore
No "tempests beat, no billows roar";
That fadeless Paradises bloom
Beyond the deserts and the tomb;
That on those shores Jerusalem
Has golden streets and walls of gem;
No sorrows there, no grief, no sigh;
For tears are wiped from every eye;
That the eternal raptures there
The pure, the good, the holy, share;
That sin shall ne'er invade our home
In the delightful world to come!
Then, heavenly Father, me I pray
Give youth eternal in that day.

The Story of a Happy Christian Life.—No. 17.

Auntie Willard in a letter to mother dated May 2, 1852, says: "We were much gratified today to see our dear Brother Chaplin once more, and to hear from his lips some of 'the Words of this life.' The leading idea of his subject is expressed in the 6th chapter of 1 Tim. viii. 12. "Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life," etc. The four divisions were these,—first, our enemies, second, our weapons of warfare, third, our conflict, fourth, our victory. O blessed victory! Just as sure to be won, as that we engage in the battle, and hold out to the end!" The divisions of the sermons were gathered mainly from the 6th of Ephesians.

The brethren at Oswego were living in peace and all loved one another. They were all dear to Auntie Willard. Brother Miller had been on a southern tour and had brought back good news. I do not know where he had been.

A Conference had just been held at Plymouth, and the Monday morning after its close, six were baptized by Brother Higgins, and the Lord's day preceding the 2nd of May, six more followed their Lord in this division point between the family of Christ, and that of the world, Brother Higgins having been there again. Auntie Willard was at this time doing the work for a family of from ten to 12, with only the assistance of her adopted daughter, Sister Elizabeth Smith who usually assisted her being absent at this time. I have never been able to see how she could accomplish so much in the way of physical labor, and yet keep herself always in close touch with God; but the secret of it was that she never allowed her work to crowd God out of a single day. She said, "If we let God be crowded out of one day, he will soon be crowded out of all the days."

Where Brother Miller had been, the brethren had appointed a Conference to be held at Oswego the 2nd Lord's day in October 1852. This must have been the Conference that Brother and Sister Mansfield attended. I did the work at Sister Beatty's during the meeting, with the help of a half-witted girl. A long table stretching the entire length of the dining-room was set for every meal, and the meetings sometimes lasted until nearly midnight. How gravely Sister Mansfield sang!—Her hands clasped, her eyes looking heavenward, I shall never forget the glorious strains:—

"O carry me home, carry me home,
To Mount Zion,
Then carry me home to that city of love
Where Abram's seed dwell forever."

I was fourteen years of age at this time. This must be one of the Conferences to which Sister Willard alludes in her recent letter. She staid all night at Brother Willards, and the next morning she and Brother Miller went in company with Brother and Sister Willard to attend a Conference in the neighborhood of Brother Dickson, in Marshall County. She and Brother Willard attended several Conferences at Oswego, and at one she met my mother at Brother Willards. "While dinner was being prepared" she says, "my mother gathered the many sisters there to an upper room for a prayer-meeting." Sister Miller "decided then and there that she was one of the really consecrated ones," as she truly was. I thank the Lord to this day that he gave me a praying mother and one who taught me to pray.

Brother and Sister Miller moved to Meadon, Michigan, in 1854, and Brother and Sister Willard attended one of the conferences there and their presence was much enjoyed. Auntie Willard "was so earnest and so faithful," Sister Willard says, "in every way, trying to do good and to lead people to Christ. At Meadon, she influenced one young lady to decide for Christ." Very few came under her influence for any great length of time who did not give themselves to God.

There was a Conference held at Union Mills, where Brother and Sister Mansfield were living that Sister Miller mentions, and which she and her husband attended, that must have been held in 1853. Sister Mansfield prepared beds for a large number but the weather turned out stormy and not many came, much to their disappointment.

There was also a Conference at South Bend, alluded to in an undated letter of Auntie Willard's. She "was much cast down after returning from that meeting, fearing lest the brethren were becoming satisfied with present attainments, and would not go on in the self-denying path of faith, because not one word was said about "the land, or the people of God in his land." She was also much oppressed by the course taken by the Harbinger, "Is it possible" she said, "that we are stopping short of the whole truth? Must there be a division again?" I do not know to what she alludes as the course of the Harbinger, but she said, "She knew that some must and would follow the cloud and pillar of fire." The very next Sunday after her return from South Bend, father,—as if sent on purpose to comfort her,—spoke on "Israel and the Land!" Then followed her unexpected attendance at a Plymouth Conference, and O how greatly she was blessed in the preaching! It was just what she wanted to hear. It was meat in due season to a famishing soul. She "had received just enough before going there to know how good it was and praised the Lord for good and faithful Shepherds, who feed us with knowledge and understanding." But her fears as to South Bend was not groundless. Sister Miller says "That South Bend was reported by Brother Redding in 1859 or '60 as run down, and the cause of truth under great reproach."

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LVI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JULY 24, 1907. NUMBER 28.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, are requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life necessary for final salvation.

Meetings were held at Stillwell and at Union Mills in 1851. Brother Mansfield baptized 91 during the meetings at the two places. In some instances whole families were baptized, six out of eight in Brother Theodore Catlin's family were buried in the liquid grave and were raised to walk in newness of life. Bro. Sprague Catlin's eldest son was also immersed. Many of the number who came forward for baptism had been infidels, "but when they saw the harmony there is in God's Word, and that God does everything in his own way and time, they were made to bow in submission and follow him." A Brother Ilyewatre was baptized later at Rigetow. The brethren out there all believed without a dissenting voice, that the Lord would come in 1854, and were wide awake, Sister Clark, and all.

I gather these facts from a letter of Sister Matilda Catlin's, written to my mother and dated April 12, 1854.

But in giving Sister Miller's and Sister Catlin's reports of meetings, I have neglected to say that father held a series of meetings in Laporte County in the early part of 1850, before the June Conference that was held at Middlebury in that year. Several members of the church in Kosciusko County accompanied him, and returning with him by way of Plymouth, heard him on the third Sunday in January preach his first discourse in Marshall County, the place being Old Pisgah, where a large congregation had gathered. Father Henry Logan and Brother Hugh Barnhill were then the elders of the church, and both were present. The voices of the twin sisters Elizabeth McDonald and Phebe Thompson rang out in almost heavenly melody among those who sang the sweet songs of Israel, in praise to Israel's God. Thomas McDonald was there and his sainted mother, whose exhortations once heard were never forgotten."

Father also made several journeys from home to preach the gospel between the years 1848 and 1856. The first of these was made in company with Brother Miller.

ANTHONY WOOD.

Words. No. 2.

But, another trouble with the word spirit (as wrested) is, it is everywhere in Scripture "desperately wicked" in itself; never dependable or excellent, unless "the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them" (men) "understanding". Unless the "spirit in man", naturally, is supplanted by, "the Spirit of God", man's road is inevitably to sin and destruction. The main-spring of action is the disposition or spirit. It is the power in man to accept good or evil, but is not a source of good, not a source of any kind, but a medium, or channel, or motor. It listened to Satan. It crucified the Lamb of God. Paul places its character when he says: "Filthiness of the flesh and spirit." Manifestly Paul saw nothing in the spirit of a vital importance except it was qualified by an adjective. A filthy spirit is understandable, and a holy spirit is in line with human experience. We may have twenty spirits in one brief hour, or as many minutes.

But, again, the word "spirit", as wrested, is most unfortunate in coming so hard against the clear words of Christ, Luke xxiv. 37 gives the story: "They were terrified and affrighted and supposed they had seen a spirit;" (that is, one of Plato's sort,) "and he said to them: Why are ye troubled? And, why do thoughts arise in your hearts?" (In plainer words, Why do you not think with your brains, instead of with your feelings and fancies.) "Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself. Handle me and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see me have." It is useless to strain these words to mean Jesus was not then "a spirit" of the Platonic-Satanic order, because He had risen and received or resumed His "body", for Jesus' remarks are utterly and scathingly ironic, and deprecatory of the view they held. "For a spirit hath not flesh and bones," is not Jesus' description of a supposed departed human phantom caged in every soul 'till death; for Jesus must then have said: My spirit is not at large, or disembodied, or what not. But His words are straight to the point that in no wise could He be before them or exist unless He could exhibit his material, existent, self-evident "self". The Greek is "me that I am he," but, "that it is I myself," is strictly correct. The overpowering evidence is that when Jesus "ascended on High," He ascended as He stood before Pilate and every human eye. He had no advent at the Throne of God before this, or in any other shape, for no other shape was possible. The "Spirit" in Jesus Christ was "the Spirit of God", and no other. Jesus knew this and gloried in it. He existed before Jesus was born, but not as Jesus. Jesus' existence in fact, or really, was entirely associated with man and his salvation. "Search and see." There are no "beginnings" in "the councils of God", hence Jesus was "begotten", "born", "slain", etc, "from the foundations of the world". No doctoring, or bodies of divinities, or Oxfords, or Andovers, or any human vaporings can hurt or help this fact, or the Scripture method of presenting it. Every saint, prophet, priest and servant of God was so prexistent. But this does not make out a case of "transmigration of souls", by any means. In every instance since man began, the "thought" of a disembodied spirit has been terrifying, frightful and troublous. Phantasmagoria is the Greek word, and it is a good one. There are a few folks who profess to keep an assortment in stock, but they have a vexatious time with them. To be of any use at all they must "materialize". Ah, what a sham it all is!

We make a great mistake, on this head, in the way we handle the passage in Acts xxiii. 8. The Platonic presentation of the doctrine of inherent immortality was firmly held by both great Sects of the Jews, Pharisee and Sadducee. They differed, to be sure, but merely as the sects of today differ. The Pharisee insisted upon a real "resurrection", but in a very vague and unreal manner; in every essential it was the same view held by the Christian churches in all times since the third century or even earlier: an "immortal soul" let loose and taking up or on a "body", again. Not so the Sadducee. To them there was no compromise with the material, for an instant. It was pure, unalloyed immortal essence; no body or shape, or anything. Resurrections, angels, and demons were all alike, carnal effusions. The word "spirit" in Acts xxiii. 8 is a reference to "evil spirits" or devils, and also to the popular belief in "familiars" or demons. The true Greek word is daimon, etc, and is used by Paul at Mars Hill, and translated falsely "superstitions," a term which might have cost Paul his life. Demons were both good and evil, it seems. Socrates is said to have had a "familiar", and all men were believed to have at least one. We must remember that the Sadducee worshipped God. His was not an ethical society or Liberal League, but a church. What large number of "fools" ever existed who could willfully worship a God whose purpose was to consign them all totally to extinction? It is preposterous.

We have the inspired declaration that man would rather "imagine" than know the Truth. We have seen, I think, how a false man and a false line of imaginary "facts" have grown up, like dank weeds, through all that man calls "cultivation". We cannot pause to look at his perverted views of government, medicine (by poisons), law, marriage, books and so on. But we have seen his masks for the spectacular in words, faith and thought. We have seen his passion for the pantomime in religion—his impossible, formless, mystical God, "ghost" in man, non-substantial "heaven", horrific "hell", intermingle-able life and death, senses minus organs, and what not, and know not whether to smile or shiver. Three men in one man, "angels" who ran (and did. They assert) "assume" real bodies and rout them all at will, and, the grave, not merely the receptacle of the lifeless body, but the gate to inferno, as witness these-called Apostles Creed: "He was crucified, dead and buried. He descended into hell." The idea here is plainly that when Jesus was "buried", He made His way underground by some mystic rapid transit, to "the spirits in prison", who had been drowned (too soon, it would seem) in the flood, under Noah, and so on, ad infinitum!

Now we may easily see that all this is of a piece with the common theory of the incident at Endor. Endor was some 200 miles from Ramah, but neither Samuel's body, soul or spirit seem to have had any trouble about this insuperable fact, when an "immortal soul", and a real, lively "witch" is in the case! Then, everything must clear the "orthodox" track and stand off—for Plato and company have said so.

But, it so happens that the Word, as usual, is provokingly clear and literal as to this Samuel episode. It is not figurative and cannot be made so to please commentators. It proves too much and won't hearkened by any "steering committee" or politics of any sort, sincere or otherwise. The plain words are: "Samuel said: 'Why hast thou disquieted me to bring me up,'" not down, from heaven. And, again: "Then said the woman: 'Whom shall I bring up unto thee?' And Saul said, "Bring me up Samuel." That is, Samuel himself, not a spirit. And, this time, something did come "up", which so astonished and scared the woman, she very nearly went into a bad type of hysterics. She understood quite well the devilish method, but not God's!

We need to look at this Endor incident with keen painstaking. It is a whole body of divinity, so to speak, which has no strings or pulls to it. There is no questioning its accuracy or its authenticity, and, indeed, this has not been attempted by clerics outside of that non-descript, rapid body known as "the higher critics", who dodge the title always, as the notable Agnostics dodge theirs! The words of Scripture are: "And Samuel said:" also, "and, when the woman saw Samuel." He was "an old man," she averred, "covered with a mantle." And, again: "I saw gods ascending out of the earth!" "My-dozy" is plainly in serious straits here—not "betwixt two", merely, but betwixt half a dozen. It is not a nice "help" for the popular view—or any view. Spirits—not bodies!—"clothed in mantles; "gods, ascending out of the earth!" and, the dead Samuel, his very self, talking! These are not "evangelical" contentions, even from the severest "orthodox" standpoint.

But the fact stands that the incident is in the Book, in clear detail, and as sure as God lives, as presented in the history of this Book, is true! Again we see the awful responsibility in tampering with words. Had God's words: "Thou shalt surely die," been let stand simply, there could be no confusion in this beautiful incident.

For, all the Biblical incidents, such as the "serpent" (a "beast of the field,") and the patient little animal ridden by Balaam, speaking, etc. were merely the exercise of preternatural power over natural objects, of which the object was not conscious. "It pleased God." That is the sufficient philosophy. There was no ventriloquism or what not. I quote here one passage, that should alone be a complete commentary on every one of these sacred episodes: 1 Kings, xxii, 21, 25: "And there came forth a spirit and stood before the Lord, and said, 'I will persuade him.' And the Lord said unto it, 'Wherewith?' And it said, 'I will go forth and I will be a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets.' And He said, "Thou shalt persuade him and prevail also. Go forth and do it.' "

But we are not shut up to this single severe passage. These ii. 11-12 renders it almost exactly. We may be sure Samuel was dead enough when Saul sought for and believed he saw him. Samuel knew nothing of the Endor transaction, and never will know only that he was "up to" something away beyond his comprehension and that a fearful belaboring was going on in consequence.

Revelations xiii. presents another such incident, even more remarkable, which the present generation may have the pleasure of witnessing, if pleasure is the right word. There is no ambiguity in the account as to the "time", unless we strain it through the Miller sieve. See Daniel xi. 40. We may denominate it truthfully the visible reign of Satan! His day "in heaven" is at last over; xii. 8. His time is now "short"; vii. 12, and his work rapid. Read chapter xiii. Ver. 13, 20 designates the "beast" (or king) in xiii 2, and the second "beast", in verse 11, sufficiently plain to denote individuals, not systems. At verse 13, we read: "And he doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven in the sight of men; 14, and deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by those miracles he had power to do in the sight of the beast (king), saying to them that dwell on the earth that they should make an image to the beast—and he (the false prophet) had power to give life to the image—that the image should both speak", etc. We know that the "image" does not "speak" intelligently, as man speaks, but we may be sure no such satirical make-bilt as the phonograph, etc, will ever answer the awful requirements of this terrific mystery. "By those miracles he had the power do." "Lying" miracles, to be sure, just as was the case with the Serpent, the Donkey, the witch, and so on. God's definitions, that those who had no pleasure in the truth might believe a lie. It was, is, and ever shall be the divine method.

Returning to our Lord's declarations concerning Himself, we assume that subject to any heidley, that there is nothing in the words of Christ, on any occasion, to support any view but the total mortality of man at birth and death. There is no other view that can vitalize the Resurrection of the body, or the second advent, or the new heavens and earth, or any kindred topic such as the writings of the Book abound in. Nine tenths of these must be when so wrested, mere Shastra and vaporings of the Swedborg (Swedenborg) and Spiritualist variety, and wholly wide of the views they are erroneously represented to exhibit. Let us take one word here: "For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, that everyone may receive the things done in the body, according to that he hath done, whether good or bad." 2 Corinthians v. 10. Nothing short of the same body, soul and spirit as at first, may "appear" at that Day, which are until then held equally by death and the grave. Just as it should be plain that the spirit and soul can do nothing minus the body, so it should be manifest that therefore they can be nothing without the body. Man is not a trio, but "One". "Trinity" was a good and useful word once, but a very vicious and heathenish word latterly.

When you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and send that.

As next Wednesday is a fifth one in July, our next issue will be the first Wednesday in August. No paper next week.

The Emperor of Corea has been induced to quit his throne, being ordered to do so likely by the request of the Japanese government. Bloodshed has resulted, and there is more trouble in store for the countries dominated by the Japs.

The Hymn appearing in this paper was composed by Sister Wince some time ago, and coming to the notice of Mr. Smith, he composed the music as it appears. A plate has been made, and this beautiful hymn can be preserved and used. Those wishing to do so can cut it out and put it in your hymn books.

We are sorry to have to say that only a few of the number who should do so, have responded to our notice some weeks ago. Brethren, we do feel that you ought to give us what we have earned. We need it to pay the expenses of our office. Please look up your account, and in case you have not paid consider this an invitation to do so at once. Act as you would like it yourself.

A letter from Sister Laura H. Perkins, informs us of the death on July 9, 1907 of Brother L. H. Chesbrough, at his home in Galesburg, Michigan. Brother Chesbrough was born in Pleasant, Ohio, June 12, 1841. Of his life we know little except what others say. He has been a reader of The Restitution for many years, and was able to defend the faith anywhere. He did some public speaking as he had opportunity. He suffered a sunstroke some years ago, and was not able to do much work after that. On Sunday before he died he was taken with severe pain, but the doctor gave him medicine that eased him, and he seemed to suffer no more after that. He got up from bed about eight o'clock the morning of July 9, and in a few minutes fell over dead.

Though isolated from the brethren, he has always been firm in the faith, and by his Christian deportment gained many friends who will miss him. We are unable to give a history of his family, but perhaps some one of the Michigan brethren may be able to supply what is lacking in this short notice. One by one the call comes, and we fall by the way. Let us be ready for the change, and whether it comes suddenly or after a long illness, so can rest assured that the sound of the trump will wake us to an endless life. May we each with Brother Chesebrough attain this much desired end.

Lesson for Sunday August 4.
The Tabernacle. Exo. xl. 1-13; 34-38.

Golden Text. "Then a cloud covered the tent of the congregation, and the glory of the Lord filled the tabernacle." Exo. xl. 34.

Connecting with last lesson, Moses had obtained the promise that the Lord would still go with them—Israel—to the promised land. He recieved a second edition of the Ten Commandments, Exo. xxx. 4. He saw the glory of God. The skin of his face shone so that Aaron and the elders were afraid of him. Exo. xxxiv. 30. He instructed the children of Israel to get ready to make up the various parts for the tabernacle, Chapter xxxv. In Chapters xxxvi to xxxix an account of the making. Moses looked it over and it was as the Lord commanded.

The lesson today is an account of the setting up the tabernacle. The anointing of Aaron, and the Lord's acceptance of the tabernacle.

To those who like to know for themselves,—and every student should—the story of the tabernacle is of very great interest. Several people, considered to be Biblical scholars have undertaken to tell what the tabernacle and its furnishings represented. But as the different writers have different explanations, we are justified in concluding, that however interesting these explanations may be, they are only opinions. The Apostle Paul—who did know—said they were a shadow of heavenly things, Hebrew viii. 5. Not—as some say—a shadow of things in heaven, let us all take note of this. As the Bible, and that in it is the story of the Kingdom of God, to be set up on the earth. Dan. ii. 44, and vii. 27. We are perfectly safe in believing that the tabernacle was a shadow, or figure of the things concerning the Kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, Acts viii. 12.

The tabernacle was enclosed or stood within an enclosure of posts and curtains 100 cubits long by 50 cubits wide. A cubit is about 1½ feet. The fence or enclosure was then 150 by 75 feet. It stood east and west. The entrance at the east end. Just inside was a space 75 by 75 feet. The first object on entering was the altar of burnt offering Exo xxix. 38-43. Behind or beyond the altar was the laver for Aaron and his sons to wash in before serving. Exo. xxx. 18-21. This space, with the altar and laver was not covered in.

Beyond this space stood the tabernacle proper, supposed to have been in shape like a wall tent, covered with linen curtains beautifully embroidered with cherubim of cunning work. Over this a covering of goat's hair. And over this a third covering of rams' skins dyed red, and above all a covering of badgers' skins, or perhaps dolphin. Badger is not considered correct. Exo. xxxvi.

The tabernacle was about 45 by 15 feet, divided into two apartments by a curtain called "the vail". Exo. xxvi. 33. Entrance at the east end. The first room was called "the holy". The innermost called "the most holy". The words "Holy place" were not used, nor "holy of holies". In the holy stood the table with the shewbread, on the northside, or to the right of the entrance. Exo. xxv. 30. Lev. xxiv. 5-9. The golden candlestick—or lampstand—on the south side. Exo. xxv. 31-37; xxvi. 35. Further in—near the vail—stood the altar of incense Exo. xxx. 1-10.

In the most holy—within the vail—was the ark of the testimony Exo. xxvi. 33. Also called the ark of the covenant of the Lord. Num. x. 33. The testimony, covenant or law was put into the ark. Deut. xxxi. 26. Also a pot full of Manna. Exo. xvi. 33. And Aaron's rod that budded. Num. xvii. 9; Heb. ix. 4. And the Ten Commandments on tablets of stone, Deut. x. 1-5.

The priests—Aaron and his sons—were allowed to go into the holy. Exo. xxviii. 43. But Aaron alone, once a year, into the most holy, within the vail. Lev. xvi. 2 and 34. The Levites were given to Aaron and his sons as helpers in the tabernacle service Num. viii. 19. Read the chapter. The sons of Levi—sons of Jacob and Leah. Gen. xxv. 23—Gershon, Kohahh and Merari had the charge of the tabernacle to see that it was properly handled and moved, and carried when on the march. Num. iii. They were not allowed to handle, pack, or cover the Altar of burnt offering, nor any thing belonging to it. They were not to go in nor look on things in the holy nor most holy, but when all were covered ready to move they took charge. Num. iv. They were to camp round the tabernacle, Gershon west, Kohath south, Merari north. Moses, Aaron and his sons east in front of the entrance. Num. iii The tribes were to encamp far off in a certain order, East; Judah, Issachar, Zebulun. South; Reuben, Simeon, Gad. West; Ephraim, Manassah, Benjamin. North; Dan, Asher, Naphtali.

The foregoing is a brief description of the first place of worship of the one living and true God. The God of Israel,—not of the nations. This account may be fittingly closed with notice of the Mercy seat—the cover, or lid of the ark—with a cherubim on each end. The Lord said to Moses, "There will I meet with thee, and commune with thee." Exo. xxv. 17-22. Moses heard the voice of one speaking to him from off the mercy seat. Num. vii. 89. O Lord of hosts, God of Israel, that dwelleth between the cherubim. Is. xxxvii. 16

The lesson text. Verses 1 18 tell of the setting up, or erection of the tabernacle, the furnishings, the anointing—dedicating—of the vessels. Also the consecrating of Aaron and his sons.

Verses 34-38. The glory of God filling the tabernacle. A sign of acceptance. The last setting up of the tabernacle seems to have been in Shiloh. Joshua xviii. 1. It is afterwards referred to as the house of the Lord. 1 Samuel iii. 15. God is said to have "forsaken it". Ps. lxxviii. 60. When the Israelites took the ark out of it. 1 Samuel iv. 4. The ark was last put in the house—temple—that Solomon built, by order of Josiah, King of Judah. 2 Chro. xxxv. 3.

Paul—to the saints at Corinth, "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God? 1 Cor. iii. 16. And true worshippers may worship anywhere. John iv. 21-24.

C His fasting and temptation. Where, when and why?
(a) Why did he fast? Did Christ know he was to be tempted? If so was not this a fortification?
(b) The temptations—1st, Stones, bread. 2nd, Pinnacle of temple. 3rd, High mountain. Tell about each. How does Jesus overcome each temptation? What is the lesson for us?
(c) The result of his overcoming and its application to us?
(d) Who was with Jesus when he was tempted?
(e) How long was Jesus in the wilderness, and was he there all the time of his temptation?

Editor Restitution:

Please say to the household of faith that on Friday evening, July 19, another name was added by baptism to the list of believers at Oregon, Illinois. Sister Addie Swingley is the one who has thus taken upon herself the name of the Anointed One. She has had the matter under contemplation for some time. She is soon to go to Seattle, Washington, to make her future home and thought it best to take this final step before going. May the Lord preserve her blameless until that day. Brethren pray for us.

S. J. Lindsay.

Dear brothers and sisters:

Do you know who will ascend into the hill of the Lord? The Bible says: "He that hath clean hands and a pure heart, who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully, he shall receive the blessing of the Lord and righteousness from the God of his salvation."

One man said the other day that we will be saved if we are good though we have never been baptized, that it did'nt need any water to save us." I don't think that man has "clean hands and a pure heart" or he would want to mind God. We can't be good without minding God, we can't make ourselves good and clean, for we can't take away our sins, only God can do that, and he will not do it if we are not baptized.

Parsimony and Credit.

Robin Carrick was one of the earliest bankers of Glasgow. He came to the city a poor boy, and became the chief and leading partner of the Old Ship Bank, lived and died a grim, penurious old bachelor, and he left not a penny to any benevolent institution in the city in which all his wealth had been accumulated. But on one occasion, the old miser was waited on by a deputation of three respectable fellow-citizens, for a subscription to the Royal Infirmary, then in its infancy. He was requested to head the subscription, and, to their mortification and surprise he would only put down his name for two guineas; and when they earnestly entreated him to increase his miserable pittance, he talked even of taking it back. He told them he could not really afford that sum, and bowed them out of the room amazed with heaps of money, represented by bills and other documents.

The deputation then proceeded to Mr. M'Ilquham, one of the early manufacturers of Glasgow, to ask his help. He looked down the list of subscribers, but exclaimed, "Bless me! what is this? Banker Carrick only two guineas!" They told the manufacturer that the banker had said he really could not afford any more.

"What is that you say? Jamie (to his faithful cashier and confidant, James Davidson), Jamie, bring me the bank-book, and a cheque, and the ink bottle, and a pen;" and he wrote a cheque on the Ship Bank for £10,000 (some reports give a much larger sum—no matter, it was large). "Now, Jamie, run as fast as your legs can carry you to the bank, and bring that money to me."

The cheque was presented. Old Robin stared. "Go back," said he; "there's some mistake." And presently he came running into M'Ilquham's counting-house in a high state of fever. "What's wrong wi' ye the day?" said the banker. "Nothing in the least degree wrong. I only suspect there's surely something very far wrong with yourself and the bank, for my friends, those gentlemen sitting over yonder, have assured me that, in your own promises and out of your own mouth, you declared you could only afford them scrimp two guineas for the Royal Infirmary, and, if that is the case, I think it is high time I remove some of my deposits out of your hands."

With some reluctance, Robin had to put down his name for fifty guineas before Mr. M'Ilquham would cancel his cheque for £10,000. The deputation went away scarcely less amazed than they were delighted.

Do men [illegible] whose hands the Lord has mercy d- sited over consider what he thinks of the excuses they make when called on to disburse his funds for the furtherance of his work and the advancement of his cause? Is it strange that he sometimes decides to remove his deposits and place them in other hands? When their money is gone they will think how much good they would do with it if they only had it back again.

It Pays to be Pleasant.

It seems even monkeys differ in disposition, and in this respect are like children. It is told of a small monkey in the zoological gardens at Marseilles that everyone who visited the place noticed him because he was always friendly and apparently happy sitting in the front of his cage, bowing to everyone who passed. He never joined in the frequent quarrels that went on between the other monkeys in the cage, and never was cross or snappish over any real or fancied "teasing" of which the boys were guilty. The result was he had many more dainties given him than the others received, and was remembered by all visitors because of his sunny disposition, when none of the others were thought of twice.

Cross boys and girls lose many nice things they might have if they were not cross, and make themselves, as well as others, unhappy.

Cultivate the habit of being pleasant. It pays.

We have received a new edition of the tract A Letter to a Friend, from Brother Woodruff, and we can supply them at five cents each postpaid. No tract ever issued by our people has done the good this has, and the pleasing and convincing style in which it is written makes it worth much as a medium for advancing the truth of the gospel. Get a number of them and give to friends. You never can tell how much good a few nickels will do used in this manner. Try it.

Gambling.

Gambling is an injurious excitement, without compensation and consolation. The gambler has hope, but it is not an anchor. It is an unmanageable sail that bears him upon the rocks. It is an excitement that consumes, but never recreates. It does not promote health or happiness. The loser has no compensation. When the merchant loses, from circumstances beyond his control, he has the consolation of knowing that he did his duty. He has regret, but no remorse. He needs consolation, but he needs no pardon. The gambler cannot say, "I did my best, but providence sent me adversity." He has remorse, not regret. He may claim our pity, not our sympathy. When all that the merchant had is lost, his character is safe. When the gambler has lost all, that includes his character.

What a strange fascination there is in gambling. Who does not recall with pity that young and brilliant lawyer, who had led to the bridal altar one of the fairest daughters of the land, whose happiness lay in the embrace of a future like an ocean of pearls and diamonds, but who became addicted to this entrancing vice? The habit had fastened upon him, its hooks of steel had entered his very soul. On a certain night he lost heavily. He then staked his splendid mansion, the patrimony from an honored father. The home was lost. In despair he left that hall of hells; the night air touched his temples, but could not chill to death this charm of charmers. He said there was one hope left; he would return. The gamblers looked amazed at his reappearance. As his last stake—all that he had left in the world, on which he hoped to recover all that he had lost—he staked his coach and horses. The game was played; again he lost. Leading the winner to the street, and pointing to him, he said to the coachman, "Here is your master;" and then, in a despair that knew no relief, a homeless indigent wretch, he walked the streets of the silent, sleeping city; he looked at the stars of his childhood, but they brought him no relief; he lingered beneath the light of the street lamp, which only revealed a countenance of despair; he pressed his temples and cursed the day of his birth.—J. P. Newman.

Why They Were Happy.

In a certain village were two families, one prosperous and rich, the other merely getting along; yet the former was famous in the village for its unhappiness and friction between its members while the latter was equally renowned for its peacefulness and content. The happy family became continually happier—to him that hath shall be given; the unhappy family became continually more unhappy—from him that hath not shall be taken away that which he seemeth to have.

The man of wealth could stand it no longer. He went to his humbler friend and asked him where he thought the trouble lay.

"I have land enough, and house enough and money enough, yet we are always quarreling and unhappy. You have nothing like the means for comfort and enjoyment that I have, and yet your people are affectionate and content."

The poor man replied thoughtfully, "Perhaps it is because you are all such good people at your house."

The rich man objected that if they were all good people, certainly they ought to be happy together.

But the poor man would not recede. "No, you are all good at your house. Now, at my house it is different. We are a very faulty lot, and we all know it. To illustrate, suppose I am sitting on the rug by the brasier, and the maid passing there kicks over my teacup, spilling the tea over the mats, I immediately break out with 'Excuse me, excuse me. Very stupid of me. No business to have a teacup out in the middle of the room for people to stumble over. Serves me right.'

But the maid will not have it that way. She drops down, wipes up the tea with her handkerchief and with beaming face cries, "Oh, master, what a blunderbus I am! Always stumbling and making trouble. It will only serve me right if you turn me out without a word one of these days.'

You see how it is, we are such a faulty lot all around, and we know it so well that there is no chance for ill-feeling or quarreling."

And the rich man, after thinking a moment, slowly said, "I see it all. It would be very different at our house. I would turn on the maid with, 'Stupid, what are you up to now? You've only two feet; can't you look out for that number, or are they so big they are bound to hit every object in the room? I'll have to turn you off some day and get a maid of more delicate build,' and the maid sullenly mutters, 'A lazy man has no business to spread himself all over the room and get in busy people's way.' I guess you are right, we are all too good—or at least we think we are."—Home Herald.

The Children.

They are helpless and innocent; the heart aches for them. Would that we were as innocent as they. But the tired and overworked parent will fret and scold at their every fault. Each careless action and little failure is treated harshly, as if we older ones never made mistakes. Why expect the little ones to be men and women? Why speak cruelly, when a gentle reproving command will do? Why scold, when calm, firm, sweet words will win? Do not stand on your dignity; unbend your soul; let pity and love rule. Kindness is of pleasant remembrance. But to lay your darling away with recollections of sharp loud words and hasty recalled for blows, will hold only bitter remorse. God pity the mother who folds the active hands, and closes the bright eyes, with a long arrear of impatience like acid and wormwood to flow into the cup of memory!

How small, how trifling a thing will cause a child to shout in gladness. A smile, a toy, A caress is all it costs to bring joy. Give these to the children now, before the dark evil days of sorrow burden the heart. Send them out doors with smiles. Part from them affectionately. Put them to bed with kisses and blessings. Never let them go with sharp, biting reproofs ringing in their ears. Hush them to sleep with loving words. They will lie down on sad pillows enough in after days, without sobbing themselves asleep now. At least let the dear ones have a happy childhood to remember, the sweet memory of which no clouded future can efface. Repress wild, naughty license, but let the heart overflow and sing with its fulness of innocent joy. To ever indulge is to spoil, but true love never spoiled a single child.

Tell them all about Jesus. Teach them to pray, and pray with them. God bless the dear sweet children. How many millions of them arrayed in white will shine and sing in glory! —The Christian.

Here are a number of valuable suggestions for keeping the air of the house pure—

Plenty of sunlight.
A dry cellar at all seasons.
Frequent inspection of plumbing.
Open war against the feather duster.
A thorough daily airing of each room.
Shaking and brushing clothing out of doors.
Opening windows at night; discarding weather strips.

The fifth Annual Conference of the Church of God of Ohio, will be held in Springfield, Ohio, beginning on Wednesday, Aug. 7, and will continue over the following Sunday. The meetings will be held at the fair grounds, and the meals will be served on the ground at fifteen cents each, and sleeping quarters will also be found on the grounds, as the church of Springfield will provide cots for the visitors, and would like the brethren and sisters to bring their own towels and such toilet articles as they need, as it will be more convenient. Hoping this will bring out many of the brethren and sisters from every church as we want this to be a real good Conference. Please let me know how many will come and the time and the road you expect to come on and there will be some one at the depot to meet you as we want every one that can possibly come to be here.

Poetry.

The Watch on the Tower.

"What dost thou, lone watcher on the tower?
Is the day breaking?—comes the wished for hour?
Tell us the signs, and stretch abroad thy hand,
If the bright morning dawns upon the land."

"The signs are clear above me, scarcely one
Has dimmed its rays in reverence to the sun;
But yet I see on the horizon's verge,
Some fair, faint streaks; as if the light would surge."

"Look forth again, oh! watcher on the tower—
The people wake, and languish for the hour;
Long have they dwelt in darkness, and they pine
For the sun daylight that they know must shine."

"I see not well—the morn is cloudy still;
There is a radiance on the distant hill—
Even as I watch the glory seems to glow;
But the stars blink, and the night breezes blow."

"And is that all, oh! watcher on the tower?
Look forth again, it must be near the hour.
Dost thou not see the snowy mountain ropes,
And the green woods beneath them on the slopes?"

"A mist envelopes them; I cannot trace
Their outline; but the day comes on apace.
The clouds roll up in gold and amber flakes,
And all the stars grow dim The morning breaks."

"We thank thee, lonely watcher on the tower;
But look again, and tell us hour by hour,
All thou beholdest; many of us die
Ere thy day comes; oh, give them a reply!"

"I see the hill tops now; and chanticleer
Crows his prophetic carol on my ear;
I see the distant woods and fields of corn,
And ocean gleaming in the light of morn."

"Again, again—oh, watcher on the tower—
We thirst for daylight, and we bide the hour,
Patient, but longing. Tell us, shall it be
A bright, calm, glorious daylight for the free?"

"I know, but cannot tell. I hear a song,
Vivid as day itself; and clear and strong;
As of a lark—young prophet of the noon—
Pouring in sunlight his seraphic tune."

"What doth he say, oh! watcher on the tower?
Is he a prophet? Doth the dawning hour
Inspire his music? Is his chant sublime
With the full glories of the coming time?"

"He prophesies—his heart is full—his lay
Tells of the brightness of a peaceful day!
A day not cloudless, nor yet void of storm,
But sunny for the most, and clear and warm."

"We thank thee, watcher on the lonely tower,
For all thou tellest. Sings he of an hour
When error shall decay, and truth grow strong—
When right shall rule supreme, and vanquish wrong?"

"He sings of brotherhood, and joy and peace;
Of days when jealousies and hate shall cease;
When war shall die, and man's progressive mind
Soar as unfettered as its God designed."

"Well done! thou watcher on the lonely tower!
Is the day breaking? dawns the happy hour?
We pine to see it. Tell us yet again,
If the broad daylight breaks upon the plain?"

"It breaks—it comes—the misty shadows fly—
A rosy radiance gleams upon the sky;
The mountain tops reflect it calm and clear;
The plain is yet in shade; but day is near."

The Doctrine of a Future Life, By James Strong, S. T. D, L. L. D., Reviewed. No. 12.

It has doubtless been observed during this review and investigation that Dr. Strong's arguments have been founded upon his assertions and assumptions. Among his first assertions is that God is an immaterial being, and that all spiritual beings are not only immaterial, but of spirit-substance, which is a contradiction; for substance is matter and material. He also asserts that the soul is immaterial, which is true of the mythical soul-entity of the orthodox churches of Christendom. For anything that is immaterial cannot think; as there can be no thinking without an organism to produce it, though the thoughts are immaterial.

The great men among the scientists and physiologists of the world, including eminent Christian men, have not only admitted, but asserted that there can be no thinking independent of a material organism. Some of these men have come naturally and logically to this conclusion from observation, while others have verified it by careful inspection of the brain when thrown open to view, and by tests of pressure thereon, which deprived the person of all thought and consciousness until the pressure was removed, when both were immediately restored. Among some of these eminent men may be found as given by Elder Miles Grant, that great and good man, the following names, with what some of them say, as by him quoted.

Dr. Alexander Bain, Professor of Logic in the University of Aberdeen Scotland, says: "Physiologists have shown beyond question that the brain as a whole is indispensible to thought, to feeling and to volition."

Mind and body, p. 4, No. 88, Humbolt Library. Says the distinguished John Locke: "For all that the wisest man can tell; it may be matter after all which thinks." Mind and body, p 32, Says the eminent Isaac Taylor: we have no direct knowledge of mind otherwise than conjoined with animal organism. The World of Mind, p 17.

"Robert Lee, D. D. Regius Professor of Biblical Criticism, and Biblical antiquities in the University of Edinburgh, says, All our feelings, emotions, memories, imaginations; in short all mental acts or states whatever, take place through the interventions and instrumentality of the nervous system—the great center of which is the brain; and.....we have no proof that in our present state, any mental act can be performed except through that instrumentality. Sermon Oct 11, 1857.

E D. Pressence, a devout and able French writer, says, No one in our day will dispute that thought cannot go on without the brain," study of origins, p 148. Elder Miles Grant says, These testimonies agree with Bible and true science, but not with current theology."

Professor William De Witt Hyde, President of Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine, says, The current creed of Christendom is a chaos of contradictions. Truths and lies, facts and lunacies, intuitions and superstitions, essentials and excrescences are bound up in one bundle of traditions which the honest believer [and unbeliever] finds hard to swallow.....It is high time to attack this chaos. Literary Digest, April 1899.

Says the very able Dr. Austin Flint Jr., Professor of Physiology and Microscopy in Bellevue Hospital Medical College, New York, At the present day we are in possession of a sufficient number of facts to render it certain that there is and can be no intelligences without brain substance; that the destruction of the brain substance produces loss of intellectual power.....The mind is produced by the brain substance. Human Physiology, p 695.

In the light of these testimonies from eminent men (and we have not quoted all who have thus spoken), Elder Grant says: Is there a fact to show that the testimonies of these distinguished men are false? if so, where is it to be found? If they are true, as the writer believes, then they overthrow Paganism, Papacy, Mohammedanism, Mormonism, Swedenborgfulsm, Spiritualism, Theosophy and Christian Science; and prove the devil a liar when he said, Ye shall not surely die.

In view of the demonstrated fact that pressure on the brain stops thinking, the brain being inactive, and, that being in sound sleep the brain was motionless, in moderate dreams as reported by the person when awakened by the surgeon in his investigation, the brain moved slightly; in more vivid dreams the brain was more active, and when fully awake there was much more forcible motion, thus demonstrating thinking is thus produced by an active brain. Consequently, continues Elder Grant, a baby's brain produces baby thoughts; an adult brain an adult's thoughts; an idiot's brain an idiot's thoughts; a deranged brain deranged thoughts; and a dead brain no thoughts.

The Psalmist explicitly teaches that in death the thoughts perish when he says (cxiv 3, 4), Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, in whom there is no help. His breath [not a ghost or spirit] goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish. The psalmist also says (cxv 17), The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence.

According to the above demonstrated facts—confirmed by inspired testimony—that there can be no thinking only through the brain of a living organism, Dr. Strong's immaterial soul is left as a useless, mythical nonentity; and the orthodox soul entity theory, which has been promulgated by so many generations, and which has been a prolific source of skepticism and infidelity among thinking and brilliantly minded men is utterly exploded.

In noticing the assumption, and answering the arguments of Dr. Strong founded thereon on the nature of the soul, we have not aimed to show in its completeness the true Bible use of this term, but will now do so. And, it will readily be seen that the world has been led astray on this subject by the erroneous teaching of the church.

It is very remarkable that the popular churches do not yet understand, or are not willing to understand the true Scriptural use of the terms soul and spirit found so many times in the Bible and applied to God, man and the animal creation! These terms are erroneously understood as being synonymous, and are used interchangeably as referring to a conscious entity in man. But they are never so used in the Bible, as we shall prove.

Orthodox (?) theologians and intelligent clergymen know that the Inspired writers assert that the soul goes into the grave at death; and that all souls go into sheol, hades, at death, where there is no knowledge." But for the want of moral courage and fear of losing caste in their church and denomination, or that they do not really believe what God has said by his inspired servants, they neglect to inform their flocks and the world that immortal soulism, and going to heaven and hell at death are nowhere taught in the Bible. And these learned men also know that the rouakh—spirit, is simply the breath, and not a spirit entity that returns to God who gave it.

Theologians know that the term soul is used in the Bible to signify (1) a physical being, including the whole animal creation; and (2) the life of a physical being. We find the following language (Gen i 21). And God said, let the earth bring forth the nephesh khayoh—living soul [rendered living creature] after his kind; and it was so." And we have the declaration (Rev xvi 3), And every living soul died in the sea. So we have the positive proof that all living creatures on the land and in the sea are living souls; and also that these living souls die, and are then called dead souls. We find in Lev xxi 11; Num vi 6; ix 6, 7, 10; Hag ii 13, the following expressions: a dead body; the dead body of a man; the original of which is mith nephesh—dead soul; hence we have in the above phrase, the dead soul of a man!

Now as nephesh is the only soul-word of the Old Testament, and as we find from the above citations that according to the original there are dead souls and the dead souls of men, we wonder how our learned men can still insist that the soul is immaterial and immortal!

In further proof that no part of man is exempt from death we quote a few familiar passages that should settle the question in the the mind of every person believing the inspired words.

The Psalmist says, "Thou hast delivered my soul from death. He spared not their souls from death. Thou wilt not leave my soul in sheol [not hell]; neither wilt thou suffer thine holy one to see corruption. The prophet says of Messiah, He poured out his soul unto death. His soul was made an offering for sin. And Christ himself said, My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death. And yet with all such inspired declarations, the popular churches still cling with a tenacious grasp to that old Satanic and Platonic lie that the soul is immortal! God said to Adam, For in the day [not a twenty-four hour day] thou eatest thereof, dying thou shalt surely die. But the serpent said, Thou shalt not surely die. Which shall we believe, God or Satan?

Conference Report.

The Northwest Annual Conference of the Church of God, was held according to announcement, at Corvallis, Oregon, June 28 to 30 inclusive.

There was a good attendance from abroad. The preaching brethren present were Bros. Skeels, Prosser and Darby. The principal subjects of their discourses were "The Second Coming of Christ" and "The Throne of Jesus."

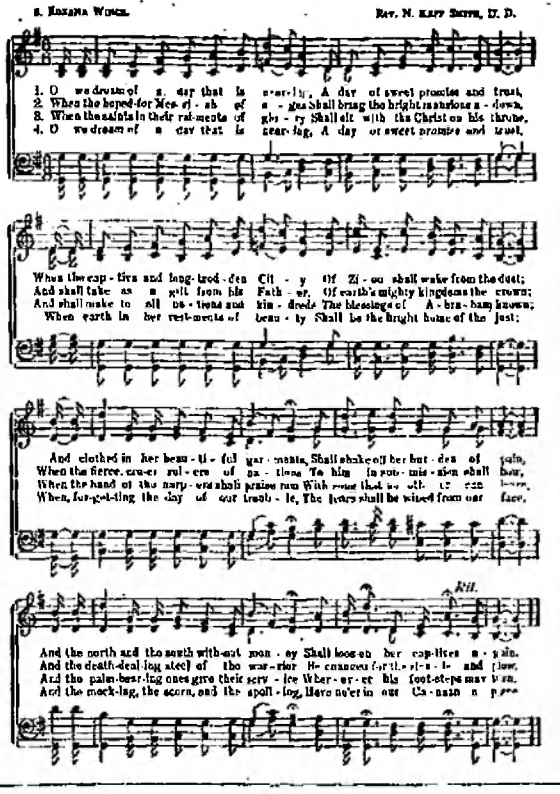
Brother Lewis Montgomery, President of the Conference arrived from Portland on Thursday evening in his large automobile accompanied by his wife, his sister Mrs. Wilson, and his wife's sister, Mrs. Cramer.

Brother and Sister Palmer, and Brother and Sister Belshaw of Eugene, were here.

Brother Prosser and wife of Sholls; Brother and Sister McIrvin, and Brother Hathaway of Fellda, Wash., and Brother Smalley of Crooked Creek, Wash., were also in attendance. Our hearts were made to rejoice and our spiritual life strengthened by the association of these dear brothers and sisters.

The meeting was opened Friday evening by an address of welcome by Brother Darby, followed by remarks by Brother Montgomery, and a short sermon by Brother Skeels.

Coming Reign of the Messiah.



On Saturday at 10:00 A M Social Meeting was held. A letter from Sister Almira Brooks was read. An essay by Brother Montgomery on Baptism, also one by Sister Montgomery on the Second Coming of Christ.

Social Meeting again on Sunday at 2:30, after which letters were read by Brother Cady from Brother Merritt Elliott, of Central Point, Oregon, a well known writer for The Restitution, and from Brother E. W. Knapp, Secretary of the Conference. These meetings gave us an inspiration such as we have not received for a long time, encouraging us to go forward with more zeal and energy in the Master's cause. Oh, how good it is for brethren to meet and talk of their faith and hope, encouraging each other to watch prayerfully and wait patiently for a coming Savior, and of a world to come free from sin and death. Why do not our brethren realize more fully the great importance and benefit of meeting together more frequently to admonish and encourage one another, and to advance the cause we love so well?

Business Meeting was called to order on Saturday afternoon at 2:30 by Brother Montgomery, President of the Conference. On account of the absence of the Secretary Brother Cady was appointed Secretary Pro Tem.

Report of Ministers.

Brother Prosser reported little done on account of ill health. Two funerals were preached, those of Brother Smeltzer, former Treasurer of the Conference, and Brother Samuel Lawrence of Scholls.

Brother A. W. Darby, of the Corvallis Church reported 50 sermons preached and two baptisms; an interesting Sunday School and regular preaching maintained. The little Church built at this place two years ago is now all finished, a new organ bought, and all out of debt.

Evangelist's Report.

Meetings held during the year at Fellda, Eden, Hudson, Wenatchee, Tacoma, Camas and Lake Shore, Wash. Falls City, Portland, Eugene, Corvallis and Central Point, Oregon. Wolf, Tustin, Los Angeles, Tulare and Oleander, Cal. Temps, Phoenix, Isaac and Rural School House, Arizona. Distance traveled on railroad over 5000 miles. Greatest success in Arizona, where nine were baptized.

Number of sermons delivered 128; days employed 177; total amount received $265.50; expenses $157 25; donated in Oregon $91.00; Washington $57.80; California $100.50; Arizona $86.00; order on Treasurer $28 00. The Treasurer reports the amount received $84.00; paid out $28.00. The small amount reported by the Treasurer is accounted for from the fact that most of the money is paid direct to the Evangelist and reported by him.

Some enthusiastic remarks on organization by Brother Prosser, followed by suggestions from Brother McIrvin, Sister Palmer, Bro. Skeels and others.

The President appointed the following committee on finance: Brother J. E. McIrvin, Fellda; Brother Smalley, Crooked Creek; Brother Prosser, Scholls; Brother Darby, Corvallis, and Brother Belshaw, Eugene.

Election of officers for the ensuing year:

President, Lewis Montgomery, Portland.

Vice President, J. W. McIrvin, Portland.

Secretary, J. J. Cady, Corvallis.

Treasurer, J. E. McIrvin, Fellda, Wash.

Committee on Resolutions: Sister Palmer; Sister Golda Darby, and Sister Cady.

On motion of Brother McIrvin, Brother Skeels was elected Evangelist for the year.

The following resolutions were reported by the committee and adopted by the Conference:

Resolved:—That we as a Conference of the Church of God, do extend our most sincere and heart-felt thanks to the Church of Corvallis for their cordial welcome and generous entertainment, both in their homes and the work of the Conference, and to the President and officers for their prompt and efficient service.

Resolved:—That we as Christian men and women do pledge our support and aid to every proper method for the suppression of vice and intemperence.

Resolved:—That in view of our belief in the soon coming of Christ, that this should be a time of special preparation by purifying our lives by faith, and bringing into subjection to him every faculty and passion of our nature, and use every means in our power to spread the Gospel of the Kingdom of God.

Resolved:—That since death has removed from our number Brother Lawrence and Brother Schmeltzer, our hearts are made sad, and our work has met with an irreparable loss, and we do hereby render our most heartfelt sympathy to their bereaved families, and can only commend them to the comforting love of Christ our Savior, and the hope of the resurrection and reunion in the kingdom of God.

Obituary.

At Owanka, S. D., July 10, 1907, Fred Realto Stearns of Sac City, Ia. died, aged 35 years, 8 months 10 days.

Born at Elendor, Iowa; he came to Sac City when 19 years old, and has been connected in a business way with one of its Banks for a number of years, and well known in the county.

He was a careful business man, scrupulously honest and had the confidence and respect of his associates. He was quiet, humble and unassuming in his demeanor. Slow to form new acquaintances but the longer he was known the more he was loved.

Baptized by the writer in the Coon River in the Summer of 1895, while we were holding a tent meeting at Sac City, and his Christian life is above reproach. He was treasurer of the Iowa State Conference of the Church of God two years, but resigned one year ago on account of failing health.

He was an ardent lover of Nature, and had make a large collection of rare minerals, birds, fishes, shells and other curios. His accuracy and industry are evinced by their tabulation and classification of his collection. He recognized the tithe as belonging to God for his work and faithfully set aside a tenth of his income for the spread of the gospel and the good of humanity.

Married to Eva L. Robbins June 27, 1894, Clifton is their only child.

We believe he sleeps in Jesus—loved and mourned by us all. O when will the sting of death be gone?

Announcement.

The Twentieth Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus in Iowa, will be held at Waterloo, Ia. Aug. 17-25, inclusive. Programme will appear later.

O. J. ALLARD, Pres.
EVA L. STEARNS, Sec.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Ohio will be held at Springfield beginning Wednesday evening August 7 and continue over the following Sunday. The coming meeting will be the fifth.

The four in the past were replete with all that goes to make a success. The speakers with one accord delivered the glad tidings of the Kingdom. Heartfelt prayers were offered. Inspiring songs were sung. Glad greetings and talks of the glories to come were heard from every side. Those who came hungry for the Word, went away full and overflowing. Let us make number five better if possible than the preceding ones. The brethren at Springfield have secured the fair grounds and buildings for the occasion. The place could only be had for the dates given above.

Those who have met the Springfield brethren know the kindly effort they will make to have things comfortable.

For the reasons given it is needless to urge those who have attended. To those who have not we say "Come and see and hear." The presence of all is needed to plan the Evangelist work for the following year. The programme will be published in due time.

P. NEILL, Pres.
J. S. THOMPSON, Sec.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Neb., will be held in St. Paul Sept. 14th to 20th inclusive.

MINNIE ROGERS, Sec.

Attention

TORCH LAKE BIBLE SCHOOL.

Conditions have arisen which make it necessary to change the time and place of the meeting of the Bible school. It is now decided that the time will be from Thursday July 25 to Aug. 8. The place, the pretty summer resort at Lemon Park—Indian Lake. This pleasant resort is only 2½ miles north of Vicksburg, Mich. From Chicago take Grand Trunk R. R. direct to Lemon park. From South Bend the same. From Grand Rapids change at Vicksburg to Grand Trunk, or change at Kalamazoo to C. K. & S. R. R. for Pavilion. At Pavilion change to Grand Trunk R. R. for Lemon park only 2½ miles west. These resort grounds are 14 miles south of Kalamazoo, 43 miles north of South Bend, 100 east of Chicago. Cottages can be rented very reasonably. When several use one the expense is very light. Meals quite reasonable or board ourselves. If cottages are rented there are beds, pillows, gasoline stove, chairs, tables and dishes, everything for light house keeping. Visitors should bring 2 sheets, 2 pillowslips, a quilt, a tick, straw for ticks close by. There are two boats with each cottage, and splendid fishing.

Above and beyond all that will be the instructive Bible lessons by competent teachers with maps, charts and lesson outlines for every session. Lessons not only intensely interesting during the two weeks but good for all life time. Added to this the evening sermons by able speakers. Altogether will make a feast not to be forgotten. Compared with the educational value for eternal things, the expense will not be worth considering. The school of last year is still bearing good fruit. Let all come who can.

MRS. H. E. BOICE,
MRS. M. A. WOODWARD,
P. NEILL.

ATTENTION PLEASE.

Will all who anticipate attending the Bible School at Lemon Park, Indian Lake, from July 25 to August 8 please notify me as soon as possible, so that I can make arrangments for cottage room, as nearly all are taken now, and when they are gone, we will have to resort to tents.

Come one and all, and enjoy studying God's Word, with the woods, and birds, the beautiful lake and cool breeze to rest you while you study. Address me at Dutton, Michigan.

M. A. WOODWARD.

Notice.

All who are interested in the dance question, and wish to know the workings of the ball room and dance house will get a full understanding of the matter by getting and reading carefully the little tract on the "Evils of the Ball room Unveiled." It will cost but ten cents post paid. Send to the author L. S. Bronson, Niles, Mich.

A New Tract.

The Great Divine Healer vs Latter-Day Healers, by Uncle John Foore.

A Tract for the last days. Should be read by every thinking Christian.

Paul 2 Tim. iii. 13. "But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived."

Matt. vii. 21. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works. And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

Brethren, these tracts have gone into many families, both to brethren and people of other denominations, a few infidels, and one Christian Scientist, and all seem to be well pleased with it; but only a few of the brethren have sent to me any help in the way of paying for the tracts, and tracts are very expensive. We are anxious to have more published on different subjects. Please help to send these Pearls out among the people.

Send orders to John Foore, at 2012 W. Corning Ave. Parsons, Kan. The price is 10 cents each.

Evangelizing Notice.

The N. W. Conference has selected me again as Evangelist. The Brethren have added Arizona, and California to my field of labor. Any church or isolated brethren that want meetings during the Conference year should correspond with me at an early date so I can plan my year's work for this extensive territory which now includes western Oregon, Washington, California and Arizona.

Hereafter my home will be Scholls, Oregon, and Address, W. L. Skeels, R. D. 1, Laurel, Oregon.

Will all persons interested in the truth, and all isolated brethren within the State with whom we are not acquainted, please write to us? Beloved, we are anxious to locate and correspond with you, that we may impart unto you some spiritual gift.

Address S. J. Lindsay, State Evangelist, or Robt. G. Huggins, Box G, Oregon, Ill.

ILLINOIS BIBLE SCHOOL.

The Annual Bible School for Illinois will convene at Oregon, Ill., August 12-21. Brother R. G. Huggins has been requested to prepare an outline of study on the nature, office, and work of the Holy Spirit, a task for which we deem him well qualified. The other work of the school will be about the same as in former years. Our evenings will be occupied in about the same manner as they were last year. Already many have signified their intention to be present. When you read this, please write me whether you will attend, and send me the names of others who may be induced to attend. Our school is no longer an experiment, but an established instrument for good. Come thou with us and we will do thee good. Address me at Oregon, Ill.

S. J. LINDSAY.

Syriac New Testament.

A new edition of Murdock's Translation of the Syriac New Testament has just been issued by a Boston publishing house, and we have arranged to supply our readers with the work. The regular price is $2.50, and every Bible student should own this book. It is bound in half leather, and lies open in the hand when being used. The printing is clear and plain, and the paper excellent. We have so arranged with the publishers that we can supply this book for a limited time only at a reduced price, which will enable all who wish this valuable aid to the study of God's Word to possess it. We can offer it now at $2.00 post paid. All who wish to avail themselves of this low rate should do so at once.

NOTICE.

Information wanted concerning an Evangelist known as Blind Haynes, who traveled some years ago in Kansas, selling a pamphlet written by himself, entitled "When will Christ come?" Is he living? If so, where? Who has a copy of his book to sell, or loan for a short time? What firm published his book? Information will be thankfully received, and it is of importance.

Account Giving.

There is certainly a great day of accounts coming, when our Lord will reward every one according as her or his work has been.

The great concern of each one should be, What have I done upon which to expect reward? If you should judge yourself, what would your judgment be?

Our talents differ, and each one will be held accountable for the use of such talent, whatever that may be. If you have only one, use that.

Some one says, what can I do? Why you can circulate literature teaching the truth if nothing else. There is no one but who can do that. Will that do any good? Oh, yes. Let me tell you something. Some people have bought several copies of "Pine Woods Bible Class" and lending them to their friends and neighbors. It being easy and attractive reading, most people will read it. It is bearing fruit already. I have just been told of a man who had become discouraged. He had listened to preachers of different denominations, and found they contradicted each other. He began to drift into infidelity, when a Brother put a copy of Pine Woods Bible Class into his hands. Now in place of infidelity, he is rejoicing in new found light. It would take too much space to tell of other cases. Try this work, and add some stars to your crown.

The Students Text Book is already an assured success, and will be printed after I get home from this present trip.

I desire that all who want it, to send in their names in advance, that I may know how many to print. All you order now, you will be sure to get when printed. The price will be fifty cents.

Yours in the Blessed Hope,
W. H. WILSON.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Your loving brother.

"The Lord is Coming."

"This was the joyous and usual salutation used by the members of the church apostolic, in the second and third centuries. How much more should we, upon whom the morning of the resurrection is about to break, use the same soul-reviving expression."—Im. Millennium, June 1, 1844.

The Lord is coming! lo! this is
The herald note of jubilee,—
And when we meet, and when we part,
The salutation from the heart.

The Lord is coming! sound it forth
From east to west—from south to north,
Spread out! speed out the tidings glad,
That none who love him may be sad

The Lord is coming! angels! rejoice!
We seem to hear his glorious voice,
Majestic uttered from afar
As on he hastes his conquering car.

The Lord is coming! vengeful doom
Are all his judgments and his ire,
And none can hope to 'scape his wrath,
Who walk not in the "narrow path."

The Lord is coming! seas, retire!
Ye mountains melt to liquid fire!
Ye oceans cease to ebb and flow!
His stately steppings ye should know!

The Lord is coming! who shall stand?
Who shall be found at his right hand?
He that hath the garments on
That the righteous King hath won.

The Lord is coming! watch and pray!
Watch ye, and "haste unto the day."
So shalt thou then escape the "snare,"
And Christ's eternal glory share.

The Lord is coming! let this be
The herald-note of jubilee,
And often as we meet and part
The salutation from the heart.

The Doctrine of a Future Life, By James Strong, S. T. D, L. L. D., Reviewed. No. 13.

...We are informed that the Hebrew word nephesh is rendered soul four hundred and seventy-five times; person, or creature, or other words of like character one hundred and three times; life, or words of like import one hundred and twenty-four times, and applied indescriminately to the life of man and beast; it is also rendered mind, or some of its passions fifty times. When nephesh is rendered soul it always signifies either (1) a physical being, or, (2) the life or mind of a physical being, but never a being within a being.

In the light of the above quoted facts by an eminent Bible student, whose name we have forgotten, we will further show how this term is used in the Bible, and, which will also show what an unfortunate and ruinous mistake has been made in promulgating the dogma that the immaterial soul within man (?) does all the thinking, and can think independent of a living, or dead material organism; but which, as we have seen has been exploded by the careful inspection of the exposed brain, and experimental tests showing there was no thinking or consciousness where pressure was made upon it. Hence this great error of the church has led thousands upon thousands to reject the Bible as a Divine Revelation, because they knew that man thinks by means of his brain just as the animal creation does by its brain.

We have given in a former paper a few examples of the use of this term and will give a few others, which will show the correctness of the above quoted statement, as to its trifold meaning. Gen i 24, was cited, where nephesh khayoh, living soul, is rendered living creature, and applied to the whole animal creation; and Rev xvi 3, where it is said, every living soul died in the sea. So the same truth we find in the New Testament, Gen ii 7, where it says, Man became a living soul. It is said Gen xlvi 26, 27), All the souls (persons) that come with Jacob into Egypt, came out of his loins besides Jacob's sons, wives, all the souls were three score and six. Here then, with its first occurrences, this term signifies not only the physical being called man, but the whole animal creation. The wise man says, (Prov xiii 3) "The soul of the sluggard desireth and hath nothing; but the soul of the diligent shall be made fat. Can an immaterial soul be made fat? If not, then this Bible expression the soul is not, as asserted, a living entity in man, but the man himself. In further proof of this fact, the prophet says (Isa xxix 8), It shall even be as if a hungry man dreameth, and behold, he eateth, and when he awaketh his soul is empty; or as when a thirsty man dreameth, and behold, he drinketh, but when he awaketh, behold he is faint, and his soul hath appetite [he is hungry]; so shall the multitude of all the nations be, that fight against Mount Zion. We find the following (1 Sam xxv 29), Yet a man has risen to pursue thee, and to seek thy soul [life], but the soul [life] of my Lord shall be bound in the bundle of life with the Lord thy God; and the souls of thine enemies, them shall he sling out as out of the middle of a sling. Prov xii 10, A righteous man regardeth the [nephesh] life of his beast. Prov xiii 8, The ransom of a man's [nephesh] life are his riches. Nephesh is rendered mind. Deut xviii 6, expressing desire of mind, xxviii 65, sorrow of mind; Ezek xxiii 17, 18, 22, alienation of mind. But we close the citations where nephesh is rendered mind by quoting one verse (1 Chron xxviii 9) of the wise and pathetic words of king David in his wonderful charge to his son Solomon, as he stood before all Israel on that memorable occasion.

And thou, Solomon my son, know thou the God of thy fathers and serve him with a perfect heart and with a willing mind; for Jehovah searcheth all hearts, and understandeth all the imaginations of the thoughts; if thou seek him he will be found of thee; but if thou forsake him he will cast thee off forever.

Our fervent prayer to God is, that these loving, warning, and inspired words of the king and sweet singer of Israel may be so deeply and indelibly impressed by him—who knoweth all our thoughts and the motive of every act—upon the minds and hearts of all who read them, as to lead those who are in Christ to a firmer trust in the precious promises of the Bible, and a compliance with their conditions; and those who are out of Christ to him, who is the rock and foundation of all hope for a future and eternal existence in the everlasting kingdom of God.

We now call serious attention to other Scriptures where soul is used just as in other places where it is assumed it refers to a living entity within man, called the immortal soul, and yet it must be admitted by all to refer to the physical man, thus showing its idiomic use, the further proof of which is, that God uses it of himself as of man, when he says, My soul, my spirit, as he often does, meaning himself.

King David, in praying for deliverance from his enemies says (Psa vii 1, 2): O Lord my God, in thee do I put my trust; save me from all them that persecute me, and deliver me; lest he tear my soul like a lion, rending it in pieces when there is none to deliver." Who is so blind as not to see, or so wedded to his orthodox creed, that he is not willing to see that my soul here is the me, the physical man? And that this frequent expression my soul always in the Bible means as before stated, either the physical man, or the life or mind of man, but never a living entity within man.

Job says (vii 15), So that my soul chooseth strangling and death rather than life. And they smote all the souls that were therein with the edge of the sword, utterly destroying them. Josh xi 11. Inasmuch as soul is here used embraces the whole man, the mythical, immaterial, immortal soul was also destroyed. And no one will affirm that the word destroy here means torment, as is culpably done when God says—But all the wicked will he destroy. Samson said (Josh x 18), Let my soul (margin) die with the Philistines. And Balaam said (Num xxiii 10), Let my soul [margin,] die the death of the right ous, and let my last end be like his. He spared not their souls from death, but gave their life over to the pestilence. Psa lxxviii 50.

In speaking of the wicked the Psalmist says (xlix 12, 14, 15). Nevertheless man being in honor abideth not, he is like the beasts that perish..... Like sheep they are laid in (sheol) the grave; death shall feed on them; and the upright shall have dominion over them in the morning [of the resurrection]; and their beauty shall consume in (sheol) the grave from their dwelling. But God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave; for he shall receive me.

The Scriptures above quoted contradict all the assertions of the Strong, and the assumptions of the popular church as to the nature of the soul, or the nature of man. We notice a few points in the last quotation.

1. Man doth perish—die like the beasts, and this is confirmed in plain words by the inspired words of the wise man (Eccl iii 19, 20) who says, For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts.....as the one dieth, so dieth the other, yea, they all have one breath [spirit, v. 21], so that a man [in death] has no preeminence above a beast. All go unto one place; all are of the dust, and all turn again. The Psalmist says [illegible] redemption of the [illegible] —they that trust in [illegible] is precious, and [illegible] i. e. they will [illegible] deemed. Again [illegible] What man is [illegible] and shall not see death, deliver his soul from [illegible] of [sheol] the grave?

Every [illegible] must admit that all the [illegible] ations absolutely control [illegible] pular dogma, which is the [illegible] goes into sheol, or the [illegible] the soul goes to heaven or hell [illegible]

In concluding the [illegible] mony of the Old Testament [illegible] use of the term nephesh—soul [illegible] introduce the testimony of a man, which confirms the statements and arguments herein made as to the nature of man.

Dr. Eddis, in his Biblical Cyclopedia upon the prophetical words, Thou shalt not leave my soul in sheol; neither wilt thou suffer thine holy one to see corruption,—says, A very little attention to the laws of Hebrew grammar and the principles of Hebrew poetry and parallelisms, will at once render this prophecy plain to the meanest capacity. The sixteenth Psalm refers to Messiah. Messiah expresses perfect confidence in his Father. Being assured of his own ability to fulfil the commission, he was no less assured that the Father whom he served would raise him from the dead—the law being satisfied, and his work concluded. My flesh also shall rest in hope, for thou wilt not abandon me to sheol, nor permit thy holy one to see corruption.

The two lines generally form what is usually called a parallelism—the last hemistich echoing the sentiment of the former. The words my soul mean merely myself. Nouns of this nature are used, because the Hebrew has no intensive or reflexive pronouns. It is thus obvious that the argument based upon the idea that Christ's soul went to sheol or hades and his body to the grave, has no foundation. The Hebrew does not warrant this distinction. Christ's soul in such an idiom is his entire person.

This is a candid, indorsed statement of the Bible use of the word soul, as we have shown in our investigation of this term. In our next article we will show the true use of psuche—soul in the New Testament.

To the Church of God, Assembled, Greeting:

For a year past it has been my earnest hope, that I might at this time be permitted to meet with those of like precious faith, and lend my feeble assistance in building up the cause so dear to every child of God; but continued ill health will cause me to forego that pleasure; but my prayer is that God will bless your work, and that the coming year may be the most successful in the history of the Northwest Conference; but to attain the best results, there should be a united interest and work by every local body in the whole conference territory. Unity of action, unity of faith with an earnest desire to bring to the front, the simple elements of the gospel with an example of purity in our every day life, will accomplish much good, and daily add in the aggregate to the number taken out for the Lord Jesus Christ. An event that should be paramount to all others; for it rests with the church in a great measure, as to the time, long or short, when we shall see the Lord coming in the clouds of heaven; or, has that thought occurred to you, that the work of the "One Body" is responsible for the delay of the Master's coming? Have we sufficient zeal and earnestness to bring it to pass at an early date? or can we truly say from the depths of our hearts, "Come Lord Jesus," or would we rather wait until next month, or next year, until we succeed in bringing about some fondly cherished temporal event that we have set our hearts upon?

It is evident from the reading of Acts xv. [illegible] that the Lord is now engaged in taking [illegible] a people for his name; and [illegible] so, it will consist of a [illegible] ber belie[illegible] will be completed, and it is only [illegible] ugh the gospel that men and women can be brought into obedience to the teachings of the crucified One; and it is through the efforts of the church, that they can be reached and caused to hear the beautiful message of redemptive love, and thus have their names recorded among the chosen ones, and written in the Lamb's Book of Life. It is to be regretted that in some localities, there have been divisions crept into the church that has been a great stumbling block in the progress of the truth, and among some of the brethren, while it has but little to do with the question of "What must I do to be saved," has been made a test of fellowship, and destroyed the labor of years. I pray God that we of the Oregon Conference may obliterate these questions from public discussion, for how can we expect to receive the benefits of the great and precious promises, in the coming age, if we allow questions to enter into our worship, that will divide the unity of the church. Paul exhorts us to be of one mind, to all speak the same thing, and to be perfectly joined together in one judgment. Christ, the Head, is not divided, and how can the Body be, and remain acceptable to him? Many years ago when we had such grand old soldiers of the cross to preach for us as Reed, Stephenson, Chase, Graton and many others that I could name, if we were asked to what religious body we belonged? promptly did we reply, "To the One Faith," or "Church of the Abrahamic faith," and it was strictly true; for the faith of one, was the faith of all, and what glorious and refreshing times we had in our meetings and Bible schools. Christian precepts and duties were carried out to the letter; if there was any thing that was desired, that was thought to be for the good of the cause, the matter of cost, if within reasonable bounds, was not considered, that was a foregone conclusion; that did not enter into the discussion, for the heart and hand was open, and what was given, was given freely and to the glory of God. Innovations, hobbies and ambitions to become leaders in some new find, or theory had not crept into the church, but they sought that oneness of faith and doctrine that did not bear the name, but they were abundantly able to give a reason for their faith and hope. I at one time heard an important officer of a sectarian church remark that it was useless for them to try to argue with you people, for you have a passage of Scripture to head us off at every turn, and you give us no show. But then you are always talking of the promises, the nature of man, baptism and the kingdom of God, and "don't spread out." I thought that was a pretty wide field and it was susceptible of quite a spread. I think if we live up to the principles of those subjects in all their fulness we will not be found badly lacking when the Lord comes. By bringing in questions that are foreign to salvation, those who are earnestly seeking for the truth in all its gospel simplicity, are liable to become confused, and there are more chances that they will become careless and perhaps led into infidelity, than that they will persevere and ultimately adopted into the Abrahamic family. It is true that we are commanded to grow in grace and knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, and we can only do so by earnest and prayerful investigation, and that we must study to show ourselves approved unto God, a workman that need not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth. Says one of our able brethren in a recent paper, there are now truths constantly springing up that require investigation, which statement may be true; yet he carries the idea, that if we do not rush into the study of the "new truth," we become fossilized, non-progressive, and lose sight of the many beautiful statements of the gospel. It is true, truth itself, that there are many beautiful facts in the gospel, that we never see, let us study ever so hard, for we can never expect to [illegible] all in this life, but in our investigations of new truths, let us be careful to hold to the established faith, lest in our zeal to acquire leadership, we let them slip, as we are warned by the apostle Paul. If brethren differ upon questions that are not vital to salvation, let them speak kindly, forbearing one another in love, and not fall into the fatal error of using sarcasm and contempt for the views of another, thereby engendering strife, destroying that oneness that must be an abiding virtue with the people of God.

Finally brethren, let us use extreme care to cultivate all those beautiful attributes of Christian grace and character that will make us one in thought and deed; endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace, until we receive that peace, that surpasseth all understanding. Let us each and every one, be rooted and grounded in the truth, not carried about by every word of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness whereby they lay in wait to deceive. But let us speak the truth in love, that we may grow up into him in all things, which is the head even Christ. I pray God that you may, as a result of your meetings be abundantly blessed, and that there may be an upspringing from the results of your labors, that may continue to grow, and bring many into the fold of Christ and every heart may be gladdened and encouraged, to go forward in more extended labor for the cause we love so well.

Your Brother in the Blessed Hope.

At the Breaking of Bread.

Heb xii 28, Wherefore we receive a kingdom which cannot be removed. Let us have grace whereby we may serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear.

What kingdom does this have reference to? It has reference to God's kingdom when re-established on the earth. It could not be any other kingdom, as all other kingdoms can be removed. When Christ was here, his disciples thought he would at that time re-establish the kingdom. As we see from their question, John xviii 6). When they were therefore come together they asked of him saying, Lord, will thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

And his answer to them was, It is not for you to know the time. You remember God's kingdom was overturned on account of wicked kings. He said of Zedekiah, Ezek xxi 25, And thou profane wicked prince of Israel, whose day is come, when iniquity shall have an end. Thus sayeth the Lord God; remove the diadem, and take off the crown; I will overturn, overturn, overturn it; and it (the kingdom) shall be no more until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him.

In Dan ii 44, we also have a statement from God that he will re-establish the kingdom. He says, "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people; but it shall break in pieces and consume all other kingdoms. And it shall stand forever. When Christ was here he taught his disciples to look for this kingdom. In Matt iv 23, And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, (or good news of the kingdom) and we must see that he meant this kingdom was to be here on the earth, for it is told in such plain words all through the Bible. If not to be here, why would we continue to pray, Thy kingdom come; that thy will may be done on earth.

Psalm xxii 28, For the kingdom is the Lord's; and he is the governor among the nations. He also says in Matt xxiv 14, And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come.

Psalm cxlv 1-12, They shall speak of the glories of thy kingdom, and talk of thy power; to make known to the sons of men his mighty acts and glorious majesty of his kingdom. Thy kingdom come that thy will may be done on earth.

One's Own Taskmaster.

Without some spur to action, we become listless and lazy; but the work done by any man will be of far more value if he is his own taskmaster. A boy was an apprentice in a printing-office. The foreman tried to drive him to work by warning him of the consequences of failure. The results were by no means happy.

But, later on, the foreman realized that it was unnecessary to drive the boy longer. He was driving himself. On his thirteenth birthday he was given a watch. The first day he owned it he timed himself as he set type. Finding that he could set a stickful in twelve minutes, he made this a standard. The watch was placed on the case. Every twelve minutes his stick must be be filled, or he would have to account to himself. Day after day he kept to this rule. It was not long before the boy who was his own taskmaster became the speediest and most dependable compositor in the office.—Sunday School Times.

The Promises of God.

Does your spirit faint? The promises of God are a drooping honeycomb, better than Jonathan's. Dip your pilgrim staff into their richness, and put your hand to your mouth, like him, and your faintness shall pass away. Are you thirsty? They are the flowing stream of the water of life, of which you may drink by the way, and lift your head. Are you overcome by the sultry burden of the day? They are as the cool shadow of a great rock in a weary land. Have your steps well-nigh slipped? They are a staff in your hand, on top of which, betimes, like Jacob, you may lean, and worship God. Are you sad? There are no such songs to beguile the road, and to bear you on with gladness of heart, as when one goeth with a pipe to come into the mountain of the Lord. Put but a promise under your head by night, and were your pillow a stone like that of Bethel, you shall have Jacob's vision. The thirstiest wilderness will become an Elim with palm trees and [illegible]

"The Lord is Coming."

"This was the joyous and usual salutation used by the members of the church apostolic, in the second and third centuries. How much more should we, upon whom the morning of the resurrection is about to break, use the same soul-reviving expression."—Am. Millenarian, June 1, 1844.

The Lord is coming! let this be
The herald note of jubilee,—
And when we meet, and when we part,
The salutation from the heart.

The Lord is coming! sound it forth
From east to west—from south to north,
Speed on speed out the tidings glad,
That none who love him may be sad

The Lord is coming! saints, rejoice!
We seem to hear his glorious voice,
Majestic uttered from afar
As on he hastes his conquering car.

The Lord is coming! vengeful dire
Are all his judgments and his ire,
And none can hope to 'scape his wrath,
Who walk not in the "narrow path."

The Lord is coming! seas, retire!
Ye mountains melt to liquid fire!
Ye oceans evase to ebb and flow!
His stately steppings ye should know!

The Lord is coming! who shall stand?
Who shall be found at his right hand?
He that hath the garments on
That the righteous King hath won.

The Lord is coming! watch and pray!
Watch ye, and "haste unto the day."
So shalt thou then escape the "snare,"
And Christ's eternal glory share.

The Lord is coming! let this be
The herald-note of jubilee,
And often as we meet and part
The salutation from the heart.

The Doctrine of a Future Life, By James Strong, S. T. D, L. L. D, Reviewed. No. 13.

We are informed that the Hebrew word nephesh is rendered soul four hundred and seventy-five times; person, or creature, or other words of like character one hundred and three times; life, or words of like import one hundred and twenty-four times, and applied indescriminately to the life of man and beast; it is also rendered mind, or some of its passions fifty times. When nephesh is rendered soul it always signifies either (1) a physical being, or, (2) the life or mind of a physical being, but never a being within a being.

In the light of the above quoted facts by an eminent Bible student, whose name we have forgotten, we will further show how this term is used in the Bible, and, which will also show what an unfortunate and ruinous mistake has been made in promulgating the dogma that the immaterial soul within man (?) does all the thinking, and can think independent of a living, or dead material organism; but which, as we have seen has been exploded by the careful inspection of the exposed brain, and experimental tests showing there was no thinking or consciousness where pressure was made upon it. Hence this great error of the church has led thousands upon thousands to reject the Bible as a Divine Revelation, because they knew that man thinks by means of his brain just as the animal creation does by its brain.

We have given in a former paper a few examples of the use of this term and will give a few others, which will show the correctness of the above quoted statement, as to its trifold meaning, Gen i 24, was cited, where nephesh khayoh, living soul, is rendered living creature, and applied to the whole animal creation; and Rev xvi 3, where it is said, every living soul died in the sea. So the same truth we find in the New Testament, Gen ii 7, where it says, Man became a living soul. It is said Gen xlvi 26, 27), All the souls (persons) that come with Jacob into Egypt, came out of his loins besides Jacob's sons, wives, all the souls were three score and six. Here then, with its first occurrences, this term signifies not only the physical being called man, but the whole animal creation. The wise man says, (Prov xiii 3 "The soul of the sluggard desireth and hath nothing; but the soul of the diligent shall be made fat. Can an immaterial soul be made fat? If not, then this Bible expression the soul is not, as asserted, a living entity in man, but the man himself. In further proof of this fact, the prophet says (Isa xxix 8), It shall even be as if a hungry man dreameth, and behold, he eateth, and when he awaketh his soul is empty; or as when a thirsty man dreameth, and behold, he drinketh, but when he awaketh, behold he is faint, and his soul hath appetite [he is hungry]: so shall the multitude of all the nations be, that fight against Mount Zion. We find the following (1 Sam xxv 29), Yet a man has risen to pursue thee, and to seek thy soul [life], but the soul [life] of my Lord shall be bound in the bundle of life with the Lord thy God; and the souls of thine enemies, them shall he sling out as out of the middle of a sling. Prov xii 10, A righteous man regardeth the [nephesh] life of his beast. Prov xiii 8. The ransom of a man's [nephesh] life are his riches. Nepheh is rendered mind. Deut xviii 6, expressing desire of mind, xxviii 65, sorrow of mind; Ezek xxiii 17, 18, 22, alienation of mind. But we close the citations where nepheh is rendered mind by quoting one verse (1 Chron xxviii 9) of the wise and pathetic words of king David in his wonderful charge to his son Solomon, as he stood before all Israel on that memorable occasion.

And thou, Solomon my son, know thou the God of thy fathers and serve him with a perfect heart and with a willing mind; for Jehovah searcheth all hearts, and understandeth all the imaginations of the thoughts; if thou seek him he will be found of thee; but if thou forsake him he will cast thee off forever.

Our fervent prayer to God is, that these loving, warning, and inspired words of the king and sweet singer of Israel may be so deeply and indelibly impressed by him—who knoweth all our thoughts and the motive of every act—upon the minds and hearts of all who read them, as to lead those who are in Christ to a firmer trust in the precious promises of the Bible, and a compliance with their conditions; and those who are out of Christ to him, who is the rock and foundation of all hope for a future and eternal existence in the everlasting kingdom of God.

We now call serious attention to other Scriptures where soul is used just as in other places where it is assumed it refers to a living entity within man, called the immortal soul, and yet it must be admitted by all to refer to the physical man, thus showing its idiomic use, the further proof of which is, that God uses it of himself as of man, when he says, My soul, my spirit, as he often does, meaning himself.

King David, in praying for deliverance from his enemies says (Psa vii 1, 2): O Lord my God, in thee do I put my trust; save me from all them that persecute me, and deliver me, lest he tear my soul like a lion, rendering it in pieces when there is none to deliver." Who is so blind as not to see, or so wedded to his orthodox creed, that he is not willing to see that my soul here is the me, the physical man? And that this frequent expression my soul always in the Bible means as before stated, either the physical man, or the life or mind of man, but never a living entity within man.

Job says (vii 15), So that my soul chooseth strangling and death rather than life. And they smote all the souls that were therein with the edge of the sword, utterly destroying them. Josh xi 11. Inasmuch as soul is here used embraces the whole man, the mythical, immaterial, immortal soul was also destroyed. And no one will affirm that the word destroy here means torment, as is culpably done when God says—But all the wicked will he destroy. Samson said (Josh x 18), Let my soul (margin) die with the Philistines. And Balaam said (Num xxiii 10), Let my soul [margin] die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his. He spared not their souls from death, but gave their life over to the pestilence. Psa lxxviii 50.

In speaking of the wicked the Psalmist says (xlix 12, 14, 15). Nevertheless man being in honor abideth not, he is like the beasts that perish.....Like sheep they are laid in (sheol) the grave; death shall feed on them; and the upright shall have dominion over them in the morning [of the resurrection]; and their beauty shall consume in (sheol) the grave from their dwelling. But God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave; for he shall receive me.

The Scriptures above quoted contradict all the assertions of Dr. Strong, and the assumptions of the popular church as to the nature of the soul, or the nature of man. Let us notice a few points in the last quotation.

1. Man doth perish—die like the beasts, and this is confirmed in plain words by the inspired words of the wise man (Eccl iii 19, 20) who says, For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts.....as the one dieth, so dieth the other, yea, they all have one breath [Heb. ruach, v. 21], so that a man [in death] has no preeminence above a beast. All go unto one place—all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again. The Psalmist says, For the redemption of the soul [lives—they that trust in him] is precious, and [never—i. e. they will never be] redeemed. Again he says, What man is he [that liveth, and shall not see death? shall he deliver his soul from the hand of [sheol] the grave?

Every candid reader must admit that all the above quotations absolutely contradict the popular dogma, which is that the soul goes into sheol, or the grave, but the soul goes to heaven or hell.

In concluding the testimony of the Old Testament use of the term nepheh—soul—we introduce the testimony of another man, which confirms the statements and arguments herein made as to the nature of man.

Dr. Eddie, in his Biblical Cyclopedia upon the prophetical words, Thou shalt not leave my soul in sheol; neither wilt thou suffer thine holy one to see corruption,—says, A very little attention to the laws of Hebrew grammar and the principles of Hebrew poetry and parallelism, will at once render this prophecy plain to the meanest capacity. The sixteenth Psalm refers to Messiah. Messiah expresses perfect confidence in his Father. Being assured of his own ability to fulfil the commission, he was no less assured that the Father whom he served would raise him from the dead—the law being satisfied, and his work concluded. My flesh also shall rest in hope, for thou wilt not abandon me to sheol, nor permit thy holy one to see corruption.

The two lines generally form what is usually called a parallelism—the last hemistich echoing the sentiment of the former. The words my soul mean merely myself. Nouns of this nature are used, because the Hebrew has no intensive or reflexive pronouns. It is thus obvious that the argument based upon the idea that Christ's soul went to sheol or hades and his body to the grave, has no foundation. The Hebrew does not warrant this distinction. Christ's soul in such an idiom is his entire person.

This is a candid, indorsed statement of the Bible use of the word soul, as we have shown in our investigation of this term. In our next article we will show the true use of psuche—soul in the New Testament.

Christian precepts and duties were carried out to the letter; if there was any thing that was desired, that was thought to be for the good of the cause, the matter of cost, if within reasonable bounds, was not considered, that was a forgone conclusion; that did not enter into the discussion, for the heart and hand was open, and what was given, was given freely and to the glory of God. Innovations, hobbies and ambitions to become leaders in some new fad, or theory had not crept into the church, but they sought that oneness of faith and doctrine that did not belie the name, and they were abundantly able to give a reason for their faith and hope. I at one time heard an important officer of a sectarian church remark that it was useless for them to try to argue with you people, for you have a passage of Scripture to head us off at every turn, and you give us no show. But then you are always talking of the promises, the nature of man, baptism and the kingdom of God, and "don't spread out." I thought that was a pretty wide field and it was susceptible of quite a spread. I think if we live up to the principle of these subjects in all their fulness we will not be found badly lacking when the Lord comes. By bringing in questions that are foreign to salvation, those who are earnestly seeking for the truth in all its gospel simplicity, are liable to become confused, and there are more chances that they will become careless and perhaps led into infidelity, than that they will persevere and ultimately adopted into the Abrahamic family. It is true that we are commanded to grow in grace and knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and we can only do so by earnest and prayerful investigation, and that we must study to show ourselves approved unto God, a workman that need not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth. Says one of our able brethren in a recent paper, there are new truths constantly springing up that require investigation, which statement may be true; yet he carries the idea, that if we do not rush into the study of the "new truth," we become fossilized, non-progressive, and lose sight of the many beautiful statements of the gospel. It is true, truth itself, that there are many beautiful facts in the gospel, that we never see, let us study over on hand, for we can never expect to [illegible] in this life, but in our investigations of new truths, let us be careful to hold to the established faith, lest in our zeal to acquire leadership, we let them slip, as we are warned by the apostle Paul. If brethren differ upon questions that are not vital to salvation, let them speak kindly, forbearing one another in love, and not fall into the fatal error of using sarcasm and contempt for the views of another, thereby engendering strife, destroying that oneness that must be an abiding virtue with the people of God.

Finally brethren, let us use extreme care to cultivate all those beautiful attributes of Christian grace and character that will make us one in thought and deed; endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace, until we receive that peace, that surpasseth all understanding. Let us each and every one, be rooted and grounded in the truth, not carried about by every word of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness whereby they lay in wait to deceive. But let us speak the truth in love, that we may grow up into him in all things, which is the head even Christ. I pray God that you may, as a result of your meetings be abundantly blessed, and that there may be an upspringing from the results of your labors, that may continue to grow, and bring many into the fold of Christ and every heart may be gladdened and encouraged, to go forward in more extended labor for the cause we love so well.

Heb xii 28, Wherefore we receive a kingdom which cannot be removed. Let us have grace whereby we may serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear.

What kingdom does this have reference to? It has reference to God's kingdom when re-established on the earth. It could not be any other kingdom, as all other kingdoms can be removed. When Christ was here, his disciples thought he would at that time re-establish the kingdom. As we see from their question, John xviii 36. When they were therefore come together they asked of him saying, Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LVI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, AUGUST 7, 1907. NUMBER 29.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

And his answer to them was, It is not for you to know the time. You remember God's kingdom was overturned on account of wicked kings. He said of Zedekiah, Ezek xxi 25, And thou profane wicked prince of Israel, whose day is come, when iniquity shall have an end. Thus sayeth the Lord God; remove the diadem, and take off the crown; I will overturn, overturn, overturn it; and it (the kingdom) shall be no more until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him.

In Dan ii 44, we also have a statement from God that he will re-establish the kingdom. He says, "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people; but it shall break in pieces and consume all other kingdoms. And it shall stand forever. When Christ was here he taught his disciples to look for this kingdom. In Matt iv 23, And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, (or good news of the kingdom) and we must see that he meant this kingdom was to be here on the earth, for it is told in such plain words all through the Bible. If not to be here, why would we continue to pray, Thy kingdom come; that thy will may be done on earth.

Psalm xxii 28, For the kingdom is the Lord's; and he is the governor among the nations. He also says in Matt xxiv 14, And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come.

Psalm cxlv 1-12, They shall speak of the glories of thy kingdom, and talk of thy power; to make known to the sons of men his mighty acts and glorious majesty of his kingdom. Thy kingdom come; that thy will may be done on earth.

One's Own Taskmaster.

Without some spur to action, we become listless and lazy; but the work done by any man will be of far more value if he is his own taskmaster. A boy was an apprentice in a printing-office. The foreman tried to drive him to work by warning him of the consequences of failure. The results were by no means happy.

But, later on, the foreman realized that it was unnecessary to drive the boy longer. He was driving himself. On his thirteenth birthday he was given a watch. The first day he owned it he timed himself as he set type. Finding that he could set a stickful in twelve minutes, he made this a standard. The watch was placed on the case. Every twelve minutes his stick must be be filled, or he would have to account to himself. Day after day he kept to this rule. It was not long before the boy who was his own taskmaster became the speediest and most dependable compositor in the office.—Sunday School Times.

The Promises of God.

Does your spirit faint? The promises of God are a drooping honeycomb, better than Jonathan's. Dip your pilgrim staff into their sickness, and put your hand to your mouth, like him, and your faintness shall pass away. Are you thirsty? They are the flowing stream of the water of life, of which you may drink by the way, and lift your head. Are you overcome by the sultry burden of the day? They are as the cool shadow of a great rock in a weary land. Have your steps well-nigh slipped? They are a staff in your hand, on top of which, betimes, like Jacob, you may lean, and worship God. Are you sad? There are no such songs to beguile the road, and to bear you on with gladness of heart, as when one goeth with a pipe to come into the mountain of the Lord. Put but a promise under your head by night, and were your pillow a stone like that of Bethel, you shall have Jacob's vision. The thirstiest wilderness will become an Elim with palm trees and wells of water.

Plymouth, Indiana, Aug. 7, 1907.

The Bible School at Indian Lake, Mich. is in session this week, and the early reports show a good interest in the work.

There was no paper issued last week. This number and the one for July 24 are consecutive issues. Please do not send asking for the issue of July 31.

The Plymouth brethren had the pleasure of listening to two excellent discourses given by Brother F. L. Austin, on Sunday, July 28. Brother Austin was attending the Bible School at Indian Lake, Mich. and came here to fill the regular appointment of his mother, Sister M. A. Woodward. We were pleased to have him with us once again. A number of the brethren from Argos and Burr Oak came to attend the meeting, and all enjoyed once more greeting Brother Austin, and trust he may ere long repeat the visit with his family.

LESSON FOR SUNDAY AUGUST 18.

DAY OF ATONEMENT. LEV XVI 5 22.

Golden text. Wherefore he is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him. Heb vii 25.

In the last lesson we saw how very important it was—and is—to believe and obey God's Word as "It is written." Disobedience brought death to Nadab and Abihu.

From Lev xi to the lesson today there is the law of clean and unclean beasts, and how to tell a case of leprosy, and the law governing such.

God made man upright—good, just, righteous. Eccl vii 29. God blessed man—he was very good. Gen i 28-31. Therefore he was in harmony with God, and all other things created. He was at one with God. When he, man, Adam disobeyed, he brought sin. Rom v 12. And as God cannot look upon—cannot countenance iniquity. Hab i 13. The harmony the accord was dispelled. Sin came between God and man, and God's face was hid from him. Isa lix 2. In order to have any countenance, any favor from God, Atonement had to be made. By faith Abel made an offering to the Lord of the first, and best of his flock. God had respect to his offering—accepted it, and called him righteous. Gen iv 4.

Heb ix 4. This made an atonement for him. Faith and works are still accepted by God as an atonement for sin.

Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. And have access to his favor. Rom v 1, 2.

From the foregoing we see that atonement had to be made. Under the law atonement was made by sacrifice and burnt offerings. Most all offerings—sacrifices—pointed forward to Jesus Christ, the Lamb of God.

The word atonement is from the Hebrew word Kaphar, to atone, to cleanse, pardon, forgive, reconcile. To be restored to God's favor.

Lesson text 5. For all Israel—except the priests—two he goats and one ram were to be offered as an atonement. The account in the lesson is not stated in order.

6 For Aaron and his house—the Levites, Num iii 9; xvii 3, a bullock.

Verses 11-14, Aaron shall present the bullock, and kill it, and offer it as an atonement for himself and his house. The cloud of incense covered the mercy seat. There shall no man see me and live. Ex xxxiii 20. The Lord met the high priest there. Ex xxv 22. The cloud was a safeguard to Aaron. 50,000 and 70 men died because they looked into the ark. 1 Sam vi 19.

Almost all things are by the law purged—cleansed, atoned for—by blood, and without shedding of blood is no remission—no forgiveness. Heb ix 22. The blood of bulls and goats sanctified to the purifying of the flesh. Heb ix 13. Secured present pardon for past sins, but did not take away sins, or make the atonement complete. Heb x 11. Seven is called the complete number.

15 Aaron did the same with the blood of one of the goats for an atonement for the people. Israel—the twelve tribes.

16-18 He should make an atonement for the various parts of the tabernacle, and do it alone, no one present, no onlooker.

20 When he has finished the atoning, he shall bring—present—the live goat, the scapegoat, the goat escaped being offered a sacrifice.

21, 22 The sins of the people were—in a figure—transferred to the goat, and borne away.

The Day of Atonement is the title of the lesson, but curiously enough it is not mentioned in the lesson. It was the tenth day of the seventh month, verse 29. The tabernacle was set up on the first day of the first month. One year after leaving Egypt, Ex xl 13. The people were to afflict their souls—a very old and very cloudy expression. They were to humbly and seriously consider what was being done for them. They were to rest or sabbath on that day, and their general conduct to be in keeping with the importance of the atonement. Verses 29-31.

The atonement now—under the gospel—is to repent and be baptized for the remission of sins. Acts ii 38. To this end, those who read Moses and the prophets should do as Jesus did, believe it, obey it, and use it as "It is written." Luke iv. For instance, when we read in Dan ii 44 and vii 27, that God will set up his kingdom—under the whole heavens. And in Zech xiv 9, that the Lord—Jesus Christ—shall be King over all the earth, in that there shall be one Lord, and his name one. Let us believe it, against all to the contrary. Let us obey it by baptism—immersion—love it, cherish it, live it, teach it, hold it fast. Rev iii 11. This will make an atonement for all sins, and obtain from God—through the Lord Jesus—a promise of eternal life, Titus i 2, with glory and honor, Rom ii 7, in the kingdom of God. James ii 7. Jesus Christ died to secure all this for the faithful. He—as the high priest of the Church of God made the complete perfect, and therefore lasting atonement for the Church of God. A prominent Sunday school teacher writes "Christ has taken his own blood into heaven to cleanse it, and prepare it to be the abode of a cleansed people." This is the very opposite of true. The meek shall inherit the earth. Psa xxxvii. Again, The righteous shall inherit the land, and dwell therein for ever. Verse 29.

Christ entered the holy [illegible]—not with—his own blood. Heb ix 12.

Beware of the leaven of the Pharisees.

Next lesson, Israel journeying to Canaan. Num x 11-13; xxix 36.

The Story of a Happy Christian Life.—No. 18.

The journey that father took with Brother Ephraim Miller, led him through some of the counties of northern Indiana and southern Michigan, and meetings were held at various points in these counties, prophecy, the coming King and kingdom, the life and death question and the necessity of obedience to God's requirements and of a holy life, occupied a prominent place in the preaching of these pioneer Advent ministers. Sometime between the years 1848 and 1858, a Conference was held at old Union meeting house on Eagle Creek, a few miles out from Indianapolis. This must have been the southern trip of Bro. Miller's that Sister Willard alludes to, and if it is, it fixes the date of the old Union state Conference at 1852. Two Annual Conferences were also held sometime in the fifties, near Fairfield in Howard County. These meetings father attended and also made another trip to old Union, preaching in the meantime at Warsaw, Bone Prarie, and other points in Kosiusko County, at Claysville, in Huntington County and quite regularly at various points in Marshall County.

I remember well the journey he took to northern Indiana and southern Michigan. He was gone a month or six weeks, and while he was away the old stick chimney to the cooking room of our double log-cabin fell down. I do not know how we would have managed if the weather had been cold, but it was one of the most beautiful falls in all my recollection; Indian summer weather lasting far up into November. We picked a bushel of cranberries toward the last of the month before father's return, and he built a new chimney after he came back and the mortar did not freeze, our cooking was done on a small stove, the pipe of which went up into the kitchen loft and out through the roof.

In a former paper I spoke of Sister Sarah Stanclift—the teacher who was converted to the truth while an inmate of Auntie Willard's delightful home at Oswego. She married Bro. Joseph Furry of Plymouth, if you remember, and went to Alden, Iowa, to live, Alden, being a town about 40 miles west of Cedar Falls.

Sister M. M. Nichols in a recent letter says, "It must have been sometime in the 60's, while my home was in Cedar Falls, Iowa, some 100 miles west of Dubuque, that I heard of a Conference to be held in Alden, and determined to go. Your mention of Bro. Joseph Furry brought to mind a quiet man, who with his wife, I recall as chief in entertaining Conference visitors. It seems to me that Sister Furry wore what we called the Bloomer costume—in those days, but of this I am not certain." I am glad to have this little reminiscent note in regard to these dear friends of Auntie Willard's. It gives us a clearer view of their character. Bro. Furry I did not know. Sister Furry was a fair woman, with auburn hair and very earnest and vivacious in conversation.

Have I told of a Conference that was held at Oswego in 1851 or 52? I think not. Bro. and Sister D. R. Mansfield of the Crisis Adventists were the preachers. The meeting was held in the Baptist Church and it was crowded full, day and night. There must have been many visitors from abroad, for Bro. Beatty's table where I was staying was full at every meal, though it stretched entirely across the dining-room. Sister Beatty had overdone, getting ready for the meeting and was sick, and the friends were cared for by her sister-in-law and myself. How we did enjoy that meeting! It was a foretaste of the coming kingdom. Sister Mehitable Mansfield was a fine singer and held us spell-bound when she sang.

Both she and her husband were good speakers. He is still living and is in California. She has long been dead, and another, and so worthy a woman has taken her place in the work for Christ by Bro. Mansfield's side.

Sister Willard must have enjoyed this Conference very much though she fails to mention it in the story of her life. It was held in the very house where she had first heard of the coming of Jesus, and the [illegible] of former days were there to give her at least a hearty handshake, even if they did not accept the truth. She was not there to be made to [illegible] bring it again brought that before them, for It cleared her skirts of all possible guilt as to her responsibility in the matter. Her home like that of Bro. Beatty was of course filled with delighted guests. It was a large, two-story frame house, with a wing for dining-room, kitchen and wood-house. The dining room you already know was a large one or it could not have accommodated the crowds that entered its doors to be fed.

A large eucalyptus tree stood in the angle where the wing joined on to the main building. In the latter was the sitting room with its massive case of books, bright carpet and pleasant fire-place, and the hall, a large parlor, and sleeping apartments with closets, and up stairs several bed rooms. But this dear home had to be given up, and of this I will let Auntie Willard tell in her own words in a later paper.

We have received a new edition of the tract A Letter to a Friend, from Brother Woodruff, and we can supply them at five cents each postpaid. No tract ever issued by our people has done the good this has, and the pleasing and convincing style in which it is written makes it worth much as a medium for advancing the truth of the gospel. Get a number of them and give to friends. You never can tell how much good a few nickels will do used in this manner. Try it.

Every man needs a friend. No one can live alone. He must have a companionship, or life would be a dreary solitude. But it must be a true friend; a false friend is worse than none. The true friend is one who sees things as they are, who perceives the weaknesses of his most intimate companion, but who bears with his infirmities for the sake of all in him that is good. The divine Friend may be ours if we but return his affection. We can obtain his friendship by giving him our own; and this we are to prove by simple trust and obedience.

"The present circumstance, which presses so hard against you, if surrendered to Christ, is the best shaped tool in the Father's hand to chisel you for eternity."

Selected.

Holiness and Sinlessness.

There are many teachings as to holiness, but they may be reduced to three principal ones. First, the teaching that holiness means the total eradication of sin from the believer so that he becomes sinless; second, the idea that unholiness and a constant struggle with sin must characterize the Christian; and third, that the believer has two natures, the flesh and the Spirit, the old and the new received in new birth, and that the old nature is never removed or changed in any way, but sin in the flesh was condemned or judged in the person of Christ on the cross; Christ died unto sin, and likewise every believer is to reckon himself dead indeed unto sin and alive unto God in Christ Jesus our Lord. Thus a holy life is to be lived, but not a sinless life, no profession of holiness made, but the believer walks in the Spirit, lives through his power, while having the old nature in him wholly unchanged.

A great deal of confusion arises from placing the meaning of sinless perfection upon the term "holy" as used in Scripture, and teaching that "sanctified" means sinlessly perfect when the term is applied to man. All agree that the unsaved have the flesh—that which is wholly sinful and corrupt—in them. Most agree that this remains after conversion, but some would have it changed in conversion, not wholly purified, however, and they would claim that sanctification either wholly changed the flesh or entirely removed it.

The first clear announcement of the flesh as flesh is in John iii 6, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is Spirit." Here is the need of the new birth. Here are the two natures, the flesh and the Spirit. Can the flesh be sanctified, Improved, made holy? [illegible] what Christ undertakes? "The carnal mind [margin Rev. Ver.] is enmity [illegible] for it is not subject [illegible] d, neither indeed can [illegible] od himself then has pronounced [illegible] mind of the flesh cannot [illegible] to his law. Certainly the [illegible] e changed, or modified, or [illegible] oly. You could not think [illegible] f nature. So in Rom vii 18 [illegible] I know that in me, that [illegible] esh dwelleth no good [illegible] re is a picture of one [illegible] o natures, a saved person [illegible] erly impossible for a saved [illegible] r to say, "I delight in the law of God after the inward man." The unsaved have only the carnal mind, that which is born of the flesh; to have another nature, a spiritual man to delight in that which is of and from God there must be a new birth and a new nature. Hence here is a born again man with the flesh in him unchanged, no good thing in his flesh. He is in bondage to sin from having his eyes off Jesus Christ his Lord. The moment his eyes are removed from self to Christ and his work, deliverance comes from the bondage he has been under.

We take our stand then upon this Scripture doctrine that the flesh is in the believer, that it is unchanged, never can be changed. Holiness in the believer does not consist in the flesh being made holy, it cannot be subject to the law of God, it is lawless, and sin is lawlessness. 1 John iii 4; Rev. Ver. But God has judged it (condemned sin in the flesh) on the cross, and the way of holiness as laid down in Scripture is to reckon ourselves dead indeed unto sin and alive unto God in Christ Jesus our Lord.

We must distinguish as Scripture does between the "old man" and "the flesh." The "old man" is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts, it is the man that the believer was when unsaved. But this old man was crucified with Christ, that the body of sin might be done away so that we should no longer be in bondage to sin. Rom vi 6, Rev. Ver. Now turning to Col iii 9, we find they had put off the old man with his deeds, and had put on the new man. So the Ephesians were taught (that is, before they were born again) to put off the old man and put on the new, the force of being "ye have put off, ye have been renewed in the spirit of your mind, ye have put on." Eph iv 22-24. The putting off the old man, the putting on the new, and the being renewed in the spirit of the mind all took place at one time when they were saved. The Colossians had done all this, they were of course saved people, they had put off the old man. But that did not remove the flesh from them or make it any better. What were they to do then? "Mortify therefore your members which are upon the earth," etc. What does mortify mean? The same word occurs in the Greek in Rom iv 19, "He considered not his own body now dead when he was about an hundred years old;" and this throws a flood of light on the command "Reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin." Abraham's body was dead in a sense to sight, but he did not consider it so. The flesh is alive to sense, but faith reckons, estimates, accounts the believer dead indeed unto sin. The members are there in these in Colossians who had put off the old man, who had put on the new man, who are called "holy and beloved," who "are complete in him," who are "made meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light." The "members" are the very same things which are called, in Gal vi, the works of the flesh, and they are present in them; the flesh is not dead, but it is to be mortified, considered as dead, kept in the place of death. If people can be rid of the flesh, the sinful nature altogether, why is it not taught here? God calls them holy, and they were of course, but the flesh is in them, they were not sinless, but they were to live holy lives by keeping the flesh in the place of death and thus putting off all its works. To the Galatians he says, "Walk in the Spirit and ye shall not fulfil the lusts of the flesh;" not shall get rid of it. "They that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts." How? by reckoning themselves dead to sin, by mortifying their members which are upon the earth. God never tells his people to seek to have the flesh removed, never speaks of removing it. Having the flesh in them does not make them unholy so long as it is kept in the place of death.

Scripture never confounds the person with the flesh. This explains 1 John i 7, 8, "The blood of Jesus Christ his Son, cleanseth us from all sin. If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves and the truth is not in us." We have sin, that is, the flesh in us, but the blood cleanseth us—that is, we ourselves—from all sin. This is why the children of God are called holy, sanctified, and the like, which they themselves truly are, and are at the same time exhorted to be live holily, to be holy, that is, to not let the flesh act, but keep it in the place of death.—J. W. Newton.

Love.

"God is love." Is that fact is the seed-idea of all the other manifestations of God. As Christ is the fulness of the Godhead bodily, so is love the fulness of all those other attributes. As in an egg is included feathers, flesh, blood, and bones, and in a seed is comprehended root, trunk with its bark, branches, leaves, and fruit differentiating and yet alike, so in love is folded and by it unfolded all the possibilities of divinity.

It is therfore the fulfillment of all things in heaven and in earth. It is the fulfillment of the law.

"The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance."

Love.
Joy is love in ecstasy.
Peace is love at rest.
Longsuffering is love in pain.
Gentleness is love in thoughtfulness.
Goodness is love in deeds.
Faith is love in hope.
Meekness is love at Jesus' feet.
Temperance is love that self-controls—that reins in and reigns.

"Against such there is no law;" in other words, Such is agreeable to the law; for love is the fulfilling thereof.—P. Giddings.

A visitor to a glass manufactory saw a man moulding clay into the great pots which were to be used in shaping glass. Noticing that the moulding was done by hand, he said to the workman, "Why do you not use a tool to aid you in shaping the clay?" The workman replied, "There is no tool that can do this work; we have tried many, but somehow it needs the human touch." Is not this true also in the Lord's work? The Divine Hand can wipe away every tear and heal every heart wound; but he chooses to use our common hands—yours and mine—to help him. Many sick of the palsy of sin will never come in reach of the healing power unless human hands bear them.

We wish to avoid the labor and expense of mailing statements to our patrons. If each one who has not as yet paid for this year would send in his renewal at once, we will appreciate the favor.

The Lump on His Side.

A man long noted for his intemperate habits was induced by Mr. John Abbott to sign the pledge "in his own way" which he did in these words: "I pledge myself to drink no more intoxicating drinks for one year." Few believed he could keep it, but near the end of the year he again appeared at the temperance meeting without once having touched a drop.

"Are you going to sign again?" Mr. Abbott asked.

He replied "Yes, if I can do it in my way," and accordingly he wrote—"I sign this pledge for nine hundred and ninety-nine years.

A few days after this he called upon the tavern-keeper, who welcomed him back to his old haunt.

"O landlord!" said the man, as if in pain, "I have such a lump on my left side."

"That's because you have stopped drinking," said the landlord; "you won't live long if you keep on."

"Will drink take that lump away?"

"Yes; and if you don't drink, you'll soon have a lump on the other side. Come, let's drink together," and he poured out two glasses of whiskey.

"I think I won't drink," said the former inebriate; "especially if keeping the pledge will bring on another lump. This one isn't very hard to bear after all." With this he drew out the lump—a bag of money—from his side pocket, and walked off, leaving the landlord to his own reflections.

The Journey's End

A small boy sat quietly in a seat of a day-coach on a train running between two of the Western cities in the United States. It was a hot, dusty day, very uncomfortable for traveling, and that particular ride is perhaps the most uninteresting day's journey in the whole land. But the little fellow sat patiently watching the fields and fences hurrying by, until an old lady, leaning forward, asked sympathetically: "Aren't you tired of the long ride, dear, and the dust and the heat?"

The lad looked up brightly and replied: "Yes, ma'am, a little. But I don't mind it much, because my father is going to meet me when I get to the end of it."

What a beautiful thought it is, that when life seems wearisome and monotonous, as it sometimes does, we can look forward hopefully and trustingly, and like the lonely little lad, "not mind it much," because our Father, too, will be waiting to meet us at our journey's end.

Silence That is Golden.

It is easy for one to poison a person's mind concerning another. There is measureless ruin wrought in the world by the thoughtless speaker. Characters are blackened, friendships are destroyed, jealousies are aroused, homes are ruined, hearts are broken. Let us never take up an evil report and give it wing on breath of ours. Let us never whisper an evil thing of another. We know not where it may end, to what it may end, to what it may grow, what ruin it may work. Words once spoken can never be gotten back again. We had better learn to keep the door of our lips locked, and say no evil of any one. This is a silence that is golden.

Our Chief End.

The older I grow, and now I stand on the brink of eternity, the more comes back to me the sentence in the catechism which I learned when a child, and the fuller and deeper its meaning becomes: "What is the chief end of man?" "To glorify God and enjoy him forever." And surely this is the beginning and end, the Alpha and Omega of that strange, undefinable thing we call life.—Carlyle.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Poetry.

Good-Bye.

Good-bye when the coffin lid is shut,
Good-bye when the work is done;
When the eyes are closed and the lips are mute
And the glorious race is run.

Good-bye when the dear one goes to rest,
To the quiet rest of the tomb;
Where the dainty rose and the daisies smile,
And the giant grasses bloom.

Good-bye till the clanging trumpet sounds,
And the Father himself shall call,
And the saints arise with a joyous shout
And come to the kingdom, one and all.

No sad good-byes for the dear one then,
For the sad good-byes are past;
When the crown is placed on her victor-brow,
By the Savior's hand at last.

Words. No. 3.

The abuse of the word "spirit" has been a fearful wrong to human kind. It has not been, among civilized nations, a blind use but a deliberately wicked use. It never had the shadow of possibility. So taught in the Bible, the Bible must have been utterly repulsive as the Vedas and Shastas and Talmud and Koran have been. The test of these books are their plain untruthfulness. And it is the safest and very best witness of the Bible credibility that false "senses" get into instant trouble. The false use of the term "spirit" never would walk with truth, or sanity. Jesus, as recorded in the original, did not "commit" his spirit to God, but "commended" it, although either word would imply about the same. Liddell and Scott render the definition of the word in Luke xxiii. 46, (paratheomai) "to place before one, to represent, declare, allege, compare." It was upon the known and living expression of His every thought, word and deed Jesus placed Himself (his life) before God and man. This was Jesus' "spirit". There was nothing like it ever, before nor since, in its perfection. Sin or blasphemy against this, represented the lowest depth of human or devilish hatred and crime. The crowning offense of the Jews was when they attributed the loving, helpful, pure, "holy spirit" of Jesus to the pluses of evil, Satan. It was an awful strain of hatred. It went too deep to hope for repentance ever. It was not a sin against a "person", falsely termed "the Holy Ghost", but against the highest and holiest expression and revelation of Divine Love—the Spirit of God. This "holy spirit" is a most clear and lovely aspect of the Christian Faith. There is nothing to approach it in any other religion. To render the word spirit, "person", is to kill this sublime aspect utterly. It sets up another, a "third", and holier God, than Jehovah or Christ.

The words of Gabriel in Luke i. 35, to Mary are very timely here. Read the whole incident carefully. "The holy spirit", and "power of the Highest" are clearly synonymous. There is no such word as "ghost" in the originals. Capitalizing amounts to nothing. We know whose monks composed all that kind of mystical nonsense.

The sacred (inspired) accounts make Jesus "the only begotten Son of God." Adam was the created son of God. Both were clearly human, because Jesus was "born", exactly as all men are. The explanation is not far off; not "hard to be understood". It is this: "By man came sin, and by sin (not by man) came death." (Extinction of life.) Thus, then, down the line of Adam necessarily came death for all flesh; precisely as atheists and all agree. Adam provided no remedy. Once dead, his race were forever lost. (Atheists and all of us agree again!) But what man and laws of men "could not do in that they were weak through the flesh," God could do. Every skeptic readily admits the need of "law", and confesses that it is and ever has been the only human remedy for sin, such as it is. But he pauses at death. His remedy, or antitoxin, is not satisfactory, even in life; in death it is the poorest mockery, and he feels all this. He feels that "law" is not remedial or saving even for the purposes for which it was framed. It does the victim no good, for it cannot restore the murdered or maimed. It does the victim's loved ones no good to speak of. It does the criminal of any sort no good, for it is "punishment", not "favor". It is not intended to reform him or her, or, if so, is a harsh way and oftenest fails.

But this beggardliness of resource cannot claim a right to speak against God, or His Book. It is not a dignified stand to say: What I can't do, cannot therefore be done. God's plan was not that the punishment of an "innocent" man could be of any avail to quiet mankind. Ingersoll stood right enough there, so far. For Paul's masterly words are "God, sending His own Son, in the likeness of sinful flesh.

Condemned Sin!

In the flesh! "that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us who walk not after the flesh but after the Spirit," (of God). The old, old saw: "Jesus did it all," is a fine mistake. He did nothing except the Messianic work. In a word: He did nothing that man can do! That work is ours. He obeyed God. He died! For man. He "covered" sins that were past recovery. He tore off the rags of self-righteousness and exposed man to himself, not to others. He made Himself nothing—"no reputation", no supernatural dignity, no earthly power. "Being found in condition as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." It ought not to be hard to conceive that even a man, of mere human rectitude, might successfully appeal to God or man in behalf of guilt and helplessness. It has been done many times among men. It is next to man's only way. It pleases man. It moves him. It resolves him. It pleases the masses. And so the simple words are: "It pleased the Lord!" Isa. liii. The words "blood", "suffering", "death", are all sunk in the word "obedience"—the "condemnation" of "disobedience". It is admitted that the rightful eternal inheritance of the unregenerate is death. Well, then, the rightful eternal inheritance of the regenerate is Life. And this is the Bible contention. And this "inheritance" of "eternal life" after death. It provides for every soul, in Christ! For there is no other regeneration in any scheme of man. He can offer nothing. And this beneficent provision of "immortality" impends over every son of man. It envelops him as a cloud. It presses him on all sides every moment he breathes. He can go down to death only by forcing his way through it. Astounding thought! The "death" of the unregenerate is suicide!

I repeat: "It pleased the Lord." "And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water. And lo, the heavens were opened unto him (John) and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove and lighting upon Him. And, lo, a voice from heaven, saying: This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Compare this descent of the Spirit "like a dove", with Acts ii. 1-4. "Cloven tongues of fire", this time. "And they were all filled with the holy Spirit". It was only what Jesus had prepared them for in Luke xxiv. 49: "Behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you. But, tarry ye in Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high."

And, again, in John xvi. 7. The word "Comforter" must in Greek be rendered in the masculine gender, but the word "spirit" is center. Verse 13 and ch. xv. 26, is the sufficient explanation: "The Spirit of Truth". "It will guide," not "he".

We stand aghast at old Babel and shake our heads dubiously. But that crude theory and failure was not the only or most unaccountable attempt to "climb" up to God "by some other way", by a good deal. Theological Babels lay along the path of history in all ages. It is an open secret that the cause can be readily found in the united determination of sects to admit no literal letter of the Book as to its cardinal words. There can be no disunion in indubitable terms. "Be ye one, that the world may know that the Father hath sent me," is a purely solemn admonition to stand by the Testimony as we find it hanga together, precisely as we do in other testimony. Let us be sure no Truth can be born of falsehood or error. No living thing can be born of the barren. Abortive words can only produce their like—abortions of thought and feeling.

There is an old ecclesiastical assumption that man is "intuitively religious". This is not borne out by evidence. That he is instinctively superstitious is known. We know how people the world over love a myth or voodoo, if they will only stay that nice sort and not look real! But this is not Faith by any means. It is the absence of all such chicanery as "ghosts", "departed spirits" of men, etc, which stamps the Bible and its Faith as the only genuine "Belief" among men. All who take up the Bible for study must recollect that it is a System of Faith,—which deals not with the seen; but with matters in the very remote niches of the Past, and forward into the unseen Hereafter. Proof here must of necessity be peculiar, or absent altogether. For proof is the opposite of faith, and cannot exist together. As Romans viii. 24 has it: "But hope that is seen is not hope. For what a man seeth, why does he yet hope for?" In their initial and more cautious steps to gradually retire the Bible as it is, critics [illegible] taking "high ground" for the whole batch of the ancient religions, in which they affect to see the same general God and system of belief, pretty much as the Apostle in 1 Cor xv sees the "stars", etc, merely a slight varying in the human vision. "Congresses of all Religions" will soon be in order, and all the "gods many" be duly accredited, again. The pretended discovery of the "golden rule", as it is branded, among the writings of Confucius, of China, has done much to lessen the place of Christ, among academicians. This "rule" is not only not "golden", and not intended to be so by Jesus, but may be very pernicious. Men and women adopt it, drink, gamble, and otherwise destroy themselves. It is at best little short of a prudential compromise. Like the "Ten Commandments", it is intended to correct criminal tendencies, merely. Jesus "nailed" them all to the cross. But long before this he had said: "So, likewise, ye, when ye shall have done all those things which are commanded of you, say, 'We are unprofitable servants. We have done that which was our duty to do." Luke xvii 10. Compare Phil ii: "That ye be like-minded, having the same love, being of one accord, one mind—let each esteem others better than themselves." What a vast difference it is what men call "two-faced", "[illegible]dealism", etc. Jesus talke[illegible] as they could "bear" it.

Whatever injury [illegible] to the Bible by the dusc[illegible] acts and mangling of its [illegible] at one prime fact has [illegible]ed: That "Faith" as [illegible] is no support [illegible] structure as [illegible] at the door of [illegible] necessity, present and [illegible] him to take the [illegible] this himself and examin[illegible] the Word which has [illegible] to manifest through all [illegible] apply it to his personal [illegible] he would any physical [illegible] necessary. It presumes [illegible] best knows his own [illegible] may clearly [illegible] love"; and it violat[illegible] kind when it assumes he kn[illegible] true from the false, and shou[illegible]ly detect fraud. Exactly to [illegible] tent faith in the "scientific" is [illegible] coincidental with that in Scripture, opinions differ vastly. I have near me the printed declarations of several prominent Baptist clergymen who boldly proclaim their faith in the theories of Darwin, and who do not hesitate to isolate the physical portions of the Word from its homilies. It is quite plain that the clergy has yet to learn (what secular scholars know instinctively!) that to exist at all the Bible must exist as a whole. If Genesis is the garbled, bedraggled mendicant the "critics" make it—if the Bible writers and custodians were ignoramuses, visionaries, or prudent-fallets—if in a word, their cosmic recitals are fabulous, erroneous or imperfect—they have left no key! and every "critical" attempt, high or low, to set their writings "in order" is a palpable deception! The explanation or "key" to a fable or legend is its "moral", so-called. The form of the fable or legend in allegorical; they cannot stand out in plain historical or actual habiliments, without ignorance or fraud. The "key" to a parable or illustrative, tropical form of speech or writing is in its utter impossibility in fact. I can only touch this interesting line of thought but slightly here. Let me say, however, that nothing has so hurt the syntax of the Bible as the false assumption that its authors were "poets". Mr. Gladstone was at great pains to explode this error as to Homer, and comes pretty near showing the ancients knew nothing of these fictitious forms of language. No doubt the fertile "redactor" has had his hand in all the old documents of note, especially the Bible. The acrostic form of some of the Psalms, etc is very suspicious.

Let us be sure the Bible statements were not the voluntary cogitations of either dreamers or philanthropists. They were the miraculous communications of God—a Being—One Being—absolutely; without one jot of prevarication whatever. Or, else, they miserably assume and err; precisely as Dante did. Compare the vaporings of Matthew Arnold, etc. with the words of the most eminent of all American jurists, Daniel Webster. When at his zenith, he was approached at a public function by a number of senators and others with the question: "Do you believe, sir, that God could have made the universe in six literal days?" The brief reply was: "Well my God could!" And that was all. And to this moment no learning or research has disturbed Webster's position. Learning has offered nothing on this head that can make any educated person (so no or she has "advanced". There is even a perturbed sense of having possibly done much harm. Scholars will not, but the people can, resolve that all this kind of battle shall be kept squarely down to the One unbelieving question: God or man. Which?

A true faith in the Bible is simply an implicit confidence in Revelations—which hold together. Not sight; for sight is not always "evidence", by a very long shot. Recent investigation into the arts of the spirit-rappers show that if they can induce people to depend upon sight, they will need no better sailing for their ghostly craft. Paul, in Hebrews, does not use the word "substance", nor yet "evidence", for that would be to take Scriptural "Faith" out of its native element and place it on the plane of material demonstration; something which can be accomplished by the senses only. Paul's words are: "but faith is a support, (Greek, standing under,) of things hoped for; a test of things not seen," (both Greek words apply to logic, or examination.) Heb xi 1. At verse 2, he applies this by an illustration that, had his contention been tricky or faulty must have doomed it to instant contempt! "Through faith we understand that the ages" (and, of course, their productions) "were framed by the Word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear." That is, the visible universe was not a continuous evolution of the same matter, without a "beginning", under subtle and known chemical or natural laws, but a positive, easy, instant act of creative Power, not vast to be comprehended by the human intellect, or it could never have been. Romans i 18, 20, expands this point very decisively: "For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men who hold the Truth in unrighteousness. Because that which may be known of God is manifest to them. For God has shown it to them. For the invisible things of Him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made; His eternal power, and Godhead," (Deity.) Here is the only "science" possible among men of brains. Geology based upon power or forces or means which cannot be traced to a Cause is at best an apology or makeshift, far, far beneath the crudest form of "faith". For it removes no difficulty. It merely shifts credulity to another and weaker set of "authorities", who profess no starting point and are lost in imagining one.

The Apostolic (or Bible) contention is that "all things" as well, as (and like)—the few things of man were "made", and exist for a purpose. If the creations of man serve and lift him, the things he sees about, but utterly beyond him, serve and lift their Creator. Paley's argument is logical—Matthew Arnold's reply is unworthy of consideration. Compare the two: "Design shows a Designer." "Design shows design." What is this last but learned insolence? Compare the evolution theory of irresponsible forces, with Paul's clear insistence that science (or, in a word, the accounting for things) must bow to predisposing conditions, the most logical and rational of which is the pre-existence of a Maker, whose acts are all (as are all sane men's) for a purpose and for His "pleasure". Rev iv 11. In this light look again at the above words in Heb xi 2 and Rom i 18, 19, 20, and observe how perfectly the rule works out its sequence. Both "the things that are seen," and "the invisible," are "understood", through each other! Not by any school of ecclesiastical mysticism, but "clearly seen". This is why Paul mingles these natural and religious matters so familiarly, and seems to be so illogical. He mixes "the wrath of God", etc, with geology as if they were part and parcel of one subject, or kindred matters! Paul had no quarrel with the "material". He had not learned from the Spirit to eschew the Real, as the churches have. "The eternal power and deity" were "clearly seen" and "understood by the things that are made". And, "the things which are seen" were made of things which do not appear. To scientists there may be more congenial ways of accounting for material objects, but they never can show consistency, as Paul does. There can be no safer conclusion than that the material structure of the things of man depend for existence upon his "godliness" and righteous nurturing of "Truth". And there is no greater "Truth" among men than is the Word of God is not true as it stands, there is no Truth man can point at. Over six hundred Christian sects have rummaged through the Word and the writings of men to find an unreal path to the ideal things of God. How could "a house" thus "divided against itself" and its Book "stand"? "When they knew God, they glorified Him not, but became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was darkened. Professing themselves to be wise they became fools." This was the renaissance of the theology of Eden. Paul is applying it to his own and later times—times that must be, but never could exist had the churches been true to the Book. It would be unfair to many well-disposed ministers of the various sects not to say that there have been some sincere exceptions to the great defections in modern exposition, but very few courageous ones. We used to hear in boyhood of certain very brave soldiers with "cowardly legs"! This is a more affliction and hard to cure.

But the student should not be discouraged because there appears to be no signs of better things in this troublesome respect. That "is written", too. We must not "lay down", "Any old way" to "the kingdom of God" may be convenient and profitable for a reckless age, but not for us. "Offenses must come." Let us insist upon the very Word of God. Remember that the authority is Christ! Beware of the word "apostolic". It is a very sunken term. We get its full and only value from those few humble men for their own earnest, warning tones, it has no authority. They were fearful it might have. Read Acts carefully, on this score. They cast "lots" for a vacancy. It was at least 17 years later before they learned an Apostle had been divinely "called" to fill up the measure of 12. Why was this? Why was God's anger kindled against Moses? Why was Peter to be "withstood" and "blamed"? Manifestly because there was but One inherently infallible Authority. Insist upon Matt xxviii 19; Jude 3, and every clear Word. Most of the differences of the communities holding the Truth of conditional Immortality, etc, are a more tough sticky dust. I am often surprised at their muniteness, and smile when I think how surely a little loving ammonia would clear and brighten the precious things we love so dearly—the things of God! It is not pleasant to have one's light rudely extinguished. Writers (and especially elderly ones) are slow to change or retract—to see conclusions and the research of long years ruthlessly thrown down. The cure for this (God's cure) [illegible] to learn early to throw them down [illegible] I have enjoyed, more than once or twice, seeing much that I have "set up" go up in a good, hot blaze—in the stove. It is not enough for writers to be good thinkers—they must know how to encompass the entire fabric of the Word or some bad complications will arise, as in Luther's case and so on. A miss anywhere may be a miss every where. Especially is this so of Prophecy. It lies couched in page after page from Genesis to Revelations. It is the plainest matter of all; hidden only as to the times. Millerism (more properly Elliottism) with its assumptions of "yeardays;" "weeks of years;" the revival of the Roman empire; confusing the image of Daniel ii, with Daniel 7-8-11 chapters; the "man of sin" with the "scarlet" woman, etc, etc, must fall, for neither those whom God empowered to reveal His purposes, or those whom He empowers to interpret them, can fail. Men who are moved and speak by the Holy Spirit make no "mistakes". We honor the men who adventure their time, talents and devotion to the things of the Book, but they have no especial "cinch" on the Truth, except God is indubitably back of their conclusions. Be sure He will never back up a man who lives to reject His Truth in its most imperative essentials. He never did that in the Book!

ANTHONY HUSH.

"Let Him Alone."

The time may come when the awful words pass from the lips of the righteous Judge, "Ephraim is joined to his idols, let him alone," and providence will let the man alone; and the Word of God will let the man alone; and his own conscience will let the man alone; and the Spirit of all grace will let the man alone. It is not for us to usurp the prerogative of the Omniscient. It is not for us to affirm of any one, let his character and conduct be what it may, that he has reached or passed the mysterious point beyond that comes true. It is not for any one to pass such sentence upon himself. But let all of us stand upon our guard, and reflect that if for months and years we have been growing colder, deader, more indifferent to spiritual things, to the unseen and eternal realities; if conscience has been gradually losing her hold and weakening in her power; if we can listen now unmoved to what once would have impressed and affected us; if we court and dally with temptations that once we would have shunned; if sins are lightly committed which once we would have shrunk from; by these and such like marks, it is apparent that our day of grace has been declining, the shadows of its evening have been lengthening out, and that, if no change occur, if this course of things goes on long, ere the sun of our natural existence go down, the sun of our spiritual day may have set, never to rise again.—Wm. Hunnn.

The fifth Annual Conference of the Church of God of Ohio, will be held in Springfield, Ohio, beginning on Wednesday, Aug. 7, and will continue over the following Sunday. The meetings will be held at the fair grounds, and the meals will be served on the ground at fifteen cents each, and sleeping quarters will also be found on the grounds, as the church of Springfield will provide cots for the visitors, and would like the brethren and sisters to bring their own towels and such toilet articles as they need, as it will be more convenient. Hoping this will bring out many of the brethren and sisters from every church as we want this to be a real good Conference. Please let me know how many will come and the time and the road you expect to come on and there will be some one at the depot to meet you as we want every one that can possibly come to be here.

When you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTOR," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa, or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and send that.

A four-page tract in the German language, by Brother M. Joblin of Cleveland, O. Subject, "What Must I do to be Saved?" The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Ohio will be held at Springfield beginning Wednesday evening August 7 and continue over the following Sunday. The coming meeting will be the fifth.

The four in the past were replete with all that goes to make a success. The speakers with one accord delivered the glad tidings of the Kingdom. Heartfelt prayers were offered. Inspiring songs were sung. Glad greetings and talks of the glories to come were heard from every side. Those who came hungry for the Word, went away full and overflowing. Let us make number five better if possible than the preceding ones. The brethren at Springfield have secured the Fair grounds and buildings for the occasion. The place could only be had for the dates given above.

Those who have met the Springfield brethren know the kindly effort they will make to have things comfortable.

For the reasons given it is needless to urge those who have attended. To those who have not we say "Come and see and hear." The presence of all is needed to plan the Evangelist work for the following year. The programme will be published in due time.

A New Tract.

The Great Divine Healer vs Latter-Day Healers, by Uncle John Foore.

A Tract for the last days. Should be read by every thinking Christian.

Paul 2 Tim. iii. 13. "But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived."

Matt. vii. 21. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works. And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

Brethren, these tracts have gone into many families, both to brethren and people of other denominations, a few infidels, and one Christian Scientist, and all seem to be well pleased with it; but only a few of the brethren have sent to me any help in the way of paying for the tracts, and tracts are very expensive. We are anxious to have more published on different subjects. Please help to send these Pearls out among the people.

Send orders to John Foore, at 2012 W. Corning Ave. Parsons, Kan. The price is 10 cents each.

Evangelising Notice.

The N. W. Conference has selected me again as Evangelist. The Brethren have added Arizona, and California to my field of labor. Any church or isolated brethren that want meetings during the Conference year should correspond with me at an early date so I can plan my year's work for this extensive territory which now includes western Oregon, Washington, California and Arizona.

Hereafter my home will be Scholls, Oregon, and Address, W. L. Skeels, R. D. 1, Laurel, Oregon.

Will all persons interested in the truth, and all isolated brethren within the State with whom we are not acquainted, please write to me? Beloved, we are anxious to locate and correspond with you, that we may impart unto you some spiritual gift.

Address S. J. Lindsay, State Evangelist, or Robt. G. Huggins, Box G, Oregon, Ill.

ILLINOIS BIBLE SCHOOL.

The Annual Bible School for Illinois will convene at Oregon, Ill., August 19-31. Brother R. G. Huggins has been requested to prepare an outline of study on the nature, office, and work of the Holy Spirit, a task for which we deem him well qualified. The other work of the school will be about the same as in former years. Our evenings will be occupied in about the same manner as they were last year. Already many have signified their intention to be present. When you read this, please write us whether you will attend, and send us the names of others who may be induced to attend. Our school is no longer an experiment, but an established instrument for good. Come thou with us and we will do thee good. Address me at Oregon, Ill.

S. J. LINDSAY.

Syriac New Testament.

A new edition of Murdock's Translation of the Syriac New Testament has just been issued by a Boston publishing house, and we have arranged to supply our readers with the work. The regular price is $2.50, and every Bible student should own this book. It is bound in half leather, and lies open in the hand when being used. The printing is clear and plain, and the paper excellent. We have so arranged with the publishers that we can supply this book for a limited time only at a reduced price, which will enable all who wish this valuable aid to the study of God's Word to possess it. We can offer it now at $2.00 post paid. All who wish to avail themselves of this low rate should do so at once.

NOTICE.

Information wanted concerning an Evangelist known as Blind Haynes, who traveled some years ago in Kansas, selling a pamphlet written by himself, entitled "When will Christ come?" Is he living? If so, where? Who has a copy of his book to sell, or loan for a short time? What firm published his book? Information will be thankfully received, and it is of importance.

Address, E. P. Woodward, Westbrook, Maine.

Account Giving.

There is certainly a great day of reckoning, when our Lord will reward according as her or his work has been.

The measure of each one should have I done upon which to reward? If you should examine yourself, what would you [illegible] and each one will be held accountable for the use of much talent, that may be. If you have [illegible] that.

Some one may ask [illegible] case I do? Why you can [illegible] literature teaching the [illegible] thing else. There is no [illegible] can do that. Will that [illegible]? Oh, yes. Let me tell you [illegible] thing. Some people have received several copies of "The Divine Plan of Ages" and lending it. The friends and neighbors, being easy and attractive reading, most people will read it. It is bearing fruit already. I have just heard of a man who had become discouraged. He had listened to preachers of different denominations, and found they contradicted each other. He began to drift into infidelity, when a Brother put a copy of Pine Woods Bible Class into his hands. Now in place of infidelity, he is rejoicing in new found light. It would take too much space to tell of other cases. Try this work, and add some stars to your crown.

The Students Text Book is already an assured success, and will be printed after I get home from this present trip.

I desire that all who want it, to send in their names in advance, that I may know how many to print. All you order now, you will be sure to get when printed. The price will be fifty cents.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Your loving brother.

He Knows

He knows the heart, every way,
The endless striving day by day,
The souls that weep, the souls that pray.
He knows!

He knows how hard the fight hath been,
The records that stand out here in green,
The wounds the world hath left unseen.
He knows!

He knows when moan and tears we sink,
How deep the gloom, how near the brink
To dark despair we pause and drink.
He knows!

He knows! oh, thought so full of bliss!
For though on earth our joy we miss,
We still can be it, feeling this—
He knows!

He knows! O heart, take up thy cross,
And know earth's treasures are but dross,
And he will prove as gain our loss!
He knows!

The Doctrine of a Future Life, By James Strong, S. T. D., L. L. D., Reviewed. No. 14.

Having shown that the term nephesh, the soul and life word of the Old Testament gives no warrant in its use, for even a supposition that man is a dual being, or that he has within him a super-added entity called an immortal soul—seeing that this immaterial soul can be made fat, can be torn in pieces, can be strangled, can and does die and go into the grave—we will now notice the term psuche, the soul and life word of the New Testament, and see if it will furnish a predicate for the popular dogma—immortal-soulism. And first we remark that whatever shade of difference in definition, if any, between nephesh and psuche, as given by lexicographers, the fact that in the Septuagint or Greek version of the Old Testament, we find psuche as the rendering of nephesh, gives us indisputable evidence of corresponding import. So that if the nephesh—soul can die and go into the grave, as we have shown, the psuche-soul, being precisely the same, can die, and is not, therefore, immortal. And let me here further say that the theological definition of any word laid down, does not settle any dispute on doctrines between Christians, as for instance the subject of baptism. For a Baptist will never accept Webster's or Worcester's theological definition of the word, which is, The application of water to the body by sprinkling, etc.—when they know that it is by the immersion of the candidate in—in water, and not baptized with water, as erroneously rendered.

The great commission of Christ to his disciples was, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is (baptisthesis) immersed shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be condemned. And Peter said unto them [on the day of Pentecost], Reform, and let each one of you be immersed in the name of Jesus Christ for [because of] the remission of your sins, and you will receive the gift of the Holy Spirit.—Emphatic Diaglott.

Thus we see that theological definitions settle nothing as to difference of sentiment or opinion between churches and Christians. They only show how words are understood and used by different theologians.

Psuche is the only term rendered soul in the New Testament, and is found, as we are informed, one hundred and five times, being rendered soul fifty-eight times; life forty times, and mind or its equivalent five times; you and us, referring to personal beings twice. As nephesh in the Hebrew, so psuche in the Greek means (1) a physical being (2) the life of a being (3) the mind of a being, but never a being within a being.

The first time psuche occurs is in Matt ii 20, where it is rendered life—For they are dead who sought the young child's life. Again, vi 25, Take no thought for your life——Is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment? As if he had asked—Is not the life of the body of more importance than, merely, what shall we eat, and wherewith shall we be clothed? So far we find psuche correctly rendered, but we now come to Matt x 28 where it is not, as we will now show.

And fear not them who kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul:—rather fear him who is able to destroy both soul and body in Gehenna. This verse has been colored and perverted in the interest of immortal soulism by rendering psuche soul instead of life, as it should have been, and agreeably, can kill instead of destroy, thus leading Christians unwittingly to suppose that if man could not kill the soul it must be immortal. They never see that the last clause of the verse—which virtually declares that God will destroy both soul and body of the wicked in Gehenna—contradicts the incorrect rendering of the first clause, and overthrows the argument founded thereon, and utterly explodes their cherished doctrine. This verse is translated in the Diaglott as follows: Be not afraid of those who kill the body, but cannot destroy the [future] life; but rather fear him who can utterly destroy both life and body in Gehenna.

We next come to the notable words of Christ recorded by the Evangelists, wherein psuche is found fourteen times, and correctly rendered life ten times and incorrectly soul four times in the common version, but corrected in the late Revisions by being rendered life in all the places, thus positively and utterly overthrowing the doctrine of endless misery, as held and promulgated by the orthodox (?) churches of the world. But it is true that this consistent and uniform rendering of psuche in these fourteen instances of its occurrence, is not accepted by these churches; for it is invariably quoted as follows—placing the emphasis on soul—For what is a man profited if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul? To merely lose one's life and endless conscious existence at the day of judgment, is not satisfactory, it seems, to the great majority, who, in the face of all the light that now shines upon the subject of future punishment, still persist in wearing that old worn-out Babylonish garment—the papal hell! And insist that endless misery is the doom of all the wicked, though it might include some of their own loved ones in the terrible punishment!

The words of Christ by Mark viii 35-37 are about the same as by Matthew, as follows: "For whosoever will save his [psuche] life shall lose it; but whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the gospel's, the same shall save it. For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own life? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his life? Luke has it—For what is a man advantaged, if he gain the whole world and lose himself, or be cast away [into Gehenna]? To lose one's life, then, is to lose one's self. In John xii 25, we have the following, He that loveth his life shall lose it; and he that hateth his [psuche] life in this world shall keep it unto [zoen ionion] life eternal.

But what did Christ mean by saying, Whosoever shall lose his life [so much as to deny him, thereby saving his life in this world] shall lose it [in the world to come]? Did he mean what he said—that such a man should lose his future life, or did he mean what theologians say he meant—that such men shall be forever in misery? Can the candid reader believe that living forever in misery is losing one's life, when, in fact, it is only losing happiness?

We have already seen that the terms soul and spirit are never used synonymously in the Bible as they are by our orthodox friends, and this is further verified by the words of the Apostle (1 Thes v 23), which are often quoted to prove that the spirit is an entity distinct from the body, but which only proves what we believe—that man has a spirit and is a soul, and live soul life.

And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly: and I pray God your whole spirit [disposition, temper, vital force, mind, and soul [animal power] and body [physique] be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." The Revised has it, "and may your whole person, spirit, soul and body be preserved blameless." But of this passage proves a spirit-soul distinction, it also proves a spirit-soul distinction, and proves too much for those who only claim mortality for the soul and spirit of man. And as the Scripture proves too much for their purpose, it is fatal to their unscriptural assumption, as are also the words (Heb iv 12) which are as follows: For the Word of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart.

Whether we understand these words as being literally or spiritually fulfilled they explicitly teach that the spirit can, and will be separated from the soul. In case of literal death, the breath—pneuma—spirit—breath returns to God who gave it, as we have seen, and the fact of separation running the same if spiritually applied.

REMEMBER THE SABBATH DAY TO KEEP IT HOLY.

Now dear Brothers and Sisters of our one common faith, do not think for a moment that I have turned to be Seventh Day Adventist. Oh, not by any means, I consider this commandment given expressly to the Jews and to the Jewish only. But what does the word Sabbath mean? Well understand that it means a day of rest, Sabbath day, rest day. Now this is a good thing to have a rest day once a week for man and beast, or God would not have given such a command to the Jews.

I know that the Roman Catholics claim that the Pope changed the old Sabbath day to the first day of the week, but their claiming that does not make it so. They claim other things that we know are not so. We keep Sunday as a day of worship because Sunday is the name of the first day of the week. We believe Christ arose from the tomb on the morning of the first day of the week, and so of course it was Sunday morning.

We keep the fourth of July, the twenty-second of February to commemorate some event, and so we keep the first day of the week to commemorate the event of our Lord bursting the bands of death. And why not? We should not keep it as the old Jewish Sabbath day, changed by the Pope of Rome, but as a Sabbath day or rest day under the new dispensation.

Some will say we have no command for the keeping of the first day of the week as a Sabbath day. That may be true, but we have an old adage like this, "Example is better than precept." And we surely have example where the disciples of Christ as well as Paul, where they met on the first day of the week to break bread and to worship God. There is no need for me to give chapter and verse, because we all know that it is so.

Now, I am not trying to write a doctrinal sermon. I do not think such a thing would be in place here at all. But what I want the brethren to see is this, If we take away our Sabbath day from the people because we have no command to keep such a day, what have we to give in its place? Nothing. And people who would just as soon work or visit on Sunday will do it more than ever. Some say that if we call Sunday our Sabbath day and worship on that day we worship the sun god. This is all foolishness. All the days of the week were named after some heathen god or something of that kind.

We do not worship God on that day for that reason, we call it our rest day to commemorate the resurrection of our Lord and the [illegible] as it happens to be Sunday, just as we will the [illegible] fourth of July or [illegible] the fourth happens to be Sunday this year.

The bending [illegible] Testament [illegible] [illegible] clearing [illegible] the old covenant [illegible] fact in the room we do not rest on the seventh [illegible] Jesus lay, [illegible] does it make [illegible] Saturday is no good as Sunday. The difference is this. The leader is Christ not Moses. Under the law the Jews kept the seventh day, under the new dispensation we keep the first because our leader arose from the dead on that day. We do not want to disregard the day he arose and regard the day he lay dead in the tomb, if we did we would dishonor Christ and honor Moses. Christ is the giver of the new covenant and we honor him, so let us as a church let the people know we understand that we consider the first day of the week our rest day, our Sabbath, although it happens to fall on Sunday.

Some how the people or outside people claim that we do not regard Sunday any more than any other day. I myself have heard some of our people say that, but I am glad that we as a church do regard the first day of the week as our Sabbath or rest day, and it is on that day that we meet to worship. Those that claim that it is not a Sabbath day to us, do a great wrong not only to the church but to the world at large. I am glad that our Savior is looking on the matter and are trying to put some restriction on Sabbath breaking. We can see the evil of it in all small towns as well as large.

We know it takes longer to break ourselves of a bad habit than it does to form one, and so it will be with this Sabbath breaking all over our fair land.

Now dear brethren and sisters in Conference assembled, although I cannot be with you on account of the sickness of my husband, I am with you in spirit. I am very much disappointed because I could not meet with you. Had the Conference been set one week earlier I could have arranged to have gone, as my daughter was with us, but she had to go home (which is in California) so I could not possibly go.

I want to say that I am trying to live as God would have me, I am sure he is helping me to do. We have lost one of our number this spring by death, Bro. S. H. Lawrence. He was one of our best members and we shall miss him very much in our little gatherings. May God bless the effort you have made in building your church and forming yourselves into a class of believers. And may God bless us in trying to keep our rest day holy.

Your Sister in Christ.

ALMIRA BROOKS.

To the brethren assembled in Conference at Corvallis:

Circumstances have again blocked my attendance at this Annual [illegible]. But I hope your meeting will be harmonious, earnest and we [illegible] do the work for the Master, in the spirit of love. I shall think of you all, and pray that your coming together will build up the cause, and make those outside think we are an earnest people, and sincerely believe the doctrines we teach. I have of late been thinking of gifts, and what is the best gift, and the following is my conclusion of the matter.

THE BEST GIFT.

What is a gift? A present, anything given or bestowed; an offering; power of giving [illegible]; to endow with any power [illegible]. A gift in law is gratuitous transfer of property. Spiritual gifts are gracious benefits bestowed through Christ, on the spiritual nature of men, and at times visibly attending baptism [illegible] nature also. By the best gift we are to understand to reach the highest perfection. God is perfect, and any gift that he grants to mortal man is certainly of the highest perfection. Has God offered any gift to man? Yes; read Rom vi 23. For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord. Here we find two gifts, and differing very widely. The one that continues in sin has the gift of death, and we understand it to be an eternal death. But the one that comes to God, through Christ, receives the gift of eternal life, when Christ comes to earth and raises from their graves all those that have obeyed in this life God's plan of salvation. What is that plan? Let our Savior answer that, in his commission to his disciples, as recorded in Mark xvi 15, 16, Go ye into all world, and preach the gospel. He that believeth, and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned. Here again are the two gifts meted out to man, the obedient one receiving the highest and purest gift, and the unbelieving one the lowest gift, which is to be condemned by God. Do we realize what the best gift is that comes from God—eternal life? Can we grasp the idea of living on and on untold millions of years, and having the great pleasure of living with, and associating with Christ? Ought not these blessed truths make every one anxious to live true obedient lives now? Turn aside from their sinful ways, and live the remainder of this present life in serving God?

We have dwelt at length on God's grand gift, but have we not a gift to offer? We find the greatest gift we can offer is love, real true love, ought we not to love the one that has made us such a grand offer? And an offer that can be secured without money? Just simply to love and obey, and if we truly love God we will obey. Who will try and give their best gift to God and receive his best gift in return. For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. John iii 16. He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life, and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life. John iii 36.

Yours in the blessed hope.

Dear Restitution.

In answer to Brother McClothian's question I thought I would pen a few passages of Scripture, which I think are relative to the question.

We find in Matt. xxiv. 3, where the disciples asked the Savior three distinct questions:—When shall these things be; and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and the end of the world? He proceeds to answer the last question first. We must be very careful about rightly dividing the Word of Truth, and not confound his coming with the end of the world, which I think is two separate events.

The apostle's mission was to prepare a people for his name, Acts xv. 14, after this, (after he has taken out a people for his name) he will return "and build again the tabernacle of David which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof and I will set it up; (what for?) that the residue of men might seek after the Lord; and all the Gentiles upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord, who doeth all these things." Verses 15, 16, 17.

It takes four elements to constitute a kingdom. 1st, A King; 2nd, Subordinate Rulers; 3rd, Territory; 4th, Subjects.

In Matt. xix. 27, we read "Then answered Peter and said unto him, Behold, we have forsaken all and followed thee; what shall we have therefore? And Jesus said unto them, Verily I say unto you, that ye which have followed me, in the regeneration when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of his glory; ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel," showing very plainly that there will be subjects to rule and teach, there are to be kings and priests, men that are now outcast.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisite of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

the Master comes to make up his jewels, men that hazard their lives for the cause of Christ.

Let us be ready, that when the Bridegroom cometh, to enter into the marriage supper, having on the wedding garment, and be prepared to hear the blessed applaudit, Well done, thou good and faithful servant, as thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make you ruler over many. My advice to one and all is to always be ready.

Yours truly, waiting for the times of refreshing to come from the presence of the Lord.

Results.

A wise master builder looks beyond the work of toda, for anticipated results. It is not so much the question "Is this work being done just to my idea, but will the outcome of earnest toil bring ample rewards?"

We are glad to tell the workers who are interested in the Bible School Association that the results of this convention of teachers at Indian Lake are in accordance with the wishes of Sister Boice and others. It has resolved itself into a Board of Managers, composed of five members who will use every effort to unify the body of Christ, recommending isolated ones as well as those having the privilege of listening to preaching, to organize for Bible School study in their localities.

Sister Boice was assigned to the Home Department work which we hope will develop more interest in the gospel, encouraging isolated believers and give an uplift to the dear children who are without the privilege of public Bible teaching.

We had a blessed season of communion together during the long session with such teachers as Brother Benjamin Woodward; John L. Wince; Thomas Ivey of Brantford, (Canada;) F. L. Austin of Fonthill, Ontario; L. E. Conner, of Cleveland, Ohio; C. Boice, Champaign, Ill; W. H. Wilson, Chicago; Elizabeth A. Read and Mary A. Woodward. The starts out upon the new fiscal year, with strong hope and brilliant promise, having added to the old roll of sixty members, the signatures of such earnest workers as W. H. Wilson of Chicago; Thomas A. Ivey of Canada; John L. Wince of Indiana; S. Hayden of Washington; Virginia Bitenour of the Shenandoah Valley, and several others.

May our united efforts result in the good of the children and the glory of God, is the prayer of your Sister, in the Joyous Hope.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, AUG. 14, 1907.

WE hope to have the report from the Indian Lake Bible School for next issue.

TURKEY and Persia are at the outs, and war is talked of. It may be Russia is intriguing to bring this about in order to be in at the settlement.

THE Illinois Bible School is in session at Oregon, this week to run until August 21, when the Conference begins. We trust they will have a good meeting, be benefitted themselves, and better fitted to go out and instruct others in the way of truth.

FRANCE will have the task of subduing the Moors. There has been an uprising, and it has resulted in war vessels shelling some of the towns along the seacoast. They will likely have to land troops and conquer the turbulent tribes before they are done. There is talk of the "Holy War" being started.

THAT those interested may be posted, we learn that the Christian Enquirer, published at East Hampton, Conn., and heretofore edited by Henry B. Brown, has been transferred to the hands of O. M. Myers of Atchinson, Kansas, and that "he will continue the agitation, and advocacy of the doctrine of the human paternity of our Lord Jesus the Christ."

LESSON FOR SUNDAY AUGUST 18.

ISRAEL JOURNEYING TO CANAAN. NUM. X. 11-13, 29-36.

Golden Text—And the Lord went before them by day in a pillar of a cloud, to lead them by the way; and by night in a pillar of fire to give them light. Ex xiii 21.

From Lev xvi—the last lesson—to the end there are many laws and ordinances for the government of the Israelites. All laws put together were called "The book of the law." Josh i 8. And Joshua was charged to have this book in mind day and night, and God would prosper him.

In the first of Numbers there is the counting of the Israelites. First of the twelve tribes, afterwards the Levites. They were to be numbered or counted separately, and given to Aaron and his sons for the service of the Lord, to take care of the tabernacle. Num iii 6-9.

On the journey to Canaan—after the tabernacle was established—there was a perfected order of camping and marching. Num ii. The tribes of Judah, Issachar and Zebulun camped to the east of the tabernacle and marched in that order. After them the Gershonites, and sons of Merari with the tabernacle, Num x 17, which they set up ready for the sanctuary—the ark and vessels of the sanctuary, Num iii 31, carried by the Kohathites. Num x 21. Then followed the standards of Reuben, Simeon and Gad. Verses 18-21. Then the Kohathites with the sanctuary. This placed the Levites in the middle. Num ii 17. The standards—tribes—of Ephraim, Manasseh, Benjamin, Dan, Asher and Naphtali following, but not exactly in the order given. Dan was the hindmost. Num ii 31; x 25.

When the cloud—golden text—was taken up from over the tabernacle, the children of Israel went onward in all their journeys. Ex xl 36; Num ix 15-23.

The Israelites knew—some of them did—that they were journeying to Canaan, but like those who are waiting for the coming of the kingdom, they had no will in the matter. They followed the cloud. The true believer of the gospel has no will of his own, desires none, his prayer is "Thy will be done."

God had covenanted with Abraham that his seed—the Hebrews, Israelites, Jews—should be strangers in a land not theirs—Egypt—but they would come out of that land, and come to the land of Canaan. Gen xv 13-21. And possess it forever. Gen xlii 15. The Lord brought them out of Egypt. Understanding the fourteenth day counted from sunset to sunset, the passover began at sunset of the fourteenth, and on the self same day the Lord brought Israel out of Egypt. Ex xii 51. In the third month they came to Sinai. Ex xix 1.

Lesson text 11. They had been there about eleven months.

12 Paran—about 100 miles northwest of Sinai.

13 Marched in order as already outlined.

29 In Judges iv 11, Hobab is called the father-in-law of Moses. Evidently a mistake. He was the brother-in-law of Moses, and seemingly had come to visit Moses. Raguel is called Jethro, Ex xviii 1, and Reuel. Ex ii 18.

Moses seemed to be well pleased with Hobab. He gave him a hearty invitation to go along with them to the land of Canaan, the land of promise, a land flowing with milk and honey. Ex xiii 5. This was some of the good the Lord had spoken concerning Israel.

30 The good had no charm for Hobab. Like Orpah he would return to his people and his gods. Ruth i 14 15.

Moses now entreats him, and tries to show him that he may be a good help to them.

31 And assures him that whatever good the Lord bestows on them, they will share it with him.

33 It is somewhat doubtful that Hobab accepted the offer of Moses.

The Lord Jesus Christ who has been given all power in heaven and on earth. Matt xxviii 18. He promised, does promise, is still promising far greater and better things than Moses could promise. Thousands upon thousands have read. The exceeding great and precious promises. 2 Peter i 4. The promise of everlasting life. John xxxvi 39-40. A seat with himself on his throne. Prov iii 21. Glory and honor. Rom ii 7. And David in Psa cxlix tells what the glory and honor is. These astonishing promises are now being preached, and taught in the various States of America and other lands. A few here and there believe and obey, but the thousands do not even take the trouble—like Hobab—to say, I will not go. They simply hear and ignore.

As the place of the ark was in the midst of the camps, we will infer that the ark went before Moses, Aaron, and the Levites, the cloud went before the tribes. When the ark rested the cloud came and stood over it.

34 The cloud of the Lord was with them.

35 Moses was spiritually minded. Rom viii 6. He consulted God. In everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving he made request of God. Phil iv 6. This prayer of Moses was often repeated by David and other prophets. The enemies of Israel were the enemies of the Lord. The enemies of the Church of God are the enemies of the Lord Jesus. Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? Acts ix 1-5. Saul—Paul—became a great friend. There are few—very few—like Paul. The laws of civilized lands do not allow of the same kind of persecution, but the Church of God still suffers from opposition, scorn, public and private censure and otherwise.

36 Moses prayed for the return of the Lord. So the Church of God continually prays, Lord Jesus come.

The Story of a Happy Christian Life.—No. 19.

Auntie Willard begins the story of their removal to Warsaw, as follows:

"As the tender mother watches day and night over her little one, who has learned to his great joy that he has two little feet that can carry him to any given point in the circle of his vision, and who dashes to this object or that, as it happens to strike his fancy—whether cold or hot, clean or soiled, sharp or dull, and then with stained, or cut, or burned hand runs to his mother, or by his cries brings her quickly to his relief;—so is the eye of our God upon His wayward children, extricating them from their foolish dashings here and there, and letting them learn therefrom profitable lessons of experience.

And also like this loving mother, God wearies not of His charge, nor casts aside His erring, suffering child but binds it closer to His bosom and soothes away the tears and heartaches, and sets it again upon its feet in the 'narrow way' and bids him take heed for the future.

Thus did my husband in his desire to gather still more of this sinking world's treasures seize a hot iron that caused him to let go suddenly his hold upon this world and cry out to his God in anguish of Spirit to be delivered from its sad consequences.

This our God was pleased to do; but the many months of mental suffering that succeeded added as many years to his age in his changed visage.

A partnership with a bad man brought about a partial financial crash in our affairs and made it needful that we change our location from Oswego to Warsaw, the county seat, six miles south, as a more eligible place for the disposal of a large stock of goods thrown upon his hands as assets in the dissolution of partnership."

For Brother Willard was a merchant as well as a successful practicing physician. His partners in laying out the town of Oswego, had been Messrs. Barbee and French, both wealthy men like himself. These men were also his partners in the store and the latter, in the putting up of a [illegible]. Mr. Barbee must have been [illegible] to whom she alludes. [illegible] French, was, I think, an [illegible] He was, at any rate, one of the prominent members of the Baptist Church in Oswego. There was also another man with whom Brother Willard was either a partner, or with whom he had large dealings. This man's name was Jacoby. He was a person rascal so far as financial matters were concerned, neither Brother Willard nor his heirs ever succeeded in recovering in full what rightfully belonged to them, of estates that were in his hands.

Brother Willard did not understand the Scriptures in this matter of partnership or he would not have been so entrapped. We are not to choose unbelievers for life-partners nor for business partners, God's command is imperative in this thing. If we disobey, we must take the consequences, as Brother Willard had to—whether we go into such partnerships ignorantly or with our eyes open, the result is in almost every case disastrous.

Oswego had missed becoming the county seat by Mr. French being defeated in running for the Legislature, and its bright prospects having faded away, the commercial interests of the county centered in Warsaw, and for this reason made the latter point a better place for the disposing of dry goods. The removal was made in 1853. In 1853-1854 there was again quite a wide-spread excitement over the doctrine of the Lord's coming just at hand, and a paper, called "The Crisis", was started by the Advent body, in the city of Boston that has lived unto this day. "The Midnight Cry", published I think in Cincinnati, and "The Advent Herald" of Boston, had been issued almost from the very start of the Advent movement, but "The Herald" still held fast to the immortal-soul theory. Our own paper, "The Harbinger" was published in Rochester, New York.

Father, in his "Reminiscences and Episodes" says "There was a meeting appointed in Laporte County for lectures on the time of the Second Advent of Christ, which was attended by myself and by some of the brethren from Kosciusko and Marshall Counties. It was held in a well-seated and pleasant grove, and was, I think, the greatest gathering I ever saw convened on a religious occasion. Three men from the east did all the preaching and lecturing. Their names were John Couch, John Howel and Frank H. Berrick. They were all very eloquent and impressive speakers, well versed in the Scriptures and the history of the past and held their vast audiences almost spell-bound at times as they rose to the magnificences and grandeur of their theme. Some of these ministers subsequently visited Plymouth, in Marshall County and lectured on prophetical subjects."

"But," he continues, "the impression produced by these lectures was not so extensive, deep, nor lasting as was produced by the preachers of the doctrine in 1843-4. There was the same radical error made in the application of the prophetical periods in the endeavour to make them terminate with the Advent instead of explaining them as relating to the changes and events that take place in the kingdoms of this world.

As a consequence, definite expectations built on this erroneous application, met with disappointment, as before, and many have learned that prophecy was not given to tell the day and hour of Messiah's advent to this world, but to mark the course and change of earthly empire in its relation to the future and glorious epiphany itself."

Brother and Sister Willard must have attended this meeting in Laporte County, whether held in 1853, or '54 as I can think of no other persons who could have gone from Kosciusko County, unless, mayhap it were my mother and grandparents. I think the date of the meeting must have been 1854, I was not at home during the summer of that year, was teaching school a short distance south of Middlebury, Ind., and father was sending me "The Crisis".

But the actors in that blessed meeting are nearly all—speakers and hearers alike—gone to the silent rest of the grave. Brother Howell was particularly dear to father, and letters were sometimes exchanged between the two, I have none of these however, but have one of Sister Howell's written after her husband's death, thanking father for his kindly expressions of sympathy in her bereavement. Sister Howell was still living some two or three years ago. Sister M. M. Nichols met her I think in Bridgeport, Connecticut, during the time of C. H. Wallace's pastorate over the Advent Church in that city, and at the date of his meeting with George L. Zollers, whom he had not seen before for fifty years. She had gone to meeting and after sitting down noticed a woman, not far from her, who had on a peculiar poke-bonnet.

She only knew one woman in all her wide acquaintanceship who wore that style of a bonnet, and that was Sister Howell. It must be her, so as soon as the service was over, she sought her out and found she was right, and arrangements were made, that she be one of the guests at a gathering, where the two friends, Wallace and Zollers were to be. It was a pleasant meeting after years of separation. I forget where Brother Howell is buried, but whether at Bridgeport or at New York City, Sister Nichols visited his grave.

When Brother and Sister Willard first moved to Warsaw, there were none of like precious faith in the town, and they met for a time at the house of an aged "Disciple", whose custom it was to break bread with his brethren "on the first day of the week". He knew their views, and yet invited father to preach at his house which he often did. His name was Gordon, and both himself and wife were estimable characters, but though they seemed to love the appearing of Jesus, they never embraced the doctrine of Life only through Christ, and the arrangement, though pleasant in many respects, put a damper on Auntie Willard's personal religious enjoyment. She loved these dear, old people but she could not feel free and untrammelled as she did when communing with her own people.

Nor can any one. It is impossible for those holding such dissimilar views as to the nature and destiny of man to work together.

AUNTIE WILLARD.

Editor Restitution:

Herewith I send you an article which I wrote and sent to the Christian Guardian, (Toronto) in reply to four letters that appeared in that paper on "Future Punishment," and the Editor returned them me, saying that it was "not quite suited to our columns." This is just about what I anticipated would be the outcome, but thought it might be possible that the Editor would be fair enough to insert it seeing that the article was in answer to productions which appeared in his paper.

The Guardian, like other Methodist papers, is evidently not guarding so much the best interests of the Christian as it is those of Methodism—doctrinally. I would suggest to The Guardian that the word Methodist be substituted for Christian in the title heading of the paper. It would then read, The Methodist Guardian, which, in my humble opinion, would be more appropriate than the Christian Guardian, for it guards against any doctrine or view not in accordance with Methodist ideas, no matter how Scriptural it may be or how well it may be sustained by Scripture and reason together, and consequently the paper guards not the Christian faith where it happens to conflict with Methodism, and this it (the Christian faith) does in nearly every particular of the Methodist creed, which can easily be demonstrated to any unbiased mind who will accept the teachings of the Bible as a whole.

Although the article was not written for THE RESTITUTION it may prove interesting to some of your readers at least, especially those not yet thoroughly grounded in the truth of this matter, so if it is "suited" to your columns you may publish, if not I will send stamps to cover return postage.

A. HOPKINSON.

To the Editor of the Christian Guardian: Dear Sir:—

I read the series of letters which appeared a short time ago in four issues of the Guardian on "Future Punishment," the first of the series being headed, "The Rich Man and Lazarus" and all signed, "Truth Seeker."

With your permission, Mr. Editor, I would like to present through the Guardian another view of the question, considerably different from that given by "Truth Seeker," and I think much nearer in accord with God's Word and at the same time more in harmony with the humane and beneficent characteristics of God as revealed in the Bible.

"Truth Seeker" bases his structure principally on the parable of the "Rich Man and Lazarus," and on Matt. xxv. 46; but he objects to the view that Luke xvi. 19-31 should be accepted as a parable. I use the designation "parable" because that nearly all, if not quite all, the most prominent authorities so style it. Young in his Analytical Concordance says on the word "Lazarus," in Luke xvi. "A symbolic name in one of the parables." The Twentieth Century Testament styles it "The Parable of the Rich Man and the Beggar." And in some other New Testaments it is also similarly entitled; but some expositors aliut that it is doubtful if this narrative ever came from the lips of Jesus at all, but is probably an interpolation. McCulloch says, "This parable stands in connection with a palpable confusion and interruption of our Savior's discourse, which is broken after the fifteenth verse by three verses neither connected with each other, nor with what precedes them. Neither is it directly said that our Savior did use the parable, but is abruptly introduced, etc. He further says, I am not able to learn whether a similar parable has been recognized in the rabbinical writings, but the complexion of it certainly accords with their mode of illustration much better than it does with that employed by our Savior. "Dr. Lightfoot and others have shown that the Jews in their Gemara have a parable much to the same purport."—Doddridge.

Jamieson, Fausset and Brown style the narrative a "parable" and in commenting on it say that the Hell of the parable is "not the final place of the lost." Now, if we adopt the view that the passage was really uttered by Christ, we are almost bound to accept it as a parable, concerning the great preponderance of acknowledged authorities, including those mentioned by Truth Seeker, favoring the parable view.

But Truth Seeker asks, "In what way does it serve the useful purpose of a parable?" He also wants to know who the different characters represent, and what the fire in which the rich man is tormented represents. Truth Seeker seems to have decided for himself, at least, that the narrative "is simply a statement of something that actually occurred, and therefore describes what does and will take place in the case of all who pass into the unseen, viz., that they will go directly to either bliss or woe, glory or shame, heaven or hell, according to their moral fitness."

Now let us examine this passage briefly from a literal standpoint to see if it will agree with some other passages bearing on this subject and with what I have quoted from Truth Seeker's first letter. We find that the beggar died and was carried by the angels (messengers) into Abraham's bosom; the rich man also died and was buried; and in hell he lifted up his eyes being in torments and seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom. It will be seen that to interpret this literally we must understand that the actually dead Lazarus full of sores was carried and placed into the literal bosom of Abraham, who was also dead and gathered unto his people—buried,—Gen. xxv. 8-10; John viii. 52, 53; Heb. xi. 8-13. We must also believe that the rich man who was dead and buried lifted up his literal eyes in hades (the grave where he was buried) and engaged in conversation with Abraham who was afar off; but at the same time not beyond the reach of the human voice, so that "afar off" would not in this instance be farther than a stone's throw. Now it is plainly evident that this would not harmonize with the popular idea that the rich man was in the hell of modern popular theology and that Lazarus was in heaven, which was represented by Abraham's bosom. In fact there is no mention made of either heaven or departed souls in the whole narrative. Moreover, it may be learned from verses 27, 30 and 31 that to go from Abraham's bosom meant to go from the dead;—made it necessary to be raised from the dead (verse 31;) and it is further evident that these were not literally living beings, from the fact that Abraham speaks of the rich man's previous condition as being his "lifetime." So the natural inference is that the rich man was not then in a literally living condition—not alive. No, "the rich man died and was buried," if we are to understand the record literally. In verse 24 it will be noticed that this was a place where literal water was within the reach of Abraham and Lazarus, and apparently only a drop of this liquid dipped with the literal finger of Lazarus was necessary to cool the rich man's literal tongue. What about the rest of his body, he seemed to be able to make good use of his tongue? In fact the language employed by this portion of Scripture, if taken literally, goes to show that the individuals mentioned were corporeal beings, and there is not even a hint in reference to immaterial souls or spirits, and it is plain to be seen that the complexion of the whole story is material and mundane. It must be admitted that "a great gulf" would be no hindrance to the passing to and fro of immaterial beings such as departed souls are represented to be. And the popular view as well as the Bible represent heaven and hell as being in opposite directions—heaven up and hell down, and millions of miles apart.

Then, again, the only reasons given why the rich man was consigned to torment was because he (when living) dressed finely, and fared sumptuously and received good things generally. As to Lazarus it is not said that his morals were of a better order than those of the rich man, but his merits seemed to consist only of being a diseased beggar lying at the gate of the rich man and desiring to be fed with the crumbs which fell from the latter's tables. So under these circumstances I think we are forced to the conclusion that this portion of the Bible cannot be a narrative of historic facts. But if we must so understand it its teaching is not only inconsistent with the belief of the popular church denominations, but, to put it mildly, the whole tenor of a literal interpretation makes it look extremely ridiculous and absurd. On the other hand if we accept it as a parable it teaches by allegory facts that are sustained both by Scripture and history. And this parable is not the only one where literally dead men in sheol (the grave, or domain of the dead) are represented as exercising the power of speech, for we find this the case in connection with the king of Babylon, Isa. xiv, and even the trees are represented as rejoicing and talking in the same chapter. In other places the stones and timbers are said to converse; and trees are represented as holding a convention for the purpose of electing a king; and we also have mountains and hills represented as singing, and trees clapping their hands. See Hab. ii. 11; Isa. iv. 12; Jud. ix. 8-15. It will be generally admitted, I think, that these passages are parabolic and to be consistent we must concede the same for Luke xvi. 19-31.

Now, let us see if this parable can be explained in a way that will show a "useful purpose" and at the same time find what the different characters and the fire represent. The belief of the writer and many others is that the rich man represents the Jewish people and Lazarus the Gentiles, and that the purpose of the parable was to show that the conditions of these two classes would be changed in their relations to God. As an indication that the rich man was a Jew, and probably represented the Jews as a nation, he calls Abraham "father," and Abraham addresses the rich man as "son;" and the Jews as a nation prided themselves on the fact that they were descended from Abraham God's chosen, the friend of God and father of the faithful. And another indication that the rich man was a Jew is that his five brethren (representing the other tribes) had the books of Moses and the prophets to guide them; and the Jews were not only rich from a monetary standpoint, but were also rich in the mercies and favors which came from God, and Jesus said, Salvation is of the Jews, consequently the Gentiles, represented by Lazarus the beggar, like dogs, had to be satisfied with the spiritual crumbs which fell from the rich man's table. See Matt. xv. Mark vii. John iv. The Jews had been, figuratively speaking, in the bosom of Abraham and they looked upon the Gentiles as loathsome dogs not fit even to associate with religiously or socially.

How to Live.

He liveth long who liveth well!
All other life is short and vain;
He liveth longest who can tell
Of living most for heavenly gain.

He liveth long who liveth well!
All else is being flung away;
He liveth longest who can tell
Of true things truly done each day.

Waste not thy being; back to him
Who freely gave it, freely give;
Else is that being but a dream—
'Tis but to be, and not to live.

Be wise and use thy wisdom well;
Who wisely speaks, must live it too;
He is the wisest who can tell
How first he lived, then spoke, the true.

Be what thou seemest; live thy creed;
Hold up to earth the torch divine;
Be what thou prayest to be made;
Let the great Master's steps be thine.

Sow truth, if thou the truth wouldst reap;
Who sows the false shall reap the vain;
Erect and sound thy conscience keep;
From hollow words and deeds refrain.

Sow love, and taste its fruitage pure;
Sow peace, and reap its harvest bright;
Sow sunbeams on the rock and moor,
And find a harvest-home of light.

Selections.

The Vision of God.

The life of man has often been spoken of as a pilgrimage from the cradle to the grave; a short space of consciousness between two eternities; a race in which the swift and cunning are the winners. It has been called a tale that is told; a vapour that appeareth for a little time, only to vanish away; a flower of the field, that grows to beauteous perfection and then decays, as the grass that withers in the field and is burned up. And truly the life of each one is stretched between two points in time. Life is a journey, it is a growth, it is as a cloud of heaven blown hither and thither by the wind.

But, except in moments of gloom, when, indeed, we see only the shadowy side, there is always present in our minds some sense of individual life, which does not dwell on the passing nature of life, on its insecurity, on its brief duration; and this sense, which is strong in every healthy human being, bids us fulfil the function of our nature without fear, as if we were in no immediate danger. Not for long, however, can we remain unheeding of the short time we have to stay. The thin-spun thread of life is breaking all around us, and the cold shadow of death is even hushing the voice of mirth. To this point we must come, shirk it as we may, and if wise we will face the danger, and ask ourselves whither and how we are travelling.

The joyousness of life is always defined in terms like bright, light, gay, brilliant, all of which words combine in the word happiness. And the sorrow of life gives to the terms we use in describing it, such words as gloom, darkness, shadow, all merging into the weeping and wailing place of death.

As human beings we are constantly swinging from the one to the other. Does some sudden grief come upon us, then our world suffers a total eclipse, and all is dark. Or are we made the recipients of a new joy, then our daily life takes the fresh brightness and inspiration of a summer's morning; all trouble is overcome and dispelled by the presence of a new lively interest. Light replaces darkness, joy replaces sorrow, and a new life seems to be infused into us.

This is a brief statement, in ordinary language, of the life and destiny of the human race. And it is also the line along which the redemptive purpose of God comes to us. The Divine plan for the race meets the requirements of the race, and provides joy for sorrow, light for darkness, life for death. It is only such a scheme that would draw men into active sympathy; it is based on the simple, common needs and desires of mankind, and the reception and understanding of it are within the reach of every one. Note that this provision is for every one. The heart of Christianity is this simple fact that there is no respect of persons, no selection, but an individual choice.

There is no movement of an ethical, moral, or social kind, which does not aim at making mankind happier than they are. All agitations to improve the conditions of the world's workers have in view a general condition of life, in which those who labour shall receive the reward of their labour, and be enabled to enjoy such reward in ease and comfort. This must be granted as the ideal we all strive after. And our efforts must be judged by the purity of our motives, and the unselfishness of our strivings. Yet, with all the honesty of purpose, and the heroic self-abnegation that have been laid on this altar of social and moral reform, how little has been accomplished in the work of the regeneration of the world! The greatest ethical and moral teachers of the old world have passed away; their wisdom is accumulated in the Sacred Books—and the problem of happiness still remains unsolved. To-day the world is full of a kind of diluted wisdom drawn from the ancient sages, and presented by teachers who speak as with inspired authority. It is a false security all such teaching gives to those who accept it, full of self deception and self-conceit, satisfying the heart that longs for some sure and certain object of faith with a rhapsody of fine words. There is little need for illustration of this. The books that appear in hundreds are compilations of vague, dreamy theories, half thought out, and overloaded with weak sentiment. We are on the eve of an exposure of a modern religion known by the name of "Christian Science". And what do you think is causing this new religion to crumble away? It is the same cause that has delayed the arrival of the golden age which has been the ideal of all religions—the leader of the "Christian Scientists" is at the point of death.

When we turn and look more particularly upon the religion we profess, we can trace a similar stream of endeavour after the life of happiness. The most brilliant moment in the history of moral teaching was when our Lord spoke those wonderful sayings recorded in the gospels, and especially in the fifth chapter of Matthew. That, I say, was the highest pinnacle of moral excellence ever attained. They are the words of our Lord and and Savior, Jesus Christ, and cannot be understood apart from Him. No consideration of these Beatitudes can be of any practical benefit, which neglects the conditions under which they were uttered, or the Person from whose lips they came.

There can be no doubt that these sayings were addressed to His disciples, or intimate followers. They are clear and simple expressions of the principles that guide the new life set forth in His teaching. And in these beautiful sayings, which serve as an introduction to the Sermon on the Mount, we have Christ's interpretation of the Law of Moses. Now this Law, given by God on Mount Sinai, might be termed the Jewish confession of faith. The people, particularly the religious section of them, believed that God's will was expressed in this Law, and that obedience to it was the duty of all the people. Jesus, being a devout Jew, believed this also. He magnified the Law in His life and death; He became the end of the Law, in His resurrection.

The old law was a compelling force which demanded certain actions and sacrifices. And as it was practised when our Lord was upon earth, the purity and goodness of it were hidden and choked by additions made to serve the ends of false teachers. The Law was, in fact, unrecognisable in the life of the people, and for this reason the finer teaching of Jesus, which embodied the true meaning and interpretation of the Law, was misunderstood by His hearers. Even His disciples failed to recognise their own religious principles in our Lord's words. The outward performance of rites and ceremonies, if these are to be effectual, must be the expression of an inner impulse, else these vain exercises of ordinances are the outcome of hypocrisy. And so in reversing the religious teaching of His day, that is, in going behind the action to the motive which determined it, our Lord convicted the Jews of insincerity and failure to keep the spirit of the Law of which they were so proud.

We do not need to follow this idea further. Each must recognise how the Law of Moses was quite useless so long as the Jews failed to keep the spirit of it. And the general lesson to be gathered from this is also quite clear, so far as we are concerned. Religion that is outside of us, and that has no individual expression from the heart, has no power over our lives.

So much then for the conditions under which these Beatitudes were uttered. There remains the more important consideration, that is, the Person who uttered them. And, in speaking of this One, Jesus Christ, we are brought face to face with a factor that takes us out of morality and law, and brings us into touch with the God who is greater than all morality, and the Giver of the law.

For us, as human beings under a law that demands death for sin, Christ is the way along which we can attain to the Vision of God. No man could keep the law as given on Mount Sinai, just as no man can keep those precepts contained in the Sermon on the Mount. It required a manifestation of God in a man who did keep the law in its purity in order to bring mankind within sight of God. And this was the man, Christ Jesus. He, by doing the will of His Father, became the new and living way to the presence of God. He brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel. As Paul puts it to the Ephesians, "For ye were once darkness, but are now light in the Lord: walk as children of the light."

We are no better than those who have striven to search for God by the light of their own consciences: we are just as helpless as they, and God is their judge as well as ours.

Jesus Christ, in preaching His great sermon, rises in infinite majesty above all other teachers, because He was the embodiment of all He taught. And we, who listen to His words, are one with Him by faith in Him. We cannot realise His precepts in our active lives apart from the power He gives to us as His followers. But, just in so far as we accept his aid, do we see God. "For," said He, "he that hath seen Me hath seen the Father."

The first principle of the Christian life is a personal confession of sin, and this implies weakness and entire inability to save ourselves. Repentance is the beginning of goodness. Just as the publican called, "God be merciful to me a sinner;" just as Paul, the apostle of God, could look upon himself as the chief of sinners, so must our confession be as individuals. The standard of goodness from God's view is not a material one, for He needs not that any man should give Him anything; all men are alike, the poor, the rich, the pious, and the sinful. And to all alike the way of true happiness is opened up in Christ.

Mark how the term "happiness" is merged into another word fuller and richer in meaning. "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." There is in the word "blessed" a sense of consecration. For our Lord had not only the immediate lives of his disciples in mind when he spoke these words; He had the future life also in view, that eternal life, when, indeed, the purity, the righteousness, would be the only life of those who were His people.

Of the eight beatitudes, or Blesseds (for the word "beatitude" is not found in the Bible), this one, "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God," might be called the essential. The suggestion I would offer for this would be, that there is nothing our Lord lays so much stress upon in His teaching as purity of heart. It is the holy garment which we must wear as the children of God. I need not refer to the many instances in which Jesus insists on this point. But there is hardly a saying which we have recorded in the Gospels but will be found to contain this root idea. Without holiness no man shall see the Lord (Heb xii 14).

The construction of the sentence is peculiar. Suppose we were to read it, "The pure in heart are blessed, because they shall see God." And this is the real sense of it. The vision of God is the spiritual counterpart of purity of heart, and blessed is the condition of all who attain it.

Our Lord's meaning is clear; He shifts the centre of purity from outward observances to the heart, the inner life. And all that the heart includes, the disposition, the temper, in fact, the virtues which are the basis of conduct in our relationships. The Pharisees could chide Him for keeping company with sinners—they looked on outward appearance. But Jesus rebuked them, saying, "Ye Pharisees cleanse the outside of the cup, and of the platter; but your inward part is full of extortion and wickedness."

It is extremely difficult to lay down rules of conduct. We are guided by experience and circumstance. But one thing can be set down as unchangeable in all conduct. No one must betray his standard of right. That Inner man, renewed day by day, must keep unstained. In this condition we have a new feast of life and blessedness. We are delivered from the harassing conventions of life, and our actions are guided by consideration and love.

The other seven Blesseds contribute to the complete ideal of the Christian. But without the pure heart there could be no real Christian life—just as without love there can be no sacrifice. So that everything hinges on the question—Has the heart been cleansed and renewed?

I have said that Christ was the embodiment of His own teaching, and He is something more. For, unlike other teachers who lived and died, our Lord was, by the power of God, raised to an endless life. Were it otherwise, the ethical value of these beatitudes would be no more than a collection of sayings by Confucius. And, while it is true that they have a reference to the believer's life on earth, the real real significance is for the future. Only when Christ is manifested will we be able to fully [illegible] sayings entirely, for we shall be made like Him.

To what extent can [illegible] see God now? The [illegible] vision can only come with full knowledge, but in what way can we be [illegible] of God's presence? This, you remember, was the stumbling-block of the disciples—"Shew us the Father, and it sufficeth us." And when questioned regarding mysterious things, our Lord's method of reply was to turn to some simple and common object for illustration.

When they spoke amongst themselves as to which of them would be greatest in the Kingdom, Jesus, knowing their thoughts, took a child, and, placing him in their midst, said, "He that receiveth Me as this little child shall be greatest." And on a question of service, when they disputed for place, did not our Lord insist on washing their feet? The simplicity of the child, the common task of the slave, are traits of that pure heart which knows the presence of God. The less we try to define in language this vision the better, for it does not consist in believing or in knowing, but in being and in doing. It was to a poor outcast woman that Christ in his risen splendor appeared first of all; and to two obscure travellers on the common road did He talk of the promises concerning Himself.

The present aspect then of the vision of God begins with an inner change of mind and a new direction of conduct, and whenever this conscious process has taken place, there has been some glimpse of the Almighty. But the way to God is through a manifestation of God in the flesh, and an indwelling by faith of this One in the believer's heart. This communion with God in Christ Jesus is the experience of the pure in heart, and of them only. No liar can enter the holy presence, and nothing that defiles shall find a place there.

If, then, we are to behold the beauty of eternal holiness in the face of Jesus Christ, and if the transforming power of the vision is to effect its work in our souls, we have urgent need to attend to the duty of constant communion with our Spiritual Head. Our source of strength, our power of vision, are not on the natural plane—they are the accompaniment of the gift of God in His Son. We do not pretend to be able to put these precepts into daily use, but their presence chastens the natural waywardness of our minds, and gives us a mark of excellence to which we press forward.

Nothing is gained except by labour, and we must labour to enter into the Christian heritage. But the readiness is all; we are to be receptive of the Spirit which is transforming us into the image of God's children, and which will, at last, translate us into the Kingdom of His dear Son.

These rambling thoughts may seem somewhat disconnected, and not altogether in line with the subject. But it is well to keep in mind that the Holy Scriptures tell of pilgrims seeking for a city whose builder and maker is God. The prophet and psalmists saw the blessed vision of God as in a mystery, and they foretold of One who should lead the blind by a new way, and should reveal a great light to those who were in darkness. It may be said that all texts lead to God. Never make the setting of a story, or its real historic meaning, the only end in our study. The all-important result of our thinking should be summed up in a question we can ask ourselves—Does it lead our devotion Godward? All worship, as all study, is our effort to see with clearer vision. And that humility, which is never absent from purity of heart, be our constant attitude we will find that all things lead us to him, who made all things. The debt we owe to our Lord, who bought us with so great a sacrifice, can never be repaid. But the hope brought to us with God's gift should be a purifying influence in our lives. It must be that our own indiscretions will forge chains to impede our progress, and raise clouds that hide God from us; for in a very true sense our sins weigh us down, so that we cannot travel the journey of life in comfort. But if now we see as in a glass, darkly, we know that one day we shall see clearly, and, in the words of the Psalmist, we shall be able to say, "I shall be satisfied when I awake with Thy likeness."

"We know that if He shall be manifested, we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is. And everyone that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as He is pure."—John G. Wilson, in Messenger.

Coming Events.

For years thinking men have been asking the question, "What next?" when they see dark clouds of trouble arise on the horizon of the political, labor and capital world. They are watched with eagerness and with fear, for they know not what will be the extent of trouble, whether it will involve all nations in deadly conflict; or will it vanish away as a morning cloud before the rising sun; and there is certainly reason for such apprehensions, for if a small nation like Japan can rise in their might, and drive back the Bear of the North to his lair, what might the whole yellow race do if they were united as one? But we have little to fear, if we treat them honestly. Russia has learned a lesson not to be soon forgotten, she cannot become a universal empire; neither can any other nation on earth, although Russia will yet make large conquests to the South. The God of heaven showed to king Nebuchadnezzar that there would be four universal kingdoms on earth before the kingdom of God would be established, and that the kingdom of God would come like a stone out of a mountain and would smite the image on the feet, or in other words would smite the Roman kingdom in its divided condition represented by the iron and clay. This fourth kingdom was not content to rule the old world, but has spread over most of the new world, and is still spreading; and is almost ready to declare itself master of the U. S. of A. What some may sustain with surprise! they dare not attempt such a thing; whether you will believe it or not, it will be the greatest surprise to you when established. The power is already manifesting itself in the public schools, in the press and politics. Fifty years ago they began destroying our public schools by stopping prayer, then of making comments on portions of Scripture read in your school, then prohibiting the use of the Bible in schools; and now they call the public schools "godless schools" when they themselves are the cause of them being "godless schools." To give some idea of the feelings they have for our public schools and ourselves we give a few examples. "The common schools of this country are sinks of moral pollution and nurseries of hell."—Chicago Tablet.

It will be a glorious day for Roman Catholics in this country when under the laws of justice and morality, our school system shall be shivered to pieces.—Catholic Telegram.

Said Priest D. S. Phelan, we will take this country and build our institutions upon the graves of Protestantism.

Education outside of the control of the Roman Catholic church is a damnable heresy.—Pius IX.

What do you think of such sayings and threats? From such language it appears that the Catholic church is about to fulfil what was foretold nearly two thousand years ago, in the Revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave unto him, to show unto his servants things which must shortly come to pass. One of the many things which was to come to pass is given. Rev xiii 11. And I beheld another beast coming up out of the earth; and he had two horns like a lamb; and he spake as a dragon. And he exerciseth all the powers of the first beast before him, and causeth the earth and them which dwell therein to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed.....And he causeth all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hand or in their foreheads. And that no man might buy or sell save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name.

Woe to the United States when such an order is established, for there will be a repetition of the cruelties of the dark ages. But thanks be to God, the time is short. The Lord is coming; and the stone cut out of the mountain without hands, and that it break in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver and the gold; the great God hath made known to the king what shall come to pass hereafter; and the dream is certain, and the interpretation thereof sure. Dan ii. Then will be answered the prayer, Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven. Even so come Lord Jesus; and deliver us from the corrupt rule of mortal man, for he has failed to rule justly in every form of human government that has ever been tried under the sun.

Obituary.

Royal S. Cummings, a resident of Waterbury, Conn., who had been visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Pliny Hartshorn, northeast of LaSalle, Illinois, died at the Hartshorn home Monday evening June 24th as a result of an attack of heart failure.

Mr. Cummings who was 82 years and 6 months old had been visiting at LaSalle for five weeks, and during his entire visit he seemed to have been enjoying the best of health, and up to the time of his death he had never complained of being ill. He was born in Portland, Maine, Dec. 3, 1824, and died in LaSalle June 24, 1907.

Bro. Cummings and wife were old time Adventists in Portland, Maine, and Lawrence, Mass. In the earlier forties 1840 and 44.

Going west in 1855 they made their home in Cordova, Ill., in 1860, and identified themselves with the Advent church there, living consistent Christian lives. In 1868 he and wife after careful study, and the preaching of Brother Howell, came to accept the "Age to Come" faith and the teaching of THE RESTITUTION, which paper has been in the home ever since, and he has earnestly contended for the faith. His wife, Mary Alden Simonton, died in October, 1899, since which time he has made his home with his daughter, Mrs. F. F. Cook, at Waterbury, Conn., coming west every two years to visit his friends, who were very dear to him.

The funeral services were held at the residence of Mr. Pliny Hartshorn at 2 o'clock, Thursday, June 27th, and we laid him to rest in the cemetery at Cordova, Ill., beside his wife, at 5:30 P. M. Friday the 28th, awaiting the morn of the resurrection. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord, yea, saith the Spirit, they do rest from their labors and their works do follow them."

Mrs. F. F. Cook.

Daniel B. Wagner was born in Washington County, Md., near Hagerstown, January 18, 1822, and died at the home of his sister, Martha J. Knoble, July 30, 1907. Aged 85 years 6 months, 17 days. He left his home in the East in company with his parents and the families of the Saysters and Ranvers, and came overland to Ogle County in 1838; for one year resided in Oregon, then moved to Rockvale Township, near Silver Creek. He has remained a resident of Ogle County for nearly 70 years.

He was a man strictly temperate in all his habits and was a staunch advocate of the temperance cause and all that was pure and good, ever mindful of the welfare of others, generous to a fault, always ready to lend a helping hand to the needy, and by his kind and genial disposition won the friendship and esteem of all with whom he came in contact.

When you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and send that.

We wish to avoid the labor and expense of mailing statements to our patrons. If each one who has not as yet paid for this year would send in his renewal at once, we will appreciate the favor.

A four-page tract in the German language, by Brother M. Joblin of Cleveland, O. Subject, "What Must I do to be Saved?" After getting the opinion of one who understands this language, we have no hesitation in recommending it as simply all right. Get some for your German friends. Send to M. Joblin, 626 Woodland Ave., Cleveland, O. Price 40 cts per 100.

Notice.

All who are interested in the dance question, and wish to know the workings of the ball room and dance house will get a full understanding of the matter by getting and reading carefully the little tract on the "Evils of the Ball room Unveiled." It will cost but ten cents post paid. Send to the author L. S. Bronson, Niles, Mich.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

We have received a new edition of the tract A Letter to a Friend, from Brother Woodruff, and we can supply them at five cents each postpaid. No tract ever issued by our people has done the good this has, and the pleasing and convincing style in which it is written makes it worth much as a medium for advancing the truth of the gospel. Get a number of them and give to friends. You never can tell how much good a few nickels will do used in this manner. Try it.

A New Tract.

The Great Divide Healer vs Latter-Day Healers, by Uncle John Foore.

A Tract for the last days. Should be read by every thinking Christian.

Paul 2 Tim. iii. 13. "But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived."

Matt. vii. 21. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works. And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

However, these tracts have gone into many families, both to brethren and other denominations, a few to Second one Christian Scientist, and all seem to be well pleased with it; but only a few of the brethren have sent to me any help in the way of paying for the tracts, and tracts are very expensive. We are anxious to have more published on different subjects. Please help us send these Pearls out among the people.

Send orders to John Foore, no 2012 W. Corning Ave, Parsons, Kan. The price is 10 cents each.

ILLINOIS BIBLE SCHOOL.

The Annual Bible School for Illinois will convene at Oregon, Ill., August 13-21. Brother R. G. Huggins has been requested to 'prepare an outline of study on the nature, office, and work of the Holy Spirit, a task for which we deem him well qualified. The other work of the school will be about the same as in former years. Our evenings will be occupied in about the same manner as they were last year. Already many have signified their intention to be present. When you read this, please write me whether you will attend, and send me the names of others who may be induced to attend. Our school is no longer an experiment, but an established instrument for good. Come thou with us and we will do thee good. Address me at Oregon, Ill.

NOTICE.

Information wanted concerning an Evangelist known as Blind Haynes, who traveled some years ago in Kansas, selling a pamphlet written by himself, entitled "When will Christ come?" Is he living? If so, where? Who has a copy of the book to sell, or loan for a short time? What firm published his book? Information will be thankfully received, and it is of importance.

Account Giving.

There is certainly a great day of accounts coming, when our Lord will reward every one according as his or her work has been.

The great concern of each one should be, What have I done upon which to expect reward? If you should judge yourself, what would your judgment be?

Our talents differ, and each one will be held accountable for the use of such talent, whatever that may be. If you have only one, use that.

Some one says, what can I do? Why you can circulate literature teaching the truth if nothing else. There is no one but who can do that. Will that do any good? Oh, yes. Let me tell you something. Some people have bought several copies of "Pine Woods Bible Class" and lending them to their friends and neighbors. It being easy and attractive reading, most people will read it. It is bearing fruit already. I have just been told of a man who had become discouraged. He had listened to preachers of different denominations, and found they contradicted each other. He began to drift into infidelity, when a Brother put a copy of Pine Woods Bible Class into his hands. Now in place of infidelity, he is rejoicing in new found light. It would take too much space to tell of other cases. Try this work, and add some stars to your crown.

The Students Text Book is already an assured success, and will be printed after I get home from this present trip.

I desire that all who want it, to send in their names in advance, that I may know how many to print. All you order now, you will be sure to get when printed. The price will be fifty cents.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. The Great Refiner.

"And he shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver." Malk. iii. 3.

'Tis sweet to feel that he who tries
The silver, takes his seat
Beside the fire that purifies,
Lest too intense a heat,
Raised to consume the base alloy,
The precious metal, too, destroy.

'Tis good to think how well he knows
The silver's power to bear
The ordeal to which it goes;
And that, with skill and care,
He'll take it from the fire when fit
For his own hand, to polish it.

'Tis blessedness to know that in
The place he has begun
Will not forsake, till he can see
To prove the work well done—
An image, by its brightness shown,
The perfect likeness of his own.

But ah! how much of earthly mold,
Dark relics of the mine,
Lost from the ore must be beheld:
How long must he refine
Ere in the silver he can trace
The first faint semblance of his face.

Then Great Refiner! sit thou by,
Thy promise to fulfill;
Moved by thy hand, beneath thine eye,
And melted at thy will,
O may thy work forever shine,
Reflecting beauty pure as thine.

The Story of a Happy Christian Life.—No. 20.

I have not meant to have the heading of this reminiscent sketch, carry the impression to its readers, that no clouds ever shadowed Auntie Willard's happy Christian life, we cannot live in this world of change and decay, and be always joyous. Periods of trial, of depression, and of chastening must come; they came to her. Her sojourn in Warsaw, was "the unhappy seven years of her Christian life." She did not "love Jesus less." She was not "indifferent to his claims," nor had "she slackened her zeal in his blessed service." But the position taken there, made her feel as if she were bound with a chain. It made her less able to fight the battles of the Lord. There was a sense of fear when she thought of going from street to street and from house to house, to tell the story of the near approach of Jesus. She could not key up her courage to do it. I learn this from a letter written to my father after her removal to the state of New Jersey.

In this letter, she says "she ought thus to have canvassed the town," and deplores her neglect of duty.

But this was not the only cause of her depression. Even before leaving Oswego, the question had come up as "to the office and immediate work of the Holy Spirit upon the heart of the Christian." A little company there were deeply interested in the study of the Scriptures and were accustomed to meet on stated evenings for this purpose. At one of these meetings the lesson was finished before the usual time for breaking up and they hardly knew what to do next. Auntie Willard proposed that they kneel in prayer and ask for the guidance of the Holy Spirit. A brother, who had formerly been a "Disciple" objected, saying "he did not think the Spirit was now given in answer to prayer, that it had once been given on the day of Pentecost and for the inspiration of those who wrote the Scriptures, and now, we must not look for its direct communication but to the written word as our only guide."

"No prayer was offered, and they soon dispersed, with the understanding that the disputed question should come up for discussion. The very proposition made Auntie Willard sad. She was an ardent believer in the direct operation of the Spirit, and to question the truthfulness of her position on the matter was like tearing the foundations away from under her feet. The succeeding days she spent in searching the Scriptures and in placing on paper many texts from both the Old and the New Testaments that seemed to her mind to prove conclusively that she was right. "This search clearly manifested to her that the Spirit of God in the power in both Testaments to will and to do of his good pleasure."

But when the little band met again, she was not allowed to present her arguments. "The brother and his wife took the lead, and in so positive a manner that any attempt to present Scripture seemed futile. Discussion was forestalled and she sat silent," feeling that in their theory she had "witnessed the decease and burial of the 'Comforter' and with him went the Bible Clues and all her comfort."

Who the brother and sister were to whom she alludes, I can only conjecture, for this episode in her life is something I knew nothing about at the time. Yet, I do not wonder that she felt as she did, for I felt the same way when it was denied to me that the Spirit guides us directly as it did in the days of the disciples and Apostles of Jesus. It seemed to me that the very Bible itself, was going if this truth must go,—so deeply imbedded in my heart. But when I came to understand that there is little difference after all in the two positions, that the Spirit speaks to us, guides us, comforts us, is with us, answers us, just as directly and as really and truly through the Word, as in the other case, I felt better satisfied.

But Auntie Willard could not be moved from her position. She knelt after reaching home, and "asked God to have mercy once more and show her his truth" and she says "he did for there she found a living Comforter, as these words came to her with power—'Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit.'" This was the Rabboni to her soul and she clasped it to her bosom and went out of that room light in the Lord for she felt that the Spirit was yet here." And so it was, but she did not note that the answer to her prayer was given in the words of the Spirit, nor think that to supplicate in the Spirit, is to supplicate with and in accordance with its words as given in the Bible. The answer to prayer often comes in the very language of the Scriptures, as it did in Brother Cook's case when he knelt by the roadside and prayed on his way to Oswego and was told to "Arm himself to suffer."

To Luther, kneeling on the stairway at Rome it was said "The just shall live by faith." So the Spirit speaks through the Word, for the Words of both Father and of Son "are Spirit and are life."

But Auntie Willard in "succeeding social meetings when impressed to pray for the aid of the Spirit, would so vary her language as to leave out the mention of the Spirit, her object being peace, but in so doing she grieved and quenched this blessed Comforter until he could not abide with her as formerly. Yet she was unconscious of her sin until her eyes were opened to see her departure from "what she deemed the truth, and "indeed to discover this"—to her—"heresy, had crept into our own ranks and even taken possession of our paper and was being dealt out to us in small doses until we were more or less under its influence." What she suffered we can all guess, from having been placed in a like position. It is like suffering the pangs of death, when we see what we deem the truth of God, going down and error usurping its place.

But notwithstanding the depressing influence of this experience Auntie Willard had still "many tokens of her Father's love," she was "still permitted to labor as well as to suffer in his cause; to go about doing good; to speak words of comfort to the sick and dying, and cheer the hearts of poor and needy; to comfort the mourner, and to guide the ignorant into the way of his testimonies. Her house was the home of the saints and oftimes a heavenly place in Christ Jesus as they met from week to week in his name."

"As at Oswego and vicinity through the agency of her pastor,—S. A. Chaplin, and others, by conferences, by aid of books, visits and conversations, the word of the Lord was sounded out to all who had ears to hear; so in her sojourn of seven years in Warsaw, by the same agencies did that community hear the Word as they were disposed to receive it. The oft repeated invitations to come to house, school-house, church or private houses, and ever and anon, her pure and the cure of others were exalted with the glad sound—'Come all ye that fear the Lord, and I will tell you what he hath done for my soul.' Then the baptismal waters were stirred to the great joy of all.

Among those whom I remember as having been baptized while Auntie Willard was living in our community, were my own dear Sister Henrietta S. Chaplin, -a young friend of ours who had accepted the truth from my own humble teachings—by name Lyman T. Wheeler—Nicholas Resack, the son of our quaint old Bro Resack, the Germon preacher,—a brother of his whose Christian name I forget,—sweet Anna Murdick, Sarah Johnson, and many more.

AUSTIN WICK.

Essay on Lesson One—Indiana Bereans.

The first passage of Scripture foretelling the coming of Christ is found to be Gen iii 15. Eve had listened to the sayings of Satan, spoken through the serpent; that reptile having been chosen because it was the most subtle of all the animals God had created. She had eaten and given her husband of the forbidden fruit, and upon them, as well as upon the following generations was the punishment of death to be inflicted. Then were these words spoken to the Serpent: "And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed. It shall bruise thy head, and thou shall bruise his heel."

The seed of the woman, which is Christ, Gal iii 16, shall bruise the head of the serpent, sin and death; and sin and death shall bruise Christ's heel.

Have these prophecies been partially or entirely fulfilled? Was not Christ crucified and left under the power of death for the short period of three days and three nights? On the other hand has sin and death received its fatal bruise on the head? Are not men sinning and dying all around us every day? We may then draw the conclusion that the serpent has bruised the heel of the seed of the woman, but that seed has not as yet bruised the serpent's head.

In Gen v 5 we read these words "And all the days of Adam were nine hundred thirty years, and he died." No special part of Adam is mentioned as having, or not having died. It simply says Adam. Let us then believe that the entire man died, and was subjected to the conditions mentioned in Ecc ix 2-5. "All things come alike to all. There is one event to the righteous and to the wicked; to the good, and to the clean and unclean." "For the living know that they shall die, but the dead know not anything, neither have they any more a reward, for the memory of them is forgotten."

The Lord said unto Abram, Gen xvii 8 "And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God."

From the fact that the pronoun "their" is used we should say the seed referred to are plural, and by following down the line from Abram, we find the children of Israel to be the people in question.

As the promise has not yet been fulfilled we are still waiting for the appointed time when Christ shall have taken out a people for his name and shall establish his kingdom on Mt. Zion, there to rule righteously over all Israel.

LESSON FOR SUNDAY SEPTEMBER 1.
THE TWO REPORTS OF THE SPIES.
Num. xiii. 17-20, 23-33.
Golden Text "The Lord is with us, fear them not." Num xiv 19.

Last lesson the Israelites were marching to Canaan. "The mixed multitude"—camp followers—among the Israelites for what they could make, kept on making trouble. The seventy elders were appointed. The grumblers wanted flesh. God sent quails in great numbers. Israel gathered more than they could eat. The Lord sent a plague upon them. Miriam and Aaron spoke against Moses. The Lord rebuked them, Miriam was stricken with leprosy. Aaron confessed their sin, and pleaded for Miriam. The Lord healed her.

Lesson Text. 17. Moses by command of the Lord, verse 3, sent twelve men, one from each tribe. The ruler, chief or head, the names are given in the chapter, verses 4-16.

It is not stated what the object was in sending out the men to view the land. By from the general conduct of the Israelites it is fair to infer that the Lord was trying them, testing their faith, knowing exactly what they would do. He had told them that the land was a good land, and large, a land flowing with milk and honey. Exo iii 8. And he would send his Angel before them into the land and cut off the Amorites, Hittites, Perizzites, Canaanites, Hivites and Jebusites. Exo xxiii 28.

The Lord still scourges, disciplines, trains and tries every son whom he receives. Heb xii 5, 6.

The spies were to go by way of the south. They were then at the southern border of Canaan. It is some times difficult, from the various [illegible] on there are so many—to get a correct idea of locality. The wilderness of Paran was a plain, some parts barren, some common, some pasture. Kadesh-barnea was in Paran. Caleb, one of the spies went from there. Josh xiv 7. Abraham lived near Kadesh. Gen xx 1. From this we see the Israelites were almost in the promised land.

The spies were to go in by the mountains.

18, 19, 20. They were to report what they saw, and not be afraid, and bring a sample of the fruit.

23 Eshcol—The place of grapes, near Hebron where Abraham once dwelt 400 years before. Gen xiii 18.

It is said, that at the present day, Palestine produces fine grapes, some bunches weighing twelve pounds, and could not be carried by one person without being bruised. This lets us understand why two men carried a bunch on a staff.

24 Valley,—not brook.

25, 26 In forty days they would see much of the land, from Zin to near Hamath. From the south to the north border, verses 21, 22.

27 The first part of the report was good, a full proof of God's word.

28, 29 So far there could be no objection to the report. They told what they saw. This completed their mission, their work.

30 The people were evidently much excited.

31, 32, 33 The men—Ten of the twelve, full of unbelief, ignoring all that the Lord had said, having told what they saw, now tell the impression it made upon them. We are not able. They are stronger. The land eats up the inhabitants—this is not clear, they were drawing on their imagination. Exaggerating to make their case good. The men were very large. We saw giants. Beside them we were as grasshoppers.

This unbelief sealed their doom. Read the 14th chapter. Your carcasses shall fall in this wilderness, all from twenty years old and upwards—you shall not come into the land,—but your little ones, which ye said should be a prey, them will I bring in. Your children shall wander in the wilderness forty years until your carcasses be wasted. Num xiv 29-33.

Joshua and Caleb gave the other report. The land we passed through—is an exceeding good land. If the Lord delight in us he will bring us into this land. Only rebel ye not against the Lord, neither fear the people—they are bread for us—the Lord is with us. Num xiv 6-9.

For this expression of faith in God, the Israelites would have killed them, but the Lord prevented them, and made Joshua successor to Moses. Deut 31. Josh 1. And gave Caleb Hebron for a possession. Josh xiv 6-13. For their very unbelief the Israelites could not enter Canaan. Those that the Lord brought out of Egypt. The gospel the good news, the word of promise preached to them, did not profit them, because they did not receive it in faith. Heb iv 2.

If the gospel of the kingdom is not mixed with faith in us, we will not enter into the rest that remains for the people of God. Heb iv 9.

In Zion—Jerusalem—which the Lord has desired for his habitation and chosen for his rest forever, and for his saints. Ps cxxii 11-17. Let us strive to enter that rest.

Next lesson, The Brazen Serpent. Num xxi 1-9.

Evangelizing on the Pacific Coast.

At the late annual Conference of the Brethren, I was chosen Evangelist for the Conference year '07-08. I wish to work with sufficient system to devote my whole time to the work. It seemed to be view of the Conference, that the original N. W. Conference consisting of Oregon, and Washington might be deprived of some portion of work of the evangelist on account of the work having been extended into California and Arizona. It is and has been my object to increase the work so as to devote my whole time to evangelizing, and not a part of the time to the work, and a part to farming, as was the case during a portion of the time spent in evangelizing in Oregon and Washington. This condition, and these reasons make it imperative that I should receive communication from such localities on the Pacific Coast that desire work and especially in the states of Oregon and Washington immediately. After arranging and devoting all the time that my health can control to the States of Oregon and Washington, my duty and the responsibility of my promise call me to unfinished work in California and Arizona.

Let me hear immediately from all; and do not wait for me to write to you. Address me at Etna, Wash.

Dear Restitution:

We are living in a time when so called wise men possess knowledge above what is written.

Aspiring to be teachers of the people they claim to be wiser than the Creator forgetting that the wisdom of men is foolishness with God; as proof of the above, I quote.

The human eye is said to be a rather ill contrived piece of mechanism. A celebrated German physicist is reported to have said that if an artisan were to make for him a piece of apparatus so poorly adapted to its purpose he would not accept it.

Straws show which way the wind blows and the student of prophecy can see that the end of all things is impending. There is no theory, however absurd, but is believed and finds adherents in these days. Our heavenly Father has been so good to tell us that proud boasters would arise and draw people away after them, and so from every standpoint, we can see perverse men denying the only Lord God that bought them and bring upon themselves swift destruction.

Brothers and Sisters of THE RESTITUTION keep the standard high, never let it trail in the dust, accept truth wherever you find it study to show ourselves workmen that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth, then we will not be deceived by such foolish sophistry.

LAURA H. PARKER.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

This Generation.

As many have held to the belief, that the Lord Jesus would come and establish his kingdom at least within a hundred and twenty years from the darkening of the sun in 1780; and as the limit is passed many feel as though they had lost their bearing, and there was a mistake in the chart.

Don't fear brethren; the Master's at the helm, but rather let us more carefully study his word to get a better understanding of what the Lord says in Ps xxii 30. He says; "A seed shall serve him; it shall be accounted to the Lord for a generation."

As there has always been a seed to serve him, may it not have been in this sense that our Lord used the word generation in Matt xxiv 34, for other similar uses of the word see 1 Peter ii 9, a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people, etc. The terms are applicable to believers in all ages, or else we have missed our calling; if we are not peculiar people, we are not following our Lord's commands. But thanks be to the Lord that this generation of believers have seen the signs; and they were given at the end of the great tribulation, and this generation of believers will continue until the Lord comes; although they may be few in number. Paul says we who are alive and remain will not prevent those who are asleep etc., which shows there will be some faithful ones, when the Lord does come, showing that using the word generation, in this sense the generation that saw the sun darkened, will see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven.

This is given with due respect to other opinions; I have changed mine since the time has passed according to our former ideas of the time, and am willing to again if any of the brethren will show where I am wrong.

Bro. Underwood:

I know we are a little late in sending in our renewal but you will find it enclosed at this time. We have been out west in the mountains which accounts for the delay. It was certainly a great treat to us to view the wonderful creative power of our God, and as we sat beneath the rock, brought the words of the Psalmist to our mind, which says; "He is a shadow of a mighty rock in a dry and weary land." His promises are more staple. My prayer is that the paper will in the coming year be filled with food for the spiritual mind and less of those hard criticisms. The words of the Saviour who says, "What measure we mete will be measured to us again." Remember us kindly to your dear wife and also Brother and Sister Thompson. We all send our Christian salutation.

Your Brother in the Blessed Hope.

Editor Restitution:

It affords me great pleasure to enclose a money order for $1.50, for the renewal of my subscription for our very valuable paper, THE RESTITUTION. I believe it to be the best paper in the world to-day.

I am very sorry to see that the Question Box has been discontinued, as I believe it was a very valuable addition to our paper. I should very much like to see it resumed again.

I am sorry that I could not send it in May when due, so trust that you will kindly excuse me. I know that every person needs the money due them, whether they are Christians or not. As long as we dwelling in mortality we shall continue to need it and often times need it badly, but when we become Immortals we shall not need any.

I wish our paper every success, love to all the Brethren and Sisters in Christ.

Your Brother in Christ.

WHEN YOUR TIME IS OUT PLEASE RENEW.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, AUG. 21, 1907.

BROTHER George Neill, of South Bend, Indiana, is at the Illinois Conference this week.

BROTHER J. H. Willey, President of the Indiana State Conference, accompanied by his wife, are attending the Illinois Conference at Oregon.

THE fourth Sunday in August is the regular time for Sister Woodward to preach at the Plymouth Church, but as she is attending the Iowa Conference at Waterloo, it has been arranged for her to be with us the second Sunday in September. Let all make note of the change in time.

BROTHER Thompson, Secretary for the Ohio Conference sends a card saying the report will come in due time. He seems to be sure that their last meeting was better than any others, and we rejoice with our Ohio brethren, and trust that the same spirit may dominate the Iowa and Illinois meetings, so they can make a like report.

ALL the details are not yet completed, but we are authorized to state that the Indiana State Conference will meet this year with the Hillisburgh Church, in Clinton County, during the light of the moon in October. Every one who can should arrange to be at this meeting. There will be no other meeting this year, as the Constitution was changed at the June meeting. We can speak from experience—you will be well cared for by the Hillisburgh brethren. Their reputation for hospitality is well established.

Notes by the Way.

Having received an ivitation to attend the Boise Bible School, I decided to accept the invitation. This School was organized one year ago at Torch Lake, Michigan, with only a few persons in attendance.

I concluded to take the boat across the lake to St. Joe, and from there to South Bend, Indiana, by Interurban, and from that point by railroad to Lemon Park, located on the banks of Indian Lake.

When I left Chicago, a strong wind blew from the North, which lashed the lake into a fury. There was a large company of pleasure seekers on board the boat. A high spirit prevailed, and consequently merriment; this was stimulated by a brass band playing lively airs. All seemed bent on having a lively time. Shouts of laughter rent the air, as men's straw hats were blown overboard into the lake.

Passengers rolled about the deck or cabin as the steamer rocked upon the foamy billows of the deep.

Alas! what a change! Merriment and fun suddenly ceased! Presto change! and the scene was that of a hospital ship. It seemed as though every person on board (except the crew) had taken a very large dose of lobelia.

The waves rose high, and dashed over the deck, so that the passengers could not approach it without getting wet, consequently conveniences had to be distributed over the boat. These being insufficient, and the passengers did not seem inclined to wait to take their turn something else happened.

"Well," I hear some one say, "how about yourself?" We are told that we might as well be out of the world, as to be out of fashion and so I followed suit.

After a five hours ride, I landed at St. Joe, very much pleased to have a change of scenery. I then took the Interurban to South Bend, Indiana. On arriving, I went to the home of Brother and Sister Richard Railsback, and was kindly received. I was pleased to find Brother Wince in waiting, on his way to the aforesaid Bible School.

In the morning we journeyed together for Indian Lake. We found it to be two and a half miles from Vicksburg, Michigan. Lemon Park was beautifully located in the natural woods, upon the banks of Indian Lake. In the Park there are about thirty cottage houses, which are rented out to summer campers. Each house has the use of two boats. It is quite a pleasure resort and we enjoyed it so much. This School was not so well attended as it was hoped it would be. There were only two young people from the start, and one more came about two days before the close. The bulk of the students ranged from about fifty to seventy-seven years of age. At that age, they were not very tractable scholars, especially when quite a number of those were active Evangelists. The verdict of nearly all was that it would be unwise to further continue this School under present conditions.

A committee was appointed to see if some practical way could be devised to form another association which would elicit co-operation. As yet nothing has been accomplished.

The ex-Superintendent was told to continue her "Home Department work," if she wished to do so.

Not enough young people being present to do much in the School line, the program was only carried out in part. Many excellent discourses were given by the older people. That part of it was a grand success.

The audiences were mainly poor, on account of the location of the School being remote from any town. Many pleasant interviews were held between each other, which were very pleasant and profitable. The novelty of camping in this beautiful spot was also very enjoyable. On the whole, I do not think that our coming together was in vain. On the last Sunday the attendance from without was better. The School was to have been continued until the following Thursday, but broke up that night.

Let us all be active in the glorious work of establishing local and State Bible Schools, they do such blessed work, and hence, should be prosecuted with vigor. Until this is done, it would only be waste of time to consider any project looking toward the formation of a National Association. Begin at the bottom and build upward, and you will have a structure that will abide.

On the Friday night I left Lemon Park, for Ruisin Center, to fill an appointment for Brother Woodward, who was not well enough to go. Sister Ritenour, from Virginia, who was to accompany me to the Ohio Conference, also joined me at Ruisin Center.

This was the home of Brother L. H. Chase, who now sleeps in Jesus. It was also the home of his son L. C. Chase, who likewise sleeps in Jesus.

We held meetings at their Church, which is called by the people "Little Hope Church." I am told that the reason for so naming it was because they had but little hope of going to heaven when they died. The facts in the case, however, are that they have no hope of going to heaven when they die. They have a much better hope than that, which is the "Blessed Hope," "The Hope of Israel." Sister Ritenour and myself enjoyed our visit with this congregation of believers ever so much.

On Monday we journeyed together for the Ohio Conference. On arriving there, we were kindly and hospitably entertained by members of the congregation meeting at Springfield, Ohio. The Conference was held at the Fair Grounds, which was admirably suited for such meetings. We had use of the Dining Hall, which could seat hundreds of people. At the rear was a large kitchen, containing a cooking range. Overhead the Sisters had their sleeping apartments.

In another building the men had sleeping accommodations.

The meetings were held in a large pavillion, with open sides, which made it very comfortable.

The daily newspapers made daily reports of each meeting. I had some conversation with Mr. Kirkpatrick, one of the publishers who is favorably inclined to the truth. He expressed great faith in the Emphatic Diaglott as a translation. He told me that he had tested it, by sending quotations to institutions of learning for their opinions as to its correctness, and they replied "exactly correct."

Brother Neill was re elected President, and Brother Robison as Evangelist.

After Brother Neill arrived at the Conference, he took sick, and was not able to be at his post until towards the close of the Conference. He was kindly watched and cared for.

He opened the Conference by an address, and responses were made by Brethren Wagoner and Overholser.

Brother Huggins and myself led Bible Schools. Preaching was done by myself, Brethren Wince, Wagoner, Huggins, Robison, Tomlinson and Sister Neill.

The Conference opened with a good meeting and ended with a better one. The singing, led by Sister Neill, was good. Young Brother Pearson from Brush Creek, sang and played a solo, which he composed himself, both music and words, while on the grounds; so you see that some musical genius was present.

Oh, how good it is to see brethren dwell together in unity. We had that blessed unity at Springfield, from first to last. Everybody seemed bent on being pleasant and harmonious.

I am not giving the details of the Conference, the Secretary will do that.

All seemed so happy and glad that they were present. Why can't we always live that way?

The next day after the Conference, Brother Huggins, myself, and Sister Ritenour, of Virgina, started for South Bend, Indiana. We arrived at Brother and Sister Richard Railsback's home at about midnight. They arose and welcomed us. While at South Bend, Brother George Neill, and others came to see us, and remained to dinner. After dinner, we went to the home of Brother and Sister Ezra Railsback, they also gathered a small company who stayed to supper. We had singing and very pleasant social interviews with each other.

At eight o'clock, P M, myself, Sister Ritenour, and Brother Huggins took the Interurban Line, to St. Joe, Michigan, and at 10:30 P M, took boat across Lake Michigan to Chicago, at about 2:30 A M. Brother Huggins and Sister Ritenour took the C. B. and Q. road to Oregon, Illinois.

I went to my home, and found my family well.

I went right to work on my Students Text Book. Subscriptions are coming in encouragingly. Pine Woods Bible Class is highly appreciated, and is doing good work sowing seed. Cunningly devised Fables, also meets with approbation.

I arrived home, after an absence of nearly three weeks, well satisfied with my trip.

Praise God! the Car of Truth is on the move! Great good is being done in the name of the Lord Jesus! The seed is being sown, sinners are obeying the Gospel of the Kingdom, and are rejoicing in the Blessed Hope!

Speak often to each other,
To cheer the fainting mind;
And often as our voices
In pure devotion joined;
Though trials may await us,
The crown before us lies,
O let us then take courage,
And soon we'll win the prize.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

The Thief on the Cross.

Study to show thyself a workman, rightly dividing the Word.—Paul to Timothy.

As many have written on the thief on the cross, as of late quite novel, I will venture an opinion. Luke is the only one that speaks of the request of the thief, while Matthew and Mark both say both thieves reproached Christ on the cross. Punctuation being no part of inspiration, we will divide the language in harmony with Scripture.

The thief requested to be remembered when Christ came into his kingdom. Simply a continuation of his reviling. Christ's answer, Verily I say unto you today, shalt thou be with me in Paradise? The word shalt implies a question. It was impossible for the thief to comply with the conditions of pardon, and faith is dead, being alone without works.

Christ is coming to reward everyone as his works shall be. If the thief has a promise of being saved, would it not encourage a life of crime, and all one had to do when death stared him in the face, say Lord remember me in thy kingdom. As for me this is a dangerous doctrine.

Knowing that the righteous class and the thief class are two distinct classes, I prefer the righteous class.

Submitted in love and I trust in harmony with the Scriptures. In his 80th year, waiting for our King.

Selected.

The Sudden Advent of Christ.

That advent will come when the world is full of living men, women and children. No universal blast of death will have first swept across the earth, and depopulated it of its inhabitants. Living men and women and children will be all over the world when the day comes as full of strength, health, vigor, activity, thought, forethought, as at any period since God first "breathed into man's nostrils the breath of life."

It will come when men are blind to its coming, each in his own blindness, asleep—each in his own dream. The astronomer will be calculating his eclipses for years yet to come—the physician will be studying his arts, to add length of days to man's body—the philosopher, with his "philosophy falsely so called," will be improving and enlightening his species—the politician will be planning beautiful schemes for man's welfare in ages onward—the man of riches will be saying to his soul, "Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry"—the man, "that will be rich" will be toiling and laboring after his "filthy lucre," rising up early and sitting up late—the man that "liveth in pleasure" will be sending for "the harp and the viol, the tabret, and pipe and wine," to be in his "feast," regarding "not the work of the Lord, neither considering the operation of his hands"—blind preachers will be speaking their smooth things and prophesying their deceits, each in his own delusion, but all of them blinding men's eyes to the day—the king, and the noble, and the magistrate, and the farmer, and the tradesman, and the laborer—the mean man and the mighty man, the married and the unmarried, the people and the priest, the servant and his master, the maid and her mistress, the buyer and the seller, the lender and the borrower, the taker of usury and the giver of usury to him,—shall all be weaving their webs of distant years and distant things, turning time into eternity, thinking and speaking of time's world as never-ending, at the very instant when the day of the Lord cometh upon them as a thief.

Sinner of this generation, as it was in the days of Lot, so shall it be in the day when the Son of Man is revealed. Thousands and tens of thousands of living men, eating and drinking, buying and selling, planting and building—fluttering like the butterflies in a summer's day, about the perishing flowers of a perishing world—steeping all their senses in the earthly business of the passing hour—making everything a business, whether pleasure, daily avocation, necessary labor, natural appetites, even "eating and drinking," everything made a business of, and the soul absorbed and quenched therein—"whose end is destruction, whose god is their belly, whose glory is in their shame, who mind earthly things." The farmer at his market! the planter with his trees! the builder at his house! the tradesman in his shop! the student at his books! the reveler at his feast! the gambler at his cards! the rake at his revels! the usurer at his gold! the nobleman at his pomp! the king at his court! the soldier in his camp! the laborer at his toil! the idler at his folly! the drunkard at his drink! the glutton at his meat! Each at his sin! each in his day-dream! each in his soul's poison! The Lord hears it no longer. His mouth has sent forth the word of all-desolating vengeance. The vengeance storm obeys, and gathers and thickens, and rolls on, and hangs over. One moment's pause—the world is still merry, and laughing and busy, and knows not. One moment's pause—the preachers are preaching—peradventure the sinners may repent. One moment's pause—hark! the pause is for the wise virgins—hark! "A shout, the voice of the archangel and the trump of God." The Lord can do nothing till they are in refuge, being merciful unto them.

O what a day of separation—of instant and awful—will that day indeed be! Two of a household shall be in one bed, brothers, it may be, eating of the same meat, and drinking of the same cup, two women in neighborly love and kindness, shall be grinding corn in one mill, each for her little ones—two men of the same house of worship, dwelling together as brethren in unity, and making their daily labor good and pleasant by sharing it together, shall be working in one field;—and "one shall be taken," "caught up to meet the Lord in the air," and "the other shall be left." Oh! than will be the cry of those who are left, Lord, Lord, open to us.

Real Character.

One of the most difficult things for men to do is to ascertain the real character of those around them. It is often of great importance that we should know the real character of those with whom we have to do, but the difficulties in acquiring this knowledge are neither few nor small. To know what a man's real character is, we sometimes find out what his neighbors think and say of him; and when we learn what other people think of a man we have made perhaps some progress in our investigation: and yet we may know all that a man's neighbors know, suspect, or think, about him, and still know very little of his real character. Another important item is to know what a man wishes his neighbors to think of him; for there are some men who are very anxious about what their neighbors will think of them, and who take great pains to form public judgment regarding their own characters. But we may know what a man's neighbors think of him, and what he desires that they should think of him, and what he desires that they should think of sin, without knowing very much of his actual character.

It would be a step in advance if we could learn what a man actually thinks of himself; for many persons have an opinion of themselves which is far different from that which they wish others to entertain concerning them, and far different from the opinion which others do entertain of their merits; but we might even know what a man thought of himself, and still be far from a knowledge of his true character, for men are often self-deceived and know not what manner of spirit they are of. The Pharisees thought themselves a very excellent class of men. Many a sinner is encased in an armor of self-righteousness which proves to be impervious to ordinary criticism and reproof.

Having exhausted these sources of information, we may still be in the dark concerning a man's real character. What we need to know concerning men is not what their neighbors think of them, what they wish that their neighbors should think of them, nor even what they think of themselves, but we need to know what God thinks of them. If we could acquire this knowledge, we should have reached the last analysis, and should know with absolute certainty the real character of the persons in question.

So long as men live a double life, so long as men think one thing of themselves, and at the same time their Creator holds an opinion different from either, so long there is trouble ahead, for the time will come when all these opinions and pretensions must be tested, if not now, by and by; if not here, hereafter; and then nothing will stand but that which is built upon a basis of solid fact and honest truth.

It is our wisdom here to know just what the Lord thinks of us, and by careful study of his word, in teachable and obedient spirit, we may learn the divine estimate of ourselves and those around us. There are those whom men call wise that God calls foolish. There are things which men highly esteem, which God abominates. There are ways which seem good unto man, but the end of them is death and destruction. There are persons who to human appearance have promise of prosperity, but God has marked them our as men who are destined to adversity and failure. His word will show us the paths that lead to ruin, and the men that are walking in them; and if we would know the true character of any man we must estimate it as God estimates it in the light of the revelations of God's word, and the actual facts which are developed from time to time. The Lord sees sin in bud, blossom, and fruitage; he knows what the dire harvest will be. We may be deluded by the brightness of that seemeth good unto men, but he understands the terrible end of every sinful course.

Let us seek to make our lives what we would have others think them to be, and, as in the sight of God, to conform ourselves to his will, praying him to cleanse us from secret faults, and seeking to be perfect and complete in all the will of God.—H. L. Hastings.

God has sometimes to throw us overboard to make us trust in him.

Dear Brother and Sister Underwood:

I think it is fully time my subscription should be paid, the weeks slip by so quickly it has expired.

I would like very much to meet you at the conference this year, but do not ever expect to meet you again in this life, but trust I may be found worthy to meet all of the Household of faith in the kingdom of God. I will never forget the glorious meeting we had in Cleveland, the memory of which gives me unspeakable pleasure in my isolation.

I look forward to the weekly visits of THE RESTITUTION as a letter from home, and trust I may be able to have it till Jesus comes, if I should be alive at his coming.

Your Sister in Christ, patiently waiting for his coming kingdom.

SOMETHING NEW.

Brother J. L. Wince wrote a series of articles that were published in THE RESTITUTION some months ago, on the subject of the Resurrection. At the solicitation of some of the brethren, he has had the matter printed in tract form. It makes a very good appearance, and the ability of Brother Wince as a writer is so well known that no words of praise from us are necessary. The tract is now ready, and can be ordered from Brother J. L. Wince, Pierceton, Ind. or direct from this Office, as you wish. The price is 10 cents single copies postpaid, or 12 for $1.00.

Brethren, this whole edition of this work ought to be in the hands of the readers in the next sixty days, and if proper energy is used this will be accomplished. Send orders in this very day.

Poetry.

"They Shall See God."

"They shall see God." O heaven's benediction
Falling like music from the upper spheres;
To you it comes, laden with sin's affliction—
Promise of joy for sorrow, songs for tears.

Sometimes our hearts are dull, our eyes are holden,
Earth's shadows press around and dim our sight;
It seems so far away, that city golden,
We see it not, frail children of the night.

But, "Blessed are the pure," with vision clearer,
They gaze on things eternal, things unseen;
The land for all comes ever near and nearer,
Until there seems but little left between.

Earth wears for them the ever-bright reflection
The softened glory of the fearless land;
While all the treasures of a pure affection
They daily pour with unmeasured hand.

No longer is it Chance that smites them blindly,
Or drives them here and there in wanton play;
'Tis He, Eternal Love, who smites them kindly,
And leads them by a right, though winding way.

Far out upon the desert hot and burning
They see the common bushes all aflame;
And from the thicket a little moment turning,
A voice speaks forth the unutterable Name.

The changing seasons ever coming, going,
Like four evangelists his praise record;
Nature herself is but a verger, showing
The silent, glorious temple of the Lord.

And when earth's transitory life is ended,
And Christ shall touch the lingering film away—
When he shall come by angel guards attended,
"They shall see God" through one eternal day.

Letter to the Christian Guardian.

(Concluded from last week.)

However the parable shows all this was to be changed. Accordingly the Jews as a nation, on account of their sins, afterwards died to their condition of favor with God and were buried among all nations, as represented by the rich man in hades; and the Jews have, it is well known, been in a state of torment more or less ever since. See Amos ix. 1-4. Whereas, on the other hand, the Gentiles, represented by the beggar (who formerly "had no hope and were without God in the world") have been placed in the condition or place of favor, represented by Abraham's bosom. Gal. iii. 14. So we read that the fall of the Jews brought salvation to the Gentiles. Rom. xi. 11. And accordingly "God.....did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name." Acts xv. 7, 14; xiii. 46. And in harmony with the parable Christ forewarned the Jews in plain terms, saying, "The kingdom of God shall be taken from you and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." Matt. xxi. 42-45. Nevertheless, all individuals who are of the faith of Abraham (Jew or Gentile) are heirs of what God has promised for the household of faith; and Abraham is spiritually the father of all such, and figuratively they are in his bosom. Rom. iv. 14-17; Gal. iii. But the Jews as a nation are destined to continue to suffer the "flame" of persecution (being the result of God's wrath) which will keep them more or less in a state of torment until "the fulness of the Gentiles be come in, when all Israel shall be saved;" (restored) and "what shall the receiving of them be but life from the dead." Rom. xi. 11-27; Psa. lxxiv. 1; Isa. xxx. 27; Heb. xii. 29; Jer. iv. 4.

In addition to the foregoing it may be said that there is not even a tittle of evidence in Luke xvi. 10-31 that the torments mentioned therein will last forever.

It does not seem to be necessary to follow Truth Seeker in all his ramblings and special pleadings, which he brings into play, in order to make out a case in favor of that God-dishonoring doctrine which teaches that the Creator will inflict eternally "mental anguish" or some other kind of torment on a great majority of the human race. Therefore, I will simply confine myself to the consideration of the only passage he brings forward as being an invulnerable proof that the process of infliction, or punishing, causing "mental anguish," will never end.

Many teachers of popular theology try to make out that justice, as exercised and dealt out by the Father of humanity to his wayward children (who may have strayed from the path of rectitude for a few short years, or for a few short months, or possibly only days in many cases, and this, too, because that the devil, as we are told, with his superhuman influence led them astray) cannot be satisfied with anything short of eternal endurance of either mental anguish, or suffering in a lake of fire. This we are told is the only penalty that is at all commensurate, in the sight of God, with the guilt of unrepentent sinners. I believe that the preaching of this kind of "justice" has made many a man an infidel and is also the cause of not a few intelligent people becoming indifferent and apathetic as far as all religious and church-going is concerned. But the writer of this feels that he would not like to have to answer for the sin of urging the God of the Bible with such barbarous and monstrous "justice" as is popularly imputed to him.

So now, we will look into this phase of the question briefly and see if we cannot down this, which many consider a gross libel on the character of God, who is represented in the Bible as being a "God of mercy" and "pity," whose "mercy is great above the heavens;" "the Father of mercies" and whose "mercy endureth forever." He is also the essence of love, for we read, "God is love." How can these attributes of the God of the Bible be harmonized with the standard of justice that is imputed to the Judge of the universe by many of our religious teachers? Harmony is out of the question here unless we stifle our senses.

The passage referred to above is Matt. xxv. 46, and reads as follows: "And these (the wicked) shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous into life eternal." This is the only place in the Bible where the phrase "everlasting punishment" occurs, and the writer freely concedes that the words "everlasting" and "eternal" in the passage have the same signification, namely, unending. But to my mind the solving of the whole question hinges onto the nature of the punishment, for it must be admitted that whatever the punishment will consist of which God will mete out to the wicked, that punishment will be eternal as to its duration.

Now, Paul furnishes the key to unlock this problem and throws a flood of light on the point as to the nature of the punishment as well, when he says, "They shall be punished with everlasting destruction." 2 Thess. i. 9.

Now, we learn from this that they who obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus shall suffer punishment, and that the punishment will be everlasting too; but Paul does not teach either eternal torment in literal fire, nor everlasting mental anguish; no, he simply teaches that they will be destroyed and that this destruction will be an everlasting destruction, which will put an end to the wicked; for they "shall not be." Psa. xxxvii. 10. In conformity with this we find Paul declaring elsewhere that the vessels of wrath (the wicked) are "fitted to destruction," Rom. ix. 2, also that the "end" of the enemies "of the cross of Christ is destruction." Phil. iii. 19, Peter also, uses similar language to that of Paul, in relation to the doom of sinners, when he says that "The Lord knoweth how.....to reserve the unjust to the day of judgment to be punished." But how, Peter, will those who walk after the flesh be punished? His answer is, "These as natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed....."and shall utterly perish in their own corruption." 2 Pet. ii. 9-12.

It will be seen then that Paul and Peter are in perfect harmony on this subject, as should be expected, and not only so, but they both accord with what David says in Psalm cxiv. 20, "The Lord preserveth (by bestowing eternal life, John x. 28; Rom. vi. 23;) all them that love him, but all the wicked will he destroy."

Now let us see if Christ himself warranted Paul, Peter and others in teaching that the punishment or doom of the wicked would be destruction. Our Lord says, "Enter ye in at the strait gate, for wide is the gate and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction,"—not eternal anguish—and many there be which go in thereat; because strait is the way which leadeth unto life and few there be that find it"—life eternal, Matt. vii. 13, 14. This plainly teaches life for the righteous and destruction for the wicked, and is just what we claim he taught in Matt. xxv. 46, when the verse is properly rendered.

Christ also warns us, in Matt. x. 28, that "God is able to destroy both body and soul in gehenna (hell,)" and the general teaching of the Bible is that this is just what God will mete out to the wicked—death by destruction.

These passages are all so plain that the most illiterate need not err therein; and they are a unit in teaching preservation, or eternal life, for the righteous and deprivation of life for the wicked, by way of destruction.

I now invite the attention of Truth Seeker, and any others who may be interested, to the fact that in Matt. xxv. 46, the righteous only are spoken of as going into life eternal, and in neither this passage nor elsewhere in God's Word are the wicked said to receive unending life of any kind or quality. If we were to attach the idea of everlasting "mental anguish" to the term "everlasting punishment" the wicked would then necessarily have life eternal as well as the righteous, and we would then also trample the antithesis of the passage under foot and at the same time the result would be all attempt to make one isolated passage nullify scores of others which plainly teach the contrary doctrine, namely, that the wicked are to be cut off from life entirely, which only the righteous are to receive.

It will be noticed by the careful reader that the passage does not contrast everlasting mental anguish or torment, for the wicked, with eternal happiness for the righteous, but the contrast is everlasting punishment (not everlasting punishing) for the wicked with eternal life for the righteous. The natural conclusion to be drawn from this is that whatever the punishment may consist of there cannot be any eternal life connected with it; for this is what the righteous only go into.

The word translated "punishment" (kolasin) in Matt. xxv. 46, occurs in its various forms in only three other places in the New Testament, Acts iv. 21; 2 Peter ii. 9; 1 John iv. 18. It is derival from kolazo, the primary signification of which is to cut off, as lopping off branches of trees, to prune etc. Young's Analitical Concordance gives pruning as the primary meaning of kolazin, in 1 John iv. 18. In harmony with this the Emphatic Diaglott gives the following rendering of this portion of Scripture: "And these shall go forth to the common cutting-off, but the righteous to lasting life."

Now this brings harmony between the two members of the passage and makes it accord with the teaching of the Bible throughout on this subject. The wicked then, it is evident, are cut off from the everlasting life, which only the righteous go into, by being destroyed by the fire prepared for the devil and his angels, mentioned in verse 41 of the same chapter. Or, as our Lord says in John iii. 36, "He that believeth not the Son shall not see life" eternal. The term "cut off" as applied to the wicked is not peculiar to Matt. xxiv. 46, for in Psalm xxxvii. 9, 22, 28, 34, 38 and Prov. ii. 22, "cut off" are the words used when the doom of the wicked is mentioned in contrast with the reward and blessings of the righteous. In verse 38, of the Psalm, we read "The transgressors shall be destroyed together; the end of the wicked shall be cut off." This not only shows that the wicked shall be cut off, but also that this will be brought about by destruction, and that the, will all be destroyed at one time, not some of them thousands of years prior to others.

But, again, if we were to concede that "everlasting punishment" is the proper translation of Kolasin aionion, in Matt. xxv. 46, this phrase would not necessarily mean an everlasting process of infliction or punishing, any more than that the term "eternal judgment" signifies an eternal process of judging, or that "eternal redemption" and "eternal salvation" carry with them the idea that God will never fully complete his process of redeeming and saving. It is plain to be seen that in these instances the result is what is everlasting, not the process, (See Heb. vi. 12; ix. 12; v. 9.) Why not understand everlasting punishment in the same way, the style of the phraseology being the same as in the examples quoted. The punishment or "wages of sin" being "death" and there being no redemption from this death state, the result is everlasting, hence "everlasting punishment;" or the punishment (death) is inflicted to completion and the result is everlasting.

We do not have to conjecture or guess what God's penalty is for sin, for she has stated it plainly. After creating man God placed him in the garden under a certain command or law, and the penalty for transgression was, "thou shalt surely die." Adam did transgress or break the law, and in pronouncing the sentence in accordance with the penalty God said, "Unto dust shalt thou return." From this we learn that to surely die meant to return to dust, as the result. It must be admitted that if the penalty for sin was either everlasting mental anguish or eternal torment in a lake of fire, this was the opportune time for informing mankind that such was the doom of sinners. But God did not declare any such penalty for sin at that time, nor has he done so since, either himself or through any of his inspired teachers; but on the contrary, we have Paul stating that "the wages (or penalty) of sin is death; but the gift of God (to the righteous only) is eternal life." Rom. vi. 21-23; ii. 7; John x. 28. But, as has already been intimated, the teachers of popular theology seem to think that everlasting destruction, resulting in literal death, is not a sufficient punishment to meet the requirements of God's standard of justice in dealing with the incorrigibly wicked. I think Paul settles this question where he says, "These, being filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness, full of envy, murder, etc.... knowing the judgment of God, (which is) that they which commit such things are worthy of death." Rom. i. 29-32. If the reader will turn to the chapter and read all the connection it will be seen that Paul gives a lengthy list of very grave sins among which are some of the most atrocious that can be committed, yet, he says, They which commit such things are worthy of death, but, notwithstanding this, the theology of the creeds, says that they which commit such things, or even sins not nearly so heinous, are worthy of eternal torment, or everlasting anguish. James, also, furnishes some evidence on this point, in saying that "sin when finished bringeth forth death." And in keeping with this he also says, that he which converteth a sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death. Jas. i. 15, and v. 20.

We also read, "The soul that sinneth it shall die." Ezek. xviii. 4, 20. Notwithstanding the fact that many of our preachers frequently utilize, with apparent satisfaction, the eternal misery theory when addressing their congregations, our God who is love, says, as we might expect, he has "no pleasure" even "in the death of the wicked," but he says "turn ye, turn ye from your evil ways; for why will ye die." Ezek. xviii. 19-32; xxxiii. 11.

Is it not strange that if either eternal misery, everlasting mental anguish, or unending torments is the penalty or punishment for sin that we do not find these terms used, instead of die, death, destruction, etc? The answer is very simple and it is this: the use of such terms would misrepresent the truth of the case. God says, "I set before you life and death." Deut. xxx. 19.

Now, the question arises: How, or by what means will the penalty for sin be executed? God's Word in many places furnishes the answer to this.

At the judgment Christ "shall say unto them on his left hand (the wicked,) Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire (everlasting in its result) prepared for the devil and his angels." Matt. xxv. 41.

Again, we read, "He will burn up the chaff (the wicked) with unquenchable fire." Matt. iii. 12. It should be noticed that although the fire is said to be unquenchable and everlasting, it burns up or consumes the wicked. It is not a case of an everlasting process of burning without the wicked being consumed, for as already indicated, the chaff, as might be expected, burns up. If our Lord had desired it to be understood that the wicked would be forever burning in a state of preservation instead of consumption, he, no doubt, would have used as an emblem of the wicked asbestos or something else incombustible instead of an article so corruptible as chaff. But if any further evidence were required we have the Psalmist saying that "the wicked shall perish, and the enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of Lambs; they shall consume; into smoke shall they consume away." Psalm xxxvii. 20. This passage not only informs us the wicked shall perish, but it tells us also how this will be brought about, namely, "They shall consume into smoke," "as the fat of lambs;" or like chaff, according to John the Baptist.

Then, again, we have the wicked represented by stubble, and as if this were not forcible enough we have it stated that "they shall be devoured as stubble fully dry." Nah. i. 10. All the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be as stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch, ...for they shall be as ashes under the soles of the feet of the righteous. Mal. iv. 1-3. If these terms mean what they say there cannot be much left of the wicked after they, as chaff, the fat of lambs and stubble, are burnt up and consumed to the extent that they are left neither root nor branch. But if, as we gather from the language of our Lord, the fire should perchance not reach every particle of the wicked the consumption will finally be complete nevertheless, for the worm will be there and it will not die nor the fire be quenched; but these instruments of destruction will be left in to do their work to completion, and the result, as we have seen, will be everlasting. That the wicked become extinct, or cease to exist in any shape or form as individuals, body, soul or spirit, is forcibly made plain by the following:—"They (the heathen) shall be as though they had not been." Obad. xvi. "For yet a little while, and the wicked shall not be; yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place, and he shall not be." Psa. xxxvii. 10, Revised Version.

It will not do to say that this verse has reference to the wicked in the temporal state, as we will find on reading the Psalm, that this condition is to exist or have effect at the time that the righteous are to enjoy their future inheritance and blessings. See verses 9, 11, 18, 20, 22, 27, 28, 29, 34, 35, 39.

It should now be clear to any unbiased mind, who will take God's Word as his guide, that the future destiny of the wicked, is to be cut off from life, by literal destruction, ending in a death from which there is no redemption—"the second death,"—and finally "there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away." Rev. xxi. 3, 4.

Many more passages of Scripture could be quoted in proof of the position taken in the foregoing, but more space has been occupied already than was intended, and one would naturally conclude that if what has been exhibited herein will not convince the reader that the God of the Bible is not a cruel monster, but is, on the contrary, a God of love and pity, whose "mercy is great above the heavens," he will not "be persuaded though one rose from the dead."

Editor Restitution:

Have read with much interest the article on "Words." The writer is inclined to be critical—all the better—and logical—equally necessary, and satisfactory when the premises are sound.

It is truly refreshing to read something that rises above the dead flat of monotonous small talk that wearies one with its apparent feebleness. Give us something to think of—strong meat—we will do our best to masticate and digest it. What are we here for, if not to grow in the knowledge of things divinely revealed?

It occurs to me that the aforesaid article is worthy of Editorial commendation. I say this not because I hasten to endorse all that is affirmed, for as yet I do not. The writer appears to be a critical student of the Word, and gets down to business in good earnest, and that is certainly well pleasing to the earnest-hearted reader.

Anthony may not hit the Mark every time, and he will have to stand or fall by his own rule, for he says "A miss anywhere may be a miss everywhere." It would have been better if the words "may be" had been omitted. If the principle is sound let us accept of it unfettered by words that imply doubt. Relieves us of uncertainty. Give us clear sailing, and avoid a wreck.

Obituary.

Peter H. Stouffer was born in Franklin Co. Pa. March 10, 1830. He died at Bayard, Iowa, Aug. 13, 1907, aged 77 years, 5 months and 3 days. He was married Sep. 10, 1850, to Miss Mary A. Miller. Two boys and two girls were born to them, all of whom preceded him in death, except one of the daughters, Sister Emma Kate Robinson, of Mapleton, Iowa.

Our brother was baptized about 40 years ago by Brother J. M. Stephenson, since which time he has led a clean Christian life. To know and do God's will was his meat and drink. His last sickness was protracted and his suffering great, but in flashes of consciousness he spoke of the good hope God had given him through grace. As he sank under the power of death, he retained firm faith in God's promises, and he fell asleep in Jesus contented, happy, and with prayers upon his lips. Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord.

Brother Stouffer was brought to Lanark, Illinois, where he was laid to rest till Jesus comes, Aug. 16, 1907. The writer spoke words of comfort to the bereaved relatives and friends. Owing to the illness of his faithful wife, she was not able to attend the funeral, much to her and our regret.

R. G. Huggins.

Rowena Palmer was born in Oswegatie, N. Y. Dec. 28, 1839, and died in Watson, Mich. July 6, 1907, aged 77 years 6 months and 8 days.

She came to Michigan at the age of 21 years, and was married to Worthington Howe Nov. 8, 1864. To this union was born six children, only two surviving her. Her husband served in the army of the rebellion, and died at his post of duty.

She was baptized by Elder B. W. Woodward in the year 1873, and has always remained a faithful member of the Church in Watson. One by one they are falling. Out of a thriving church of seventy-five members only a handfull remain. Funeral services held at the Church of God, conducted by the writer.

Mrs. M. A. Woodward.

P. S.—This notice was mislaid in my absence, which accounts for its late appearance. W.

Mrs. Sarah M. Brown died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Henry Mervan, Aug. 13, 1907.

She was born in Westershire, England, Feb. 26, 1838. She was married to Edward Brown in 1855, three sons and three daughters being born to them.

They came to America in 1856, residing in Lockport, N. Y. five years. Came to Byron, Michigan in 1862, in which immediate vicinity she has since lived. She leaves to mourn her loss three sons, one daughter, twelve grand children, one sister and other relatives, besides many friends. She was a kind and loving mother, a good neighbor. Ever ready in sickness and death, in which she was so often called. So patient and enduring in her last sickness.

Sister Brown and her daughter Lizzie were baptized into the Christ by Elder B. W. Woodward twelve years ago. The daughter then suffering from a cancer fell asleep about six months after, the husband and father about two years after. She knew what sorrow was, but honored and graced her profession with a godly, patient life.

She sleeps with the overcomers who have the promise of being clothed with white raiment, and their names confessed before the Father and the angels. Truly she sleeps well.

The writer conducted the funeral services at the daughter's residence, using Psa. xxvi. 15, as a text. Dear ones accept your mother's God.

Mrs. M. A. Woodward.

William Rennecker was born in Ohio, Dec. 20, 1856, and died at his home near Anthon, Iowa, July 18, 1907.

At the age of nine years he moved with his parents to near Shoals, Ind. where he resided until last September, when he moved with his family to Iowa. In 1880 he was married to Rebecca Zollars, to which union were born nine children, three of whom preceded their father to the tomb.

He leaves a wife and six children, four of whom are at home. Two of the daughters are married—Mrs. E.P. Acre living near Shoals, and Mrs. Melvin Kull, of Broad Ripple, Ind. He also leaves three grand children, three brothers and two sisters, besides other relatives and friends who regret his untimely end.

Father was baptized by Brother John Foore into the Abrahamic faith about twenty-six years ago, and since that time he has lived a faithful Christian life. He was a constant reader of The Restitution, and many times paid for papers to be sent to friends of other denominations, he was so desirous that every one understand the gospel in the true light. The dear old Restitution, the paper he loved so well, was the last paper read before his eyes closed in the peaceful sleep of death.

The beautiful patient Christian life he led will ever be remembered by all who knew him, and especially by the mother and children. We feel that we cannot praise him too much for his loving kindness as husband and father. Our prayer is that when our time shall come to leave this world, we will be prepared to reign with our Savior and meet our loved ones in the kingdom of God.

Mrs. Melvin Kull.

Selections.

Money Mad.

It is quite a common saying now days that men are money mad. The more some people get the more they appear to desire.

Mad, mad, for riches, they can neither handle themselves or need for their comfort or enjoyment and it matters not how this wealth is obtained just so long as it comes into their covetous hand. But is our age and generation any more greedy and money mad than others gone before? We think not, for far back several generations we read of a man in a certain company who said to Christ, "Master speak to my brother that he divide the inheritance with me." Christ replied "Who made me a judge or a divider over you?" Take heed and beware of covetousness. Why beware we ask! Because Christ said "A man's life consists not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." Oh, that this world might learn this one fact that it takes something besides money to make a man!

I wonder if Christ knew what He was talking about when He said those words! What, is not our life and its success always measured by what we possess! Or must we ever be classed among the "common people" that were Christ's friends and followers when here on earth until we amass wealth enough (it matters not how) to be classed among the upper ten?

But listen again and hear what Christ says about the foolish money maker: "And he spoke a parable unto them saying the ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully and he thought within himself saying 'What shall I do because I have no room where to bestow my grain.' Pity the man that can find no place to store his great surplus. This rich man never once thought of the poor that "ye always have with you." Never once thought of the widow or the orphan, never thought he could help any of the needy and destitute of earth. But this wonderful thought came to his mind and he said "This will I do, I will pull down my barns and build greater and there will I bestow (or store away) all my fruits and my goods and I will say to my soul, 'Soul thou hast much goods laid up for many years, take thine ease, drink and be merry."

Very many have thought the same since then. Oh, yes they say, I am to have a good time now the rest of my life with my vast possessions. But listen a moment. "God said unto that man, "Thou fool this night thy soul shall be required of thee." Then whose shall these things be which thou hast provided? "So is everyone (a fool in all ages and generations) that layeth up treasures for himself and is not rich towards God." Luke xii 13-21. "But he died rich." These words were again uttered on Wall street and in the mansions of Fifth avenue and down in the tenements of the poor. There seemed only one opinion among his heirs, attorneys, his agents and his victims, but the recording angel wrote the name of Vanderbilt in that great death record and over against it he places the words "He died poor." His cold hand goes empty to his grave, for his clasp upon stocks and bonds has loosened. His vast estates have suddenly decreased to one little lot no larger than the poor of earth and which he holds only as a tenant until he is called therefrom to meet his obligations before the Judge of all the earth. No man ever had a better opportunity to make wise investments. "He that hath pity upon the poor lendeth to the Lord," and that which he hath given will he pay him again. This man goes out of his palace home with empty hand and scant apparel out into the cold, with no friends who can help him and no means which can bless him.

He gave to be sure, to the great charities, name was found in the list of generous millionaires but no sacrifice ever consecrated the gift. The "widow's mite" outweighs it all because it was to her a loving sacrifice to her Master. His treasures were all of the earth, earthy. His vanity, his pride, his balls and entertainments may still appear in mocking splendor upon the pages of a few old newspapers, and this is fame. This the object of a long life, this struggle of simply money getting, yet he died and left it all for his heirs and there was enough of it to prepay their fare to perdition. Enough to furnish wines at dinners and checks at gambling tables, enough to paralyze heart, brain and hand with idleness and selfishness. God pity a family who receives such an inheritance. Better, far better the son of a poor man who has inherited body, brain and muscle; who has good principles and moral worth. Who is prepared to fight bravely the battles of life and win the cream at the end of the race. Better far a life of poverty, trial and self-denial which is crowned with rest and peace than a life of selfishness, ease and luxury which closed in death and despair. Better the thorns and then the roses, better the sacrifice and then the reward, better the trial and then the peace, better the conflict and then the rest, better the cross and then the crown.

Better thus to die than for God to say to us at the close of life, "Thou fool this night thy soul shall be required of thee, then whose shall these things be which thou hast provided."

Think on these things.—L. S. Bronson.

SOMETHING NEW.

Brother J. L. Wince wrote a series of articles that were published in THE RESTITUTION some months ago, on the subject of the Resurrection. At the solicitation of some of the brethren, he has had the matter printed in tract form. It makes a very good appearance, and the ability of Brother Wince as a writer is so well known that no words of praise from us are necessary. The tract is now ready, and can be ordered from Brother J. L. Wince, Pierceton, Ind. or direct from this Office, as you wish. The price is 10 cents single copies postpaid, or 12 for $1.00.

Brethren, this whole edition of this work ought to be in the hands of the readers in the next sixty days, and if proper energy is used this will be accomplished. Send orders in this very day.

When you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and send that.

Our Helping Fund

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

We have received a new edition of the tract A Letter to a Friend, from Brother Woodruff, and we can supply them at five cents each postpaid. No tract ever issued by our people has done the good this has, and the pleasing and convincing style in which it is written makes it worth much as a medium for advancing the truth of the gospel. Get a number of them and give to friends. You never can tell how much good a few nickels will do used in this manner. Try it.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Neb., will be held in St. Paul Sept. 14th to 20th inclusive.

MINNIE ROGERS, Sec.

WILL all concerned take note, the address of Brother D. C. and Sister N. B. Robinson will in future be 860 West Main St. Salem, O.

A New Tract.

The Great Divine Healer vs Latter-Day Healers, by Uncle John Poore.

A Tract for the last days. Should be read by every thinking Christian.

Paul 2 Tim. III. 13. "But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived."

Matt. vii. 21. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works. And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

Brethren, these tracts have gone into many families, both to brethren and people of other denominations, a few infidels, and one Christian Scientist, and all seem to be well pleased with it; but only a few of the brethren have sent to me any help in the way of paying for the tracts, and tracts are very expensive. We are anxious to have more published on different subjects. Please help to send these Pearls out among the people.

Send orders to John Poore, at 2012 W. Corning Ave. Parsons, Kan. The price is 10 cents each.

Account Giving.

There is certainly a great day of accounts coming, when our Lord will reward every one according as his or his work has been.

The great concern of each one should be, What have I done upon which to expect reward? If you should judge yourself, what would your judgment be?

Our talents differ, and each one will be held accountable for the use of such talent, whatever that may be. If you have only one, use that.

Some one says, what can I do? Why you can circulate literature teaching the truth if nothing else. There is no one but who can do that. Will that do any good? Oh, yes. Let me tell you something. Some people have bought several copies of "Pine Woods Bible Class" and lending them to their friends and neighbors. It being easy and attractive reading, most people will read it. It is bearing fruit already. I have just been told of a man who had become discouraged. He had listened to preachers of different denominations, and found they contradicted each other. He began to drift into Infidelity, when a Brother put a copy of Pine Woods Bible Class into his hands. Now in place of infidelity, he is rejoicing in new found light. It would take too much space to tell of other cases. Try this work, and add some stars to your crown.

The Students Text Book is already an assured success, and will be printed after I get home from this present trip.

I desire that all who want it, to send in their names in advance, that I may know how many to print. All you order now, you will be sure to get when printed. The price will be fifty cents.

Yours in the Blessed Hope,

W. H. WILSON.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, of the Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Your loving brother.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LVI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, AUGUST 28, 1907. NUMBER 32.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

Unkind Words.

It is not fear that life may end,
Nor chill rebuke of faithful friend,
That anguish through my feelings send,
But unkind words.

Earth's brightest flowers may fade at noon,
Each worldly hope and hope be gone,
But worst of these I feel so soon
As unkind words.

Though toil and pain may be my lot,
By sickness prostrate on my cot,
Whate'er befide, I heed it not
Like unkind words.

Yes, I can brook earth's wintry blasts,
Its frosts and snows—they soon are past,
At worst of these I stand aghast,
But unkind words.

My cheek was hot, with fever flushed,
Dread sorrow's tide upon me rushed,
My soul was agitated, my heart was crushed
By unkind words.

From unkind words then let us spare
Each kindred heart with kindly care,
And thus each others burdens bear
With kindest words.

The Doctrine of a Future Life, By James Strong, S. T. D., L. L. D., Reviewed. No. 15.

No theologian has ever denied that death is the penalty of God's law. And no theologian or intelligent Christian will ever have the temerity to deny such fact; for the Scriptures of truth, from Genesis to Revelation, uniformally and emphatically declare it. God said to our first parents (Gen ii 17), But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day that thou eatest thereof, dying (margin) thou shalt surely die.

The opinions of theologians, or of any one else in regard to the nature of the death here threatened as a penalty for disobedience, or the time of its execution, will not change the truth, nor the plain explanation which God himself has given of the whole transaction, and the fearful results to accrue, recorded Gen iii 17-19, of which it is unnecessary to again speak.

No intelligent student of the Scriptures will dispute the fact that the Bible from beginning to end presents life and death as the uniform motive of action for the children of men, and, as the result, or end, depending on their choice, God says (Deut xxx 15-17), See, I have set before thee this day life and good, death and evil. I call heaven and earth to record this day against you, that I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing; therefore choose life that thou and thy seed may live.

Again, God says (Ezek xviii 20-32): The soul (person) that sinneth it [he] shall die.....But if he will turn from all his sins that he hath committed, and will keep all my statutes, and do that which is lawful and right, he shall surely live and not die [the second death]. Have I any pleasure at all that the wicked should die? saith the Lord God; and not that he should return from his ways and live?.....When a righteous man turneth away from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, and dieth in them [a temporal death]; for the iniquity he hath done shall he die [the second death]. Again, when the wicked man turneth away from his wickedness.....and doeth that which is lawful and right, he shall save his soul alive.....Cast away from you all your transgressions..... and make you a new heart and a new spirit; for why will you die, O house of Israel? For I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth, saith the Lord God, wherefore turn yourselves, and live ye."

Now to suppose that God would use such language and warning as the above, if man is not a mortal being, or, if he is in possession of an immortal soul, as so confidently believed and proclaimed all over Christendom, is to charge him with absurd inconsistency; for how can "a never dying soul" be saved from death? and, echo answers how?

We well understand how the sacred Scriptures are perverted on the subject of life and death by the bare assumption that the penalty of God's law is to live in misery forever—and called "spiritual death." But there has never been one iota of evidence produced from the Bible, or any other source, of its truth. And we cannot, therefore, accept the mere assertion of its validity.

Theologians know that to be dead in trespasses and sins, as stated by the Apostle, is a state of sin, and not a penalty for having sinned—a state from which the sinner is required to forsake, but which requirement would be unreasonable and impossible, if suffering a judicial sentence. That this word dead as used by the apostle, or any other passage, gives any license to understand that death, which is threatened so many times as the penalty for sin, means to live, and that too, in torment forever, is not only contradicted by the nature of the soul, being subject to death and the grave, as declared by God through his inspired servants, as we have seen, but also contradicted by the 200 passages heretofore referred to, which explicitly and emphatically declare that the wicked shall perish; die the second death; be destroyed—annihilated by being burned up and reduced to ashes.

But all the above will not convince any who are so bigoted and wedded to their pre-conceived opinions that they cannot, or will not admit the force of a logical argument, even when confirmed by a plain "thus saith the Lord." They do not seem to understand that they thus really reject the Word of God.

Now let it be understood that a failure to prove from the Bible that the penalty of the divine, or any law is, spiritual death, is the death knell to the popular serpentine doctrine, Ye shall not surely die. And such proof has never been found, and we defy any one, high or low, to find the least intimation of spiritual death penalty.

Although not required to prove a negative, we shall further show that the orthodox churches of the world have no foundation for their spiritual death penalty, but which was deemed necessary to relieve them of having rejected the whole tenor of the Bible on the subject of life and death, so explicitly and clearly enunciated therein. And, one is almost compelled to believe that this dernier ressort was a conception from Satan himself in order to fortify his well known lie, and lead thinking men to reject the Bible as a divine revelation, because of the supposition that it teaches that a just and merciful God would torment forever and ever the billions upon billions of the creatures of his handiwork, and which, as reasoning men they could not believe.

In the writer's Hebrew concordance, by Prof. Aaron Pick of the University of Prague, there are thirty-eight Hebrew words rendered man, which have different definitions, according to the nature, strength, weakness, or other characteristics possessed. The following four words are specimens.

"Odam, man made of earth." Notice, that it is not what our orthodox friends will have it,—the body of man, but man made of earth, who, when he dies returns to dust, as declared by God himself. "Eish, man of virtue, valiant; gever, a man of strength, physical power, enoush, a mortal man, weak, feeble.

Enoush occurs forty times, and is rendered mortal man. Job iv 17, Shall mortal man be more just than God? And mortal man once in the margin. But if there be one mortal man, and that man be Adam, who was condemned to die and return to the dust of the ground, of which he was formed, then it is certain that all men are mortal and subject to death.

We now give a few passages where the inspired writers use enoush, and will put mortal man as it should be. 2 Chron xiv 11, O Lord, thou art our God; let not mortal man prevail against thee. Here mortal man is in the margin. Job vii 1. Is there not an appointed time to mortal man upon earth? Are not also his days like the days of an hireling? Psa viii 4. What is mortal man that thou art mindful of him? And the son of man [adam, made of earth] that thou visitest him? ix 19. Arise, O Lord, and let not mortal man prevail: let the nations [Hebrew] be judged in thy sight. xc 3. Thou turnest mortal man to destruction; and sayest, Return ye children of men. Isa xiii 12. I will make a mortal man more precious than fine gold; even a man [adam—made of earth] than the golden wedge of Ophir.

In all these passages, restored to the original meaning, absolutely and alone, show that man, who was formed of the dust of the ground, is a mortal being, who, when death causes return to dust, and not to God, an allegeal?

In order to further show that spiritual death—a state of sin—is not only not a penalty, but a palpable absurdity, we will put the Adamic law, as defined by our orthodox friends, in a nutshell as follows: But of the tree..... thou shalt not eat of it, for in the very day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt be dead in trespass and sin! But the Apostle says (Rom v 13), By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death [the penalty, and not sin, the alleged penalty] passed upon all men; for that all have sinned. Every intelligent person knows that the Apostle has reference to the death common to the whole human race, and which has come not only because of Adam's sin, but because all men have sinned, and come short of the glory of God.

The advocates of immortal soulism have always been p[illegible]

[illegible] the [illegible] sense [illegible] that the state of sin is the penalty, because it does not read, The soul that sinneth is dead, but shall die in the future. And, that the death is the second death is certain from the fact that only two deaths are found in the Bible to be suffered by the human family; and this fact proves that there is no spiritual death.

Rev xx 13-15 reads as follows, And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and (hades) hell delivered up the dead which were in them, and they were judged every man according to his works. And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death. And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire.

If it be still insisted, as it inconsistently is by many that Dives is being tormented in hades—hell, here is proof that hell will be destroyed. And it is also here proven that the second death is the last death; and this being undisputably true, it certainly follows that the first death cannot be spiritual death, for the death to which we are all subject cannot thus be ruled out by the advocates of spiritual death, and there is no third death; nor the death that never dies, which is a palpable contradiction.

There are other arguments and facts in addition to what we have already adduced against this spiritual death dogma, which we might present, among which is the fact that Christ suffered the penalty of the law in the sinner's stead, as generally taught and believed. But the penalty he suffered could not have been spiritual death, because he never sinned! But he did die a literal death—which is extinction of life—just what the wicked will suffer—perhaps with additional pangs—when they die the second death.

It is worthy of note that the Greek word zoes, rendered life, is found one hundred and thirty-two times in the New Testament, and is the exact opposite in meaning of thanatos, rendered death, which is used one hundred and seventeen times. It must be remembered that the definition of zoes is life, i. e. animated existence, state of being alive, and that the primary definition (i - no, theologeal definition can be accepted) of death, is extinction of life.

The expression zoee aionion—life everlasting—which means endless conscious existence, nothing more nor less, is used by Christ and the apostles forty times, but has been perverted to mean everlasting spiritual life, or happiness, as the literal death penalty can have to be life in sin, and life everlasting in torment! But in the light of what has been produced on this subject it would seem that any one ought to see the absolute absurdity of this common hypothesis, which has been palmed off on the churches and unwittingly believed and promulgated as the Word of God!

The great apostle, who says he shunned not to declare the whole counsel of God, and yet never spoke of hell torment, says (Rom i 32), Who knowing the judgment of God, that they who commit such things are worthy of death. But now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life. For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord. vi 22, 23. For to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life [happiness?] and peace. viii 6. For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die [the second death]; but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live. v 13.

Any candid person can see from these quotations that death does not mean a state of sin and torment, as alleged, but the second death. And it can also be seen that [illegible] to die, means to lose life [illegible]

[illegible]

Sister Emeline Stiers, Neumha, Nebraska, the daughter of Brother Lott Clover, deceased, writes that "she was acquainted with Brother Furry when he lived in Malden, Iowa." And our Bro. Wood says that "he was well acquainted with the remembered pamphlet, N. M. Catlin, and circulated many of his pamphlets on the gospel, published in 1853." He thinks Benjamin Wilson published an edition of these pamphlets in the early '60's. Brother N.M. Catlin was once a resident of Elizabeth, New Jersey, and worked in the Manual Labor School there, where they not only bought, but made packing boxes, etc. But Brother Catlin lives, not only in the memory of the survivors of the early Advent movement, but will survive these and live on in his deathless hymn

"I saw a weary traveler, in tattered garments clad."

It would be interesting to know what particular traveler he had in mind when he began writing the hymn; perhaps it was himself. How many things we would like to have told us by lips that are now silent in death!

But I must go back to my story. Sylvan Willard at the time of his [illegible] was some 17 or 18 years of age, and quite a handsome, manerly young man. [illegible] man, was younger, quite slender [illegible] ould and very much resembled his gifted mother. Rowland, named [illegible] his father, was still small, and as beautiful in face as the most beautiful young girl you ever saw, and like [illegible] ows, he was also "fair to God," with that inner beauty of character that never fades.

All three [illegible] fast to the truths that were taught them in their childhood. Meetings were still held at grandfather Catlin's and these Brother and Sister Willard attended with their children, the two older boys sometimes staying with us for a week at a time, turning out, enjoying to the full, the excursions after blackberries, the rides in the hay on the pond, and the cool baths in old Deed's Creek.

One meeting that I particularly remember was at a school-house a little more than two miles distant from our place. Father preached, and the house was full, as [illegible] nearly always were on such occasions in those early days. Brother and Sister Willard were then still living at Oswego, for a friend of theirs—a Mr. William Stanton, who made his home with them at that place, came along to attend the meeting, and when it had closed, took Brother William Smith's widowed daughter, Sister Sarah A. Hutchinson home, and she afterward became his wife. I think Mr. Stanton was a Baptist in faith. He seemed to love the truth we held but never united with us. He is still living.

"The grave were dead a final sumber,"

Bryant says, and in these we sometimes met with as good success as when we met in houses or in school-houses. A beautiful grove on the farm of Uncle Morse Chaplin was the scene of one of these gatherings and there Brother and Sister Willard were father's earnest helpers, in song and in exhortation, for both were good singers and fluent speakers.

At one of these meetings, held in July, 1852, a number of my mother's relatives, from the states of New York and Michigan were present, and one sister to whom the truths presented were now and strange, was very much interested, went to investigating for herself, believed and was baptized.

How strange, to come all the way from Wheeler, New York, to find the truth in a little log school-house but that is the way our Father works.

It must have been in '54 that the Hulls began preaching in our vicinity, at Bone Prairie and at other points—the father—a tedious uninteresting speaker; the son, bright, eloquent and earnest, though quite young. But the latter, young as he was, was su[illegible]-ries of the Evil one, [illegible] Thomas McDonald mentions Daniel Hull in a letter written to father under date of April 19, 1856. He says, "There was a regular built infidel by the name of Chandler who lectured here one week, and Daniel Hull thought it would be in order for him to reply and made the attempt but the congregation was taken with a hearing. I was on hand that night (which was the only time,) and you can guess about what I thought when Hull rose to his feet and called the attention of the congregation." People could not have had much confidence in Hull, for Brother McDonald says at the beginning of his letter, "When I read of your 'old acquaintance visiting you,' it brought to my mind his late visit to me. He called on me Saturday and Monday evenings last, but did not shake me as hard as he had on former visits but his embraces were warmer than usual. He then left and I shall be glad if he does not return soon," and farther on, "with the exception of colds and that visit from my old friend, we have enjoyed good health."

Brother Ephraim Miller had been down to Marshall County February, the 25th, and had preached three excellent discourses and a Brother Hall, a promising young preacher from Illinois, had been there at the same time and had spoken several times after Brother Miller left. Brothers Logan and Barnhill were holding meetings and the folks were expecting the Mansfields shortly.

I do not know how many of the brethren at Union Mills, in Laporte County, had accepted the new time theory, but Brother McDonald said, that 'Alexander Thompson, had been up there and had heard the Mansfields only the Sunday before the date upon which he was writing and that old Aunt Sarah Clark expected time to close up in a few days." What position Sprague [illegible] held as to the matter at that time, he did not know. Brother Chase was then about to take a western trip, and Doctor Hull was going on a tour to Illinois.

I have no way of finding out when Brother Couch, Brother Howell and Brother Berick came to Marshall County, but in 1856, Brother Berick and the Mansfields were at a Conference held near Argos, I think in the fall of the year. Brother and Sister Willard, (I am not certain as to the former) accompanied by their son Nelson, and their foster-daughter, Alice Johnson, my father, mother and myself and also my grandparents, attended this meeting, and a blessed one it was. Here Auntie Willard grew better acquainted with the Marshall County folks, and formed friendships that were as enduring as life. There were young people in attendance from Indianapolis and other points, and as Brother Barnhill had a lovely family of boys and girls, the most of us staid there, and what a time we girls had sleeping in a long row on the floor,—mother and grandmother in a bed in the same room.

What a dear, motherly woman old Sister Barnhill was, and Brother Barnhill was just as good. Brother Richard and Sister Jane Corbaley were living on their pleasant farm not far from what is now the town of Argos,—if I mistake not, at that time. What good people they were, and how firmly they held to the faith unto the end, sounding it out to all who would hear, wherever they went. One day during the meeting it rained so hard that none of the Sisters could go, and they requested Sister Mansfield to preach to them. "I can't preach to the walls" she said, though there were at least twenty persons present. She was of such a temperament that it took large crowds to inspire her to speak well.

I was re-immersed at this meeting by Brother Mansfield, from the house of Brother James Logan,—was re-immersed, because I thought I did not properly understand the gospel when I was baptized at Oswego when nine years of age.

Fierce was meeting at Plymouth in the Court House after we left the vicinity of Argos, and Brother Berick spoke and grandfather exhorted.

Treasure laid up in heaven always enriches some one on earth.

When you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and send that.

THE WORLD TO COME.

This is a book of over 400 pages compiled by Brother J. U. Woodruff, and is a symposium of writers on Eternal Life, from a Bible basis. We have a few copies to sell, and will mail for 80 cents each, if sent for soon.

SOMETHING NEW.

Brother J. L. Wince wrote a series of articles that were published in THE RESTITUTION some months ago, on the subject of the Resurrection. At the solicitation of some of the brethren, he has had the matter printed in tract form. It makes a very good appearance, and the ability of Brother Wince as a writer is so well known, that no words of praise from us are necessary. The tract is now ready, and can be ordered from Brother J. L. Wince, Pierceton, Ind. or direct from this Office, as you wish. The price is 10 cents single copies postpaid, or 12 for $1.00.

Brethren, this whole edition of this work ought to be in the hands of the readers in the next sixty days, and if proper energy is used this will be accomplished. Send orders in this very day.

Brother, if you have not yet renewed your subscription to The Restitution for this year, will you please do so now? We thank you for the favor.

All reports indicate that the Conference at Oregon, Ill., was the best ever held in the State. The reports from the Ohio Conference were the same, and surely Iowa will not be behind. Let the brethren in Indiana be awake to their duty, and their privileges, for it should be esteemed a privilege that we are permitted to serve in the ranks of our Lord Jesus Christ. Let us be earnest and enthusiastic in our work, and with a united effort hasten the cause we hold so dear.

The Brazen Serpent. Num xxi. 1-9.

Golden Text. As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up. That whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. John iii 14, 15.

About thirty-eight years before the brazen serpent was raised, ten of the spies reported that they—the Israelites—could not take the land of Canaan. The Lord threatened to disinherit them. Moses prayed for them, and God pardoned them, but all from twenty years old and upwards could not enter Canaan. They again rebelled and said we will go up. The Amalekites and Canaanites slew them. Korah, Dathan and Abiram with two hundred and fifty princes of Israel rose against Moses and Aaron. The earth opened and swallowed Korah, Dathan and Abiram and all and every thing that belonged to them. Fire from the Lord killed the princes.

The Israelites blamed Moses and Aaron for killing the people. For that 14700 died of a plague.

Aaron's rod budded and brought forth almonds. The Levites were to receive one-tenth from Israel for their services.

There is not much said about the wandering of the Israelites. They came to Kadesh—on the south border of Canaan—where Miriam died. The people again rose against Moses and Aaron because there was no water. The Lord told them to strike a rock with the rod—Aaron's rod—Moses struck the rock in his own name and that of Aaron. For this offence they could not enter Canaan. The Edomites and Moabites, though kindred of Israel would not let them pass through their lands to Canaan, so they had to go round south and east and north.

Aaron died on Mount Hor.

Lesson Text. 1, 2, 3, King Arad made a successful attack on Israel. This time they did not rebel and murmur. They consulted the Lord and vowed. The Lord heard and helped them.

4 The rough journey round Edom tired and tried them.

5 This time they spake against God as well as Moses and Aaron, and despised the manna. Exo xvi 15. The bread from heaven. Exo xvi 4 David referring to it said, Man did eat angels' food. Psa lxxviii 25.' The whole of Psalm lxxviii is well worth reading in connection with this lesson.

6 There has been some speculation as to the kind of serpents. A perfect knowledge on this point would add very little value to the lesson. Let us remember the cause for them. The sin of rebellion—one of the worst—1 Sam xv 23. And that they bit the rebels and many died.

7 The people realising what they had done appealed to Moses—their mediator. Gal iii 19. He prayed for them.

8 The Lord heard Moses and instructed him how to save his people.

9 Brazen serpent is not quite correct. Brass or brasen is right. The word serpent from Hebrew Nachash occurs some thirty-one times, but only in the case of the brazen serpent is it spoken of or used as a healer. And even in this instance there was no virtue in it to save unless those bitten by fiery serpents looked at it. The cure then was a "faith cure." They were healed and their lives spared for the time being. It was preserved in Israel until the time of King Hezekiah—between seven and eight hundred years. He found the Israelites making it a god. He broke it in pieces, and contemptuously called it Nehushtan. 2 Kings xviii 4.

The brazen serpent was not a thing of life, did not represent any thing of a life giving character, but by the Word of God it was made the means—through faith—of restoring health, and prolonging life.

The golden text is a part of what Jesus said to Nicodemus. That he must be lifted up. And as those who believed God through Moses did not perish, so those who believe what Jesus preached shall not perish but have everlasting life.

In John xii 32, Jesus said, If lifted up ALL would be drawn to him. This seems like a contradiction of the golden text. When the Lord Jesus Christ is the governor, the wonderful, the counsellor, the mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. Isa ix 6, 7, when he has finished the day—time—of vengeance. 2 Thes i 8. And the showers of blessing come. Ezek xxxiv 26. Then all shall be drawn to him, and be blessed. Psa lxxii 17.

Next lesson Moses pleading with Israel. Deut vi 1-15.

Signs of the Second Coming of Christ.

This know also that in the last days perilous times shall come, for men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high minded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof; from such turn away. 2 Tim iii 1-2.

The Pharisees also with the Sadducees came and tempting desired him that he would show them a sign from heaven. He answered and said unto them, When it is evening ye say, it is fair weather, for the sky is red. And in the morning, it will be foul weather to-day, for the sky is red and lowring. O ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky; but can ye not discern the signs of the times? Matt xvi 1-3. Now learn a parable of the fig tree, When his branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh; so likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know that it is near, even at the doors. Verily, I say unto you, this generation shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled. Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away, but of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, but as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be. For as in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark, and knew not, until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be—Watch therefore for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come. Therefore be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of Man cometh. Matt xxiv 32-39, 42, 44.

And there shall be signs in the sun and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring. Men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth; for the powers of heaven shall be shaken; and then shall they see the Son of Man coming in a cloud with power and great glory; and when these things begin to come to pass look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh. Luke xxi 25-28.

But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words and seal the book, even to the time of the end; many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased. Dan xii 4. Now we beseech you brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto him, that ye be not soon shaken in mind, or be troubled, neither by spirit, nor by word, nor by letter, as from us, as the day of Christ is at hand. Let no man deceive you by any means; for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition. Who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshiped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God. Remember ye not that when I was with you I told you these things? And now ye know what withholdeth, that he might be revealed in his time for the mystery of his iniquity doth already work; only he who now letteth, will let, until he be taken out of the way, and then shall that wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming. 2 Thes ii 1-8 The shield of the mighty men is made red, the valiant men are in scarlet; the chariots shall be with flaming torches in the day of his preparation, and the fir trees shall be terribly shaken. The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall justle one against another in the broad ways; they shall seem like torches, they shall run like the lightnings, he shall recount his worthies (see electric cars and autos) they shall stumble in their walk; they shall make haste to the wall thereof, and the defence shall be prepared. Nahum ii 3-5. Go to now ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you, your riches are corrupted, and your garments are moth eaten. Your gold and your silver is cankered; and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire. Ye shall heap treasures together for the last days. Behold the hire of the laborers who have reaped down your fields which you have kept back by fraud, crieth; and the cries of them who have reaped have entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth. Ye have lived in pleasure on the earth; and been wanton; ye have nourished your hearts as in the day of slaughter. Ye have condemned and killed the just and he did not resist you. Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruits of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and the latter rain. Be ye also patient; stablish your hearts; for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh. Jas v 1-8.

we are truly [redacted] our heavenly Father for this meeting, which was fraught with so much pleasure to us.

The meeting was a good meeting. The preaching was the gospel, presented in the spirit of the Master, and the large attendance which was present from the first day of the meeting until the close had a feast of good things from the great store house of truth.

The business meeting was characterized by harmony and concert of action. At the business session over $1400 was pledged to the Evangelist fund, and before the Conference closed some $1700 was secured by cash and pledges, to funds needed to support the work of the Master.

Two Evangelists are to be kept in the field in Illinois during the coming year, and the money is pledged to support them. Brethren in Indiana, let us wake up to our duty. Each congregation throughout the State should send delegates to our October Conference at Hillisburg, with power to pledge a definite sum from their congregation to the support of the gospel.

Your brother in hope,
J. H. Willey.

Essay on Lesson 5.—Indiana Bereans.

In the beginning God had in mind that he would at some future time cause a child to be born who should be his only begotten Son, or Jesus the Christ. This is what is meant by John ii. 1st and 14th verses, "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was God"—"And the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father) full of grace and truth."

If we carefully trace the genealogy of Christ we find that he was a direct descendant of Adam, Abraham and David. His mother, Mary, was a descendant of Nathan, David's son and his supposed father Joseph, was a descendant of Solomon another of David's sons.

In those days it was the custom or law that when a man took to wife a woman from another tribe, that if she was the only child, she would inherit at her father's death. His property, and also his name. This accounts for the discrepancy between Luke iii. 23, where it says Joseph was the son of Heli, and Matt. i. 16, where it says he was the son of Jacob, for when Joseph took to wife Mary, he inherited her father's property and also his name which was Heli.

There is quite a significance in the gifts which the wise men bestowed on Christ when he was a babe at Bethlehem. These gifts were frankincense and myrrh. Ex. xxx. 23-38 gives us the composition of them and tells us that frankincense was a holy anointing oil and myrrh a perfume and they were both holy unto the Lord. They were only used on rare and sacred occasions; therefore, this little child, who was born in Bethlehem's manger was most holy or these holy gifts would not have been bestowed upon him.

"A Man in Christ."

The apostle says, "I know a man in Christ." And this was no unimportant knowledge, for "if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature." "A man in Christ" is a man redeemed, pardoned, blessed, saved; a "man in Christ" is a man who is not of the world, who is chosen out of the world, and whom the world therefore hateth. "A man in Christ" is crucified to the world, and the world to him. The life he now lives is by the faith of the Son of God, who hath loved him and gave himself for him. "A man in Christ" may be unknown, yet he is well known. He may be surrounded by enemies, yet he possesses an Almighty Friend. He may be a pilgrim and a stranger on the earth, yet there is for him a city that hath foundations, and a home beyond the flood. "A man in Christ" is a branch of an undying Vine! He partakes of eternal life; he drinks from the fountain of divine vitality, and the life that he now lives is by the faith of the Son of God. "A man in Christ" is a partaker of a heavenly calling; a member of a celestial brotherhood; an heir of God and a joint heir of Jesus Christ, to an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away. Blessed are the [redacted] Do others know you as a "man in Christ?"

Our Refuge.

"The eternal God is thy refuge and underneath are the everlasting arms."

Trial and suffering are man's sure heritage. They meet him everywhere and stand beside him in all the walks of life. No rank is too high for them to reach—no station so obscure that they will not search it out. Life is a troubled sea and its waves are lashed to madness by the winds of passion and strife. There is only one refuge from the fury of the tempest—only one haven where we may find rest and be sheltered with peace. "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. Therefore will we not fear, though the earth be removed, and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea. Though the waters thereof roar and be troubled, though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof." The pitiless storms beat alike upon the children of men, and the troubled waves toss our little barks without distinction of faith or character. But the humblest Christian hath an anchor which cannot fail. The Christian hope reaches to the rock of our salvation. The peace of God which passeth understanding gleams with unfailing light amid the darkness. The golden promise that cannot be broken flashes the rainbow of hope across the cloud, for the foundation of God standeth sure, and he knoweth them that are his. The corsair Death sails over the angry billows and his black flag waves in triumph on every breeze, he spares not the babe in a mother's arms and the silvered head of age falls before his breath. The criminal is cut off in the midst of sin, and the good man is smitten down at his post. Neither faithfulness nor truth can ward off his blows or bid defiance to his power. But "as the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about his people from henceforth even forever." And across the very banner of death is written the words, "I am the resurrection and the life." Even death hath no power to hold those who have made a covenant with God, for he is our rock and our salvation. Persecution may assail us in the wilderness, but glory awaits us in the city. Thorns may pierce our brows during the pilgrimage, but we shall find a crown at our journey's end. Temptation haunts our footsteps now, but victory shall crown us on the other side. The crimson waves of sin and suffering beat around our weary feet but they shall yet rest on the banks of life's river. Death may claim our loved ones now but his royal seal shall be broken by one who is greater than he, for they shall be mine saith the Lord of hosts, in the day when I make up my jewels.

The tempest of life shall be stilled upon the green shores of peace, and the waves of affliction shall be lost in the bright depths of eternity's ocean, for "behold I will lay thy stones with fair colors, and lay thy foundations with sapphires, and I will make thy windows of agates and thy gates of carbuncles, and all thy borders of pleasant stones."—Mrs. H. V. Reed.

The Ancient Hope.

The hope which God furnishes is not merely the hope of a quiet close to this world's weariness, but the hope of an infinite gladness which is then to begin. There is a passage in Job which exemplifies both these very fitly. Groaning under the pressure of no common grief, he cries out, "O that thou wouldst hide me in the grave! That thou wouldst keep me secret! Till thy wrath be past." As if he would be glad to be hidden anywhere, even in the grave, from such calamities. But then this is not enough. This is mere negative comfort. It is the mere cessation of suffering. And this does not content him. He bethinks himself, and cries out again, "O that thou wouldst appoint me a set time and remember me!" He can not bear the thought of always lying in the dust, even though it be a secure hiding-place from the storms of earth. He would not be forgotten there. He would have a time set, at the end of which God might remember him. Then he abruptly asks "If a man die shall he live again?" and, evidently, answering himself, again he calmly adds, "All the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come." For it is the resurrection change he looks for, and rejoices in as his hope. When that day arrives the trumpet shall sound, the voice of God shall speak, "Thou shalt call and I will answer!" But how is he so assured of being thus remembered of God? He knows how precious in his eyes are the dust of his saints.—"Thou wilt have a desire to the work of thine hands." Thus, though Job begins with what is merely negative, that is, the ending of his grief and shame, he cannot rest there, but presses on in rapid hope to the beginning of his joy and glory. It is the morning, with all its new light and reviving sunshine, that rises before his view, and from afar pours into him its healing light.

"The fashion of this world passeth away." This cheers us, for it assures us that no grief shall live long. But the fashion of "the world to come" endures. This is unspeakably gladdening; for all that the better "age" brings with it shall abide forever. The inheritance is vast, the city is "joyous" the mansions are many, the title is sure and the possession is everlasting.

"Jerusalem! Jerusalem!
Would God that I were in thee!
Oh that my sorrows had an end,
Thy joys that I might see."

Thus sweetly sang one of Scotland's holiest sons in the olden time. Broken with many griefs, he thus poured out his soul,—weary and homesick, as a stranger here. And will not "night" fail in one of its objects, if it does not make us long for the "day?" Will not tribulation be frustrated if it does not stir within us this "earnest expectation," this "groaning within ourselves" this fervent "longing"—this home-sickness which the saints in other days felt so tenderly and truly? And all the more, because "now is our salvation nearer than when we believed" for we have arrived at the last stage of our journey, and a few days will suffice to bring us home.—Bonar.

Form and Power.

The more there is of form in religious observances, the less there is of power; and this for several reasons: first, because forms crystalize into an unvarying uniformity, while power is continually seeking new outlets and and fresh and varied forms of expression; and second, because the observance of forms is a task within easy reach of the unregenerate sinner, who is pleased to find a religion which he can grasp and comprehend and perform as well as any one, and which does not make him know his ruin, his need and his helplessness. If religion is merely, or largely, a matter of bowings and bendings, of kneelings and risings, of readings and chantings, of robings and disrobings, all these are within the capabilities of the old man as well as the new, and require, not the mighty power of God that renews the soul, but simply the the training of the ecclesiastical posture-maker and martinet, and the kindly offices of the church milliner.

In so far as Christianity is regarded as an ecclesiastical dress-parade, in so far as any religiously-inclined worldling stands on an equality with the devoutest saint. He can pass through forms and performances as safely as the best of them, and contemplating his proficiency, can thank God that he is not as other men are, who do not understand the minutiæ of ecclesiastical tactics and church drill.

Thus a religion of forms naturally ceases to be a religion of realities, and contentions about human traditions, and the commandments of men take the place of that worship "in spirit and in truth" which characterizes those whom the Father seeketh to worship him.

Hence the Christianity which Christ established had little of the ceremonial, and much of the spiritual; little of form, and much of power; and in proportion as the spiritual life strengthens, human forms are outgrown, while the decay of true devotion is marked by elaborate rituals and pompous and burdensome forms, the mosses and parasites which clothe with gorgeous beauty the ruinous walls of the dismantled castle, or the decaying trunks of the tottering or fallen trees. —Armory.

Make Your Mark.

The world has many commonplace, average kind of people. Their lives are not positively evil, for this we are thankful; but they are not positively good and they exercise no marked influence in the world. Their lives in many cases lack intensity and fervor; they are passive, not active; they are moved, but do not move others. But the man to whom God has given energy and strength of character, is under the most solemn obligations to use his power in the most effective manner. He is not to be content with creeping upon the dead level of an aimless, useless life, nor is he to be content with linking himself to others, or binding himself to some clan or clique, so that he shall move as they move, keeping step with them and going round and round in the treadmill of associated routine.

Let the man of God keep clear of such entanglements. Let him preserve his individuality, and let him strive by God's help to do the work which Providence has appointed him. Let him link himself to the unseen, the immortal, the eternal One—and so work the work of God that men shall take knowledge of him that he has been with Christ, shall recognise in him the divine power, and shall be moved and helped and blessed by his words, his example, and his influence.

A man who will do this will make his mark in the world. He will not be a mere cipher among men; he will be a son of God, a servant of the Most High, a light in the world, and an heir of the glory is to be revealed.—Christian.

Nature's Hymn.

"Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord." Psa. cl. 6.

Praise him, O praise him, ye ministering seraphim!
Praise ye Jehovah, enthroned on high;
Awake every harp, ye archangels and tell of him
Shrouded in glory, yet graciously nigh.

Praise him, bright Sun, in the glow of thy splendor;
Praise him, thou Moon, silver queen of the night;
Ye Stars, who like virgin retainers attend her,
O praise the great Lord who hath robed you with light!

Praise him, O praise him, ye soft flowing fountains,
Amid the lone valleys go murmur your song;
Uplift the loud anthem, ye thunder-voiced mountains,
Let peak answer peak and re-echo the song.

Ye forests—ye need no cathedral of marble,
No Thriller's incense to perfume your shrine;
Your own winged choirs with his praises best warble,
Your woodland flowers scatter sweet incense divine!

Praise him, ye mists which on mountain-tops hoary,
Like white wings of cherub the rock-clefts infold;
Praise him, ye sunset-clouds, piled up in your glory,
Resplendent with amber, vermillion and gold.

Praise him, O praise him, ye deeps with your wonders,
Discourse of his glory to earth's farthest shore;
Intuitively ripples, in hoarse-booming thunders,
In stillness and storm, lend your voice and adore!

All Nature arise! the great anthem intoning;
And from your vast storehouse a tribute lay bring;
No voice can be silent, let all join in owning
Jehovah as Maker, Redeemer, and King!

Communicated.

The Church of God in Her Relation to Prophecy.

"And, the word of the Lord came unto me, saying: Son of man, prophesy against the prophets of Israel, that prophecy, and say thou unto them that prophesy out of their own hearts: Hear ye the words of the Lord; thus saith the Lord God: Woe unto the foolish prophets, that follow their own spirit and have seen nothing.'" Ezek xiii 1, 2, 3.

The good brethren who have the publication and tone of the Restitution on their hearts have no doubt had, in the past few years, many serious reflections as to the correct attitude of our communion towards the prophecies. I think I may advance, without fear of one dissenting voice, the following propositions:

1. That to the prophecies, more than to any other one detail, the true Ecclesia of Jesus Christ owes its primary significance.

2 That "connection" which has the best claim to the Word of God is the communion which most extensively appropriates that Word (the Bible) to its use.

3 That The Church of God, represented by our beloved paper, THE RESTITUTION, is pre-eminently a Bible connection.

4 That the body through whom the Spirit of God (the Spirit of all Truth) will reveal the truths of Holy Writ will assuredly be that body of worshippers which is the most attached to and faithful in the promulgation of the direct and simple letter of the divine Messages.

If these points be well taken, then it behooves us as no other people to be ever and persistently about the godly "setting in order" of the impending predictions of "the latter day" prophecies. It cannot be a question of partisan fealties, or past reminiscence. These are all mere matters of feeling and sentiment. All attachments, traditions, doubtful theorisings, old graves, "cisterns, broken cisterns that can hold no water," carry them to the well as often as we will, must be given over, summarily and heroically, for the Lord's sake!—for the sake of a dying world! Look straight at this thought for a moment—then look upward!

Nay, brethren, it is more than "a dying world," it is a most grossly and flagrantly deceived world. Nineteen centuries (think of it!) of ecclesiastical schism, apostacy and perfidy. Twelve of these centuries too horrible to contemplate. Not the cruelty and tyranny of the Cæsars or their pagan successors, but the awful defection of one after another successive hierarchy, masquerading under the Christian Name, "with the cross of Jesus going on before;" following closely behind, flashing the sunlight of God from glistering weapons, on fields of carnage, devastation and woe.

It is not to a grossly misrepresented Nero, who had no time for warring, seditious religionists, but to wily bishops, "doctors" and "fathers", and their fierce, fanatical following in all ages (Romish and Protestant,) is due these crimes; and the Day is fast approaching which will reveal the truth of this assertion. To this exploited, broken, duped mass of humanity God calls "us" to sound the tocsin of prophetic construction and warning. To blindly look back over the past centuries since the Apostles as fulfilling in any particular the sublime prophesies under the seals, trumpets and vials of the Book of Revelations is to go insanely to pieces in sacred exegesis, and fail to discern that these great predictions call for martyrs and companies such as the world has never seen, and old Israel must hopelessly pale before. There is all the difference in reason between factions contending with each other for power and earthly rule, and those wonderful worthies of God, yet to be. Get down the Word and brush off the dust from your histories, brethren, and sift this matter carefully. It will help you amazingly to see "the things which shall be hereafter", and flee the vain shiftings (no matter how devout and well meaning,) of men, "who prophesy out of their own hearts (!) Foolish prophets who follow their own spirits, and have seen nothing." Well has the true man of God spoken of these "latter day" gentry: "O, Israel, thy prophets are like the foxes" (sunning) "of the desert. They have not gone up into the gaps, neither made up the hedge for the house of Israel to stand in the battle of in the Day of the Lord. They have seen vanity and lying divination, saying: The Lord sayeth! And the Lord has not sent them, and they have made others to hope that they would confirm the Word." Ezek xiii 4, etc. They have not confirmed the Word, because they spoke diametrically opposite to it, and gave it no heed.

These are not my words, or the words of man. I speak not tauntingly, The Lord is witness. There was no need, and need never be excuse, for erring in the Way of God. The letter is plain as Pilate's, and what He has written He has written. Why will we "halt between two opinions," and fall grievously sick and sore, disappointed and sad, because we have followed [illegible] who have turned His Word through the gates and highways of Babylon!

I repeat: the significant stand of the true Ecclesia of Christ in these late days is upon the prophecies, as we find them in the sacred and infallible letter. To place their disposition in the hands of faithful men, of known probity and invincible fealty to the Word. To arrange, simplify, vitalize, emphasize and press them and fearlessly stand for them under God. There is no time to temporize, segregate, or apologize for theories which, after all has been said, can honestly bear only the awful verdict, "failure". Col. Totten, The Watch Tower, etc., are sedulously at work on the old Miller ruins, but are crumbling and reforming at every hazardous step.

The remarks of Brother O. R. L. Crozier, in THE RESTITUTION of June 26, are very timely here. In his article, "Read at Michigan Conference," he says: "When the suggestion came to organize a general Advent Church on Mr. Miller's views, the West, through the Harbinger, said 'No!' and the East, chiefly through their organs, also, said 'No!' Sectarianism was universally rebuked and a free Bible vindicated." The principal points here are that the Miller movement was "sectarian", and was "universally rebuked," thus discrediting the mistaken contention that the 1843 movement was a spontaneous outpouring of the people under the divine guidance, of great extent. Compared with many other religious moves it was a mere speck. The "end of the world" incident in A. D. 1000, spread over the entire civilized earth, with prophetic features that were infinitely more in accordance with Bible facts than any such move before or since. Kings, princes, prelates and whole nations fell prostrate before God and the church, regardless of belief or sect, and the evil effects of the error and its reaction were felt for a century. The very same "facts" and Scriptures and methods of interpretation were used then as in 1843 and today! I have in outline an article on this aspect of "history and the prophecies," which THE RESTITUTION may have, if it wills, and the Lord spares.

I cannot desist without a strong word of reference to another vital point (as I think) in Brother Crozier's paper. He says: "The Advent cause in America owes very much to Elder Joseph Marsh, the founder of THE RESTITUTION (!) The general polity of the paper from its inception in 1842 or 1843—has been unchanged, viz: the free study of the Bible, untrammeled by sectism; with special reference to the soon Second Coming of our Lord," and, Joseph Marsh, more than any other one man, pitched the key when he objected to the Boston effort to tie up the Advent movement into a new Sect on Mr. Miller's views." Brother Marsh's attitude looks so like Peter's in Gal ii 11, for real and gentle censure, it is a very remarkable incident! For, the Miller move, like Peter's, was methodox bias and error, not inspired of God. It was not the holy outgrowth of the small Ecclesia who "immediately after those days" brought into the light the momentous truth of Eternal Life only in Christ, by the resurrection of the dead body at the last day; hence, with the very best reasons for His Second Appearance but a second hand, unrolled for, ministerial "pension" of "deathless" essences; a "being with Christ" which Mr. Miller and company held to be "very much better," and charged Paul, in the Philippians letter, with asserting and teaching.

I make nothing of the simple record that many of our own dear people easily fell into the '43 incident; because that is exactly what they of necessity must do, and do again, so long as any such scheme seems to bring nearer than actual the final appearing of their Lord and Redeemer! God bless them, then and now, for that beautiful devotion! I am not dealing in aspersions. My good bro. Underwood may cast this, or anything from my pen, unto the winds, if he for a moment knows it to be unwise or disintegrating. My lot is cast with THE RESTITUTION as long as it keeps that Right-hand corner intact, and does not insert "Single" before the words: "Name of Jesus Christ." Even in that emergency my subscription and prayers shall go up and on, "for my brethren and kinsmen"—"to whom pertain" so much [illegible] that is true and [illegible] "Behemoth" (I do not like that dubious word,) or to any unsound "believer" —deficient in the elementary Truths of His Word. Never. And I do not believe He ever will. The best translation of the N. T. extant (the Diaglott) is from the hand of one of our connection. Brother Marsh, another, of "a like precious faith", destined to steer his barque (good, steady little craft!) through the shoals of a most palpable "orthodox" fable. THE RESTITUTION, today and ever, stands the one Harbinger of and has "it"—"all" of it—among its members. This is a blessed showing. With the old "mystery of iniquity" and Mrs. "Babylon, the Great," (apostate christianity—Mother and progeny)—industriously at work among the "orthodox" societies, how could it be otherwise? We want to see up to our great responsibilities, and cement and stand shoulder to shoulder, 'till Jesus comes. I am not in this paper much more than suggesting my personal views of the Prophecies, as they have grown up out of my wrestlings with the Lord and His Word, and, incidentally, with some very bad old preconceptions. I know of no better method of waking people (of the right stamp) than by "provoking" them. For which see Rom xi 13, 14, etc. Also 1 Cor xiii; all of it.

I cannot conclude this rapid paper without an appeal to my brethren's sense of right and fairness. Let me ask, then, if Wm. Miller's claims were valid, was he not most assuredly a prophet, exactly as any of the Bible worthies were prophets? Was he not an ordained, chosen, infallible, inspired servant of Jehovah, precisely "after the order of" Isaiah, Daniel or Paul? If he fulfilled in the slightest manner any part in the incident in Matt xxv, known as "the midnight cry", to forecast, pre-announce, or correctly locate and herald it, then "made" that "cry", and was as certainly an ordained prophet as any prophet between the lids of the Book! —and, if so, then is not our place in Mr. Miller's "orthodox" connection in which he lived and died? Why stand we here idling all the day, when God's latest servant and sage has appeared among us and left us the very last message of the age and Book? Can we commend a message that we cannot accept in its entirety—if we must say: This was an error; that was a mistake? Could we honestly commend the Bible on the same basis?

But, this is not all; Mr. Miller did not even read his crucial Scripture correctly, or he would have seen that after the midnight cry is "made" there is no tarrying or delay. Hence it has not been made as yet, up to this year of 1907, sixty-four years later. We are in the tarrying time, now. The beginning of this period is not certain, but it is not a "movement". The midnight cry and the Lord's Coming are identical. Jesus has told us His Coming will be "as the lightning". There is practically no "time" with the electric current. Edison has informed us that the flash of a message around the earth's circuit, or off to the most distant star, is instantaneous, if the path is clear! The points in the parable are,

1 That "all" the virgins (wise and foolish) went out to meet the bridegroom.

2 That, while He tarried, they "all" slumbered and slept. (This was the proper, restful, prophetioned condition of things. Not the sleep of "darkness" or "indifference" but perfect security that the Word would not void or fail them.) "Watch," not for His coming, for that was not to be "with observation", (by the sight of the eyes), but "Watch" against being deceived into false and immature movements. And, exciting events, in times of great turbulence and religious futilities, which may be plainly seen and heard. "Watch," also, the lie; that our aims and means may all be His!

3 That "at midnight" (the second "watch",) "a cry was made; Behold the bridegroom cometh." He comes instantly. "The bridegroom came, and they that were ready went with him to the marriage, and the door was shut." Hence, for any one to claim he or she was in that "cry", in 1843, is to claim to have been badly left. Jesus plies warning after warning on this head.

But, again, our Lord, in Matt xxiv 36, 44, informs us that the time of the midnight [illegible] of the prophetic quotations are [illegible] man of [illegible] at enough. [illegible] there would be more guilt for the new Faith. Witness the call of the greatest man of God in all the Book, without the slightest intimation to the Eleven! It was 17 years later before the apostles of Jesus knew of the call of their great superior. This, and the circumstance that the Lord sent Paul to Ananias, not to the Eleven, is the best gauge to that strained term "apostolic". There is no "authority" but Christ, and no Apostle ever claimed it. It is a snare of the old lady Babylon.

By no fair stretch can 1900 years be called "the last days". This is one-third of all "time", so called. Had there been a true Ecclesia between the first century and the Second Coming, instead of "a house divided against itself," no "delusion" could ever have crept into the Sacred pages. With Plato early entrenched in the "christian" theology, and the "Church" allied to the powers of earth, there could be no serious place for the true letter of the Word. Israel demanded "a king", and God gave them one, "head and shoulders" above all nation. A fine, big glorious fellow for a parade of "occasion". The "Church" has taken its Book and dished and perfumed it to its liking, and has wondrously enjoyed the garlicky flavor. So be it. We cannot help it.

Any one who reads Jesus' words with prayerful care may easily see that He made no provision or hint of any movement, sign, or special leader, other than could be found at any "day or hour" of human history. Signs were distinctly for "an evil and an adulterous generation," who could be "moved" only in this way; as in the case of circumcision. And, not 'till the very latest hours of the age (a remarkably "short" interval) were any of these to transpire or signify. I cannot dilate here on this splendid head. It is full of the deepest interest. Jesus' instructions are pointed unerringly at this alarming fact. See Matt xxiv 11, 16 to 27, 30, 36 to 44. The dubious passage in verses 32, 33, is explained fully by the words "at the door". Not a year, month, day or hour, but at once and suddenly "near; even at the doors!" With that "cry" at "midnight" all hope (for that occasion, only) ends! There is no premonition or delay. Farewell. "The door was shut!" To meet this emergency, Jesus' clear instructions to His disciples in all ages may be found consistently in verses 45 to end. Giving "meat in due season." Not "milk". "Therefore! be ye ready; for, in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of men cometh!". "Watch!"

And here is "our" stand and calling until He comes. "Meat in due season." Not canned, embalmed, preserved theories, "put up" to keep, but "in due season"—"with all diligence," vigilance, energy and humility. "He will come"—"shortly"—"He will not tarry." Those who wish with Mr. Miller and the Adventists, etc., to pass through Matt xxiv, Rev vi 9, 10, etc, may have that privilege. But, as sure as the Word is true, "we" have a better and higher "calling and election," if we will only hasten to appropriate it. "All these things" and many more, "will come to pass, but it is our privelege to witness them from the skies, "caught up," "ever with the Lord." Luke xxi 35, 36 is useful here. 1 Thess iv 11.

The words of Jesus announce that there will be in those "last days" a number of fanatical second-coming scares and excitements. To be protected against such false teachings and emergencies we must "hold fast" the plain, literal Word. "How can we escape" if we are fractured with fidelity to other miscarriages in the past? "The Lord knoweth!" "Behold, I have told you before!"

ANTHONY BUSCH.

At the Breaking of Bread.

1 Pet i 3. Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. Of his own will begat he us with the Word of truth, that we should be a kind of first fruits of his creatures. Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible by the Word of God which liveth and abideth forever. If we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. This is the glorious hope of the Christian. Every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure. Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God. Hope maketh not ashamed because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts, by the Holy Spirit which is given unto us. If in this life only we have hope we are of all men most miserable; but we are not left in darkness, Jesus said, I am come a light into the world that whosoever believeth on me should not abide in darkness. They that believe in the Son hath everlasting life when Christ comes. It is good that a man should both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord, for we are saved by hope, but hope that is seen is not hope, for what a man seeth why doth he yet hope for, but if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it. Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord and whose hope the Lord is, by him therefore let us offer the sacrifice of praise to God continually that is the fruit of our lips giving thanks to his name, for he has redeemed us to God by his blood out of every kindred and tongue and people and nation, and hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth.

Conference Report.

The Ohio Conference of the Church of God was held in Springfield Aug. 7-11 inst. according to announcement. It was a grand success from first to last, some thinking it the most successful Ohio Conference. The speaking was excellent, and all things considered the attendance of the brethren was good. The citizens of Springfield turned out to the meetings better than was expected. The Springfield brethren did all in their power to make the visitors comfortable. The meetings were held at the Fair Grounds, an ideal place for a Conference. The brethren remained on the grounds during the entire session, and the Christian love, and unity of spirit was ever in evidence. The general desire seemed to be to do more for the cause of Christ.

We had the pleasure of listening to two speakers who had not previously spoken for the Ohio Conference, J. L. Wince of Pierceton, Ind., and R. G. Huggins of Oregon, Ill. We found Brother Wince an elderly man, and one who has given the Scriptures a study of a life time. The brethren and we trust others were benefited by his talks. We found Brother Huggins a young man, well able to expound the Word of God, which he did in a very pleasing manner.

The Conference was opened on Wednesday evening, by the President, P. Neill, who made a short appropriate address. He was followed by A. E. Overholser who welcomed the visitors on behalf of the Springfield church. The ministers present responded, and were followed by several others, who gave hearty talks. The speakers for the Conference were J. F. Wagoner, Rochester, Ind.; J. L. Wince, Pierceton, Ind.; W. H. Wilson, Chicago, Ill.; Mattie Neill, Salem, O.; R. G. Huggins, Oregon, Ill.; W. L. Tomlinson, Cleveland, O.; D. C. Robison, Salem, Ohio.

The social meetings were led by T. Klingenstein, Cleveland, O.; B. F. Smith, No Monroeville, O.; Mattie Neill, Salem, O.; R. Curtis, Brush Creek, O.

On Friday morning a committee on ways and means was appointed by the President consisting of H. Juergensen, Barberton, O.; T. Klingenstein, Cleveland, O.; Ora Cole, Salem, O.; David Beck, Springfield, O.; John Lehman, Brush Creek church, O.

On account of the indisposition of the President, P. Neill, the business meeting held on Saturday morning, Aug. 10th, was presided over by D. C. Robison.

The report of the previous Conference held at Brush Creek was read by the Secretary and approved as read.

The Treasurer's report was as follows: Total receipts since Aug. 31, 1906, $548.25. Total expenditures $486.07, balance on hand to defray expense of Conference $62.18. W. L. Tomlinson and A. E. Overholser were appointed an Auditting Committee to examine the accounts which they found to be correct.

The Evangelist D. C. Robison's report was as follows: Places preached, Cleveland, Salem, Canton, Springfield, Delta, Monroeville, Bowling Green, Lawrenceville, North Lewisburg, Brush Creek, west of Troy, north of Troy, Ohio, Sisterville, West Va. Miles traveled 3860; discourses preached 174. Traveling expenses, $85.23. Amount received as salary $360 00. Whole amount received $445.00. A few of the subjects discussed were: The Gospel of the Kingdom of God, The Great Salvation, Have the Faith of God, Man is Mortal, The Resurrection, The Covenants of Promise, The Reward of the Righteous, Putting on Christ, Our Earthly House, Christ the Lord, The Blood Covenants, The Name, Eternal Life, The Man of Honor, One vs. Many, Immersed One.

The meetings held have we believe awakened among a few of the aliens a desire to investigate the truths preached and in the near future may result in some obeying the truth by putting on Christ. The brothers and sisters among whom we have labored express themselves well satisfied and we have been cordially invited to return. Mrs. D. C. Robison has assisted the Evangelist part of the time and helped in preaching the Word and in strengthening those of the ecclesias. Our suggestion is that in the future your Evangelist be given more work to do. Help him to go where the gospel has never been preached. Let us do more missionary work. The above report is submitted in Christian love. D. C. Robison, State Evangelist. The report of the Evangelist was accepted.

The Committee on Ways and Means reported and advised a systematic method of giving to support the Evangelist. Report accepted. Each of the committee was requested to talk to the members of their churches in regard to the finances.

Talks from members advised the Evangelist to go into the open field and proclaim the gospel.

A letter was read from the Salem church by Sister Cole. The Secretary was requested to thank the Salem church.

P. Neill gave a history of his connection with the Salem church up to the present time. And the Conference gave Bro. and Sister Neill a vote of thanks for their efficient work in connection with the Salem church. The officers elected for the coming year were, P. Neill, President; W. L. Tomlinson, Vice President; J. C. Thompson, Secretary and Treasurer; Emma Lang, Assistant Secretary; Evangelist, D. C. Robison.

Appropriate remarks were given by Bro. D. C. Robison, and a vote of thanks to the brothers and sisters at Springfield for their work in connection with the Conference. Also a vote of thanks was given to Bro. and Sister Robison.

It was decided to hold the next Conference at Salem, O. The Committee on Ways and Means were instructed to appoint a subcommittee to assist in the work. The business meeting of the Conference then adjourned.

Mr. O. E. Pottorf of Salem, O., who is searching for truth was a welcome visitor. We also had with us Sister Virginia E. Ritenour of Dilbeck, Va. Bro. Huggins gave a splendid discourse on the truth at the close of the Conference, which was followed by the hymn "God be with you till we meet again." Bro. P. Neill then made a few remarks, thanking all who had helped to make the Conference a success.

Get a number of them and give to friends. You never can tell how much good a few nickels will do used in this manner. Try it.

A New Tract.

The Great Divine Healer vs Latter-Day Healers, by Uncle John Poore.

A Tract for the last days. Should be read by every thinking Christian.

Paul 2 Tim. iii. 13. "But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived."

Matt. vii. 21. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works. And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

Brethren, these tracts have gone into many families, both to brethren and people of other denominations, a few infidels, and one Christian Scientist, and all seem to be well pleased with it; but only a few of the brethren have sent to me any help in the way of paying for the tracts, and tracts are very expensive. We are anxious to have more published on different subjects. Please help to send these Pearls out among the people.

Send orders to John Poore, [illegible] W. Corning Ave. Pyracuse, Kan. The price is 10 cents each.

Account Giving.

There is certainly a great day of accounts coming, when our Lord will reward every one according as her or his work has been.

The great concern of each one should be, What have I done upon which to expect reward? If you should judge yourself, what would your judgment be?

Our talents differ, and each one will be held accountable for the use of such talent, whatever that may be. [illegible] T. J. DANIEL.

The [illegible] and who did not. Will that do any good? Oh, yes. Let me tell you something. Some people have bought several copies of "Pine Woods Bible Class" and lending them to their friends and neighbors. It being easy and attractive reading, most people will read it. It is bearing fruit already. I have just been told of a man who had become discouraged. He had listened to preachers of different denominations, and found they contradicted each other. He began to drift into infidelity, when a Brother put a copy of Pine Woods Bible Class into his hands. Now in place of infidelity, he is rejoicing in new found light. It would take too much space to tell of other cases. Try this work, and add some stars to your crown.

The Students Text Book is already an assured success, and will be printed after I get home from this present trip.

I desire that all who want it, to send in their names in advance, that I may know how many to print. All you order now, you will be sure to get when printed. The price will be fifty cents.

Yours in the Blessed Hope,

W. H. WILSON.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles such mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In sending books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When sending a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the oldest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restitution of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took hundreds at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring effort along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. T. J. DANIEL.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think uncertainty will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LVI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPTEMBER 4, 1907. NUMBER 33.

The Restitution

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential to final salvation.

The Sweetest Flower.

Among the summer's livid store
Each heart knows some familiar flower,
Dearest of all, whose subtle power
Unlocks, with fragrant key, the door
Of memory, and wakes again
A bygone joy—a bygone pain,
So keen, so sweet, that days long dead
Live with increased life once more.
And we with trembling fingertips, dread
The unforgotten ways of yours.
All other flowers may leave be,
But these alone accordingly,
Our youth, our past to us restore.

The Story of a Happy Christian Life.—No. 22.

How pleasant these reminiscences are, dim and shadowy though they may be after the lapse of more than fifty years! It does us good to look back; to go to the sweet old meetings again, and to join once more in imagination, in the songs and prayers of those saints of God.

My faith is strengthened when I think how strong in the faith they were, and so is yours.

1856—That was the year father began making preparations to build a new house. The cellar was dug and a man was hired to wall it up with stone. It looked, when he had finished it, like he had done a good job, but when tested by the winter the wall all fell down.

In the Spring of 1857, we heard of Brother Besack, a stone-mason at Columbia City and he was sent for and did the work over again, and it stands firm and sure to this day, after having gone through the fire. How Brother Besack came into the faith I do remember. He was a German, was endowed by nature with a good mind that had been wisely improved by study, and I think he sometimes spoke in public.

At any rate he was perfectly fearless, in so far as the truth was concerned. Attending a funeral on one occasion, he heard the speaker assert that "the man was not there," that "he had gone to heaven." The preacher finished his sermon and Brother Besack sprang to his feet, and in his broken English, said; "The speaker say 'the man is not here; that he is not dead, but has gone to heaven.' He lies, for there the man is in his coffin. You all see him," etc.

The preacher tried to stop him, and wanted him put out, but the people said; "No, let him go on," and go on he did, until he had explained that we are by nature, poor mortal beings and must all die, and that to become immortal by having part in the first resurrection, we must believe the gospel of the Kingdom that Jesus preached and be baptised into his name. The incident created quite a sensation and brought the doctrine of the sleep of the dead, prominently forward in that part of the country, but what the results were I cannot say. I think that Auntie Willard was acquainted with this Brother Besack. She was, with his sons, of whom he had several—bright, fine looking boys,—Nicholas and I think Joseph, were both baptized from her house, at the same time that my own dear sister, Henrietta, was. This baptism took place in Center lake, in the Summer of 1858.

I had been trying to teach the truth to a young friend of ours, by the name of Lyman T. Wheeler, and he had accepted it, though he was the son of devout Methodists and his father a minister. He was so deeply affected when he finally made the resolve to give himself to God, that my sister on coming into the room, thought he was dying and called my parents, and my grand-parents were also sent for, to talk with and help him to a better understanding of the way of life. He was as white as a corpse. He had attended a few meetings at Warsaw, and had been a guest at Auntie Willard's house. This young man was baptized with the others, Nicholas Besack came out of the water shouting. He had a massive brain like his father and sister resembled him in appearance.

We had moved into our new house and my grand parents had moved into theirs, and meetings were again resumed, some of which Mr. Stanton of Oswego and the Huntington County people, sometimes attended. Sister Jenks, among the rest, and of course, Brother and Sister William T. Gaffin and Brother Samuel Andrews and wife, and I think also Brother S. H. Clark and wife from Liberty Mills. These people were all stalwart soldiers of the Cross, all three brethren, Gaffin, Andrews and Clark being public speakers.

A Brother Adams from New York had married Brother Smith's daughter, Hannah, and this brother was quite a help in our newly organized Sunday School, held in the school-house, but perhaps not until later on. Auntie Willard had been having Bible Readings at her house, and it had been in these Readings that I first learned of the promises made to Abraham, and of how they were fulfilled through Christ.

I had attended school at Warsaw in the early months of 1857 and had been sheltered in her house under her motherly wing, as were afterward my younger brother and sister, and many other dear young people, sweet Mary Hall, Brother Hall's daughter, was at this time an inmate of her house, as was also Sarah Johnson, the sister of Auntie Willard's adopted daughter. It, like the house at Oswego, was large and roomy, and was always full.

Mary, Sarah and Alice all became obedient believers. And another young lady, named Anna Murdick—one of the dearest of all the dear friends of my girlhood, was brought into the truth through Auntie Willard's faithful teaching. She had boarded there and had attended Mrs. Cowan's Seminary. I had gone to Hills and Mr. Barnett,—Miss Hills, also having her home with Auntie Willard. My father baptized Anna, married her, and preached her funeral sermon. Her people were Quakers.

Brother and Sister Roter—the latter Auntie Willard's niece was baptized while in Warsaw. They were from Cincinnati, and very fine people.

And Auntie Willard was cheered for a time by the coming to Warsaw of a dear Sister Gilbert, a faithful soldier of Jesus, who would not even live with her husband while he sold rum, not willing to be clothed and fed by the wages of unrighteousness. This Sister Gilbert also attended the meetings at grandfather's house.

Brother Willard had become acquainted with a Dr. Richmond who was in the faith, and he and this Dr. Richmond went out to the country school-houses and held meetings.

Brother Richmond was a well-educated and fine looking man, but not so eloquent as a speaker as some others. I do not know what became of him. So you see that Brother and Sister Willard were by no means idle while they were in Warsaw, and that their work was crowned with glorious results. I wonder if Brother and Sister Merahon of Palestine—a little town not far from Warsaw, were brought to see the truth through their efforts or not! Anyhow they moved to Warsaw, but were not as enthusiastic in working for Jesus as they ought to have been. It was hard to get them out to the prayer meetings and communion services, and this discouraged others.

Auntie Willard visited us during the summer of 1858 and staid a whole week, and the last meeting that was ever to be held in grandfather's house was held there.

The Doctrine of a Future Life, By James Strong, S. T. D., L. L. D., Reviewed No. 16.

Having shown from the Scriptures of truth that man is a mortal being—that he does not possess a soul or spirit entity—that the soul—which is the man, or the life, or the product of man, as used in the Bible—is, and to die, go to the grave, and be destroyed; and that the spirit, which returns to God who gave it, is the mysterious breath of man, which God breathed into his nostrils which created; and having shown that the spiritual-death penalty for sin, has no foundation whatever, seeing that the first death is that which is common to all, and the last death is the second death which the wicked will suffer, we will now notice a few of the many passages which declare that the wicked shall perish, and be destroyed.

To perish, Noah Webster says, is, To lose life in any manner; to be destroyed; to come to nothing. The tenth definition he gives is, To be lost eternally; to be sentenced to endless misery: a definition which lies for the authors the theologians who have perverted the true meaning of all these punitive words, in order to sustain the old heathen doctrine of soul-immortality, and the papal dogma of hell-torment, and the Protestant belief of endless misery!! And we have already shown that a theological definition cannot be accepted as settling any controversy as to doctrine between Christians.

We will now show the incompatibility of the position taken by theologians, and the pastors of the popular churches of the world, which changes and nullifies and makes void the penalty of God's law, as expressed by Himself, and by the inspired writers throughout the Bible.

The word perish, with the sense, to lose life, as all will admit, is used by the inspired writers scores of times in the sacred Scriptures; and is employed by Jesus (Luke xiii. 1-3) in this sense, (as all must admit) as follows: Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish—lose your life, as did those Galileans who were slaughtered, and whose blood Pilate had mingled with pagan sacrifices—perish—lose your life, as did those eighteen, upon whom the tower in Siloam fell, and slew them.

But suppose we change the language of Jesus so as to mean what it is confidently and tenaciously claimed all the punitive words of the Bible touching the final end of the wicked do mean as follows: Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise be tormented in hell for ever and ever—who is so blind as not only to see the inconsistency and absurdity of such position, but the absolute perversion of Christ's words, with all the words in which the penalty of God's law is expressed!

Such culpable perversion by the friends of God—and that too, in relation to the penalty of God's law which we would reasonably expect would be given in unmistakable language, and, which has been so given—is astounding! and, doubtless, is an astonishment to the angels of God in heaven!

It is pertinent, in this connection to ask for Scriptural authority, or a logical reason for changing the words, wide meaning as these words men in relating events transpiring now and then, as for instance—600 emigrants perished at sea, on board a steamer bound for New York. Fifty persons perished in a hotel destroyed by fire! But when these same words—perish and destroyed—are used all through the Bible in regard to the destiny of the wicked in the future world—why, then, perish means to live for ever in misery; destroyed and destruction mean to be preserved in hell, to be tormented forever. To be burned up as chaff, as tares, etc., is to burn forever, or, not to burn at all!! Such is the theology that has led so many thinking men into agnosticism and infidelity. But are the wicked to perish? Nevertheless man being in honor abideth not; he is like the beasts that perish. Psa xlix 12. When beasts perish they are dead, as we all know: so when men perish, they are dead, and not alive, for they cannot be dead and alive at the same time, as we have been taught. The triumphing of the wicked is short.... they shall perish like their own dung. Job xx 5, 7. They go to nothing and perish, vi 18. The Lord knoweth the days of the upright; and their inheritance shall be forever. But the wicked shall perish, and the enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of lambs; they shall consume, into smoke shall they consume away. Psa xxxvii 18. If the Jewish sacrifices, to which the Psalmist refers as a comparison, were not always burning, but consumed, burned up, then also he here unequivocally, and explicitly taught that the enemies of the Lord will be thus consumed, burned up. For such as be blessed of him shall inherit the earth, and such as be cursed of him shall be cut off. Behold, all they that were incensed against thee shall be ashamed and confounded; they shall be as nothing; and they that strive with thee shall perish. Thou shalt seek them, and shalt not find them.... they that were against thee shall be as nothing, and a thing of nought. Isa xli 11, 12. The notable words of Christ (Jno iii 16)—For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. And I give unto them everlasting life, and they shall never perish, says Christ again. And, who will candidly say that the word perish, as used by our Lord is not the antithesis—the opposite—of the word life?

Paul says (Rom ii 12) For as many as have sinned without law shall perish without law [angels, (Jude xiii 6)]. Being [corrupt, put] wounds, and perish. And once more he says (2 Cor ii 15, 16). For we are unto God a sweet savor of Christ in them that are saved, and in them that perish; to the one we are a savor of death unto death; and to the other the savor of life unto life. But according to orthodoxy, Paul was a savor of life in both cases, and if this were true he would have said—to the one we are a savor of torment unto torment, and to the other a savor of happiness unto happiness! But according to Paul in this passage, to perish is to suffer death.

The words of Peter (ii 2, 13) are still more emphatic—but these as natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed, speak evil of the things that they understand not and shall utterly perish in their own corruption. The apostle says that beasts are made to be taken and destroyed. God says the wicked shall be destroyed forever. How any person honestly say that the word destroyed, as applied to the wicked (so many times, does not mean the same as when applied to beasts and other things?

The definition of destroy and destruction as given by Webster is as follows: To demolish, to pull down; to annihilate; as time by demolishing or burning, as to destroy a city; to bring to nought; to annihilate; to kill; to slay; to extirpate; in general to put an end to; to annihilate a thing, or the form in which it exists. In the light of these definitions it is the height of folly for any one to say, as is said, that destruction is not annihilation; or, to say as many do, that nothing can be annihilated because matter is not, and that the wicked, therefore, cannot be annihilated.

But does the word destroy, as used in our common version always mean to annihilate? We answer no. This is only true, however, of the Old Testament. Aaron Pick, professor of Hebrew and Chaldee of the University of Prague, in his Bible Students' Concordance in which he gives the literal meaning of every word, and where found, puts down thirty-eight different Hebrew words, all rendered by the word destroy, while there is quite a difference in the significations, showing that other and more proper words should have been employed in many instances by the translators. For the satisfaction of those who have not this valuable work, we give a few: These words with their definitions. Sopha, to end; shakhath, to spoil, to destroy; yorash, to drive away, suppress; potsats, to break down; kaseth, to cut, to cut off; cyrath, to lose, to miss, shall not, to deprive, to be sure, hala, to swallow, shaphi, to break in pieces; shakhah, to hit out, crush; deka, to bruise; mooth, to cause death; khoram, to destroy, kolah, to consume, finish, make an end; shamad, to annihilate, to destroy, to ruin; tsamath (hifil), to annihilate."

We see from these definitions that the argument often used against the destruction of the wicked—that because the word destroy as used in the Old Testament does not necessarily mean to annihilate, it does not, when applied to the punishment of the wicked, is not well founded, and falls to the ground. We give a few passages where tsamath and shamad are used, which positively prove that the wicked will be annihilated. Psa xviii 10, Thou hast also given me the necks of mine enemies that I might [tsamath] annihilate them that hate me. This is considered a prediction of what Messiah will do; for when Jesus, the noblemen returns he will say, These mine enemies who would not that I should reign over them bring hither and slay them before me. Luke xix 27. Thus are the wicked to be slain, killed—annihilated. I will surely [tsamath] destroy all the wicked of the [erets] earth; that I may [tsamath] cut off all wicked doers from the city of the Lord. Psa ci 8. This is a manifest prediction of Messiah's work in the destruction of the wicked from the holy city, new Jerusalem, as seen in vision by John. Rev xxi 8; xxii 15. The Lord preserveth all them that love[th] him; but all the wicked will he [shamad] destroy. Psa cxlv 20. How can Christians believe—and thus contradict Jehovah—that the wicked will be preserved in hell-torment forever, when only those that love him are to be preserved, and the wicked destroyed? When the wicked spring as the grass, and when all the workers of iniquity do flourish; it is that they shall be destroyed forever [shamad—annihilated forever] For, He that being often reproved, hardeneth his neck, shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy. Psa xcii 7; Prov xxix 1.

And the destruction of the transgressors and of the sinners shall be together, and they that forsake the Lord shall be consumed. Isa i 28, Not sent to hell as they die, according to the popular error, but destroyed together in the day of judgment, for the wicked is reserved to the day of destruction; they shall be brought forth [from sheol, where they are reserved] to the day of wrath. Job xxi 30. And, the Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished. 2 Pet ii 9.

And to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know (God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; who shall be punished with [everlasting misery? no, but] everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power; when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe.....in that day.

Persons who think that Paul here teaches that the wicked are to be thus destroyed at the time of the advent, attach the wrong meaning to the word when, which here means after, and not at the time. The apostle does not contradict John, who says (Rev xx 7), And when the thousand years are expired, Satan shall be loosed out of his prison, and shall go out to deceive the nations [of the wicked, now resurrected] which are in the four quarters of the earth, Gog and Magog, to gather them together to battle: the number of whom is as the sand of the sea. And they went [over upon the breadth] of the earth, and compassed the camp of the saints about, and the beloved city; and fire came down from God out of heaven, and devoured them.

And so John thus saw in vision the fulfillment of the following literal words of Malachi (iii 18; iv 1-2), Then shall ye return, and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God, and him that serveth him not. For, behold, the day cometh, that shall burn as an oven, and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly shall be stubble; and the day that cometh, shall burn them up saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch. But unto you that fear my name shall the sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings; and ye shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall. And ye shall tread down the wicked, for they shall be as ashes under the soles of your feet in the day that I do this, saith the Lord of hosts.

We deem it unnecessary to quote more of the many passages which corroborate those already quoted. For, if the direct and unmistakable language of those passages does not convince of the correctness of our exegesis, then, no language, and no number of passages would convince the reader of the error we have combatted, and of the truth we have maintained.

And in this connection it ought to be remembered that there are only four or five passages—all in the New Testament—that are quoted to prove endless misery, and that they are so interpreted as to contradict the 200 passages that positively declare that the wicked shall perish, and be destroyed by being burned up. Such erroneous interpretation fortifies the infidel charge of Bible-contradiction, and should never be indulged in, as it is, by the friends of God's Word.

In conclusion I want to say with emphasis, let the Word of God forever stand, though the works and creeds of men forever perish.

H. H. HALL.

The Things That Cannot Be Shaken.

And this word yet once more signifieth the removing of those things that are shaken as things that are made that those things which cannot be shaken remain.

The Apostle Peter refers us to the epistle of Paul the Apostle who in speaking of these things, were some things hard to be understood. The humiliation and glorious reign of the Messiah to a Jewish mind is an example.

If they had believed all that the prophets had spoken, they would have believed in the humiliation as well as the glorious reign.

The same trouble exists in the Gentile church today.

Let us settle it in our minds, there is room for all to be fulfilled.

The kingdom cannot be moved.

"Wherefore we are receiving a kingdom which cannot be moved."

Mount Zion cannot be moved, but abideth forever. Psa cxxv.

The Mount of Olives shall be moved.

The Mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof and half of the mountain shall remove toward the north and half of it towards the south. The flood in the days of Noah did not make a break in the genealogy of the Messiah nor of the race.—Charles Beardman.

The true spirit and purpose of the Christian religion is to keep a man pure and undefiled from the lust and covetousness, the ambition and selfishness of the world. Cleansed within and shielded without, we can pursue our way, safe from the temptations that everywhere assail us.

BROTHER, if you have not yet renewed your subscription to THE RESTITUTION for this year, will you please do so now? We thank you for the favor.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPT. 4, 1907.

SISTER M. A. Woodward will preach for the church at Plymouth next Sunday.

THE French are having some trouble in subduing the Moors. There is battle after battle. The fanatical tribesmen charge and charge, and are mowed down by the machine guns of the artillery. The losses of the French are small comparatively, but the incessant toil weakens them, and there is danger of them being overpowered before aid can reach them.

FROM Brother P. Neill we learn that Brother John C. Venable, of Belle Fontaine, Ohio, is dead. We have no particulars, but hope to have suitable notes for next week. It was our privilege to meet Brother Venable at the Ohio Conference, and in that short acquaintance we learned to love and respect him. One by one the ranks are being thinned out. May the Lord soon come and end the reign of the enemy, death.

THE Plymouth Church had the pleasure of making the acquaintance of our young Sister Virginia Ritenour, of Dilbeck, Va., on last Sunday. She has been at the Indian Lake Bible school, then to the Ohio Conference at Springfield, then to the Illinois Conference at Oregon, and on her way homeward made us a call. Sister Ritenour is enthusiastic in the Master's cause, having three Sunday schools under her charge, and is now anxious to get those within reach of her home to come together and organize a Conference, that more work may be done. In this we hope the brethren of the east will "hold up her hands" till the object is accomplished, as much good can be done by such association together. May the Father's blessing attend our dear Sister.

In the Day That Thou Eatest Thereof, etc.

It should be our aim at all times to understand the language of the Bible as it is written. To place upon the sentences of the Bible other than a plain interpretation is to give it a private interpretation. The apostle says that no prophecy of the Scriptures is of any private interpretation. For the prophecy came not in old times by the will of man; but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit. 2 Pet i 20-21.

Again we are admonished, To show ourselves approved of God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth. When a speaker or writer labors to tell what the prophet, Christ or the apostles meant, instead of letting their words express their thoughts he is occupying dangerous grounds. Gen ii 17 reads as follows, But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die. There are several positions taken to avoid the statement, In the day. It is claimed that the day here spoken of was not a day of 24 hours but the Lord's day which was of 1000 years duration. Therefore Adam died that day. Again it means that he began to die that day, that the act was not complete until 930 years after this. If all testimony were excluded except that given concerning the length of a day up to this time would we not understand a day to mean the duration of an evening and a morning? Gen i 5. It was evening and it was morning, the first day (Luser's translation). The law was that, In the day, etc. Adam did not die in that day, but lived 930 years. God's purpose in regard to man was he should fill the earth, (replenish the earth). If the law had have been put in force that day he could not have "filled the earth" and God's purpose in this respect would not have been carried out. God having created man and given him the law had the right as an executor to suspend the execution of the law.

In the third chapter of Genesis and 21st verse we read, Unto Adam also and his wife did the Lord God make coats of skins and clothed them. In procuring these skins an animal must be slain. The skins covered their physical nakedness, the blood suspended the sentence of the law, and gave them an opportunity to "fill the earth" which they did. In disobeying God Adam lost the promise of eternal life, as every means of his procuring it was removed from him. He was no longer permitted to eat of the trees in which was the food that would continue life. The tree of life was guarded so he could not partake of it. The only means of living was to procure food from the ground. By this means he lived 930 years and died. Adam's opportunity was not to inherit life through the promise made to the woman. Gen iii 15. But to bring forth sons and daughters who in turn should "fill the earth." Adam and Eve were put on trial for a future life and all depended on their obedience to God's law. They disobeyed and through it judgment was passed upon all to condemnation. Rom v 18, Adam's posterity have a right through obedience to remove this condemnation. If in their trial they fail, no second opportunity is offered them. Those who broaden the gospel of Christ do it at their peril. He that believeth on him is not condemned; but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God. John iii 18. He that taketh hold of the Son taketh hold of life, he that taketh not hold of the Son taketh not hold of life. 1 John v 12, (Syriac Trans.). To him give all the prophets witness, that through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins. Acts x 43. These Scriptures teach very plainly and pointedly that the only means for God's creatures to escape condemnation is through Christ. In Rom v 18, the apostle says, Therefore by one offense judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life. The one offense was committed by Adam and brought the condemnation of death upon the race. The only means by which we may be justified is through the righteousness of Christ and our obedience to the "law of the Spirit of life." For as many as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to promise. God through Christ has wrought out his plan of salvation and we are required to conform to it. If we are overcomers we will be promised a position in the kingdom of God with power over the nations. Let us not forget that the purpose of God is found in the early history of the race. If our heavenly Father had have left the race without the promise of a future life, the only life it could have enjoyed would have been the present one. Paul declares that the first Adam was of the earth earthy. As is the earthy, such are they also that are earthy. The same apostle says Rom viii 2. The law of the Spirit of life (the gospel) in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death. Is it not true that the law of the Spirit of life relieved the apostle from the law of sin and death. The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord. Rom vi 23. If Adam had the promise of salvation through the seed of the woman should it not have been plainly written?

The above is submitted in Christian love. Your brother in the hope of eternal life.

Sunday School Lesson.

LESSON FOR SUNDAY SEPTEMBER 15. MOSES PLEADING WITH ISRAEL. DEUT. VI. 1-15.

Golden Text. "Beware lest thou forget the Lord." Deut. vi. 12.

After the judgments of the fiery serpents and the brazen serpent, the Israelites continued their journey going north on the east side of Moab, which is on the east of the Jordan, from Kadesh to Pisgah.

Sihon, king of the Amorites would not let them pass through his border land. He fought against them, and they smote him and Og king of Bashan, then pitched on the east of Jordan, opposite Jericho. Balak, king of the Moabites was very much afraid of the Israelites, and sent for Balaam a prophet, to curse Israel. Balaam was willing, but the Lord would not allow him to curse. When he opened his mouth to speak he uttered a grand prophecy of the future greatness of Israel. Num. xxiv.

The Israelites were numbered on the plains of Moab, 601,730. It was found that all who came out of Egypt of twenty years old and upward died, save Caleb and Joshua Num. xxvi.

The Lord told Moses he would die, and Joshua would lead the Israelites into Canaan. Num. xxvii.

Moses gave laws concerning feasts and vows. The Midianites were defeated.

The tribes of Reuben and Gad located on the east of the Jordan.

The whole journeys of Israel is given Num. xxxiii. The borders and divisions of the land, the cities of refuge, the inheritance of one tribe could not pass to another.

In the first five chapters of Deuteronomy, Moses, in the plains of Moab, rehearses to the Israelites the principal events of the past forty years. Many of them were babies, or little more, when their fathers believed the ten spies, and rebelled in the wilderness of Paran. Num. xiii. and xiv.

From the foregoing we can much better understand why Moses pleaded with and exhorted the Israelites.

LESSON TEXT.

1. The commandments, the statutes, and the judgments did not include eternal life. That was in the covenant—the promise—that God made to Abraham. One of the promises was, "For all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for EVER. Gen. xiii. 15. The covenant is in Gen. xv. This covenant was not founded on, nor upheld by the commandments, the statutes, and the judgments. It was confirmed in Christ, and by Christ, and was given 430 years before the law of commandments, statutes and judgments, and is of faith and not of law. Read Gal. iii. The Israelites were to do as commanded when they possessed the land of Canaan.

2. Obedience to all these statutes and commandments would secure for them individually, a good old age, and as a nation, long possession of the land.

3. And great increase in numbers, power, and wealth Deut. xxviii. 12, 13.

4. One Lord—a great and striking—contrast to all the gods of the Egyptians. Exod. xii. 12. Or the gods of the Amorites. Josh. xxiv. 15. Beside it must have been a comfort to the faithful Jewin Israel to know that there was but ONE to obey and worship. The same comfort is given to the faithful Gentiles. Eph. iv. 6; 1 Cor. viii. 6. Thou Lord—Jehovah—the Eternal—is still the one object of worship among religious Jews.

5. This the [illegible] spirits failed to do.

6. Because the commands were in the book instead of their hearts.

7. If all parents did this today there would be no use for Sunday Schools.

8, 9. These things are not commanded in the gospel of the kingdom of God.

10, 11. They were to have the good things of this life to the full.

12. Moses well knew the danger of plenty—prosperity—that was the downfall of Judea, Ezek. xvii. 49, and other great nations since.

13, 14, 15. While Moses was pleading—exhorting and commanding—in the name of the Lord—he knew by the Holy Spirit, 2 Peter i. 21, that after his death they would utterly corrupt themselves, Deut. xxxi. 29, and they did, 2 Kings xvii.

Let all who have been justified by faith, Rom. v. 1, remain steadfast, immoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord. 1 Cor. xv. 58.

Conference Report.

The 20th Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Iowa, met at Waterloo, Iowa, Aug. 17-25 inclusive.

The beautiful camp grounds are growing prettier every year. The City of Waterloo is improving the grounds around us so that we are early in the city limits. This year there is a large hotel within a few feet of our grounds and some of the brethren roomed there in preference to camping. There was a larger number of our own people this year than ever before and it was the general opinion that it was one of the best meetings we have ever had.

There was a united feeling of brotherly kindness, especially among those that differed in some points of doctrine, and the feeling is growing among the brethren that the Conferences is the place to discuss our differences in all long suffering and brotherly love, also the place to bring out new light. We are happy to know that some of our brethren are digging down deep into the treasure house of God and bringing some Bible Truths and glad tidings so that we feel like saying, "Lift up your head and rejoice; for now it is high time to awake out of sleep; for your salvation is nearer than when we first believed."

Much of the success of our Conference is due to our President, Brother Allard, who never seems to grow weary in looking after the comforts of every body both old and young. He is not only willing to do all he can at the time of the Conference, but all through the year his heart and mind is in this work, and this year the Conference Board wants to send out more pastors and evangelists than ever before. But to do this we must have the co-operation of every person who has the blessed hope of the soon return of Jesus the Christ.

There are about 150 or 200 brethren who come to the Conference each year. These people see what is being done and every year they subscribe more to the evangelistic work, and knowing that the Lord loveth a cheerful giver, and that they are well repaid for their time and money. To these we are thankful for their presence, kind words and support. But there are many brethren living in Iowa who never help in word or deed. These are the isolated ones, they are standing alone. Perhaps they never hear a sermon or meet any one of like precious faith. These are the ones we want to reach this year. We want to help you, and we want you to help us.

1st. We want every person to live nearer to the Master this year and add to their faith the fruits of the spirit spoken of in Gal. v, "For by their fruits ye shall know them."

2nd. We want you to pay for the work that is being done. The results are very slow we know. It is only one here and one there that accepts the gospel. That we can not help. All we can do is to sow the seed and leave the rest with God, and after all it is a great deal better to have a few that will be faithful—faithful until the end, than to have a great number that you don't know where they stand.

3rd. We want your support. You that do not send any money, try this year to send something to the treasurer to help in this work. If you think you have no money to spare send us a letter telling us where you live and what you are in sympathy with the work. I am sure if you commence to send each year something to support the Lord's work, you will find it a very good investment and never regret it. Dont let the cares of this world and the deceitfulness of riches choke out the good seed that has been sown in your hearts. Dont you realise that the night is far spent and the day is at hand. Think what a little time we have, and what little we are doing for the Master, when he has done so much for us, and is willing to give us eternal life and a place in his kingdom if we prove faithful.

To the people that have never been to the yearly Conference, won't you commence now to make plans to come next year if the Lord is willing. You will not regret it.

Resolved That we feel thankful to Almighty God for permitting this gathering together of his Blessed Body, to talk of the hope, to encourage and strengthen each other for the work of another year, trusting that the time spent here may not have been spent in vain, but that some one may have been made better, others encouraged and still others may be influenced to accept the conditions of eternal life, and that we may meet them in God's beautiful home.

Resolved That we extend our heartfelt thanks to the officers and committees of the Conference, for their very faithful work done. To the dear young people for their helpful music. To the thoughtful ones for their floral offerings, and to all for kind words, cheerful acts of love, and for helpful words from our visiting ministers.

Resolved That nothing is more encouraging to the older ones or more conducive to the growth of the cause in Iowa, than the interest manifested in the attendance at this Conference of so many young men and women, and of the children meeting each morning where the dear Sisters are leading the lambs of the flock Zionward. And

Whereas,—Death has continued his work in our midst and removed dear ones from the household of faith. Therefore be it

Resolved That we pray God to care for their dust and in the morning of the resurrection beautify them with immortal life, and may the God of all love to be with and over all in the work of the ministry and in the various manifestations of love for the coming year.

The Work of Religion.

How many men I meet who like to study the Bible—in their way! They would so like to know what I think about the prophet's axhead, which fell into the water and sunk—whether he really did cut down a stick and cast it in, and make the iron come to the top and swim. Then as to Balaam's ass speaking! "Do you think," they ask, "that the ass actually spoke?" There are a great many questions that come up in connection with that incident.

Then Daniel—he has been a great favorite. There are many things in that book which tempt to infinite curiosity and speculation. It is a desirable thing with them to get hold of points in the Bible with which they can run round and round, and chase a man down, or shut him up with.

Then there is the question of Cain's marriage. I once put an article in a newspaper on the subject, "Who was Cain's wife?" and I received, I think, a hundred letters concerning it. If the subject had been on "The relations of meekness and humility to the happiness of family life," I do not believe I should have got a single letter about that.

What too many people like to exercise is curiosity—intellectual curiosity—speculative and philosophic curiosity. But these things have nothing to do with Christian living. Far be it from me to dissuade men from an active exercise of philosophical curiosity. But then, that is not religion. The structure of the church is not religion. The order of the offices in the church is not religion. One, two, five, seven sacraments are not religion. The Calvinistic system of theology is not religion. No ideal statement of living can ever take the place of life itself.

The Bible is a book to guide men into right living, right thinking, right feeling; and the way to preach to men, the true business of Christian men, and Christian women, and Christian ministers, is to say, "What is the way of sweetening myself? What is the way of ripening myself? What is the way of making my life more effluent of kindness? What is the way of making Christ more manifest in my disposition to men about me than I have succeeded in doing hitherto?" That is what men mostly need to do. And he who preaches in that way will very soon have a vital sympathy in his preaching which may seem to good, old sturdy warriors as an "emasculated theology," but which to God, as the divine spirit itself, is, I think, the very marrow of preaching.

Building men up into perfect men in Christ Jesus is the true work of the ministry and of religion. Just so far as a man can use a system of theology, and succeed (a using it, it is useful to him; but in so far as he cannot do this with it, he is at liberty to throw it away.

Correction and Prayer.

A son left fatherless in early life, but who was trained up by a godly mother, one day said to a friend:

"Whenever I was guilty of disobeying my mother, and she called me to account, she would talk to me seriously, and then kneel in prayer, and tell God all my conduct, and the consequences of my course. I used to feel at those times as if my heart would burst, I felt so wicked; and I often said, 'Ma, whip me, but don't talk to me and pray for me!' 'Ah!' he said, 'it was the talking and praying that affected me more than the whipping, though all were necessary.'"

Many a wayward child that resists the rod would melt before the prayer of faith, poured out from a loving mother's heart.—Christian.

DO NOT WAIT TO BE TWICE ASKED.

One great secret of success lies in a willingness to do the work before one when duty demands that it be performed. When to-morrow becomes an argument, it leads to shirking, and, at length, to evasion. The individual who makes to-day equal to the duties it brings, and earnestly, cheerfully takes up the work before him, is on the way to zealous activity and a life of usefulness.

The grandest and noblest things lie along the pathway in life bounded by purity and truth and earnest devotion to the right. In this way of beauty and peace there can be no failure, if only we determine to act at the dictation of duty.

Do not wait to be asked twice, but go forward to the work that appears. In that is usefulness; in that is success.

Poetry.

Thy Will Be Done.

I cannot always see the way that leads
To heights above;
I sometimes quite forget he leads me on
With hand of love;
But yet I know the path must lead me to
Immanuel's land;
And when I reach life's summit I shall know
And understand.

I cannot always trace the onward course
My ship must take;
But looking backward, I behold afar,
Its shining wake
Illumined with God's light of love, and so
I onward go,
In perfect trust that he who holds the helm
The course must know.

I cannot always see the plan on which
He builds my life,
For oft the sound of hammers, blow on blow
The noise of strife,
Confuse me, till I quite forget he knows
And oversees,
And that in all details with his good plan
My life agrees.

I cannot always know and understand
The Master's rule;
I cannot always do the tasks he gives
In life's hard school;
But I am learning, with his help to solve
Them, one by one,
And when I cannot understand, to say
"Thy will be done."

Daughters of the King.

"King's Daughters were among thy honorable Women."

Among other friends both old and new it was my rare pleasure to know first at Inian Lake, four royal women—Daughters of the King, whose hearts and hands are enlisted in His service—whose feet are "beautiful upon the mountains" because they are among those "that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation; that saith unto Zion: Thy God reigneth!"

Of these new friends the first whom I met was Sister Ritenour who had come from the beautiful Shenandoah Valley in the heart of Old Virginia to mingle with those of like precious faith. We met at Vicksburg, and there in the dust and heat amidst the prosaic surroundings of a rail road station we first looked into each other's eyes, while our hearts and hands went out in greeting, for were we not both "looking for a city that hath foundations whose builder and maker is God?"

Every time we were together during the close association of those summer days I discovered new beauties in the character of this royal hearted girl. In the very morning of her life having only recently graduated from one of America's best schools, she has dedicated her talents to the cause of the King, and she told me that the inspiration which she had received at Indian Lake would be a help all her life through.

Even if this had been the only good result of our meeting under God's big trees, amidst the songs of His birds and beside one of His lakes where fleets of white lilies were riding at anchor while from their golden hearted cups arose incense of fragrance and praise—even if only one noble soul had been inspired to grander aims and nobler duties, surely it were well worth while to go thus into the heart of a beautiful wilderness.

Here we have a wholesome girl who fairly radiates health and life and hope, with her splendid talents consecrated to the cause of truth and righteousness. God bless our royal hearted Virginia! While some of us are nearly through with the little we can do for Him, she is just entering upon her God given mission. May His blessings rest upon her sunny head and fill her loyal heart with His joy and peace until her sheaves shall be gathered in, and she shall receive the welcome applaudit: "Well done thou good and faithful servant."

Another face which was new to me and which I soon learned to love was that of Sister Chaffee whose very presence seemed to be a benediction. Her dark handsome eyes seemed to love us every one. Her prayers were a comfort to us all, for she comes into the presence of the King with a full assurance of the meaning of the blessed words "Our father! The sweet spirit of submission and consecration which fills her heart is a blessing to all with whom she came in contact. Dear, brave, faithful Sister Chaffee, she "shall in no wise lose her reward".

It is strange that never but once before, have I met our well beloved Sister Woodward, and then under circumstances which forbade familiar intercourse, but it did not take many minutes for this royal woman to walk into my heart and take the place where she rightfully belongs, with all who love her for her work's sake and also for the sweet spirit of consecration which fills her royal life.

Already she is wearing that silvery diadem which "is a crown of glory when it is found in the way of righteousness". Youth hath its own charms of sweetness and freshness, but when I eat in the audience and listened to the earnest words that fall from her lips—when I remembered the long years of service which she had so gladly given to Him—when I looked into her blue eyes all radiant with love and hope—then I knew that she was indeed one of the King's Daughters whom He will own and bless in the day when He maketh up His jewels. Her face is touched with character lines which have been graven by sorrow, softened with patience and illumined by faith. In looking upon its delicate outlines I was often reminded of the good she has done for it brings a radiance and a blessing all its own to the hearts that love her.

Dear faithful "Mary"! I thank God for having known thee even before we stand upon the sea of glass or walk together beside God's beautiful river.

Another royal hearted "Daughter of the King" whom I had never met until I looked into her dark eyes under the shade of the big trees, is Sister Harriet E. Boice. She reminds me of the 11th Chapter of Hebrews, not only because of her sublime faith and courage, but because she like all the brave souls of all the centuries, is one "of whom the world is not worthy". Seeing the greatness of the need, she took upon her slender shoulders a burden from which the rest of us shrank, and we are glad and thankful that five of our faithful brethren have taken upon their own hands the heaviest part of her work, although at their earnest request she will continue to direct the Home Department which comes so near to her loving mother heart. Well equipped for difficult study and critical scholarly research, she has accomplished much, and we greatly appreciate the splendid work which she has done, is doing and will still do for the King.

"The Son of God goes forth to war" against the hosts of ignorance and sin; "Who'll follow in His train"?

Let us close up our ranks and rally together around his banner in answer to the bugle call of duty.

Brave, faithful Harriet: "Many daughters have done virtuously but (in this work) thou excellest them all .....A woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised. Give her the work of her hands, and let her own work praise her at the gates."

Every noble effort, every self sacrificing act is known and loved of the King. Every loyal loving heart that walks bravely through trials and persecutions hath a name written in the Lamb's Book of Life.

"And they shall be mine saith the Lord of Hosts in the day when I make up my jewels."

Selections.

Things We Cry For.

Following a horrible moment on a street car the other day when a child was thrown under the car and apparently crushed by the wheels there was a striking example of the worthless things that people strive for in contrast with those of real value.

To those in the car there was no doubt that the child had frightly perished. We had felt the wheels grinding over her, and had heard a low terrified cry as the motorman stopped his car within half its length.

Incidentally the case showed how unreliable appearances may be. We had seen the brown curls streaming across the street, we had seen the child go down in front of the car, and then the grinding and the suspense.

But the grinding was really the friction of the wheels on the rail as the motorman desperately stopped the car. A passing stranger had seen what nobody on the car could see, namely, that when the fender struck the child it threw her far enough to one side for the wheels barely to graze her side, and leave her only dazed and bruised by the blow. Instantly he had drawn her from beneath the car, and while the conductor was standing her on her feet to see if her legs were broken, and handling her arms to see if they were whole, and pressing her skull to see if it was fractured, she brushed the curls and gravel out of her eyes and set up a most insistent cry, "I want my hat, I want my hat."

Truth to tell it was not a handsome hat to begin with. It had fared worse than its owner, for the car wheels had actually passed over it. But the cry continued until a boy had crawled under the truck frame and brought forth the hat, and set it unevenly upon her head.

Was ever anything more incongruous? The child had narrowly missed an awful death, but to her, apparently, the affair was only a part of the usual risk of crossing the street, and her main interest centered in a battered hat that was not worth ten cents.

But how much more consistent are many people of larger growth in the things that they desire, and in the things that they overlook? What are the real things to be grateful for, and what are the real things to strive for? How few ask themselves these questions seriously, and how few earnestly ask themselves these questions seriously, and how few earnestly seek the things that their own reflection would convince them were really worth while.

We are called a nation of money seekers. What do we not risk to get wealth—health, friends, life, character—and when we have won it what satisfaction can it bring in comparison with the shame and sorrow that ought often to be felt over the manner of gaining it? Ruef in San Francisco is only an example of the unsatisfying nature of the things that we both strive and cry for.

Apparently a large part of our people is now desiring material aggrandizement. More territory, more commercial development, more revenue, and then more battleships with which to maintain the things that we grasp.

There are things of greater value than these. Fortunately, it is the more desirable things that are also earnestly desired. Governor Hughes in New York, Folk in Missouri, the Citizens' Committee in San Francisco—these are examples of the public officials and of the citizens who really cry for clean governments instead of those that have been soiled and torn under the machine of modern politics.

For the private citizen, regardless of age or sex, there should be ends sought with an intensity and desire such as one may feel in view of the things that one cries for. There are books. Who is crying for the treasures in them? Who longs to be in the possession and enjoyment of all "the infinite riches in little room" that are stored up in the printed page? There is education. What boy or girl is feeling the desire for knowledge that the commencement season ought to stir in every one? There is, above all, character, that which a person should strive for more ardently than he strives for gold, and which he should guard more faithfully than he would any material possessions.

June is just as good a month as January in which to make good resolutions. Are we conscious of a lowering of ideals? Are we failing to discriminate wisely between things that are worthy of constancy and devotion, and their opposites? Are we caught by glitter instead of by worth?

A child may be pardoned for seeming to place more value on a piece of clothing than on the life that only barely escaped extinction. But not men. They are supposed to know what is worth while and not be giving themselves for trifles. The things we cry for show what we are. It is just as true now as it was in Paul's time that the very course of things "will render to every man according to his needs; to them who by continuance in welldoing seek for honor, eternal life; but to them that obey unrighteousness, tribulation and anguish."—The Morning Star.

Look Not Back.

We sometimes hear people pray, "Lord, hedge up the way." Do they mean hedge them up and pen in on all sides, so that they cannot do otherwise than they do? If so, is it a wise prayer? I have in mind one who prayed thus, as if afraid that, if left alone to choose his own way, he might go wrong. He was, if not a new convert, still quite a young one. He had turned to the Lord and escaped a drunkard's grave; was wonderfully blessed by the Spirit; poor in this world's good, but rich in faith, inasmuch that he looked daily, almost hourly, for the Lord to come, and could sing God's praise, and exhort and pray, with such fervent eloquence, as to strengthen, encourage and melt the hearts of his hearers. I have heard one say to another, "How searching Brother——was in his exhortation; it seems as if he knew just what to say to make us feel humble to-night." And the other answer, "I know it; I felt just so myself." This same brother was the life of the little meetings, where he attended while enjoying such a measure of the Spirit, and I feel sure that the heart of a bitter opposer was stirred, almost melted, greatly interested anyway, and led to respect God's people through the influence of this one person; and he seemed to know it and labor for the conversion of the one he had interested. I call this putting the hand to the plow. This is a true story, so there is more of it but the rest is sad.

Prosperity visited the man who put his hand to the plow; did he grip the plow-handles hard and pray for grace and strength to hold on? or does he look back and when passing along he sees a place where his way is not hedged up and seemingly pleasant fields of the world's pleasures and bliss sloping away in the distance to the right or left, pass through the gap and wander on forgetful of the good seed which he has been sowing, now left for the birds to pick up, or the hot sun to scorch; the hungry, thirsty soul to starve and die as soon as it had been quickened enough to feel hunger or thirst? Oh, I would say to that brother, if God had answered you as you desired and never tested your faith in him, and never brought you out to show you what you were, and what you should be, and so giving an opportunity of getting into the place where you belong, you might have worked a little longer in that hedged up condition, and felt that you were doing something for the Master. But we are told in God's Word that we must all be tried and purified by fire, and how we are never tried and purified by fire, and if we are never tried, are always hedged in, the furnace heat never applied, when and where will the gold appear? Lacking the right faith, the loss would be yours, but now it is another's; but you can be saved, "yet so as by fire." See to it, act to it soon, my brother; let not the blood of another be found in the skirts of your garments.

What the Boys Did

"Miss Fulton is coming, I'm sure. Let's go home."

"No, wait a minute, maybe she'll come."

"She said 'four', and she would have been here before this. Come on."

"Well, I don't care anyway. I've been given the afternoon. What's to hinder a temperance meeting, anyway?"

"I move that Dick Martin be chairman."

"O, come—"

"I second the move."

"You should say motion. But see here, boys, I can't—"

"Yes, you can. You know just what is right; you just proved that."

And so Dick had to submit.

"Boys," he said, taking the chair, "I s'pose this meeting is about getting drunk—against it, of course."

"Yes, and against the drink that makes people drunk."

"Yes, and against the drink-makers that make the drink that makes drunkards."

"What'll we do about it?"

"Pass some resolutions. That's what men do."

So the boys sat to work on their resolutions, and by and by this is what they brought forth:

"What'll we do with them?" was asked.

"Why, what big folks do; lay 'em away."

"And then what?"

"Nothin."

"Pshaw! That don't look right. What's the use to bother making them? I say, boys, let's carry 'em out!"

"How?"

"I'll show you."

The boys gathered around the speaker, and pretty soon he showed them what he meant. He printed three large signs like these:—

"No Drunkards A Lowed. Take Warning!"

"No Drunkard Drinks A Lowed. Danger!"

"No Drunkard Drink-makers A Lowed on Penalty of Death!"

The boys took the notices and tacked them up—one on the door of Jack White, the worst drunkard in town; another on the saloon, and the third on the door of the brewery.

When Jack White came home he was so frightened that he left town for fear the white caps were coming. The man who kept the saloon called his friends to sit up all night and protect his saloon, and the brewer became so nervous that he sent for the doctor. When it leaked out that it was all the work of boys, people laughed; but Dick's father who was a member of the fire company said, "Your resolutions were all right, but you mustn't try to carry them out in such a way."

"Why, father," he said, when the bell rings don't you turn out to put the fire out?

Well, I thought you didn't sound the alarm and then leave the fire to go out of itself, and that is just what we boys were doing. Who's going to put out the fire?"

Dick's father didn't answer, but I am inclined to think it will have to be done by the boys and girls yet.

Don't Hear Everything.

The art of not hearing should be learned by all. It is fully as important to domestic happiness as a cultivated ear, for which so much money and time are expended. There are so many things which it is painful to hear, very many of which, if heard, will disturb the temper, corrupt simplicity and modesty, detract from contentment and happiness, that everyone should be educated to take in or shut out sounds, according to his pleasure. If a man falls into a violent passion, and calls us all manner of names, at the first word we should shut our ears, and hear no more. If, in a quiet voyage of life, we find ourselves caught in one of those domestic whirlwinds of scolding, we should shut our ears as a sailor would furl his sails, and making all tight, scud before the gale. If a hot and restless man begins to inflame our feelings, we should consider what mischief the fiery sparks may do in our magazine below, where our temper is kept, and instantly close the door. If, as has been remarked, all the petty things said of one by heedless or ill-natured idlers were to be brought home to him, he would become a mere walking pin-cushion stuck full of sharp remarks. If we would be happy, when among good men, we should open our ears; when among bad men, shut them. It is not worth while to hear what our neighbors say about our children, what our rivals say about our business, our dress or our affairs. The art of not hearing, though untaught in our schools, is by no means unpracticed in society. We have noticed that a well-bred woman never hears a vulgar or impertinent remark. A kind of discreet deafness saves one from many insults, from much blame, from not a little connivance in dishonorable conversation.—Treasure Trove.

The Pearl of Great Price.

"Again the kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchant seeking goodly pearls who when he had found one of great price, went and sold all that he had and bought it."

All the glittering mines of Golconda hold not within their depths a gem of such priceless worth, no jewel gleaming in the hand of the lapidary, can equal it in value; even the far-famed Kohinore grows dim and lustreless in comparison. Its value is untold, for it hath not entered into the heart of man even to conceive of the glories prepared by the Father for his children. Men may seek after gold, and spend all the precious years of life in striving to become rich, they may toil year after year in the treasure mines of earth, but what will it avail them at last if they seek not this pearl of great price, this gem which grows brighter and brighter the longer it is worn, and adorns the old and wrinkled form as well as the fair and youthful one, by the side of which all others sink into insignificance. Let us, too, purchase this jewel, as did the wise merchant who went and sold all that he had that he might be the purchaser; houses and lands and gold were freely given in exchange for it. Many a struggle will be fought with pride and passion and worldliness, ere we decide to give up all for this pearl, but when the decision has been reached, when we have let its soft light shine down into our hearts; oh, the sweet peace that will come like a benediction, like a song of victory after the battle. The soft pure light of this pearl will brighten all the dark pathways of life, it will penetrate the darkest cloud of trial and adversity, and its sweet and holy beams will gleam across the dark valley and shadow of death even down into the grave. How useless at the hour of death will be all the pomp and riches of life! He who has sacrificed all for the kingdom though he be the humblest of men will be richer than all the crowned princes of earth. In possessing this pearl we shall possess the glorious gift of immortality, we shall drink of the fountain of perpetual youth, we shall mingle with the great and good of all ages, no pencil can paint the face of an immortal one—the face from which the marks of pride and passion have been forever erased—the face reflecting the light of immortality, but such faces will ever beam upon us, such lovely forms will ever walk by our sides, such seraphic voices will blend with ours in singing the new song, an infinity of pleasure and happiness will be ours, and the sweet smile of the Infinite King will radiate over all.—J. A. Kerr.

Unconquered After Defeat.

Because we have just failed is no reason for giving up. It is the more reason for not giving up. Speer tells of a boy who preparing for Yale, saw a football game between Yale and Princeton, in which Yale won. He watched the Princeton men, after their team's defeat, singing and singing, cheering and cheering, and then marching in a great solid mass, still singing and cheering, down into the city.

After he had reached home the boy said to his father, "I believe I would like to go to Princeton." "But you know they got licked to-day." "O, yes, but they didn't know it. I would like to go to a college where they don't know when they are beaten." and Speer adds heartily, "If the game had gone the other way he would have seen the same thing in Yale," and then asks, "Shall men have less of the Spirit of Christ in their moral life?" A defeat by sin is not meant be the end of the fight. It must not be, if he will only obey orders from the front. The Captain is never through with a beaten man, unless the man turns deserter.—Sunday School Times.

A Sermon by Father Taylor.

I once heard Father Taylor preach a sermon on the Atonement. It was all in a style that nobody but a sailor could understand, a style that every sailor could comprehend, although a treatise on this subject from an uptown pulpit would have been "Greek" to him. This was one of the passages:

"You are dead in trespasses and buried too, down in the lower hold amongst the ballast, and you can't get out, for there is a ton of sin on the main hatch. You shin up the stanchions and try to get it open, but you can't. You rig a purchase. You get your handspikes, capstan bars, and watch tackles, but they are no good. You can't start it. Then you begin to sing out for help. You hail all the saints you think are on deck, but they can't help you. At last you hail Jesus Christ. He comes straight along. All he wanted was to be asked. He just claps his shoulder to that ton of sin. It rolls off, and then he says, 'Shipmates, come out!' Well, if you don't come out, it is all your own fault."—The Century.

The Bible has in it the supreme standard of life for the Christian. The neglect of Bible study is responsible for a multitude of destructive propaganda that would not otherwise get audience. Christian Science, for example, uses the Bible by way of illustration, and in the minds of certain credulous people gains authority by strategy. The Bible student cannot be deceived in the perversion of Scripture endorsed in the books of Mrs. Eddy. The new theologians have dishonestly redressed their creed in the language of revelation, and many of them hope by such means to deceive the elect as to the revolutionary character of their teaching. Here again, we may suggest the urgent necessity of Bible study. The foundations of faith are built upon the Word of God. It is the text-book of the spiritual life. It has no substitute. In the Scriptures alone has God revealed himself to His church, and these must be the basis of instruction, if we are to be saved from apostasy.

Married.

Mr. Howard L. Bryant, a worthy and intelligent young man of Athens, Fulton County, Indiana, and Miss Coral E. Chapman, one of Argos' most beautiful and accomplished young women, were united in marriage by Elder J. H. Willey, at the home of W. D. Thompson, Plymouth, Ind., Sept. 4, 1907.

May heaven's richest blessing attend them, and may love's beautiful sunshine make their pathway brighter and ever more bright as the days go by.

J. H. WILLEY.

Selected.

Hope.

The sweetest friend that ever kept a distressed soul company is hope. It beguiles the tediousness of the way through all the weary hours of our pilgrimage. Our God, is the God of hope, and we as Christians should hope in him. We should hope in God confidently, because he has promised; prayerfully, because he loves to hear us: obediently, for his precepts are to be observed by us, and constantly, for he is always the same. We have much to hope for; we hope for help in distress; for strength in weakness, for joy even in sorrow, and for life in death. We may hope for all we need, and for all God has promised: and in God alone through Christ Jesus. If we have the assurance of hope through faith we cannot hope in vain; because the foundation of our hope is laid in the blood of Jesus and in the oath of God. Hope is expectation, and a confident persuasion of obtaining some future good; and we may expect, because God has promised, and his promises are all yea, and Amen, in Christ Jesus; and never were forfeited yet. His gospel warrants us to hope in him at all times; therefore, come what may, we have no cause to be disconsolate—we have no cause to fear, our God is our hope, and if we hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto us at the appearing of the Lord Jesus, he will be our portion forever. Hope is confidence. The Lord shall be our confidence. Our happiness consists in knowing God and believing him; if we believe his Word, we enjoy peace, and sacred satisfaction; we may be confident in God, for he has power, love and faithfulness.

Trust in the Lord, forever trust,
And banish all your fears;
Strength in the Lord Jehovah dwells,
Eternal as his years.

They that trust in the Lord shall be as Mount Zion, that shall not be removed, but abideth forever. Let us then hold fast the confidence which we had at the beginning, steadfast unto the end, rejoicing in hope of the glory of God. In this hope the believer can always rejoice; because he looks for eternal life, for the redemption of the body, and the preservation of the soul unto life eternal, for the appearing of our glorious Redeemer and complete salvation through him. The hope which is laid up in heaven, the weight of glory, the crown of righteousness, and an eternal inheritance, are in reserve for all those who endure unto the end. In hope of these we may well rejoice; these are set before us to excite our desire, produce courage, prevent despondency, and fill us with joy. They are freely given, plainly promised; therefore we shall never be ashamed of our hope when it is realized. Let us then lift up our heads, rejoicing that we shall soon be made partakers of our hope. Let hope be the anchor of the soul: he that hopeth in God shall never be disappointed. Here our time is short, therefore our opportunity to glorify God will be short. Let us then seize and improve, all the occasions we can. If our time here be short, then the triumphing of the wicked over us will be short, and the contradiction of sinners against us will soon be ended; let us therefore be patient, diligent and prayerful here while treading the thorny maze of an entangling world. We are often beset on every hand, so that the good we would we do not; and the evil that we would not, that we do, but there, in the paradise of our God, we shall dwell at perfect ease, and be at rest. There we shall forever enjoy uninterrupted bliss. Oh! when we contemplate the vastness and matchless splendor of our eternal inheritance, with no one to dispute the amazing possession, does it not fill our hearts with wonder, love and praise?

Then let your song march boldly on,
Press forward to the heavenly gate;
There peace and joy eternal reign,
And glittering robes for conquerors wait.

There shall we wear a starry crown,
And triumph in Almighty grace;
While all the armies of the skies,
Join in our glorious Leader's praise.

Our Helping Fund

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Indiana Conference.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in the State of Indiana, will be held at Hillisburg, Clinton Co., Ind., commencing Oct. 17, and continuing over the following Sunday. It is desired that each congregation throughout the state be represented. Let as many isolated believers be present as possible. We have important business to arrange and we need your council. Come in the spirit of the Master that we may exhort one another to love and good works.

Hillisburg is on the L. E. & W. R.R. east from Frankfort, and west from Tipton, Ind. All persons who expect to attend will please notify Brother Wm. Huffer, Michigantown, Indiana, that arrangements may be made for their comfort. Let all who can come. Come with a message of Hope and Love, and God will bless our meeting.

J. H. WILLEY, Pres. Ind. Con.

SOMETHING NEW.

Brother J. L. Wince wrote a series of articles that were published in THE RESTITUTION some months ago, on the subject of the Resurrection. At the solicitation of some of the brethren, he has had the matter printed in tract form. It makes a very good appearance, and the ability of Brother Wince as a writer is so well known that no words of praise from us are necessary. The tract is now ready, and can be ordered from Brother J. L. Wince, Pierceton, Ind. or direct from this Office, as you wish. The price is 10 cents single copies postpaid, or 12 for $1.00.

Brethren, this whole edition of this work ought to be in the hands of the readers in the next sixty days, and if proper energy is used this will be accomplished. Send orders in this very day.

Scriptures Opened.

This a book of 370 pages written by Robert Ashcroft, and is a book of thoughts and themes for Bible Students. We have a few copies only, and first come—first served. This book sold for $1.25, but we offer what we have for 80 cents, post paid.

Bible Themes.

Is the title of the last book issued by Brother John O. Woodruff on miscellaneous subjects, both original and selected. This book contains 480 pages and cost the author $1.25 to issue. A quantity has been supplied us, and we wish to get them into the hands of readers, and offer them at 80 cents each, post paid, while they last.

WHEN you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and send that.

THE WORLD TO COME.

This is a book of over 400 pages compiled by Brother J. O. Woodruff, and is a symposium of writers on Eternal Life, from a Bible basis. We have a few copies to sell, and will mail for 80 cents each, if sent for soon.

WE have received a new edition of the tract A Letter to a Friend, from Brother Woodruff, and we can supply them at five cents each postpaid. No tract ever issued by our people has done the good this has, and the pleasing and convincing style in which it is written makes it worth much as a medium for advancing the truth of the gospel. Get a number of them and give to friends. You never can tell how much good a few nickels will do used in this manner. Try it.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Neb., will be held in St. Paul Sept. 14th to 20th inclusive.

MINNIE ROGERS, Sec.

WILL all concerned take note, the address of Brother D. C. and Sister N. B. Robinson will in future be 366 West Main St. Salem, O.

WHEN YOUR TIME IS OUT PLEASE RENEW.

A New Tract.

The Great Divine Healer vs Latter-Day Healers, by Uncle John Foore.

A Tract for the last days. Should be read by every thinking Christian.

Paul 2 Tim. iii. 13. "But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived."

Matt. vii. 21. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works. And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

Brethren, these tracts have gone into many families, both to brethren and people of other denominations, a few infidels, and one Christian Scientist, and all seem to be well pleased with it; but only a few of the brethren have sent to me any help in the way of paying for the tracts, and tracts are very expensive. We are anxious to have more published on different subjects. Please help to send Gospel Pearls at among the people.

Send orders to John Foore, at 2012 W. Cornish Ave. Parsons, Kan. The price is 10 cents each.

Evangelizing Notice.

The N. W. Conference has selected me again as Evangelist. The Brethren have added Arizona, and California to my field of labor. Any church or isolated brethren that want meetings during the Conference year should correspond with me at an early date so I can plan my year's work for this extensive territory which now includes western Oregon, Washington, California and Arizona.

Hereafter my home will be Scholls, Oregon, and Address, W. L. Skeels, R. D. 1, Laurel, Oregon.

Will all persons interested in the truth, and all isolated brethren within the State with whom we are not acquainted, please write to us? Beloved, we are anxious to locate and correspond with you, that we may impart unto you some spiritual gift.

Address S. J. Lindsay, State Evangelist, or Robt. G. Higgins, Box G, Oregon, Ill.

A four-page tract in the German language, by Brother M. Joblin of Cleveland, O. Subject, "What Must I do to be Saved?" After getting the opinion of one who understands this language, we have no hesitation in recommending it as simply all right. Get some for your German friends. Send to M. Joblin, 626 Woodland Ave., Cleveland, O. Price 40 cts per 100.

Notice.

All who are interested in the dance question, and wish to know the workings of the ball room and dance house will get a full understanding of the matter by getting and reading carefully the little tract on the "Evils of the Ball room Question." It will cost but ten cents post paid. Send to the author L. S. Bronson, Niles, Mich.

Syriac New Testament.

A new edition of Murdock's Translation of the Syriac New Testament has just been issued by a Boston publishing house, and we have arranged to supply our readers with the work. The regular price is $2.50, and every Bible student should own this book. It is bound in half leather, and lies open in the hand when being used. The printing is clear and plain, and the paper excellent. We have so arranged with the publishers that we can supply this book for a limited time only at a reduced price, which will enable all who wish this valuable aid to the study of God's Word to possess it. We can offer it now at $2.00 post paid. All who wish to avail themselves of this low rate should do so at once.

NOTICE.

Information wanted concerning an Evangelist known as Blind Haynes, who traveled some years ago in Kansas, selling a pamphlet written by himself, entitled "When will Christ come?" Is he living? If so, where? Who has a copy of his book to sell, or loan for a short time? What firm published his book? Information will be thankfully received, and it is of importance.

Address, E. P. Woodward, Westbrook, Maine.

Account Giving.

There is certainly a great day of accounts coming, when our Lord will reward every one according as her or his work has been.

The great concern of each one should be, What have I done upon which to expect reward? If you should judge yourself, what would your judgment be?

Our talents differ, and each one will be held accountable for the use of such talent, whatever that may be. If you have only one, use that.

Some one says, what can I do? Why you can circulate literature teaching the truth if nothing else. There is no one but who can do that. Will that do any good? Oh, yes. Let me tell you something. Some people have bought several copies of "Pine Woods Bible Class" and lending them to their friends and neighbors. It being easy and attractive reading, most people will read it. It is bearing fruit already. I have just been told of a man who had become discouraged. He had listened to preachers of different denominations, and found they contradicted each other. He began to drift into infidelity, when a Brother put a copy of Pine Woods Bible Class into his hands. Now in place of infidelity, he is rejoicing in new found light. It would take too much space to tell of other cases. Try this work, and add some stars to your crown.

The Students Text Book is already an assured success, and will be printed after I get home from this present trip.

I desire that all who want it, to send in their names in advance, that I may know how many to print. All you order now, you will be sure to get when printed. The price will be fifty cents.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to tell you can fool bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is: "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her unfailing efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Your loving brother.

If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship," "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Poetry.

The Single Head of Wheat.

All my daily tasks were ended,
And the hush of night had come,
Bringing rest to weary spirits,
Calling many wanderers home.

"He that goeth forth with weeping,
Bearing golden grains of wheat,
Shall return again rejoicing,
Laden with the harvest sweet."

This I read, and deeply pondered—
What of seed my hand had sown?—
What of harvest I was reaping
To be laid before the throne?

While my thoughts were swiftly glancing,
O'er the path my feet had trod;
Sleep sealed up my weary eye-lids,
And a vision came from God.

In the world's great field of labor
All the reapers' tasks were done;
Each one hastened to the master
With the sheaves that he had won.

Some with sheaves so poor and scanty,
Sadly told the number o'er,
Others staggered 'neath the burden
Of the golden grain they bore.

Gladly then the pearly gateway
Opened wide and let them in,
As they sought the Master's presence
With their burdens rich and thin.

Slowly, sadly with the reapers
Who had labored long and late,
Came I at the Master's bidding
And was latest at the gate.

Then apart from all the others
Weeping bitterly I stood;
I had toiled from early morning
Working for the others' good.

When one friend had fallen fainting
By his piles of golden grain;
With a glass of cooling water
I revived his strength again.

And another, worn and weary,
I had aided for a-while,
Till her fainting strength returning—
She went onward with a smile.

Thus the others I had aided
While the golden moments fled;
Till the day was spent, and evening
O'er the earth her dew-drops shed.

And I to the Master's presence
Came with weary toil-worn feet,
Bringing as my gathered harvest
But a single head of wheat.

So with tearful eyes I watched them
As with faces glad and bright
One by one they laid their burdens—
Down before the Throne of Light.

Oh! how sweetly then the blessing
Sounded to the listening ear—
"Nobly done, my faithful servants
Rest, now, in your mansion here."

Then I thought with keenest sorrow
"Words like these are not for me;
Only those with heavy burdens
Heavenly rest and blessings see.

Yet I love the Master truly
And I've labored hard since dawn,
But I have no heavy burden;
Will he bid me to be gone?

While I questioned thus in sadness,
Christ the Master called for me,
And I knelt before him, saying,
"I have only this for thee."

"I have labored hard, oh, Master,
I have toiled from morn till night,
But I sought to aid my neighbors,
And to make their labor light.

"So the day has passed unnoticed
And tonight with shame I come,
Bringing as my gathered harvest,
But a single wheat-head home."

Then I laid it down with weeping,
At his blessed, pierced feet,
And he smiled upon my trembling,
Oh, his smile was passing sweet!

"Child, it is enough," he answered;
"All I ask for, thou hast brought;
And, among the band of reapers,
Truly, bravely, thou hast wrought.

"This was thine appointed mission
Well hast thou fulfilled the task;
Have no fear that I will chide thee—
This is all that I could ask."

Then I woke, but long the vision
In my heart I pondered o'er,
While I tried to see what meaning
Hidden in the depths it bore.

And at length this lesson slowly
Dawned upon my wondering mind;
Never mind what others gather
Do whate'er thy hand can find.

If it is thy lotted mission
Thus to serve the reaper band;
And the evening find thee weary—
With an empty sheafless hand—

Let thy heart be never troubled,
Faithfully fulfill thy task;
Tremble not before the Master,
Many sheaves he will not ask.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LVI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPTEMBER 11, 1907. NUMBER 34.

Communicated.

Pine Woods Bible Class.

Teacher Sometime since we had a lesson entitled:

CIRCUMCISION—ITS DESIGN AND IMPORTANCE.

We will, at this time, continue that study. The lesson for to-night is one of the most important topics that we can study. It follows our last lesson as the next step in advance.

Q. Was the circumcision of the flesh under the law considered essential?

A. Most assuredly. See Gen xvii 13, 14: Must needs be circumcised: and my covenant shall be in your flesh for an everlasting covenant.

Q. Well, suppose a man should have refused to be circumcised, how would such refusal affect him, and his relationship to the covenant?

A. See verse 14. He shall be cut off from his people; he hath broken my covenant.

Q. How could a Gentile become a naturalized citizen in the Commonwealth of Israel, under the law?

A. He must be circumcised.

Q. What was the law?

A. "A shadow of good things to come." Heb x 1.

Q. Well, did the circumcision of the flesh, point to a circumcision of a higher type?

A. Yes, sir; the Circumcision of Christ. See Col ii: 11, 12. In whom ye are circumcised with a circumcision not made with hands, in the putting off of the body of the flesh, (symbolically) in the circumcision of Christ; (which consists in) having been buried with him in baptism—Rev. Trans.

Q. Wherein does the Revised Version differ from the Common, as far as the translation of this text is concerned?

A. It omits the words, "sins of the."

Q. Why does it omit those words?

A. Because they are not found in the ancient manuscripts.

Q. What does the word circumcision signify?

A. Literally a "cutting off."

Q. In this text what was "cut off?"

A. "The body of flesh."

Q. What is "the body of flesh?"

A. "The body of death." Says Paul, (Rom vii 24): "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver (cut) me from the body, death?"

Q. Paul further said, "there is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body." What is the "natural body?"

A. "The body of flesh."

Q. When is the "spiritual body" received?

A. After "the body of flesh" is "cut off."

Q. Who will receive the "spiritual body" after the "natural body" has been "cut off," or ceased to exist?

A. Those who symbolically and in a moral sense, cease to be any longer "in the flesh," "the body of flesh" having been "cut off." See Rom viii 8, 9. So then they that are in the flesh cannot please God.

Q. Can any one be acceptable in God's sight, who does not take the requisite steps so necessary, in order to "cut off" "the flesh?"

A. No, sir.

Q. When is a person said to be "not in the flesh?"

A. See Rom viii 8, 9: But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be the Spirit of God dwell in you.

Q. Do "Gentiles in the flesh," have the Life-giving "Spirit of God" in them?"

A. Certainly not.

Q. Why not?

A. Because as we have already seen, "they that are in the flesh, cannot please God." All who remain "in the flesh," are very far from being right with God.

Q. Please give a Bible example as to who were in the flesh?

A. See Eph ii 11, 12: Wherefore remember, that ye being in time past Gentiles in the flesh'.....that at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the Commonwealth of Israel, and Strangers from the Covenants of promise, having No Hope, and without God in the world. This passage informs us plainly as to who were "in the flesh." He has before told us that "they that are in the flesh cannot please God," and has judged them as being destitute of "God" and "Christ," and hence of necessity, "have no Hope." All must "remain in the flesh," until "cut off" from the flesh, by "the circumcision of Christ."

Q. Is circumcision an Israelitish rite?

A. It is.

Q. How could a Gentile ever get cut off his relationship with "Gentiles in the flesh."

A. Only by the rite of circumcision.

Q. Is "the circumcision of Christ," a Gentile rite?

A. By no means. It is the only way a "Gentile in the flesh," can "cut off" his fleshly relationship with the Gentiles, and enter the Commonwealth of Israel," as a "fellow-citizen."

Lazarus, (the Gentile) was carried by angels into "Abraham's bosom;" became a son, a naturalized Israelite, a "fellow-citizen." "Thou (the Gentile) being a wild olive tree, wert grafted in among them, and with them partakest of the root and fatness of the olive tree."

Q. Is it an essential requisite that we should become the offspring of Abraham, by and through the "Circumcision of Christ," prior to becoming heirs to the good things offered in the "Covenants of Promise?"

A. Most assuredly. See Col ii 11, 12: By your union with him you received circumcision, but not a circumcision performed by hands. It was the getting rid of the tyranny of the Earthly Body; it was circumcision by the Christ. For in baptism ye were buried with Christ; and in baptism ye were also raised to Life with him, through your faith in the working of the power of God, who raised him from the dead. And to you who once were dead, by reason of your uncircumcised nature—to you God gave Life in giving life to Christ! He pardoned all our sins! He cancelled the bond—20th Cent. Trans.

Q. Can we in that way become Abrahaam's offspring, and as a consequence, heirs?

A. Yes, sir; see Gal ii 27-29: For all of you who were baptized into union with Christ clothed yourselves with Christ. All distinctions between Jew and Greek, slave and free man, male and female, have vanished; for in union with Christ Jesus you are all one. And since you belong to Christ, it follows that you are Abraham's offspring, and, under the promise, sharers in the inheritance.—20th Century Trans.

Q. Was the Tabernacle, the Sanctuary, etc., typical of a more perfect Sanctuary, etc.

A. It was. See Heb ix 7-10: Into the outer part priests were constantly going, in the discharge of their sacred duties; but into the inner one only the high priest went, and that but once a year, never without taking the blood of a victim, which he offered on his own behalf, and on behalf of the errors of the people. What the holy Spirit was teaching was this—that the way into the Sanctuary was hidden, as long as the outer part of the Tabernacle was standing. For it served as a type, pointing to the present time.—20th Cent. Trans.

Q. Could any person as a priest, enter behind the curtain into the Sanctuary, or Holy Place, unless he had first been circumcised, and washed in the laver?

A. Such a thing was not permissible.

Q. Now if all this is a "type pointing to the present time," please point out the anti-typical priesthood.

A. See 1 Peter ii 5-9: Build yourselves up to form a Spiritual House for a consecrated Priesthood, for the offering of spiritual sacrifices that will be acceptable unto God through Jesus Christ.....You, however, are a chosen race, a Royal Priesthood, a consecrated nation, God's own people, (washed in the laver) entrusted with the proclamation of the goodness of him who called you out of Darkness into his wonderful Light. Once you were not a people at all, (when Gentiles in the flesh) but now you are God's People; once you had found no mercy, now you have found mercy. 20th Cent. Trans.

Q. Under the antitype, can any one enter the Sanctuary through the curtain, unless his body has been washed in the cleansing laver?

A. No, sir; no more than he could under the type. See Heb x 19: Since then, Brethren, we may enter the Sanctuary with confidence, in virtue of the sacrifice of Jesus, by the way which he inaugurated for us—a new and living way, a way through the Sanctuary-curtain (by which I mean his human nature); and since we have in him a Great Priest set over the House of God, let us draw near to God in all sincerity of heart and in perfect confidence, with our hearts purified by the sprinkled blood from all consciousness of wrong, and with our bodies washed with pure water. (Anti-typical laver.) 20th Cent. Tr.

Q. Under the type was it permissible for a priest to invite an unwashed Gentile in the flesh, to enter the court, and pass behind the curtain, and assist the priesthood in accomplishing God's service.

A. I am not sure but what it would have been an unpardonable offence.

Q. How is it then, would any one of the anti-typical priesthood be guiltless in the sight of God, should he as a matter of expediency, invite unwashed Gentiles in the flesh to enter the Sanctuary behind the curtain, when the Royal [illegible] God are met in solemn assembly to accomplish the service of the [illegible] the sacred emblems of the [illegible] blood of the Lord, in their mi[illegible]

A. It would be [illegible] very serious offence, even more so, than under the type; it would be an impious desecration of the Body and Blood of the Lord. The emblems represent the body and blood as literally as the Holy Shekinah in the Most Holy Place, represented the Divine Presence. See 1 Cor xi 28-29: Jesus, the Master, on the very night of his betrayal, took some bread, and after thanking God, broke it in pieces, saying as he did so, This is my Body given on your behalf. Do this in memory of me. And in the same way with the cup, when the supper was finished, saying This cup is the new Covenant made by my Blood. Do this whenever you drink it, in memory of me. For whenever you eat this bread and drink the cup, you proclaim the Master's death—till he comes. Therefore, whoever in an unworthy spirit eats the bread or drinks the Master's cup, will have to answer for an offence against the Master's Body and Blood.—20th Cent. Trans.

Oh how we would shrink from having to "answer for an offence against the Master's Body and Blood!" It would surely be a fearful offence! Can we be held guiltless, if we should invite a "Gentile in the flesh," (who has never received the Circumcision of Christ,") into the Sanctuary, where the "Royal Priesthood" are assembled, to accomplish the sacred Sacrifice of the Communion, as a communicant with the priesthood, seeing that the defilement of sin still attaches to such an uncircumcised Gentile. Would it not be a grevious "offence against the Master's Body and Blood?" Could the one bringing about such a defilement be held guiltless?

Q. Do the Scriptures insist that those who are of the Faith, should separate themselves, from any fraternal union with those who are not of the Faith?

A. Yes, sir; it surely does. See 2 Cor vi 14-16: Do not get ally yourselves with those who reject the Faith. For what partnership can there be between righteousness and lawlessness? or what is there in common between light and darkness? What harmony is there between Christ and Belial? or how can those who accept the Faith have any share with those who reject it? 20th Cent. Trans.

Q. Is not the last question suggestive?

A. It certainly is. There can be no possible basis for a union between those who "accept the faith," and and those "who reject it."

The faith and aspirations of those who make God a liar, is as distinct as light is from darkness. What possible fellowship can exist between them?

Teacher. The time has arrived to conclude our lesson for to-night. It is certainly one of the most important that mortal man can consider, and I fear the least understood.

This lesson will appear in the Student's Text Book which is now being printed.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

Sunday School Lesson.

LESSON FOR SUNDAY SEPTEMBER 22.
THE DEATH OF MOSES. DEUT. XXXIV. 1-12.

Golden Text. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." Psa. cxvi. 15.

In the last lesson the Israelites had reached the end of their wanderings, and were about to enter the land of Canaan. Moses was trying to impress upon them their great responsibility to God. What they ought to do for all his loving kindness to them, and what more he would do for them if they would keep all his commandments, statutes and judgments. Also what troubles would come upon them if they failed to keep their part of the covenant—agreement, Exod. xix. 8. These commandments, statutes and judgments run through the first thirty chapters of Deuteronomy.

"The Lord said to Moses, Behold, thy days approach that thou must die." Deut. xxxi. 14.

"Behold, thou shalt sleep with thy fathers." Deut. xxxi. 16.

In Deuteronomy, chapters, 32 and 33, there is the remarkable prophetic song of Moses, covering the thousands of years from that time, to the restoration of the kingdom to Israel. Ezekiel, chapters 37 and 38.

The Lord said to Moses.....get up into Mount Nebo.....and behold the Land of Canaan.....and die in the Mount.....because ye sanctified me not in the midst of the children of Israel. Deut. xxxii. 48-51.

We see that Moses had plenty and sufficient warning of his death, and the reason why he should die then, and not be permitted to enter the land of Canaan.

There is no word of complaint from Moses. He accepted these statements from the Lord, as he had all other commands and charges.

LESSON TEXT.

1. The Plains of Moab were north of the Dead Sea, and east of the river Jordan. So was Mount Nebo and Pisgah. Jericho on the west of Jordan. The Lord showed Moses what was afterwards the land of Gilead unto Dan. Gilead was on the east side of Jordan, afterwards occupied by the tribes of Reuben, Gad, and half of Manasseh. Joshua i. 12-15; xiii. 7, 8.

2. Naphtali was on the west of Jordan, north of the Sea of Galilee. Ephraim was near the middle of the land. The other half of Manasseh just north of Ephraim. Judah had the district of Jerusalem from sea to sea. The utmost Sea, the Mediterranean to the dead Sea.

3. Jericho was famed for its magnificent palm trees. Zoar—perhaps the city that was spared for Lot's sake. Gen. xix. 20-23.

4. This is the land. The covenant is found in Gen. xv. 18-21. This covenant is overlooked by many people, and some even scorn the promise. The twelve tribes lived in the land for a time. Abraham lived in it for a time. Stephen explains the matter. Acts vii. 1-5. The prophets all delighted in the covenant. Ezekiel speaks plainly, chapters 37 and 48. Now if God's covenants can be broken. Jer. xxxiii. 19-26.

5. Moses died there. There has been much argument and much written about the death of Moses. Many say he could not have died because he was seen on the mountain transfigured, Matt. xvii. 1-3. But in verse 9, Jesus explains that it was a vision—not real. We are told twice in this lesson that he died. A few words from God makes the wisdom of men foolishness. 1 Cor. i. 20.

6. Moses died on a mountain, was buried in a valley.

7. Old in years. Young in strength.

8. For the sake of all, public or national mourning is limited.

9. Moses—like the apostles—could convey, or transfer a portion of the Holy Spirit power. Joshua could not—nor the disciples.

10, 11, 12. Moses had no real successor. Jesus was like him but greater. Heb. iii. 1-6. Some have made light of Moses writing an account of his own death. We need not trouble about whether he did or not, but it was just as easy for him to do it as it was for him to foretell other great events.

Next Lesson, Review.

P. NEILL.

Obituary.

John C. Venable, of Bellefontaine, Ohio, died Monday morning, Aug. 26, 1907, aged 59.

To this effect his sister, E. V. Baker, Salem, Ohio, received a telegram, and requesting the attendance at the funeral of Brother and Sister Neill.

On the journey we had the company of Mr. Frank Barber and wife. Mr. Barber is a nephew of Sister Baker, and of Brother Venable.

We found the house of mourning, and that our Brother had a long and painful sickness, though confined to bed only a few days, during which his sufferings were intense.

He leaves a widow and one daughter, one brother and one sister, and a number of other relatives.

It is thought that our brother was baptized into Christ by Brother J. M. Stephenson, near Salem, Ohio, some thirty years ago, during which time he has walked in the truth. In his quiet way he taught the gospel and lived it, giving papers and tracts. Our Sister Leidaigh of Bellefontaine, was taught by him. We had the pleasure of resting her there.

That he had a good record among those without was proved by the many that attended his funeral. The ones who knew him best and longest, expressed themselves as truly sorry that they had lost a friend, and Bellefontaine an honest man.

As he had requested, and as we were asked by his widow, Sister Venable, wife and I spoke to the relatives, friends and neighbors, of his blessed hope. The simple, yet great truths were given very close attention by all within hearing. We believe he sleeps in Jesus

"Blessed sleep, from which none ever wake to weep."

He was laid in the Bellefontaine cemetery to await the descent of the Lord from heaven.

Personally I have known Brother John Venable some five years. He has visited in Salem, and I have been at his home several times, and desire to say that few men indeed have more deeply impressed me with their sincerity of belief and purpose, than he. He rejoiced to speak of his blessed hope, and had a yearning desire for the salvation of those dear to him. Let us strive to meet him in the kingdom.

P. NEILL.

Ora Flint was born July 5, 1885, and fell asleep Aug. 19th, 1907, at his mother's home in Warren Co. Ind. For the last five years he has known he had consumption. Every thing was done for him that love could do, but to no avail. The disease continued its horrible work until the last, and he fell asleep as one lying down to rest from labor. His widowed mother is left with four other children, all grown, but two of them quite sick at this writing.

During a series of meetings held at Pleasant View church in Oct. 1903, Ora confessed his sins and Oct. 25th was baptized into the all-saving name proving faithful to the last.

Sister Flint has the sympathy of the entire community. She is such a faithful mother and Christian. We know the everlasting arms will be her support.

Brother George Neill spoke to the afflicted family words of comfort at the funeral.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

The Restitution.

A. R. UNDERWOOD.

Plymouth, Indiana, Sept. 11, 1907.

Brother, if you have not yet renewed your subscription to The Restitution for this year, will you please do so now? We thank you for the favor.

Sister Woodward was with the Plymouth Church again last Sunday, and gave us two excellent discourses. She is to be here again the 4th Sunday in this month. Let all take notice of this.

The Jewish New Year, 5,668, was celebrated by the Orthodox Jews beginning last Sunday at sunset. This is according to the Hebrew counting from creation. In Orthodox Synagogues services were held on Saturday as usual, and continued over the two sucessive days. It is the custom to celebrate over the two days, as in olden times signals were given by beacon lights, and frequently rains extinguished the fire, and so the custom was established of continuing the services two days, and the practice is kept up by the Orthodox Jews, while the Progressives observe but the one day, or Monday.

The Plymouth Church had the pleasure of a visit from Brother R. G. Huggins, of Oregon, Ill. a week ago, and a good audience considering the short notice given, assembled to hear him preach. He presented his subject in a clear and poluted manner, showing a wide scholarship and full acquaintance with the matter in hand. It was the unanimous expression that at some future time Brother Huggins repeat the visit, when we can have more time to give better notice, so that all may hear him. He is engaged for another year by the Illinois Conference, but we trust he may be induced to visit our State again ere long.

The Bible School Association that convened at Indian Lake have gotten out a report of their work which will be supplied to all who can be reached. Only a few were able to attend," but so far as possible the work as outlined was carried out. A board of five was elected to carry on the work for the future, and relieve Sister Boise of the burden of it all. This board organized by making F. L. Austin, President, L. E. Conner, Vice Pres. L. A. Boice, Recording Sec. T. A. Ivey, Corresponding Sec. J. L. Wince, Treasurer. Sister Boice is continued as Superintendent of the Home Department work, under the direction of the Board of Managers. It is to be hoped that this work, started under so many difficulties, will get new life from the men now in charge, and that good will result from their labors.

The Bereans Column.

Dear Bereans:

I shall say to all of the dear ones with whom I met for the first time, that I am stronger than ever in the truth of the "Gospel of the Kingdom," since I attended Conference. The meeting throughout was a decided success, and certainly one to be remembered.

It was indeed good to be there and hear those good sermons. I came home spiritually refreshed and built up, and with the determination to be faithful in the service of the Master until he comes. I believe that many were made stronger by being able to attend the meetings.

Dear Bereans let us endeavor to carry out in our lives, each day, the many good things we have learned. In John xv 10, we read: "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments and abide in his love." In order to know the Lord's commandments, and keep them ever fresh in our mind, we ought to read the Scriptures often. It should be a daily habit with us. Many times we step aside discouraged and almost heart-broken, but a few words from the blessed Bible encourages us to press onward and run with patience the race that is set before us.

In John ii we read: "For as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also."

Faith is good. "It is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." "Without faith it is impossible to please God." "He that cometh to God must believe that He is a rewarder of them that diligently seek Him". Heb xi 1, 6.

Hope likewise hath its appointed place in the divine economy. When our hope or desire cometh, it is a tree of life. Hope may be strong, faith may be strong, but unless they are accompanied by something more, unless they are dominated by charity, we shall become stripped, we shall sooner or later become unclothed; the earthly house of our tabernacle will be dissolved. Charity is love in its truest essence.

Charity speaks the truth, but speaks it in love, not for the purpose of finding fault, but in order to restore and build up. Charity hates sin, but loves the sinner. It will cause us to clothe our enemies, not by heaping upon them fresh means, whereby they may be helped to persecute the truth further, but by giving them that which they stand most in need of; that is by telling them the truth, telling them their faults in love that they may turn from that which has made them an enemy.

Neither weights nor measures are able to contain charity. It seeketh not how little it can do, but is full of good works. It seeth invisible things, and proveth all things. It shineth in dark places. Lies and wickedness are not able to stand before it: it establisheth righteousness where it listeth.

Charity conquers the flesh and keepeth the commandments of God.

Kathryn Townsend.

Dear Bereans:

My mind and prayer has been with you as you are assembled together to receive instruction and study of Him whose example we should all strive to follow. I sincerely trust if there is any among you who has not decided what to do; will do so at this time for no one has time in his own hands.

We are here today and gone tomorrow. Today is the exceptable time of the Lord, seek Him while He may be found. We are to walk in the light as He is in the light, and if we walk in His light we must follow His commands as we find them in His word, for His word is our light.

It is a pure word, why not accept it? In all thy ways acknowledge Him, and He shall direct thy paths.

Let us pray as David did, "Teach us thy statutes, make us to understand thy ways and precepts." What is the meaning of the word, precepts?

A rule authoritively given.

What is Christ's rule?

He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved. Peter said in his Sermon, "Repent and be baptized in the name of Christ for remission of sins." What was the result? They that gladly received his word were baptized. Let this Bible school and Conference where there is so much good said and thought spring up as a light to as many as will receive it, that God may be glorified, and that the hearts of those who have spent so much time and labor for it may be made glad.

Submitted in love by your Co-worker.

Selma Samuels.

Dear Bereans:

It has been some time since you heard from isolated Bereans of Okla. Your faithful efforts and kind remembrances toward us, renew our love and interest. Making us realize we are somewhat slack in our work. Which if properly studied and the Berean motto observed. Could not fail to benefit each and everyone. We are not situated so as to have regular meetings, hence I have kept no report; most of our study is individual study or quest in our home circle.

Having now received the new Lesson books, each one seemed to appreciate their book, and have promised, if possible, to renew their study more attentively during the coming year.

Sunday, August eleventh, we had our first lesson in the new Book. Only four were present, but I mean to keep a written report of our work this year, though it be ever so little.

Mrs. Barbara Leamon, whose name I sent in last year, is well pleased with the work and says she means to continue to study. She made mention that Scripture that she used to read has a diffent meaning altogether now. I can't see why she couldn't see things then as now.

That is the great trouble here our doctrine is new and so different than the common teaching; that it is hard to get people to take part in class work. They have their Sunday School, and the Quarterlies are their Bibles. There are three baptized believers here. In March, Brother W. H. Wilson visited us, owing to the lack interest and the season of the year, the attendance was small. This was his third trip here to stop at this place. I think he was somewhat disappointed in the interest here, for which we deeply regret.

On the first Sunday in July, Bro. John Foore of Parsons, Kansas, came and staid over two Sundays, delivered twelve discourses in all, but attendance was small, those that came seemed interested.

Distance forbids me attending your Conference, nothing would give me greater pleasure. I shall think of you all, and pray that your coming together may build up the cause. That the world may think we are an earnest sincere people, believing the doctrine we teach, thanking you for the books and all literature sent us, remember the isolated ones in their weakness.

Your Sister,
Mrs. Mettie Chandler.

Editor Restitution:

I visited the City of Chicago a few days ago for the first time and was much impressed with its frantic activity.

There are trains overhead rumbling and roaring, street cars beside one jostling and bumping, and trucks, and carts, and carriages, and automobiles all around one, rattling and noisily hurrying, until one is so confused he does'nt know which way to run. He looks up against an immense stone building, tremendous in its proportion, and ugly in its perfect of fuec appearance. He closes his eyes and into his minds eye comes a vision. He sees the summit of a western mountain bathed in the soft rays of the setting sun and wrapped in a mantle of green trees, the verdure of which never fades neither winter nor summer. A horse-back rider ascends the slope and stopping on the very top looks out over the boundless expanse of hills and mountains and the valleys between, filled with grassy meadows of a lighter shade. He sees the golden rays of the descending sun play hide-and-seek amongst the green hills as their beautiful tints mingle with the rich color of the evergreen like a chain of gold among the tresses of my lady [redacted].

As for us [redacted] we through the clear, [redacted] there is no habitation, [redacted] can the work of man be seen, [redacted] single tree is scarred by the woodman's axe; but away off there to the north with the shadows slowly creeping up the side, as if some tender hand were regretfully drawing a curtain over it to hide it from view, is a snow-covered peak,—yea, many of them are still farther beyond. Some of them are a patchbion where the sunlight does not touch them, others are a delicate pink and sparkle with myriads of diamonds, and others are as pure a white as if they had been tenderly brought down from God's throne.

As the rider looks out across the ponderous mountains towering toward the blue sky as if they would call all the world to wonder,—and across the worshiping hills which seem to adore the hand that formed them, down to the peaceful valleys with their silvery waters, all so still, so impressively quiet, he communes with his God, who, with his all-powerful will made the majestic mountains and the tiny pine-needle quivering in the breeze. He rules that brilliant orb now sinking among the trees, yet does not forget the little ant busily doing the work which has been given it. How supremely great is the Maker of all this.

The dreamer opens his eyes and again sees the cars and wagons, and dirty streets, and men running everywhere. Man, who is the Maker of this,—and hit thou that sayest, "There is no God." Oh worm of the dust! Why do you say, "Where is my Creator that I may know Him?" Does his splendor so blind your eyes that you cannot see? Does his voice so deafen your ears that you cannot hear? Does the thrill of his being so benumb your nerves that you cannot feel? All hail to nature—the wonderfully, beautiful voice of God, our Creator!

"Present your bodies a living sacrifice to God" (Rom. xii. 1.) A great deal of our consecration is very acceptable to church officials and church boards, but not to God.—J. R. Boynton.

I am sick of that old lie—it's a hard thing to be a Christian. Why, you never read it in the Bible. It's a hard thing to be a sinner. The Bible says it's the way of the transgressor that's hard. Prov. xiii. 15.—W. A. Burch.

Take Time to Pray.

We are living in a time when things move rapidly. Many are running to and fro, and knowledge has greatly "increased." Constantly, we hear the remark: "Don't detain me, I am in a great hurry, I don't see how I am going to get through." And yet, with all the rush and excitement of the age, it is really astonishing how much people can find time to do. Time to plant, time to build, time to buy, time to sell, time to mow, and time to reap; time for business, time for amusement, time to read, write, sew, cook, and in a word, time for everything but one thing, viz., time to pray. If one wants to pray in a manner that will get the ear of the Most High—move the Almighty, and obtain the needed help—he will never find the time to make such a supplication; he must take it, even at the expense of a great sacrifice. How much would any one pray, if he waited to find time to pray? What kind of a prayer would he offer? What would be his condition spiritually?

Nothing is so recuperating to the weak Christian, nothing so necessary to ward off the attacks of the enemy, nothing that will give such constant victory, as constant prayer. In order to have times of refreshing from God—sweet seasons of special help, and power over the foe, we must put forth a special effort at the throne of grace.

We can not find time to pray, we must take time. Our present and eternal salvation depend largely on our taking time to pray. It would be just as reasonable to think of living without eating as to live a Christian life without prayer.

God forbid that I should encourage negligence in the ordinary things of life, but if we have to neglect our external interests in order to make our temporal affairs run smoothly, some day we may be "weighed in the balance and found wanting." Jesus had to deprive Himself of sleep in order that He might have time to pray.—M. Mackadren.

Coming Realities.

The Bible deals with facts and realities. Even faith is declared to be "the substance of things hoped for." The Bible hope is real and tangible; it rests on promises which cannot be broken. The Scriptures speak of God as a self-existent, all-wise Being. Christ was not a myth. The creation of man is a fact. Paradise, with the tree of life and its rivers, was a reality. The earth and sky really exist. Life and death are realities. Indeed, the whole creation is literal. The world of the future will be as real. Christ on his throne will be as real as Christ on the cross. His glory will be as literal as his suffering. His kingdom will be tangible.

Abraham looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God. He was called to "go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance." Job declared that in his flesh he should "see God." David's flesh is resting in hope, and he is to be satisfied when he awakes in the likeness of Christ. Isaiah sings: "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise," and that "the earth shall cast out the dead." Hosea prophecies that God will swallow up death in victory." Daniel says those that "sleep in the dust shall awake." Our Lord promises twelve thrones to his twelve apostles, and declares that the "meek shall inherit the earth." Paul looked for a crown. John's hope was to see Christ and "be like him." Peter was waiting for his crown "when the Chief Shepherd should appear." The broken hearted and weeping church at Thessalonica, were assured that the Lord himself should descend from heaven, and those who sleep in Christ should then arise.

There are no myths about the coming life. To be like Christ, equal unto the angels, to die no more, to inherit the kingdom, to live in God's city, to behold life's river, to see Abraham and all the prophets, to know each other and have part in the first resurrection, are not mere figures of speech—they are to be living realities.

The new earth will be as real as the old. But sin shall not mar it, death shall be unknown, sorrow and weeping come not there. Names that have become dear in life's pilgrimage, shall shine in brightness on the gates of the city, and be written on the foundation stones of topaz and emerald. Paradise, the tree of life, the river and the throne, are among the realities of God's Word.

Our hope deals not in mere fancies of the imagination. It embraces the glories of a world made new, will cheer us during life's toils, and be our stay when the cold shadows of death stretch across our path. Having, then a hope based upon such promises, and reaching forward over the valley of death to that world of life and immortality, let us be diligent that we may be placed at the right hand of the King, where there are joys and pleasures forevermore.

All for Christ.

Do we realize as we should what is implied in giving up all for Christ? It cannot mean less than an entire surrender of self, and a complete dedication of the whole heart to the work of his love. There can be no half way work in his service. Christ must be all to us. His service must be complete. He rules as King or not at all. Men converted to his standard must do more than merely believe. Faith is essential, but it should be an ever living, active, working faith. It calls for sacrifice, both of time and means. It calls upon us to bear the burdens incident to the new life begun in us, and which we are bound to reveal to others. There are crosses to be borne, sacrifices to be made, and burdens to be shared in working out the great problems of the gospel of Christ. The demands are not only on our moral nature but upon our energy. We must make the work our business, as well as our profession. Religion is not a mere garment, to be put on and off; it becomes a part of us. Christ must dwell in us richly. We are not to lose our identity or individuality, but the new manhood is to be stamped with his likeness. The ownership becomes mutual; Christ is ours, we are Christ's; and the labor, the suffering, and the glory become mutual also. Did he become subject to the Father, and make a full surrender of his will to that of the Father? Then we also must reach that point in the new life, where we can say: "Nevertheless thy will and not mine be done." "He that taketh hold of the plow and looketh back is not fit for the kingdom of God." We cannot retreat. The motto is: "Push on in victory." We give all to Christ!

Love's Forgetfulness.

Memory may be love's worst foe. Forgetting is often love's highest duty. And whatever is a duty is possible. We can forget, when we ought to. We ought to forget everything that interferes with love. Yet how often we hear it said, "I have forgiven that long ago, but I can never forget it!" Such a one does not know the first meaning of forgiveness, and does not want to love—unreservedly. Forgiveness that does not forget comes perilously near being hatred. If we are cherishing memories of wrongdoings of any of our fellows, let us ask God's forgiveness. For he will "blot out all mine iniquities," even the sin of memory, if we will honestly seek his loving power to forget.

Danger of Indulgence.

It is not necessary to sin in order to get a new start. The devil would like to have us think it is. Sin looks so attractive beforehand, and so repulsive afterward, that it sometimes seems as though our only hope for seeing sin in its true light, and thereby turning from it, is to pass through it and taste its bitterness. But to yield is only to make the fight for all life-time harder. Every yielding lessens our chance of permanent victory, and increases the chance of eternal ruin. "After this once, you can turn from it forever," is the lying assurance of the Father of Lies. "Do it this once, and I'll have you forever," is his real hope.

Idleness is contrary to the will of God. Men are created with a disposition to do something in the world; and if they are not engaged in the serving of God they will be serving the wicked one. God has a work to do for every one. The father in the gospel said to his son, "Go work to day in my vineyard." The great Father above gives the same command to every man today.

Said a member of a church to another member: "I can give five dollars for this object and not feel it." "Then," said his companion, "give ten and feel it. Did not the Savior feel what he did for you?"

Value no man for his opinion, but esteem him according as his life corresponds with the rules of piety and justice; a man's actions, not his conjectures render him valuable.

Obituary.

Clifford Reed Garton was born in Lafayette Co., Wis., and died near Kingston, Ark., Aug. 19, 1907 of Typhoid fever at the age of 23 years, 6 months and 26 days. He was the only son of Brother and Sister Garton of Varina, Iowa. We laid his father to rest less than a year ago. He was baptized by Elder Whitesett when sixteen years of age, and has ever since lived a noble Christian life, an example of patience.

He was married to Irene Titus, Feb. 28, 1897. To this union was born two sons and four daughters. It is such a loss to lose one so young but we sorrow not as those that have no hope, for we have the glorious hope of meeting him in the morning of the first resurrection.

He leaves a wife, five little ones, his mother, five sisters and many other relatives to mourn his sad loss.

Brother Slaven spoke words of comfort, after which he was laid to rest awaiting the call of our Blessed Master.

We have received a new edition of the tract A Letter to a Friend, from Brother Woodruff, and we can supply them at five cents each postpaid. No tract ever issued by our people has done the good this has, and the pleasing and convincing style in which it is written makes it worth much as a medium for advancing the truth of the gospel. Get a number of them and give to friends. You never can tell how much good a few nickels will do used in this manner. Try it.

Poetry.

"Stand Up For Jesus."

Dying words of Dudley A. Tyng, to his father, Dr. S. H. Tyng.

"Stand up for Jesus!" Lol while shadows gather,
And o'er my pathway hangs death's deepening gloom,
Now from my dying lips, O dearest father,
Bear these my words, close by the silent tomb—
"Stand up for Jesus."

"Stand up for Jesus," amid earth's rude commotion,
Feeling comfort, joy and worldly ease—
Stand like the storm-washed Pharos by the ocean
Guiding the mariner to realms of peace.
"Stand up for Jesus."

"Stand up for Jesus," though his foes surround thee,
And seek to dim the lustre of his name;
Oh! let his light and love beam all around thee,
A pure, a radiant, and a quenchless flame.
"Stand up for Jesus."

"Stand up for Jesus." Lol from Pisgah's summit
I gaze afar, though with a dying glance;
I see Mount Zion and the hosts upon it,
And Jesus, smiling, bids me to advance.
"Stand up for Jesus."

"Stand up for Jesus." Now in death's dark river,
My weary head is sinking 'neath the wave;
But Christ stands by me—he shall soon deliver,
God shall redeem me from the silent grave.
"Stand up for Jesus."

"Stand up for Jesus." Lol the night is breaking,
And on the sky dawns the eternal day,—
Oh! then shall I, from death's brief slumber waking,
Behold thy face and never be torn away.
"Stand up for Jesus."

"Stand up for Jesus." Let the worldling pity
The cross we bear, the weary path we tread;
Soon shall we rest in yon celestial city,
And stand with Christ with crowns upon each head.
"Stand up for Jesus."

The Story of a Happy Christian Life.—No. 23.

In 1853, shortly after Auntie Willard's removal to Warsaw, a darling babe had been intrusted to her keeping. It was her second daughter. Her first child, born in Cincinnati, had been a little girl but had died, and Auntie Willard had longed for the love and companionship of a daughter of her own. Alice Johnson, her foster-child, was good and kind, and gave her a good measure of love, in return for the love that had given her a pleasant home and all its comforts, but there was something still lacking; there was not the same warm comradeship that there is, or ought to be, between a mother and her own girls.

The little one "grew fair and promising and was the pride of the household. Hers was the first kiss at her little brothers hurried from school, and the last before they left home in the morning." One day she entrusted for a few moments at dinner-time to the care of a young girl belonging to the household. She seemed hungry, and the girl, without asking Auntie Willard as to the age or quality of the milk on hand, fed her. It was sour, and brought on cholera-infantum—the disease that in hot weather is so fatal to young children.

When Auntie Willard "saw the deadly nature of the sickness she went to her heavenly Father and told them, with all her heart, if it was not for their good and the good of the child, and for his glory that it live, she did not ask it. If otherwise that he would in mercy spare its life, thus endeavoring to commit all to God. But he was not pleased to stay the disease and in a few days the child was dead. 'Have pity upon me, have pity on me, Oh, ye, my friends! for the hand of God hath touched me,' was the language of her heart as the little angelic form was attired in its white robe for the coffin bed."

She "was tempted" to think, had they done this or that, or if they had not done thus or so, she might have lived, so forgetful was she in her sorrow, of her prayer and trust. But her heavenly Father forgave her weakness, and gave her this view from His Word, when it was God's will to spare Moses; Pharaoh and all Egypt, could not kill him, on the other hand, when it pleased God that King David's child should die, David and all Israel could not keep him alive," so she "was given to see that the most simple means could have been blessed to the restoration of the child had it pleased the Lord," and this "comforted her bleeding heart," and she "could say, 'Thy will, not mine be done.'" "Jacob," she said, "had his 'sack of weeping' and his pillar upon Rachel's grave, but he could not tarry to weep there, but must journey on, so we in our pilgrimage to the heavenly Canaan leave the monuments of our grief in the way."

I remember this dear babe and how sorry we all felt for Auntie Willard when it died. She used to tell mother, that she almost envied her, in the possession of her affectionate daughters."

The winter of 1858-54, following that sorrowful summer, a Miss Hattie P. Hills, a young Baptist lady from Vermont, who had been teaching in Mrs. Cowan's Seminary in Warsaw, was called to take a position in the High School at Wolf Lake, Noble County, Indiana, in which a certain Mr. Moses Fay—a teacher of the highest order, was principal. Nelson Willard, Auntie Willard's oldest son and myself were sent there to school. I had remained a month, when I came home on a school vacation and Typhoid Fever having broken out in a malignant form in the little town where the school was, Father would not allow me to return, though the principal had said, "my tuition should not cost me a cent if I would come back," so pleased was he at my studious, quiet habits. Nelson, however, did go back, and took the fever. He had been sick a week, when a messenger came for his father.

On reaching the place, Brother Willard at once procured a large sleigh, wrapped up his son, placed him therein and drove home as rapidly as possible, the distance being 18 miles.

He was so weak when taken from the sleigh that "his head fell back, as if he were dead," and Auntie Willard supporting it, they carried him in and laid him down. Yet even in this time of trouble, coming so soon after the death of her daughter, she did not despair, but "hoping in God as her stronghold was ready to at once take up the duties of the hour.

Nelson had said when they brought him into the house, "O, mother, I am almost dead! A little farther would have finished me." But, as Auntie Willard continues the story, "This son had been savingly affected to grace as we hoped, when less than eight years of age, and had been baptized, together with a little friend (Albert Greenleaf) about the same age. He had been carefully instructed in Bible truth from a child and knew the Holy Scriptures which were able to make him wise unto salvation.

If the marks of grace did not keep pace with his developing years, when affliction came he knew where to turn for relief. The Bible and the God of his parents were now his only hope. With great earnestness he now requested that Brother Chaplin be sent for to anoint him in accordance with the injunction of James. (James v 14, 15.)

A signal blessing followed that first act of obedience. The first remission of the fever and a good night's rest ensued and we fondly hoped for a speedy recovery. But our faith was yet to be severely tested. He was very sick during the third week, and when the fever left him, he was as one dead, insomuch that his father saw no hope. But we administered restoratives and he revived and ultimately recovered. May it be for the glory of God."

Yet, notwithstanding the relapse, Nelson, to this day attributes his recovery to God who heard and answered his prayer.

Auntie's prayer now was, that the disease might not be suffered to go through the entire family as it often did it those early days, and in this she was heard, as only a slight fever of a few days rested upon the second son.

Thinking now about that meeting in Laporte County in connection with the sickness and death of Auntie Willard's little Elizabeth in 1858, calls to mind the fact that my father was very sick with Typhoid fever in the fall of that year,—so sick, that we despaired of his life,—and that mother was also ill, but not from the same disease.

When he began to get better the fever went to his left foot and it became so inflamed and swollen that we feared a fever-sore would be the result. Brother and Sister Willard often came to see him, and on one of these visits, Brother Willard inserted what is called "a seton" in the calf of the leg, above the affected foot, that the matter might be drawn out there and so the foot be saved from breaking. It was a painful operation, but it proved successful.

That foot and leg were however ever so strong thereafter as before. [illegible] and the amount raised for the Evangellist fund was sufficient for the support of two Evangellists for the coming year, with a large increase over the amount raised last year. Our people are coming gradually to expect large things and to receive them, for in these matters, as in most things in the affairs of life, it is a matter of "according to your faith, so be it unto you." We have great faith in the noble brethren of our State who are giving for the work of God, each year, and we believe that still greater things are possible in the future.

Sunday, the last of the session showed the largest attendance of any day previous, or of any former meeting, and it was a feast day all through, of the good things of God. In the morning at nine o'clock four dear ones were baptized into the name of Jesus. At 10:30 Bro. S. J. Lindsay gave an interesting discourse on "The Problem of Evil." This was followed by the sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

At 2:00 P. M. the Bereans held their special meeting led by Miss Mabel Eaton, Topic, "Practical Christianity." At the close of this service we listened to an excellent sermon by Bro. L. C. Conner.

A recess was taken at 4:00 P. M., and a social time was enjoyed until the evening service at 6:45, which was a social meeting led by Bro. Jas. Wilson, and appropriate to the time, short addresses were given by various brethren, full of kindly exhortations and excellent "last thoughts."

Following this came the final business and formal closing of the Conference, when we again listened to Bro. Conner in the closing sermon of the day.

The time for the "good byes" had come, and the sad thoughts came crowding as always at such times and yet, as some had suggested in the social meeting, an effort was made to keep down the sadness of regret at parting, with the thought of thankfulness that it had been ours to have even this little time of loving intercourse, and of coming "apart to rest awhile" from our various labors and cares, and to receive new refreshment, and such views of God's truth, as seemed to bring our Blessed Hope so very near, and to make it so real to us that we might strive with greater effort through our [illegible] of toil. And with this [illegible] giving, our Conference [illegible]—should our Lord [illegible].

Conference Report.

The Illinois Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus was held at Oregon, Ill., Aug. 21-25, and from the opening service to its close, was a meeting to be remembered as one of the best ever held at this place—the best in attendance, in strong presentation of truth, and in all the things that make such gatherings in our household of faith a success, and especially was there manifest that spirit of hearty Christian fellowship which caused even the stranger to feel that it was good to be there. Even nature was in her best mood, and gave us sunshine and cool breezes every day—in favor not always granted at such times.

Bro. J. M. Glotfelty, and his corps of assistants were untiring in their efforts in caring for the comfort of every one. Bro. Glotfelty is certainly a "host" in his management of affairs at Conference Hall.

The ministers who were with us and spoke at the different meetings were, Bros. L. C. Conner of Cleveland, Ohio; Geo. Noll, State Evangelist for Indiana; S. J. Lindsay, State Evangelist for Illinois; Jas. Wilson, of Chicago, and R. G. Huggins Asst. State Evangelist for Illinois.

Besides there were a number of representative members from churches of our body in distant States. Bro. and Sister Willey of Indiana being with us all through the session, adding much to the meeting by their generous encouragement and Christian zeal and fellowship. Also Sister Evelyn Unruh, of South Bend, Ind., and Sister Virginia Ritenour of Dilbeck, Virginia, and others were present.

It is indeed good to have these dear ones from other fields with us in our meetings. It gives a feeling of breadth, and that we are not toiling alone in our little corner, that others are fighting the same battles for the same glorious gospel, and in the doubling of prayers and of fellowship there is strength gained in so many ways for the long years' labor.

The Conference program was unusually good this year, each minister contributing his share, by way of sermons, and in all the various duties which fall to the lot of preachers at such times.

The question box was very interesting, in giving light upon many points of practical as well as of doctrinal interest, and was conducted in a spirit of Christian harmony and of honest investigation of truth. The social meetings by the Bereans each evening preceding the regular sermon were very good indeed, and show an increasing growth and earnestness among our young people.

At our business session on Saturday morning our State Evangelist in his report showed excellent work done in all parts of his field and in many new places visited. The statement showed an increase over last year in point of interest and attendance, in contributions to the work, and, greatest and best, in the number who put on Christ in baptism during the year.

Bro. R. G. Huggins, Asst. State Evangelist has been preaching at the local points of Dixon, Adeline, Lanark, Plum River, Antioch and Oregon, with visits to distant points at different times during the year, but work was done largely at the local churches, preaching, organizing Bible classes, and teaching in the homes. The reports of churches showed good interest and attendance in nearly every place, and altogether there is reason for much encouragement in the present outlook over the field.

The committee on finance reported a liberal response to their appeals, [illegible]

How to Understand the Revelation.

In the second chapter of Proverbs we find directions how to get wisdom, knowledge and understanding. "If thou seekest her as silver, and searchest for her as for hid treasures; then shalt thou understand the fear of the Lord, and find the knowledge of God." "For the Lord giveth wisdom; out of his mouth cometh knowledge and understanding." verses 4-6. Therefore strict attention to what is written is absolutely necessary in order to an understanding of the symbols, and voices of the grand and lofty book we call the Revelation. I notice that some writers make what I consider to be a fatal mistake, and one that puts them off the true track of a correct exegesis of the things revealed. I refer to chapter 1 and verse 10, "I was in the Spirit on the Lord's day." The position is taken that John by the term Lord's day has reference to the future day of the Lord; therefore what John had revealed to him is to take place in the future day of the Lord.

The following context to the term "Lord's day" proves to my mind conclusively that either the seventh day sabbath, or the first day of the week is the day John designates Lord's day. Now what did John see and hear on or in the Lord's day? "What thou seest write in a book, and send it to the seven churches which are in Asia." Now I ask is it not a fact that at the time of the vision, that the seven churches were then in Asia, and that it could not have any reference to the future Lord's day?

Again in verse 16 we read, "And he had in his right hand seven stars." And in verse 20 the seven stars are explained to be the angels of the seven churches, and that the seven candlesticks are the seven churches. Now I think we are held firmly to the conclusion that the vision had its counterpart then and could not have reference to any future day. The future theory of interpretation is very shaky and has no better foundation than apostolic succession, and must be corrected in the same way that a future [illegible] by the Roman church to ward off the claim by the reformers that the pope was the anti-christ; so in like manner those failing to discern the fulfillment of events predicted in the ages gone by place every thing in the future, passing by in silence the words, "For the time is at hand." verse 3. Things which must shortly come to pass. verse 1.

The object of this communication is to stir up investigation in order to a correct understanding of the things revealed. Now, Bro. Moyer and Bro. Busch, if I am wrong on this point no man will be more benefitted than myself, by being put right. I will receive correction without taking any offence.

Submitted in behalf of the truth.

Report of Bible School

The Bible School which convened at Oregon, Ill., August 12-21, 1907, proved to be the best ever held at that place. There was an enrollment of fifty-one, showing an attendance nearly double that of the first school, held five years ago.

Sixteen sessions were held and with such instructors as Bros. Lindsay and Huggins, those present could not help deriving benefit from the lessons. The lessons under the instructions of Brother Lindsay were designed to make us more ready to give reason for the hope that is within us, while those prepared by Brother Huggins were based upon the Holy Spirit. Sister Anna Drew had charge of the primary division of the school. That the lessons were productive of good results is proven by the fact that on Sunday, Aug. 18, two young ladies from Lebanon, Ill., Leota Hanson and Jennie Townsend put on Christ by baptism.

Tuesday evening, August 13, Rev. Stone of Oregon, a personal friend of our teachers, gave an interesting lecture for the benefit of the school which was thoroughly appreciated. Brother Lindsay entertained the school in a pleasant manner at his home, Thursday evening, August 15, and on Friday evening, August 16, a musical and literary program was given by the pupils of the school and the young people of Oregon.

All who attended declared themselves well pleased with the school, and we sincerely trust that all may meet in the kingdom of our Lord.

Dear Restitution.

On an excursion train bound for Western New York. Parfamed Niagara called me; Niagara with its heaven breathing mists, the thunders that took me off my feet, as it were, threw me upon my knees in supplication to my Lord and my God. Thus He is ever wooing his children to think of him and to love him, poor worms of the dust, yet part of his wondrous creation. He wishes us to be sin cleansed, all righteous within.

Reconciled to him is the song of the oceans, the rivers, the streams, and the rills, reconciled to him says the perfumed flowers, the trees and all growing things, reconciled to him says the Book with its life given way, reconciled to him says the Christ through whom and by whom we attain.

Dear penman of the dear Book, we love you, but Oh! how much more we love the one who sent you. We dare not disobey Him, our characters, our destinies lie in our acceptance and obedience. The one who is mighty to save is mighty enough to save us, no matter how vile and unworthy we are. Let us lay hold on this mighty One. Beloved in the Lord, can anything separate us from the love which is in Christ Jesus? Why can we not kneel in mental attitude, an unbroken circle around the throne of God.

While at Niagara Falls, two more precious souls joined the number whose faces will ever live in my memory. God's family are dear to me wherever found, and one turns to them instinctively when a stranger and far from home, indeed it seems yet another exhibition of God's care for us, that his children who are of like precious faith should take the stranger in and do for them just as if they were doing for Him. Thus it seems that dear Sisters Angelius and Lizzie Lent ministered to me the two days that I visited at their home, my responsive heart says to them and to you, the best thing it can say, may you be given the spiritual blessings in Christ Jesus.

ALICE KEMP.

I should infinitely rather feel myself the most miserable wretch on the face of the earth, with a God above, than the highest type of man, reading about Him.

Indiana Conference.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in the State of Indiana, will be held at Hillsburg, Clinton Co., Ind., commencing Oct. 17, and continuing over the following Sunday. It is desired that each congregation throughout the state be represented. Let as many isolated believers be present as possible. We have important business to arrange and we need your council. Come in the spirit of the Master that we may exhort one another to love and good works.

Hillsburg is on the L. E. & W. R. R. east from Frankfort, and west from Clinton, Ind. All persons who expect to attend will please notify Brother Wm. Huffer, Michigantown, Indiana, that arrangements may be made for their comfort. Let all who can come. Come with a message of Hope and Love, and God will bless our meeting.

J. H. WILLEY, Pres. Ind. Con.

SOMETHING NEW.

Brother J. L. Wince wrote a series of articles that were published in THE RESTITUTION some months ago, on the subject of the Resurrection. At the solicitation of some of the brethren, he has had the matter printed in tract form. It makes a very good appearance, and the ability of Brother Wince as a writer is so well known that no words of praise from us are necessary. The tract is now ready, and can be ordered from Brother J. L. Wince, Pierceton, Ind. or direct from this Office, as you wish. The price is 10 cents single copies postpaid, or 12 for $1.00.

Brethren, this whole edition of this work ought to be in the hands of the readers in the next sixty days, and if proper energy is used this will be accomplished. Send orders in this very day.

Bible Themes.

In the title of the last book issued by Brother John O. Woodruff on miscellaneous subjects, both original and selected. This book contains 480 pages and cost the author $1.25 to issue. A quantity has been supplied us, and we wish to get them into the hands of readers, and offer them at 80 cents each, post paid, while they last.

Scriptures Opened.

This a book of 370 pages written by Robert Ashcroft, and is a book of thoughts and themes for Bible Students. We have a few copies only, and first come—first served. This book sold for $1.25, but we offer what we have for 80 cents, post paid.

THE WORLD TO COME.

This is a book of over 400 pages compiled by Brother J. O. Woodruff, and is a symposium of writers on Eternal Life, from a Bible basis. We have a few copies to sell, and will mail for 80 cents each, if sent for soon.

When you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and send that.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be to worthy.

Mrs Wm Youngs	00

We wish to avoid the labor and expense of mailing statements to our patrons. If each one who has not as yet paid for this year would send in his renewal at once, we will appreciate the favor.

Three Days and Three Nights.

John vi 65, reads thus, The words that I speak unto you they are spirit and they are life. In view of this statement is it not well to leave the words of the Great Teacher as he gave them? In reading a well written article I was astonished to know that the above, Three days and three nights, were taken to mean a small part of two days and one whole one. The question as to the exact time at which Jesus arose may not be very important, yet it is certainly important to interpret a prophecy in the language in which it is written. We may in this article fail to convince the readers of THE RESTITUTION of our correctness yet we shall attempt to show that our Savior meant what he said in Matt xii 40, which reads as follows, As Jonah was three days and three nights in the whale's belly, so shall the Son of Man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth. We understand the expression three days and three nights to be an emphatic one and to mean so many hours. The language used in Esther v 1, does not prove that our Savior did not mean what is written. We must accept the language as we find it and govern ourselves accordingly. In the investigation of this subject there are two things to notice. First the time the women visited the sepulcher, and second the time at which the Lord arose from the dead. In the examination of the four writers, Matthew, Mark, Luke and John we find in the A. V. a slight difference in language.

In speaking of the visit of the women Matthew says, In the end of the Sabbath. Mark, When the Sabbath was past, very early in the morning. Luke, Now upon the first day of the week, very early in the morning. John, The first day of the week cometh very early, when it was yet dark. These of these writers place this visit on the first day of the week.

If we examine the Emphatic Diaglott we will read this text. Matt xxviii 1 that, Now after the Sabbath, as it was dawning to the first day of the week, etc. The Syriac New Testament reads thus, In the close of the Sabbath as the first day of the week began to dawn, etc. With these evidences we have the same statements from the four New Testament writers. Therefore we must conclude that the women visited the tomb in the morning of the first day of the week. Their visit marked an event separate as to the time from the resurrection of our Savior. When they visited the place where Jesus had been buried they found that he had risen. Matthew is the only one of the four writers who gives us the time of our Savior's resurrection. Matt xxviii 2, says, And, behold, there was (margin, had been) an earthquake; for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven and came and rolled back the stone from the door and sat upon it. This must have occurred previous to the visit of the women, for they having found the sepulchre empty, and the angel said, He is risen. We do not think it will do violence to the record to say that it took place in the end or close of the Sabbath.

We are led to conclude that Jesus was buried in the end or close of the day upon which he was crucified. He died about the ninth hour and it would require some time to get the permit from Pilate to remove the body and prepare it for burial. Therefore he must have gone into the earth at the close of that day, near 6 p. m. The descent of the angel marking the time of the resurrection it must have been the same time, three days and three nights following his burial which would make it in the end of the third day. Let us count back from the end of the Sabbath (Saturday). The Sabbath is one day. Friday is two days. Thursday is three days. Friday night is one. Thursday night is two and Wednesday night is three. Thus we have the three days and nights and not parts of days. According to this Jesus was crucified on Wednesday and arose in the end or close of the Sabbath (Saturday). In further proof that he must remain in the earth three days let me call your attention to the following Scriptures. Matt xvi 21. He must go to Jerusalem and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes and be killed, and be raised again the third day. Matt xx 19, And shall deliver him to be scourged and to crucify him; and the third day he shall rise again. Mark viii 31; x 34, Luke ix 22; xviii 33 make the same statement. This language cannot be taken to mean parts of days and parts of nights.

We now wish to examine some of the texts given to prove that the language "three days and three nights" may mean only parts of this time. It is said that, To claim that "three days and three nights" mean full time, counting minutes and seconds is to introduce an arbitrary and hypercritical method of interpretation, which is destitute of Bible illustration or countenance." Is not this introducing a method of interpreting Scripture contrary to Peter where he says no prophecy of Scripture is of a private interpretation? Note Luke xxiv 21, And besides all this, today is the third day since these things were done. It is claimed that "since" includes the third day, or this day was the third since the death of Jesus. I wish to call attention to the Syriac New Testament translation of this text. And lo, three days have passed since all these things occurred. The word "since" in this text is rendered from the Greek word "apo" and is rendered "from" by young in his Concordance. The Diaglott renders since from apo hou, and means "from of which" in the Greek text. We therefore understand the word to be from and not since. "From this day" does not include that day as one of the three days. This we think agrees with the Syriac translation. We now wish to notice Mark xvi 9. The following foot note is taken from the Diaglott concerning this text, "From this verse to the end of the chapter is wanting in the Vatican MS. and in many other ancient copies.

Greisbach marks the whole passage as of very doubtful authenticity. Tichendorf rejects the whole clause. Davidson says that Mark closes with the 8th verse of the 16th chapter. Again he says, "It is absent from the old Syriac version." The scolia of many MSS. say that Mark's gospel ended with the 8th verse. Eusebius canonized up to the 8th verse. By the above evidences we see that it is not to be depended upon for proof against other texts. It is not our purpose to discredit any text of Scripture but those who have read know what is meant by canonizing the books of the New Testament. It is known also that many fragments of the gospel were found and additions made to them. Tichendorf says, Mark xvi 9, It is probably an authentic fragment placed as a completion of the gospel in very early times. I would suggest to the readers who wish to examine this subject to draw a rectangle nine inches in length and one inch in width. Divide this into nine parts. Mark the first day and the next night. Continue this through eight parts. The last call the first day of the week. On the first line at the close of the first day, Wednesday, place a cross. This marks the time when Jesus was buried. At the close of the third day place another cross to mark his resurrection. You will then have the first night (Wednesday). The first day, the second night, the second day, the third night, the third day. You will have one night not counted that marks the time from the resurrection of Jesus until the visit of the women to the sepulchre very early in the morning on the first day of the week. For more than thirty years it has been our purpose to take God's Word just as it is written as our Savior always quoted the Scripture as it was written thereby silencing his accusers. We do not consider this a vital question, but we do think that we ought to be able always to give a plain "thus saith the Lord" as our proof.

The above is submitted in the interest of truth and in the spirit of him who spake as never man spake.

Your brother waiting patiently for that blessed hope and the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ.

D. C. ROBISON.

WE have received a new edition of the tract A Letter to a Friend, from Brother Woodruff, and we can supply them at five cents each postpaid. No tract ever issued by our people has done the good this has, and the pleasing and convincing style in which it is written makes it worth much as a medium for advancing the truth of the gospel. Get a number of them and give to friends. You never can tell how much good a few nickels will do used in this manner. Try it.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Neb., will be held in St. Paul Sept. 14th to 20th inclusive.

A New Tract.

The Great Divine Healer vs Latter-Day Healers, by Uncle John Foors.

A Tract for the last days. Should be read by every thinking Christian.

Paul 2 Tim. iii. 13. "But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived."

Matt. vii. 21. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name cast out devils, and in thy name done many wonderful works. And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

Brethren, these tracts have gone into many families, both to brethren and people of other denominations, a few infidels, and one Christian Scientist, and all seem to be well pleased with it; but only a few of the brethren have sent to me any help in the way of paying for the tracts, and tracts are very expensive. We are anxious to have more published on different subjects. Please help to send these Pearls out among the people.

Send orders to John Foors, at 2012 W. Corning Ave. Parsons, Kan. The price is 10 cents each.

Account Giving.

There is certainly a great day of accounts coming, when our Lord will reward every one according as her or his work has been.

The great concern of each one should be, What have I done upon which to expect reward? If you should judge yourself, what would your judgment be?

Our talents differ, and each one will be held accountable for the use of such talent, whatever that may be. If you have only one, use that.

Some one says, what can I do? Why you can circulate literature teaching the truth if nothing else. There is no one but who can do that. Will that do any good? Oh, yes. Let me tell you something. Some people have bought several copies of "Pine Woods Bible Class" and lending them to their friends and neighbors. It being easy and attractive reading, most people will read it. It is bearing fruit already. I have just been told of a man who had become discouraged. He had listened to preachers of different denominations, and found they contradicted each other. He began to drift into infidelity, when a Brother put a copy of Pine Woods Bible Class into his hands. Now in place of infidelity, he is rejoicing in new found light. It would take too much space to tell of other cases. Try this work, and add some stars to your crown.

The Students Text Book is already an assured success, and will be printed after I get home from this present trip.

I desire that all who want it, to send in their names in advance, that I may know how many to print. All you order now, you will be sure to get when printed. The price will be fifty cents.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Your loving brother.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION

BOARD OF DIRECTORS:

A. R. UNDERWOOD.

One Year $1.60. Six Months 75 Cents. Three Months 40 Cents.

The Restitution advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief in the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

Millennial Day.

O golden day, so long desired,
Born of a darksome night,
The waiting earth at last is fired
By thy resplendent light.

And hark! like Memnon's morning chord
Is heard from sea to sea
This song: One Master, Christ the Lord,
And brethren all are we.

The noises of the night shall cease,
The storms no longer roar;
The factious foes of God's own peace
Shall vex his church no more.

A thousand thousand voices sing
The surging harmony;
One Master, Christ; one Savior-King;
And brethren all are we.

Melchi-zedek.

Melchi, king and zadok righteous, or just. The ruins of Tel-el-Amarna furnish the clay tablets translated by Prof Sayce of Oxford, England; which contains part of the royal archives. They consist of letters and dispatches sent to the Egyptian court by the kings of Babylon, Assyria, Syria and Palestine. Our interest is in dispatches from Jerusalem by one Eben-Tob, governor of Jerusalem.

In one of his letters, he writes: "Neither my father nor my mother has exalted me to the place I occupy, (officially) it was the prophecy of the Mighty King that has caused me to enter into the house of my father."

Again: "I am not a governor appointed by the king (of Egypt) I say, I am the ally of the king; and I have paid the tribute due to the king; and neither my father, nor my mother—but the oracle of the Mighty King establishes me in the house of my father."

From the manner of addressing his letters, one would infer that he was not appointed governor by the king of Egypt, but paid the tribute due the king, as a protected prince. The Mighty King from whose oracle Eben-Top asserted that he derived his official power, was the title given the Deity who was worshiped on Mount Moriah, and which he called the mountain of Jerusalem. The city of the God whose name was Shalem. Putting the characters together the meaning is: "The city of the God Shalem." And this governor claims to have received his authority from this "Mighty God of peace," (Shalem) and not from the king of Egypt; not from heredity but from the "Oracle of the Mighty King." So far as office was concerned he was fatherless and motherless. Melchizedek was not only king of Salem, but also Priest of the Most High God. Gen xiv 18; compare verse 22 and Heb vii 1, 2, meaning first "King of righteousness, and after that also king of Salem, which is king of peace,".....From this Most High God, Melchizedek derived his official distinction; and in this connection, he was without father, without mother, without genealogy; having neither beginning of days (as priesthood) nor end of life; (as far as the records, or genealogical tables assert) but, he, like the Son of God continued a priest all his life. Consult Psa cx 4 and references. The Jesus of the records of truth was constituted a High Priest, not by any human arrangement in law or on account of heredity, but by the oath of the Great King, as affirmed Heb v 5, 6 and vii 17 and verses 21 and 28. And compare latter part of chapter vi. We have the sure thing with reference to the high priesthood according to the order of Melchizedek in the person of Jesus the Christ of God, independent of every other consideration.

A necessary and important prerequisite in the direction of the royal Priesthood aforesaid is: The sacrificial work of the Christ who died for our sins according to the Scriptures—was buried; and raised up, according to the Scriptures. And shadowed forth in the ceremonial of the great day of atonement; the culmination of the expiatory services of the year. On ordinary occasions any priest was competent to officiate, but upon the call of his priesthood, and that of his day of atonement, the High Priest only, who was the head of the order, might enter the most holy place in the tabernacle service once a year; and in the manner prescribed by the rules and regulations in the case. See Lev xvi.....The whole chapter, and note references.

The High Priest makes atonement for himself and his house. verse 6. And after that, he takes two kids which are for the people. verse 5. Compare verse 15. It takes two goats to make the one offering. One killed sacrificially for the blood, which is the life; the other living to bear away the sins of the congregation to a separated piece of land away out in the desert. Note the two-fold nature of the offering: First for the High Priest and his house and second for the people. See Heb ix 7 and verses 23-28. And chapter x 14 and context. The one offering perfects those sanctified and answers to that in type, when the High Priest offered for himself and his house. Now then, the offering for the people has its antitype in the One offering also; as it is written. John xi 49 to 52 inclusive.

The matters of the preceding context caused the priests and the prominent officials to consult together with a view to get Jesus out of the way without the knowledge of the populace. One of them—the high priest, being president of the council said, You know nothing at all, nor do you consider that it is expedient for us that one man should die for the people, so that the whole nation perish not. This he said, not from himself, but being high priest that year he prophesied that Jesus should die for that nation; and not for that nation only, but also that he should gather together into one (body) the children of God scattered far and wide.

We may see the significance of the two goats; one would not fill the conditions. The one slain represented the death of Christ—the Lamb of God, slain sacrificially as a sin offering. 2 Cor v 21. The other goat represented the living Christ who has entered heaven itself for a purpose. Heb. ix. 28. The eternal life of the household of God is assured; and also the eternal life of the nation of Israel for the same reason. Individuals pass away, generation after generation; but the nation continues as long as sun and moon endure, throughout all generations. See Isaiah lxvi. 22, and numerous references.

"Moses was faithful in all his house as a servitor." "But Christ as a Son over his own house"—as Isaac was.

The two seeds, of the two women—Ishmael and Isaac, represent two classes of the Abrahamic family—that according to the flesh, and that according to the promise. They take their standing from the status of their mothers. Of Sarah it is written—Gen. xvii. 16—"She shall be mother of nations—a royal people shall be from her"—beginning with Isaac, the son of promise; and produced by means of divine intervention, as all the Isaacs have been produced all along through the centuries, Lords paramount and destined to reign over the earth. Gal. iv. 28-31; Rev. i. 5, 6; v. 10.

The two houses, the two seeds and the two covenants—synchronize in, and during the age and beyond.

The rulers and the ruled become interdependent upon each other—the one cannot be apart from the other, and both coextensive, according to the purpose of him who knew the end from the beginning and planned accordingly. "Order is heaven's first law."

We have examined the records with reference to the priesthood of the Christ during this age; in the next age, that is the "times of restitution" spoken of by the prophets; he will associate his kingdom with his priesthood as it is written; Zech. vi. 12, 13. This is the Branch of Righteousness to grow up unto David, who will execute judgment and justice. Who will be a Priest upon his throne. A Priest of the Most High God and "King of Salem;" called also "Prince of Peace."

We have noted the endless duration of his priesthood, and that of his reign as King. That he is the Head or Chief of the New Creation—the Ruler of the kings of the earth as fully represented in the 72nd ps.

That he will associate with himself others who will share in the royalty and priesthood of which he will be the constituted Head according to the Divine appointment and purpose. Luke xxii. 29, 30.

Royal and splendid as all this is, the Scriptures declare that mediatorial arrangement graciously provided between the people, the nations. The dwellers upon the earth. Note that John saw no temple in the holy corporation—The Lord Almighty being its temple, and the Lamb. (Rev. xx, 22,) while at the same time, this corporate body will be mediatorially related to the Almighty on one hand and the nations of them that are saved on the other. This body corporate will have direct communication with the Almighty without the intervention of any temple, or mediatorial arrangement. And right here is where the Royal Priests after the order of Melchizedek find their official work. Consult Rev. xx. 4-6, "Priests of God and of Christ and reign."—Note the phrase (verse 6) "hath part in"—hath a share in—partakers in; implying that others had the something in which the martyrs of verse 4 share.

Truth and Unity.

The investigation of any matter, subject to mere human intelligence must ever be, as it has ever been, involved in difference of view and feeling. We may call this dissension, fighting, warfare or what we will, the fact stands and will stand so long as the human faculties are the censor. He who said, "Let there be light," and light was, has fled engravings of all hues, and [illegible] the infinite unknown. To the carnal comprehension the methods of God are everywhere inconsistant. The two branches of the Adamic race, the good and the bad, (the well-disposed and the evil-disposed,) have many ramifications. No legislative body has ever been able to frame or enact a law so tight it could not in certain unavoidable contingencies, injure the innocent, or in other contingencies, help the guilty. This is why lawyers flourish and the "unwritten" law is spoken of so frequently. Before the purely fleshly mind, the perfect God and the perfect law are "unknown." This is why Unity is a standing Mars' Hill, among men. The pantheistic idea was that there was no one all-powerful god. There were "gods many" and they had their own specious plans and pre-eminence. They (the heathen) saw the Spring set in and all nature blooming as under some unseen power; and then; in an instant, some other and just as mighty hand would seem to reach forth with inexplicable fury and tear this all down. And man would name these effects each after some fancied god, and call upon the whole company of gods to spare them. The words of the heathen general who came out against Israel, were Israel's God is stronger among the hills, but our god is strongest on the plains. They believed in the existence of Jehovah (see Nebuchadnezzar, etc.,) but only in this specious sense. And, who knows we may not get to that again?

"Now, all this has to do with Unity. When the true followers of Christ and the Book are discouraged over a certain disheartening aspect or aspects of disunitedness (not that hard, wicked word, "disunion,") they must remember the circumstances under which the Lord is working and the vital divine necessity of searching the veins of man and exposing the real makeup of the human structure, that He may have a case, and only that which is towards God, innately, may prevail in the great Hereafter. Immortality is not, like incorruptibility, only the power to exist, but is a fixture. Artists and no fixtures until their paintings are as perfect as they can be made. This is in about two years, when the canvass a l colors are well settled and grounded, and plenty of time has elapsed in which to correct or improve. The day the fixative is applied is called the "varnishing day," and is one of the events of the artist's life.

It is on account of this phase of human existence, that "Faith" and not "sight" (the reasonable right to see things,) is set forth as the foundational condition of redemption. The Bible is very full and clear here. No "life" worth the name is promised to anything else. Jesus' words are: "Because you see me you have believed. Blessed are they having not seen and have believed." This aspect of the divine plan and Unity was not new. It was represented in the first two individuals "Lord" into the human family, though in a less marked manner than later on. To Abel and Cain (brothers of the selfsame parents) started out into full view the two great subdivisions of carnal nature. Some very strange hypotheses have grown up out of the academic study of this matter among ecclesiastics. Calvin, Johnathan Edwards, (the humble imitator,) and some of the "early fathers," as they are called, were engulphed in them. Satan, the same old reverend Professor Emeritus we find in the "chair" in Eden, worked as effectually in these men, "deceiving and being deceived"—not intentionally, always, for no man permits himself to be deceived, willfully. Both Cain and Abel were representative of spiritual phenomena. It was the very first conflict of sects, and, as usual, the false prevailed. It was many years later before "men began to call on the name of the Lord." There could be [illegible] through the false and the true, Scripture [illegible] Till the day [illegible] Seth. [illegible] and new Day of [illegible] clearly along [illegible] Scriptural truth and unity.

And it is along this line lays the corrective of all schism and difference of thought and sentiment. Take up the very common case of two people (I say two, for illustration,) who most earnestly desire the sure things of God. How can two (or more) such disagree? Is it not "by my Spirit," the Truth is known, and is it not claimed that this Spirit ("of Truth") is the heritage of all who will? How, then, can such differ? Calvin wrestled here most strenuously, and it has been the common answer of numerators that God has reference only to "the essentials"—one, two, or three. They even tick them off and number them. The popular averment is that "no two can ever see alike" in all things. This is true, as men go. But, like all human, extrinsic deductions, this fact is not solitary. It cannot stand alone. It must be supported and framed by other facts. For instance: what are "the essentials"? and what are "all things"? and who are "no two"? How would Abel and Seth, and Cain have viewed this kind of postulate? It would and did suit Cain, for he sought and applied the usual sectarian, intolerant remedy, the death knell of truth and unity. He believed "no two could see alike," hence one should cease. This intolerance and disunion ever takes on a pious role. It will ruin what it cannot rear. It is the great wet maker and breaker. A counterfeit two-edged sword of truth.

The Bible answers all the above conclusions by isolating each divine fact perfectly and then establishing between them the most perfect harmony and unity. This is why the differences between Moses and Aaron, Peter and Paul, Philip and our Lord, etc., were not schisms; not offences, (skandalon.) Because their care and disposal were easily possible among each other! And this always happened—without the slightest miraculous operation! They did not have the Lord, personally, to fly to and lean on, as formerly, and thus shirk much individual responsibility and sharp discipline. But they had His words: You "are not of this world," (thus completely answering the above question: who are "no two?") "as I am not of this world. Sanctify them in Thy Truth! Thy Word is Truth!" (answering the other momentous question: what are "the essentials?")

Now, these words of Jesus are only the introductory to the fullest comprehension of what Christian Unity is, and how it must be obtained, and what it would be. What sane person purchases clothes or shoes too small or large for service? Long before Jesus had said: "No man puts new wine in old skins," and just as surely are the truths and purposes of God to be rationally disposed among men. The people of God never have time to lose. They must learn the ways and will of Jehovah quickly. "The king's business requires haste." Men of means among us cannot too suddenly or too zealously ponder the words of Christ as to riches and the needle's eye. This was my "note in the wall" of Jerusalem, but a solemn warning, subject to no qualification in or out of the Book. For the ones to whom the 14th, 15th and 16th chapters of John were meant, there is no personal proprietorship of money or goods, beyond a secure living. Beware!

The remarkable and easy steps by which our Lord proceeds to lay out the path to which the above quotation from John xvii is the introductory are worthy of the most careful study. It is as plain as light and yet the greatest of all Bible mysteries. It stumbled Calvin and his confederates, and the Romish hierarchy saw in it the best foil hold on the human credulity ever known in religious history. There is not one word in Christ's words in His last address, in John, that hints at any trouble the true disciple need have as to the whereabouts of the Truth, or its easy and perfect comprehension; but the kind of people who "could receive it" and "bear" it, and "handle" it! Observe the easy steps: "I go away." "It is better for you that I go away." Why? "For, if I go not away the Helper (paraclete) will not come to you." "But, if I go away, I will send it." "I have many things to tell you, but you are not able to bear them now. But, when it comes—the Spirit of Truth,—it will lead you into

ALL TRUTH."

Not some truths—not "the essentials"—but "all Truth. For, it will not speak from itself, but whatever it shall hear it shall speak, and will declare to you the things to come." The form of these words forever precludes the idea of a third person, for they declare the Source of the Spirit to be the "Truth," and its inability to speak from or of itself, and its appearance totally dependent upon Jesus' absence among men, hence its non-existence among men until the Sender shall have ascended on High. It should be clear that if the Paraclete could not be present among men while Jesus was with them, it could not have been previously, for Jesus was to "send" it. He alone could do that, and, hence, "the Spirit of Truth" was without date or priority until it was exhibited in the acts and words of the men who framed the New Testament of the blood of Christ. "If I go not away, the Helper will not come." "But the Helper, the Holy Spirit, which the Father will send in my name, it shall teach you all things and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you." This "Spirit of Truth" was what Peter calls "stirring up your pure minds by way of remembrance." There is a vast difference between Truth and the Spirit of It. We have truth everywhere, but the spirit of truth is rare as precious stones. The Disciples struggled hard with this one point even long after Pentecost, when the descent of the Holy Spirit was like a bountiful rain and palpable to all. The "Spirit" of Truth is the essence of Unity and the essence of God. Jesus clinches this in His words to the woman at the well; "God is spirit, and they that worship Him" (truly) "must worship Him in spirit and in truth." Wind is air, but not till it is set in motion. Air is not wind. No vessel can be moved by mere air, at rest.

John xiv 20 makes it clear that by the Spirit of Truth He meant the perfect comprehension of and complete promulgation of His gospel. Why was not this possible while He was present? Because the Truth was with men, but not its Spirit. Men never espouse a cause or truth until touched with the spirit of love for it. We miss the water when the well runs dry. It is only then we unite, forbear and make cause. Jesus present was a companion; Jesus absent—rudely torn away—is a force, a reality.

Let us recall, when we look at this subject, that while "all truth" was in God, it was not revealed simultaneously. "Many kings and prophets desired to see what you see and to hear what you hear, and saw and heard them not." Peter, in his first epistle says,—that the prophets examined closely concerning the things and the times "the Spirit that was in them" pointed to, to whom it was revealed, but not for themselves, but "for you." Even "the angels" desired to see, but were denied. Paul says in Col i 26; "The secret which was hidden from the ages and generations, but now is manifested to His saints." The Spirit of "all Truth" was plainly not to be, until the last deep sigh of the Lamb of God had reverberated through the heavens and the veil and its temple were no more. The word, Holy Spirit is a comprehensive term, that will not be moved by any ghostly shift of man.

Let us observe that "the Spirit of Truth," as used by the Lord in John is not mere ability or learning or bent, but a "power". The human faculties are indispensible, truly, but they are a mere machine, and a most imperfect one. If the words in John mean anything, they mean (and ever) that Truth is known of Unity—the unity of the writer or speaker—not on one or more specious heads, but on "all". The ministers of Christ are not specialists, unless they choose that plan. The exhibition of divine (miraculous) "gifts" in apostolic times was entirely a lay feature, and very transient. It cut off the possessor at a point, and could never have written the epistles of the N. T. but it did lead on to some bad schisms. It ceased summarily. "The Spirit of Truth" was to continue 'till Jesus reappeared. It was not a diffusive power to be possessed individually by all believers, for that would remove all distinction, but a specious promise to a certain kind of teacher. The structural work of the system of Christ rests upon its called and chosen teachers. God's choice and selection of such has ever been most singular and unaccountable. It has caused violent rebellions, jealousies and rents in the ecclesiastical realm. "Who's he?" "What's the matter with me?" As if a penchant or itching to teach was a divine guarantee.

Indiana Conference.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in the State of Indiana, will be held at Hillisburg, Clinton Co., Ind., commencing Oct. 17, and continuing over the following Sunday. It is desired that each congregation throughout the state be represented. Let as many isolated believers be present as possible. We have important business to arrange and we need your council. Come in the spirit of the Master that we may exhort one another to love and good works.

Hillisburg is on the L. E. & W. R. R. east from Frankfort, and west from Tipton, Ind. All persons who expect to attend will please notify Brother Wm. Huffer, Michigantown, Indiana, that arrangements may be made for their comfort. Let all who can come. Come with a message of Hope and Love, and God will bless our meeting.

J. H. WILLEY, Pres. Ind. Con.

Disposition is the mint that coins our comforts or their counterfeits.

The Restitution.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE.
J. H. WILLEY,
W. D. THOMPSON,
A. R. UNDERWOOD.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPT. 18, 1907.

SISTER Woodward will be with the Plymouth church next Sunday.

BRO. J. L. WINCE was with us here and spoke twice last Sunday.

BROTHER, if you have not yet renewed your subscription to THE RESTITUTION for this year, will you please do so now? We thank you for the favor.

THE Michigan and the Southern Illinois Conferences are announced. Let brethren in these localities be active and awake to the duty before them, for the time is short in which to labor.

WE wish to call the attention of all of the Indiana brethren to the notice of the Conference that is given in this paper. The committee are arranging a programme that will be worth while hearing, and the business that is to be attended to should be of interest to every member of the Church in the State. The officers chosen to have charge of the work the coming year, should be the very best the State affords. The question of Evangelistic work is to be discussed. Shall we fold our hands and seal our pocketbooks? We are sometimes told that if the Lord wants his work done he will find a way to accomplish it. Did it ever occur to you that the Lord has found you and given you his truth. He has witnessed your acceptance of his offer of salvation, and has entered you as one of his workers—his co-workers. If you have a right to expect him to fulfil his promises to you, then he has the same right to demand the promised service from you. You cannot reasonably expect God to be true to you, unless you are faithful to him. His work will simply not go on as it should unless you give your support. The Conference Board wants your presence at the meeting, so your council and advice can be given. They want the encouragement you can give. They want to know how much you can give the coming year, of time, talent and money, to carry forward the work. If you cannot be there then send a letter of greeting and a pledge of what you will give. Let everyone arouse and do the very utmost. The Coming of the Lord draweth nigh.

The Story of a Happy Christian Life.—No. 24.

Before I go on to tell why the meetings were discontinued at grandfather Chaplin's, I will give some items of interest that have been kindly sent to me by Brother O. B. L. Crozier. He says in reference to "The Advent Herald."—"It was published at Boston by J. V. Himes. His Editor was Sylvester Bliss—a Congregationalist. They fought the 'Life and Death' question fiercely. Brother J. B. Cook tried to advocate it through the Herald but they treated him coldly. Then Brother Turner started another paper in Hartford, Connecticut, in in which Brother Cook wrote freely. Brother Himes killed his paper by fighting the Life and Death doctrine, and came to Buchanan, Michigan, wherere our brethren were strong, and pretended to be converted to that doctrine. He finally joined the Episcopal Church and died in it out west."

"Brother Storrs",—Brother Crozier goes on to say,—"published the "Bible Examiner" at Brooklyn, N. Y., to advocate those doctrines and nearly all Advent believers, came into the Life and Death view before 1850. About that time many had embraced 'Age to Come' views."

"George Storrs used to come to our annual meetings at Rochester, N. Y., and put up with Elder Marsh, where I boarded, so I got well acquainted with him, we used to talk over general and advanced views. His "Examiner" was a strong paper, and discussed radical views. It was not in sympathy with J. V. Himes.

J. P. Westbee, was often at Rochester—a good and strong man. I knew the Willards and Chaplins through papers, not personally."

"The Harbinger was progressive and not sectarian, I had charge of it while Elder Marsh was west with his "Age to Come!"

I think I have not mentioned Dr. Matchett and family of Goshen, Indiana. They were among the most esteemed of Brother and Sister Willard's early Indiana friends. The acquaintanceship began on this wise as described by Dr. Matchett's only surviving daughter, Mrs. B. Matchett-France of Bourbon, Ind. She says, in a late letter to me, "I do not now remember the date when the friendship between Dr. Willard and my father commenced. It was when I was a little girl, small enough to be held on the lap of the august Doctor. There was a meeting of the Medical Society of which my father was President, held in Goshen.

Dr. Willard was present, and as he was a stranger there, my father invited him to our home. The Doctor replied, that his horse was at the hotel, and he would be obliged to go and see about him. Father then gave him a pressing invitation to visit him at some future time, for he was strongly drawn to the kindly, dignified stranger. That night after all had retired but mother, there was a rap at the front door.

Mother answered the call and there stood a tall, fine looking man, wearing a long broad-cloth cloak (how well I remember that cloak! S. R. W.) and a tall, silk hat. He enquired for Dr. Matchett who was called, and was told by Dr. Willard, 'that he had been unable to secure a room at the hotel and had come to him for shelter.' The next morning at the breakfast table, we children saw for the first time, stately, dignified, kindly-faced Dr. Willard. As father called our names, he repeated them after him and ever afterward he could call each one by his or her proper name, never mistaking one for the other, (Dr. Matchett had five daughters and two sons.)

The Doctor and father had a good, long talk on the Bible, the prophecies, promises, etc, etc, and they found that their views coincided. I well remember that I thought the Doctor knew almost as much as my father and I thought he was as wise as Solomon.

When the Doctor went away father and mother urged him to return soon and bring his family and make us a real visit. If I have not forgotten, his first call was made late in the winter, and sometime during the next summer or fall he brought his wife—our own dearly beloved Mrs. Willard, our friend and sister—and dear, sweet, curly-headed Rowland, to visit us. What a glad, happy day that was! How we all loved her; she was so sweet and gracious to us, we felt that she was the children's friend.

My father had a goodly number of daughters and she wanted him to give her one of them, but to this he would not agree. She loved every one of us and as for us, we fairly idolized her, she was so gentle and kind, so everything a child loves in a woman. She admired my sister Elizabeth so much, (and who that knew her did not?) and to Elizabeth, Sister Willard was the embodiment of all that was good. I have forgotten what year it was I spent in the home of Doctor and Mrs. Willard in Warsaw, but I remember what a happy year it was, (1853). They were father and mother to me, and I could not see that I was loved any less than their own children. The winter I was there they were giving a home to Alice Johnson, an orphan girl, and to Mary Hall, and Miss Harriet P. Hills and part of the time to Mrs. A. Hall—Mary's mother. They had four children of their own, Nelson Loomis, Lyman Marly, Rowland and Bonnie, wee Allaretta, and yet there was room in those noble hearts for as many more, such loving kindness we seldom find.

The year I spent in that dear family is a green spot in my memory. I often wonder upon whose shoulders dear Sister Willard's mantle fell. Oh that it had been on mine! Once in after years she came to visit at our home, I was away teaching; when I came I was so sad to think I missed her. Then mother gave me a letter she had left for me and I read it with tear-blinded eyes.

She said, 'I cannot think of going into the Kingdom, and not find my dear Benjamine there,' and then, she urged me to obey. That was, to me, a sweet remembrance of her love.

It was by Doctor Willard that we came to know your father's family. He talked so much about 'Brother Steadman', that my father longed to know him and at last he came to us and what a joyous meeting it was. It was while your father was pastor of the little church at Pine Creek, north of Goshen, that my father cast his lot with that people. How they enjoyed themselves together! May it be their happy lot to wake up with the first! "The path of the just is as a shining light," Solomon says, and is it not so? Is not the light that Auntie Willard and her dear companion shed around them still gleaming in bright radiance though they sleep in the dust?

Truly "the memory of the just is blessed." The Matchett family were a noble one and were held in great esteem both by the Willards and by my father. Only death could sever the friendship between them. I give Mrs. France's reminiscent letter almost entire, not only because it is a beautiful side light of the story of Auntie Willard, but also because it proves that what God says is true,—that "the memory of the just is blessed," and that "the righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance." "The name of the wicked may rot, and the memory of him be forgotten, but not so is it with God's dear ones, "whose fruit has been a tree of life" to others.

Mrs. France mentions the little church at Pine Creek, north of Goshen. A Conference was held in 1855, which J. L. Wince, in company with his cousin,—a Mr. Henry Remfield, and his uncle, Emanuel Andrews, of the Marysville Church attended. The party stopped overnight with us, and my sister, parents and grandparents, accompanied them to the meeting but Auntie Willard was not there.

It was a good meeting, my father, Brother A. N. Seymour, Brother S. D. Clark, Brother Jacob Funck and Dr. Hall, being the speakers. Brother Seymour was a fine-looking, well-dressed man, an eloquent talker, and a penman whose letters were a delight to the receiver of them. Brother Clark was as firm and fearless as Paul in his defence of the truth. Some man said to him one day, "You will starve if you keep on preaching that soul sleeping doctrine." "Starve then!" replied Brother Clark, "I have burned the bridges behind me and I cannot go back!"

Brother James Watkins and his wife, Eliza Watkins lived then at Pine Creek, as did also a Brother Alberts and Brother Beck and wife.
